therefore, that a patent for a process of making belt pulleys, which consisted substantially in centering the pulley center or spider, and then grinding the same concentrically with the axis of the pulley, was void.—Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 15 S. Ct. 745, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. Ed. 899.

The three Medart patents, Nos. 248,599, 248,598, and 238,702, the first being for a process of manufacturing belt pulleys, and the latter two for belt pulleys, held invalid: The first as to claims 1, 2, and 3; the second, as to both of its claims; and the third, as to its first claim.—Id.

The patentability of processes is not restricted to those involving chemical or other similar elemental action, but an invention or discovery of a process or method involving mechanical operations and producing a new and useful result is within the scope of Rev. St. U. S. § 4886 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382), securing protection to the inventor of "any new and useful art, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof."—Expanded Metal Co. v. Bradford, 29 S. Ct. 652, 214 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 1034; General Fireproofing Co. v. Expanded Metal Co., Id. Affirming decrees Bradford v. Expanded Metal Co. (1906) 146 F. 984, 77 C. C. A. 230, and affirming decree Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co. (1908) 164 F. 849, 90 C. C. A. 611.

◀8. — Products or results.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 7.

There can be no valid patent for the product of a purely mechanical process, which process the court has already held not to be patentable, as in the case of a belt pulley which differs from other belt pulleys only in the fact that the rim and ends of the spider arms are ground off concentrically with the axis, although such pulley may be superior in quality to any others.—Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 15 S. Ct. 745, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. Ed. 899.

II. PATENTABILITY.

(A) INVENTION.

◀17. Nature and degree of skill involved.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 16, 17.

The design of the patent laws is to reward those who make some substantial discovery or invention which adds to our knowledge and marks a step in advance in the useful arts. It was not intended to grant a monopoly for every trifling device, every shade of an idea, which would naturally and spontaneously occur to any skilled mechanic or operator in the ordinary progress of manufacture.—Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192, 2 S. Ct. 225, 27 L. Ed. 438.

It being well known that the effect of a diagonal cut on a penetrating point is to force the point, on being driven, in a direction away from the cut, and it being old to diagonally cut the legs of a staple on opposite sides, so as to cause them to approach each other with a clinching effect when driven, there was no invention in merely cutting the legs of a staple fastening for ball ears on the same side, so that, on being driven into the wood, both points would bend upward in the same direction.—Double-Pointed Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 117, 3 Sup. Ct. 105, 27 L. Ed. 877.

There is no invention in performing with increased speed a series of dental operations old in themselves, in the same order in which they were before performed.—International, Tooth-Crown Co. v. Gaylord, 140 U. S. 55, 11 S. Ct. 716, 35 L. Ed. 847.

The purpose sought to be accomplished by an invention (as, for instance, the radial expansion of a dress form) is not the subject of a patent, but the invention covered must consist of a new and useful means of accomplishing the result, and if the means consists of a mere adaptation, by the application of mechanical skill, of devices previously well known, there can be no valid patent.—Knapp v. Moras, 150 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 81, 37 L. Ed. 1069.

18. Simplicity or obviousness of device.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 12.

A contrivance that consists merely in putting an additional pane of glass in a fare box in a street car, opposite the side next the driver, so that the passengers can through it see the interior of the box, does not embody or require invention and is not patentable.—Slawson v. Grand Street, P. P. & F. R. Co., 107 U. S. 649, 2 S. Ct. 663, 27 L. Ed. 576, affirming decree (C. C.) 4 F. 531.

Where the elements of a contrivance, consisting of a fare box for street cars, a headlight, and a reflector, are all old, and the invention, as claimed, is simply the making of an aperture in the top of the fare box and turning the rays of the lamp head through it into the box by means of a reflector, so that the interior is illuminated, there is nothing patentable in such a contrivance.—Id.

In cheese formers for cider presses, the use of a rack on which to place the pomace and of a cloth to cover the pomace lying on the rack, being old, there was no patentable novelty or invention in using therewith a guide frame smaller than the rack.—Clark Pomace Holder Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 335, 7 S. Ct. 382, 30 L. Ed. 406, affirming judgment (C. C.) 17 F. 79.

A device for feeding ore stamps, which consists in mounting the feed cylinder on a movable frame, so that it can be readily shifted from place to place when it is desired to repair the stamp mill, being, in effect, merely a claim for making the frame movable by mounting it on rollers, does not involve the inventive faculty, and is not patentable.—Hendy v. Golden State & Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. S. 370, 8 S. Ct. 1275, 32 L. Ed. 207.

The McClain patent, No. 267,011, for a pad for horse collars, was for an improvement on his prior patent No. 259,700, and differed therefrom in that the spring in the later patent had "but one curved portion, intended for the fore roll only of the collar, instead of a curved portion for the fore roll and one for the back roll." Held, that this patent is void, for to produce the device it was only necessary to sever the double-roll spring of the former, which process does not involve any invention.—McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U. S. 419, 12 S. Ct. 76, 35 L. Ed. 800, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 284.

There is no patentable invention in combining with the fly of pantaloons or similar garments an inelastic bridge or check piece arranged across the crotch thereof, whereby the strain at the crotch when the fly is opened and spread apart is received by said bridge or check piece instead of at the angle of the crotch itself.—Patent Clothing Co. v. Glover, 141 U. S. 560, 12 S. Ct. 79, 35 L. Ed. 858, affirming decree (C. C.) 31 F. 816.

There is no invention in making a cabinet lock with the projecting front plate rounded at the bottom so as to be received flush into a rounded countersunk recess made by a routing machine, countersunk recesses made by hand for square projecting front plates being old in the art.—Corbin Cabinet Lock Co. v. Eagle Lock Co., 150 U. S. 38, 14 S. Ct. 28, 37 L. Ed. 989, affirming judgment (C. C.) 37 F. 338.

To take an existing car-truck bolster, which has previously been fastened rigidly to the side trusses, and convert it into a "floating" bolster, by attaching to each end a guide plate with notched sides to receive the perpendicular side irons of the side trusses, thereby fitting the ends to be rested upon springs in the side trusses, involves no invention, or, at least, invention of so limited a character as to require a narrow construction of the patent.—McCarty v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., 160 U. S. 110, 16 S. Ct. 240, 40 L. Ed. 358, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 384.

19. Enlargement or change in degree.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 19; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 129.

A patent for an annular flange inside the lower end of the cylindrical fire-pot section of a stove, for the purpose of collecting a bank of ashes, which will prevent undue expansion of the fire pot at its junction with the ash pit, is void for want of invention if it fails to state how wide the flange should be to accomplish the desired result.—Howard v. Detroit Stove Works, 150 U. S. 164, 14 S. Ct. 68, 37 L. Ed. 1039.

The novelty claimed was the combination, with a common form of road-making machine, of a handwheel having such weight in relation to the weight of the scraper blade to be lifted that it would continue to rotate after the hand of the operator was removed, so as to enable him to secure a new grasp of the wheel. The use of handwheels in the regulation of scraper blades for ditching, grading streets, and road clearing was old, as was the equalization of the momentum, when required by the exigencies of the case, as in capstan wheels, crankshaft wheels, rudder-regulating wheels, and spinning wheels. Held, that increasing the weight of the handwheel did not involve patentable invention.—American Road Mach. Co. v. Penneck & Sharp Co., 164 U. S. 26, 17 S. Ct. 1, 41 L. Ed. 337, affirming decree (C. C.) 45 F. 252.

20. Change of form.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 20-22.

In view of the prior state of the art of constructing reed organs there was no invention, in 1869, in making the length and size of the valve opening greater or less in a reed board of a given width, or in making the reed board wider or narrower, or giving it more or fewer sets of reeds, either full or partial.—Estey v. Burdett, 109 U. S. 633, 3 S. Ct. 531, 27 L. Ed. 1058.

A patent claimed (1) as an article of manufacture, wedge-shaped blocks, having the grain running parallel to one and oblique to the other of their beveled sides, and produced substantially in the manner referred to; and (2) a wooden street pavement, constructed substantially as therein described, of wedge-shaped blocks, with the grain running and produced in the manner and for the purposes set forth. The specification states that the gravel in filling is not so liable to jam and leave the lower portion of the space unfilled, or loosely filled, where one side of the block is smooth, and that but one corner of the base is likely to become broken by transportation, etc. Similar blocks were described in prior patents, except in having one side parallel, and the other oblique, to the grain.

It appeared that, where one side only is oblique to the grain, that side is more liable to become broken than where the grain is vertical, and that the durability of a block is less where the grain is inclined than where it is vertical. Held, that the alleged invention was not patentable.—Brown v. District of Columbia, 130 U. S. 87, 9 S. Ct. 487, 32 L. Ed. 863.

A patent claimed a method of cutting blocks for wooden pavement, consisting in cutting, by means of guides, a large block of certain bevels, having two sides inclined, with the grain running parallel to one and oblique to the other, and then splitting the blocks in such manner that the line of cut will form the two other beveled sides of the two blocks thus produced. The use of such guides was shown in a London publication in 1847, and the method of cutting blocks without waste by severing a large block by a crosscut and splitting the block was old. Held, that the patent involved no invention.—Id.

No invention is involved in the making of a suspender end of flat cord in substantially the same way that suspender ends of round cord had been made, and in substantially the same way in which flat button ends had been made for the purpose of fastening or securing other articles of wearing apparel than trousers.—Shenfield v. Nashawannuck Mfg. Co., 137 U. S. 56, 11 S. Ct. 5, 34 L. Ed. 573, affirming decree (C. C.) 27 F. 803.

In view of the state of the art there is no novelty or invention in fastening together the various sections of a stove by means of bolts and rivets passed through perforated lugs; nor in casting in one piece a stove grate which had formerly been cast in two pieces and put together; nor in making a grate circular, instead of square, to correspond with the shape of the fire pot.—Howard v. Detroit Stove Works, 150 U. S. 164, 14 S. Ct. 68, 37 L. Ed. 1039.

There is no invention in prolonging the upright rod of a transom lifter beyond the point of junction with the lifting arm, and confining it above by an additional metallic loop, when the prior art includes a device for opening and closing a series of passenger car transoms, consisting of a long rod sliding horizontally in a series of guides, and connected to each window by a separate arm.—Wollensak v. Sargent, 151 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 291, 38 L. Ed. 137, affirming decree (C. C.) 41 F. 53.

The clogging or choking, in cornshellers, of the chute through which the ears descend, was successfully overcome by the device of a shaft above the throat, with wings, wheels, or projections, revolving in the direction of the entering corn, which went into general use, displacing other devices previously employed; but it differed from such previous devices only in the direction in which the shaft revolved. Held, that such change was substantial and meritorious, by reason of the improvement produced in operative effect.—Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 L. Ed. 103, reversing decree (C. C.) Adams v. Keystone Mfg. Co., 35 F. 579, and (C. C.) 41 F. 595.

See 28 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 22.

A patent cannot be taken out for an article old in purpose and shape and mode of use, when made for the first time out of an existing material, and with accompaniments before applied to such article, merely because the idea has occurred that it would be a good thing to make the article out of that particular old material.—Gardner v. Herz, 118 U. S. 180, 6 S. Ct. 1027, 30 L. Ed. 158, affirming decree (C. C.) 12 F. 491.

The substitution of one material for another, which does not devolve change of method or develop novelty of use, even though it may result in a superior article, is not necessarily a patentable invention.—Florsheim v. Schilling, 137 U. S. 64, 11 S. Ct. 20, 34 L. Ed. 574, affirming decree (C. C.) 26 F. 256.

There is no invention in making a groove in the eccentric bearing of a gyratory ore crusher, and filling the same with carbon bronze metal, or other suitable wearing metal, since the use of soft metals for such purpose is old.—Gates Iron Works v. Fraser, 153 U. S. 332, 14 S. Ct. 883, 38 L. Ed. 734, affirming decree (C. C.) 42 F. 49.

←22. Substitution of mechanical equivalents.

See 28 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 24.

The first claims of letters patent No. 142,934, granted to David H. Nation and Ezekiel C. Little, September 16, 1873, for an "improvement in cooking stoves," namely "(1) the detachable base-pan or flue-shell, D, attached to the body at a point near the center of the back-plate of the stove by means of hooks, a, a, cast on the base-pan and pins, b, b, on the stove body, substantially for the purposes herein set forth," involves no invention to attach the base-pan, an old mode used in attaching other projecting parts of the stove.—Bussey v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 4 Sup. Ct. 88, 110 U. S. 131, 28 L. Ed. 95, reversing decree 1 F. 640, 1 McCrary, 161.

There is no patentable invention in stirring by a well-known and simple mechanical device a liquid which had before been stirred by hand; and the mere substitution of a revolving screw, driven by a power shaft, for paddles operated by hand, will not sustain a patent.—Marchand v. Emken, 132 U. S. 195, 10 S. Ct. 65, 33 L. Ed. 332, affirming (C. C.) 26 F. 629.

In devising a thimble or clasp adapted to slide upon a rope halter, and to be fastened at the place desired by a set screw, there is no invention in substituting a set screw with a conical point, which penetrates the fiber of the rope, for a set screw having merely a rounded end.—Sargent v. Covert, 14 S. Ct. 676, 152 U. S. 516, 38 L. Ed. 536, reversing decree (C. C.) 38 F. 237.

The doctrine of equivalents may be invoked for other than pioneer patents, the range of equivalents depending upon and varying with the degree of invention. Decree (1906) 150 F. 741, 80 C. C. A. 407, affirmed.—Continental Paper Bag Co. v. Eastern Paper Bag Co., 28 S. Ct. 748, 210 U. S. 405, 52 L. Ed. 1122.

←23. Omission of parts.

See 28 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 25.

A. B. Lawther obtained a patent, No. 168,164, September 28, 1875, for an improvement in the treatment of oleaginous seeds. It consisted chiefly in doing away with the heavy stones known as "edge runners" or "mullers," used in connection with revolving rollers to crush the oilseeds, preparatory to being placed in presses to extract the oil. The machinery and apparatus used by Lawther had all been used before. The omission of the muller stones was conceded to be an improvement in the process of obtaining oil from flaxseed. Held, that it was a valuable improvement in a process, and patentable.—Lawther v. Hamilton, 124 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 342, 31 L. Ed. 325, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 811.

There is no invention in simply removing from a beer-cooling apparatus the sand or gravel which formerly filled the metallic case surrounding the beer-supply pipe, and through which percolated the drippings and cold air from an upper ice box, and instead thereof leaving the space open for the descent of the cold air and drippings.—Magin v. Karle, 150 U. S. 387, 14 S. Ct. 153, 37 L. Ed. 1118.

A patent for a coal chute contained claims in which a screen was included as an element of the combination. Another claim embraced, as an additional element, a metal blank, to be placed over the screen when screening was not desired. The court, being of the opinion that the apparatus showed no invention without the screens, held that it was not patentable in the form shown when the metal blank was inserted, as this operated to eliminate the screen.—Black Diamond Coal Min. Co. v. Excelsior Coal Co., 156 U. S. 611, 15 S. Ct. 482, 39 L. Ed. 553.

6-25. Aggregation.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 27-29.

The use of a convex metallic washer in conjunction with a compound bail fastening staple having upwardly penetrating points presents only an unpatentable aggregation of parts, and not a true combination, as neither the staple nor the washer affects or modifies the action of the other.—Double-Pointed Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 117, 3 S. Ct. 105, 27 L. Ed. 877.

Claims 2 and 3 of letters patent No. 142,934 for an improvement in cook stoves are merely for aggregations of parts, and for patentable combinations.—Bussey v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 4 Sup. Ct. 38, 110 U. S. 131, 28 L. Ed. 95, reversing decree 1 F. 640, 1 McCrary, 161.

The use in succession of two distinct pairs of dies, of well-known kinds, not combined in one machine, nor co-operating to one result, but each pair doing by itself its own work, is not a patentable invention.—Beecher Mfg. Co. v. Atwater Mfg. Co., 114 U. S. 523, 5 S. Ct. 1007, 29 L. Ed. 232.

Patent issued January 22, 1884, to John Holland, for an improvement in lead holders for pencils, the application admitting that there were already in use lead-holding tubes for pencils, with two or more slots at the lower end, so as to form elastic clamping fingers closing on the lead by means of a sliding sleeve, and tubes with a single slot and an interior screw thread, but claiming as a new article of manufacture a lead holder with two or more slots in a tube threaded inside and sleeved outside, is void for want of invention.—Holland v. Shipley, 127 U. S. 396, 8 S. Ct. 1069, 32 L. Ed. 185.

A patent for an improvement in boots and shoes claiming "a shoe when constructed with an expansion gore flap, the external fold of which is attached to and in front of the quarter, and the internal fold of which is attached to and in the rear of the vamp, the said several parts and pieces being respectively constructed and the whole arranged for use substantially in the manner and for the purpose set forth," must be construed to be a claim for a manufactured article, and is a mere aggregation of old parts with mechanical improvement in the arrangement, which is not a patentable invention.—Burt v. Evory, 133 U. S. 349, 10 S. Ct. 394, 33 L. Ed. 647.

When the question of the patentability of an invention, which is merely a new aggregation of old elements, is submitted to a jury, it is proper to refuse an instruction that before the patent can be held invalid by reason of a prior patent it is not sufficient to find one of the elements in one patent, a second in another, and a third in another.—Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 141 U. S. 539, 12 S. Ct. 66, 35 L. Ed. 849, affirming judgment (C. C.) 28 F. 360.

Combining cotton with boracic acid and glycerine to form a convenient and permanent dressing, having the desirable qualities of the several constituents, the merits of which were immediately and widely recognized, involved invention, although the qualities and modes of operation of the materials were well known.

—Seabury & Johnson v. Am Ende, 152 U. S. 561, 14 S. Ct. 683, 38 L. Ed. 553, affirming decree (C. C.) Am Ende v. Seabury, 36 F. 593, and (C. C.) 43 F. 672.

The combination of a cylindrical guide with a trough for the connecting rod is not patentable, where it appears that the combination is a mere aggregation of their respective functions, which were performed by the cylindrical guides and the trough in prior patents, though not in combination with each other.—Wright v. Yuengling, 155 U. S. 47, 15 S. Ct. 1, 39 L. Ed. 64.

The omission of an element in a combination may constitute invention if the result of the new combination be the same as that of the old one; but if the omission of an element is attended by a corresponding omission of the functions performed by that element, and the elements retained perform the same function as before, there is no patentable invention.—Richards v. Chase Elevator Co., 159 U. S. 477, 16 S. Ct. 53, 40 L. Ed. 225.

6-26. Combination.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 27-30.

A patent for an improved dredge boat, consisting of the combination of a boat with a number of water-tight compartments, into which the water can be admitted to sink it to the required depth, with a "mud fan," shaped and operated like a propeller screw placed at the bow, and intended to stir up the mud and sand on the bottom, so that they may be carried off by the current, are void for want of novelty and invention; it appearing that water-tight compartments for sinking or raising a vessel by admitting or pumping out the water is an old device, long used in dry docks, and that propeller steamers had frequently used their screws to stir up the mud and deposit at the mouths of the Mississippi river, and force a passage over the bar, and that exactly similar devices had been in use elsewhere.—Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192, 2 S. Ct. 225, 27 L. Ed. 438.

In grain cars there is no patentable invention in a combination of inside and outside doors; the inside door sliding vertically and being flexible or yielding, with guiding rods, whereby the door, when not in use, may be carried up and placed on the horizontal portion of said guiding rods, so as to be out of the way.—Watson v. Cincinnati, I., St. L. & C. Ry. Co., 132 U. S. 161, 10 S. Ct. 45, 33 L. Ed. 295, affirming (C. C.) 23 F. 443.

The bringing together of old features already patented, and using them in the same article, does not of itself constitute a patentable combination.—Florsheim v. Schilling, 137 U. S. 64, 11 S. Ct. 20, 34 L. Ed. 574, affirming decree (C. C.) 26 F. 258.

In the construction of prisons, a claim for the combination and arrangement of levers passing through the grated partition, a bar and bolts, or lugs, so as to enable the jailer to lock the prisoners in their cells from his position in the main hall, thus constantly maintaining a barrier between himself and the prisoners, is void for want of patentable combination.—Fond du Lac County v. May, 137 U. S. 395, 11 S. Ct. 98, 34 L. Ed. 714, reversing judgment May v. Fond du Lac County (C. C.) 27 F. 691.

In a patent for improvements in prisons, a claim for an endless chain or rope in combination with levers, for the purpose of enabling the jailer, after ordering the prisoners from the main hall, and while still outside the angle door, to close the doors leading to the side corridors, thus clearing the hall before entering it, and maintaining a barrier between himself and the prisoners, is void, because all the mechanical devices are old, and their use, in com-ination with a barrier between a jailer and his prisoners, is not a patentable invention.—Id.

Angle doors and combination locks having been long in use for various purposes, the placing of a combination lock on an angle door in the construction of a prison, in such a manner as to allow the jailer to inspect the interior of the main prison hall, and order the prisoners therefrom into side corridors, separated by gratings from the main hall, so that he may enter without danger of attack, involves no patentable invention.—Id.

Where all the elements of a combination claimed are found in various prior patents, some in one and some in another, and all performing like functions in well-known inventions having the same object as the patent in suit, the latter patent is void for want of invention when there is nothing novel in the result produced.—Busell Trimmer Co. v. Stevens, 137 U. S. 423, 11 S. Ct. 150, 34 L. Ed. 719, affirming decree (C. C.) 23 F. 575.

The second claim of letters patent No. 224,991, issued March 2, 1880, to A. W. Brinkerhoff, which covers an "incline," in rectal specula, for the purpose of avoiding injury, in combination with the tube, slot, and slide, is void for want of invention, as the combination produced no new result from the joint and co-operating action of the old elements.—Brinkerhoff v. Aloe, 146 U. S. 515, 13 S. Ct. 221, 36 L. Ed. 1068, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 92.

A combination is not patentable where each element performs some old and well-known function, and the combination accomplishes no new result.—(1895) Richards v. Chase Elevator Co., 158 U. S. 299, 15 S. Ct. 831, 39 L. Ed. 991, affirming decree Same v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 40 Fed. 165 and rehearing denied 159 U. S. 477, 16 S. Ct. 53, 40 L. Ed. 225.

A combination of old elements, producing only old results, and involving no new function, is not patentable, though the product may be more convenient and salable than anything which preceded it. Decree Fenton Metallic Mfg. Co. v. Office Specialty Mfg. Co., 12 App. D. C. 201, reversed—Office Specialty Mfg. Co. v. Fenton Metallic Mfg. Co., 19 S. Ct. 641, 174 U. S. 492, 43 L. Ed. 1058.

27. Application to new use.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 31, 32.

There is no patentable invention in merely applying, by the old and familiar arrangement of shafts and cog wheels, the power of an auxiliary engine to a capstan, instead of to a windlass; a capstan differing from a windless only in having its barrel or shaft vertical, instead of horizontal.—Morris v. McMillin, 112 U. S. 244, 5 S. Ct. 218, 28 L. Ed. 702.

The application of an old machine to a new process is not patentable.—Blake v. City and County of San Francisco, 113 U. S. 679, 5 S. Ct. 692, 28 L. Ed. 1070.

The application of an old process or machine to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in the manner of applying it, and no result substantially distinct in its nature, will not sustain a patent, even if the new form of result has not before been contemplated.—Miller v. Foree, 116 U. S. 22, 6 S. Ct. 204, 29 L. Ed. 552, affirming decree (C. C.) 9 F. 603; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490, 4 S. Ct. 220, 28 L. Ed. 222.

Prior to the making of "driven wells," wells, whether dug or bored, were subject, except in the case of the flowing artesian, to become dry for a time upon constant use. This was caused by the fact that gravity was the only means of supply. When the water at the bottom of the well, was drawn out faster than gravity forced it in, no more could be got until that force brought it in through the surrounding earth. The earth forming the core having been removed, the "pit" was not air-tight, and the pressure of the atmosphere upon the water in the "pit," and on the sides of it, counterbalanced the same pressure on the water in the earth around it. The "driven well," being made by puncture, compacted this core, which the others removed, around the driven tube, and then closed the tube at the top of the valve of a pump, thus making the entire tube air-tight, except at that part of it where it stood in the water-bearing stratum, where it was supplied with openings of a proper size, covered with screens. The effect of this was that the pressure of the air on the water in the surrounding earth, not being counterbalanced by a similar pressure in the "pit," was added to the force of gravity in producing the supply, and that the supply was practically inexhaustible. Held, that the process was novel and valuable, a new application of a power of nature being made by which a new and useful result was attained.—Driven-Well Cases, 122 U. S. 40, 7 S. Ct. 1073, 30 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree Andrews v. Eames (C. C.) 15 F. 109.

There is no patentable invention in a process of imparting age to wines, which consists only in using an apparatus for heating the wine inside the cask, which apparatus had previously been used for heating another liquid in the same manner.—Dreyfus v. Searle, 124 U. S. 60, 8 S. Ct. 390, 31 L. Ed. 352.

The mere application of an old and well-known shifting device for reversing machines to the operation of a fulling machine involves no patentable invention.—Royer v. Roth, 132 U. S. 201, 10 S. Ct. 58, 33 L. Ed. 322.

It being old for bakers to use dies to cut dough into various shapes, there was no patentable invention in making a single die to cut dough, on a flat surface, into the shape of a pretzel.—Butler v. Steckel, 137 U. S. 21, 11 S. Ct. 25, 34 L. Ed. 582, affirming decree (C. C.) 27 F. 219.

While the promotion of an old device, such, for instance, as a torsional spring, to a new sphere of action, in which it performs a new function, involves invention, the transfer or adaptation of the same device to a similar sphere of action, where it performs substantially the same function, does not involve invention.—Western Electric Co. v. La Rue, 139 U. S. 601, 11 S. Ct. 670, 35 L. Ed. 294, affirming decree La Rue v. Western Electric Co. (C. C.) 31 F. 80.

It was shown that one Edwin Holmes, a maker of electric burglar alarms, had insulated his wires with a double layer of fibrous material, each layer being separately painted, and the second layer applied before the first was dry. Held that, although his purpose was merely to obtain perfect insulation and not to secure incombustibility, his prior use of this means invalidated the Cowles patent, under the rule that the application of an old invention to a new and analogous use does not involve invention.—Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. Electrical Supply Co., 144 U. S. 11, 12 S. Ct. 601, 36 L. Ed. 327, affirming decree (C. C.) 32 F. 81, and (C. C.) 35 F. 68.

The use of safety pins—that is, pins which will break under sudden and abnormal strains, and thus save the rest of the machinery—being old, there is no invention in using such pins in connection with the driving gear of a stone crusher.—Gates Iron Works v. Fraser, 153 U. S. 332, 14 S. Ct. 883, 38 L. Ed. 734, affirming decree (C. C.) 42 F. 49.

The application of a patented device to a use which was new only in the patented machine, and was well known in other machinery, constitutes mere mechanical skill, and does not constitute a patentable invention. Decree Stover Mfg. Co. v. Mast, Foos & Co., 89 F. 333, 32 C. C. A. 231, affirmed.—Mast, Foos & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co., 20 S. Ct. 708, 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. Ed. 856.

The device of the Martin patent, No. 433,531, for an improvement in a windmill which consists of the combination of an external toothed pinion with an internal toothed spur wheel, is invalid for lack of invention, because that kind of a combination had been previously well known in other machinery.—Id.

§30. Reduction to practical use or operation.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 34.

The fact that a machine is patented is some evidence of its operativeness, as well as its utility; and when a model constructed after a design shown in a patent is not perfectly operative, but can be made so by an alteration, the inference is that there was an error in working out the drawings, and not that the patentee deliberately took out a patent for an inoperative device.—Dashiell v. Grosvenor, 16 S. Ct. 805, 162 U. S. 425, 40 L. Ed. 1025, affirming decree 66 F. 334, 13 C. C. A. 593, 27 L. R. A. 67.

§31. Evidence of invention.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 35-40.

§32. — Presumptions and burden of proof.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 35, 36.

A patent is prima facie evidence that the patentee was the inventor of the thing patented.—Cantrell v. Wallick, 117 U. S. 689, 6 S. Ct. 970, 29 L. Ed. 1017, affirming Wallick v. Cantrell (C. C.) 12 F. 790.

§35. — Utility and extent of use.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 39.

Patent No. 228,186 to Maurice Gandy, was for a hard, nonelastic machinery belt, composed of cotton canvas or duck having its warp thread larger than its weft, both warp and weft being hard spun. There had been various prior unsuccessful attempts to make belts of canvas, and Gandy himself had experimented for several years, but found that the canvas of hard-spun warp and weft cracked because of the excessive expansion of the outer surface in going round the pulley. He finally conceived the idea of obviating this difficulty by diminishing the thickness of the belt, while retaining the same strength, which he accomplished by making the warp larger than the weft. The belt thus made soon went into large use, both in this country and Europe. Held sufficient to show that the last step involved both invention and utility.—Gandy v. Main Belting Co., 143 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 598, 36 L. Ed. 272, reversing decree (C. C.) 28 F. 570.

Upon the question whether letters patent No. 298,303, granted May 6, 1884, to George Krementz, for a new and improved collar button having a hollow head and stem and formed out of a single continuous plate of sheet metal, involved invention, it was shown that the devices combined strength with lightness and economy of material, that its advantages were at once recognized by the trade, so that large quantities were sold, and that the person charged with infringement of the patent, who was skilled in the art, had only patented buttons composed of two parts soldered together. Held, that the device was patentable, and not merely result of the application of the ordinary skill of the calling, in the improvement of prior devices.—Krementz v. S. Cottle Co., 148 U. S.

556, 13 S. Ct. 719, 37 L. Ed. 558, reversing decree (C. C.) 39 F. 323.

The widespread commercial success of a patented device should be taken into consideration in determining the question of invention.—(1911) Diamond Rubber Co. of New York v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., 31 S. Ct. 444, 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. Ed. 527, affirming decree Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. of New York (1908) 162 F. 892, 89 C. C. A. 582.

(B) NOVELTY.

§37. Nature and necessity of patentable novelty.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 41-44.

The first claim of letters patent No. 224,901, issued March 2, 1880, to A. W. Brinkerhoff for an improvement in "rectal specula," consisting in a slide extending the entire length of the tube, is void, in view of the prior art; and the fact that the slide of the patent is of metal, while former slides were of glass, is immaterial, since the material of which the slide is composed was not claimed as an essential feature of the device.—Brinkerhoff v. Aloe, 146 U. S. 515, 13 S. Ct. 221, 36 L. Ed. 1068, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 92.

The novelty claimed was the combination, with a common form of road-making machine, of a hand wheel having such weight in relation to the weight of the scraper blade to be lifted that it would continue to rotate after the hand of the operator was removed, so as to enable him to secure a new grasp of the wheel. The use of hand wheels in the regulation of scraper blades for ditching, grading streets, and road clearing was old, as was the equalization of the momentum, when required by the exigencies of the case, as in capstan wheels, crank-shaft wheels, rudder-regulating wheels, and spinning wheels. Held, that increasing the weight of the hand wheel did not involve patentable novelty.—American Road-Mach. Co. v. Pennock & Sharp Co., 164 U. S. 26, 17 S. Ct. 1, 41 L. Ed. 337, affirming decree (C. C.) 45 F. 252.

§38. Application of new principle.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 45.

A scheme for preserving, filing, and canceling bonds, etc., by pasting them in blank books with appropriate spaces for data, differing from one previously in use only in providing spaces in the file books for the bonds, and in grouping the coupons according to the dates of payment, instead of with the bonds to which they belong, does not involve a patentable novelty.—Munson v. City of New York, 124 U. S. 601, 8 S. Ct. 622, 31 L. Ed. 586, reversing judgment (C. C.) 3 F. 338.

§39. Use of new means or new mode of construction or operation.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 46.

The claim of patent No. 101,590, to Turner Cowing, is for a wood pavement composed of blocks, each side having a single plain surface, and one or more of the sides being inclined, and the blocks being so laid on their larger ends as to form wedge-shaped spaces to receive concrete or other suitable filling. The English patent of 1825, to Lindsay, described blocks of stone of the same shape, and mentioned as a filling small stones, gravel, or grout. The pavement described in the Nicholson patent of 1867 was composed of blocks of wood laid in rows across the street, with spaces obtained by interposing narrow wooden strips, to be filled with concrete, or other suitable filling. Held, that the Cowing patent possessed no patentable novelty.—Brown v. District of Columbia, 130 U. S. 87, 9 S. Ct. 437, 32 L. Ed. 863.

There can be no valid patent for an article, as a new article of manufacture, when such article, in its completed state, does not differ at all from prior articles of the same kind, and when the only difference is in the process or method by which a certain part of it is formed.—Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 15 S. Ct. 745, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. Ed. 899.

⇨40. Use of material or device for new purpose or function.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 47.

In trucks already in use on railroad cars the kingbolt which held the car to each truck passed through a bolster supporting the weight of the car, and through an elongated opening in the plate below, so as to allow the swiveling of the truck upon the bolt, and lateral motion in the truck; and the bolster was suspended by divergent pendent links from brackets on the frame, whereby the weight of the car tended to counteract any tendency to depart from the line of the track. Held, that a patent for employing such a truck as the forward truck of a locomotive engine with fixed driving wheels was void for want of novelty.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co., 110 U. S. 490, 4 S. Ct. 220, 28 L. Ed. 222.

Letters patent granted May 10, 1859, to Charles and Andrew Spring were for an "improvement in lathes for turning irregular forms" but the material to be used was not specified, and no disclaimer limiting the claim to any particular materials was filed. It appeared that the same combination claimed had previously been used for turning articles from wood. Held, that the claim was void for want of novelty; the application of the combination to other materials not being a patentable invention.—Howe Mach. Co. v. National Needle Co., 10 S. Ct. 570, 134 U. S. 388, 33 L. Ed. 963.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 43.

The claim of letters patent No. 142,933, granted to David H. Nation and Ezekiel C. Little, as inventors, September 16, 1873, for an "improvement in reservoir cooking-stoves," namely: "(1) The combination, with the back-plate, I, of the cooking-stove, A, of the reservoir, C, arranged on a support about midway between the top and bottom plates of the stove, and the air-chamber, b, between the stove back and reservoir front, open at the top, and communicating with the air in the room, substantially as and for the purposes set forth; (2) the combination, with the stove, A, and reservoir, C, of the small opening, a, the sheet-flue, G, under the entire bottom of the reservoir, and the small exit-passage or pipe, E, all substantially as and for the purposes herein set forth"—are void for want of novelty.—Bussey v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 4 S. Ct. 38, 110 U. S. 131, 28 L. Ed. 95, reversing decree 1 F. 640, 1 McCrary, 161.

Claims 2 and 3 of letter patent No. 142,934, granted to David L. Nation and Ezekiel C. Little, September 16, 1873, for an improvement in reservoir cooking-stove, reading, "the portable reservoir, F, with the flue, E, in the rear side, in combination with the portable base-pan or flue-shell, D, substantially as and for the purposes herein set forth," are void for want of novelty.—Id.

The Gately patent, No. 86,296, for an improvement in vulcanized india rubber piston packing, was for the combination of a solid rubber strip with the kind of packing described by the McBurney patent, No. 24,569. The McBurney packing is made by coating several pieces of canvas with a compound of india rubber, sulphur, and silica or plumbago, laying them one above another, and compressing and vulcanizing them into one solid piece. The piece is then cut diagonally, and bent into a ring, so as to bring the ends of the threads of the fabric against the piston, thus always presenting the same kind of surface, notwithstanding the wear. To this the Gately patent adds a backing composed of a strip of pure india rubber, the whole being vulcanized together so as to constitute a homogeneous piece; the object being to obtain a more uniform pressure by means of the elastic backing, which, when laterally compressed in the stuffing box, forces the packing inward against the piston. Held, that this was a novel and patentable invention.—Magowan v. New York Belting & Packing Co., 141 U. S. 332, 12 S. Ct. 71, 35 L. Ed. 781, affirming decree New York Belting & Packing Co. v. Magowan (C. C.) 27 F. 362.

The novelty claimed was the combination, with a common form of road-making machine, of a hand-wheel having such weight in relation to the weight of the scraper-blade to be lifted that it would continue to rotate after the hand of the operator was removed, so as to enable him to secure a new grasp of the wheel. The use of hand-wheels in the regulation of scraper-blades for ditching, grading streets, and road clearing was old, as was the equalization of the momentum, when required by the exigencies of the case, as in capstan-wheels, crank-shaft wheels, rudder-regulating wheels, and spinning-wheels. Held, that increasing the weight of the hand-wheel did not involve patentable invention of novelty.—American Road-Mach. Co. v. Pennock & Sharp Co., 17 S. Ct. 1, 164 U. S. 26, 41 L. Ed. 837, affirming decree 45 F. 252.

Combinations are not identical, because intended to obtain the same result, unless the devices or mechanical means by which the desired result is secured are the same. Decree 20 Ct. Cl. 354, affirmed.—Hubbell v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 24, 179 U. S. 77, 45 L. Ed. 95.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 50.

One of the claims of a design patent was "for a rubber mat, consisting of corrugations, depressions, or ridges in parallel lines, combined or arranged relatively, * * * to produce variegated, kaleidoscopic, moire, stereoscopic, or similar effects." Held void for want of novelty, since it included every variety of effect, which can be produced by the arrangement of ridges in parallel lines, and it is not new to produce variations of light and shade by depressions in the surface of materials.—New York Belting & Packing Co. v. New Jersey Car Spring & Rubber Co., 137 U. S. 445, 11 S. Ct. 193, 34 L. Ed. 741.

The novelty claimed was the combination, with a common form of road-making machine, of a hand-wheel having such weight in relation to the weight of the scraper-blade to be lifted that it would continue to rotate after the hand of the operator was removed, so as to enable him to secure a new grasp of the wheel. The use of hand-wheels in the regulation of scraper-blades for ditching, grading streets, and road clearing was old, as was the equalization of the momentum, when required by the exigencies of the case, as in capstan-wheels, crank-shaft wheels, rudder-regulating wheels, and spinning-wheels. Held, that the use of such heavier wheel did not involve invention. 45 F. 252 affirmed.—American Road-Machine Co. v. Pennock & Sharp Co., 17 S. Ct. 1, 164 U. S. 26, 41 L. Ed. 837, affirming decree (C. C.) 45 F. 252.

A combination patent for an article which, when constructed in accordance with the specifications, has proved a great commercial success, may not be held devoid of invention because the inventor may not have known all of the forces which he had brought into operation.—(1911) Diamond Rubber Co. of New York v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., 31 S. Ct. 444, 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. Ed. 527, affirming decree Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. of New York (1908) 162 F. 892, 89 C. C. A. 582.

45. Evidence of novelty.

A patent is prima facie evidence of the novelty of the thing patented.—Cantrell v. Wallick, 117 U. S. 689, 6 S. Ct. 970, 29 L. Ed. 1017, affirming Wallicks v. Cantrell (C. C.) 12 F. 790.

Where the patent merely covers an aggregation of old devices without securing any new or useful result by their joint action, it is proper to refuse an instruction to the jury that the fact that the machine had practically superseded all others was strong evidence of its novelty.—Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 141 U. S. 539, 12 S. Ct. 66, 35 L. Ed. 849, affirming judgment (C. C.) 28 F. 360.

The fact that goods manufactured under a patent void for want of novelty went into immediate use, while those made under anticipating patents were slow of sale, will not avail to save the patent.—Duer v. Corbin Cabinet Lock Co., 149 U. S. 216, 13 S. Ct. 850, 37 L. Ed. 707, affirming decree (C. C.) Corbin Cabinet Lock Co. v. Eagle Lock Co., 37 F. 338.

(C) UTILITY.

49. Evidence of utility.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 59-62.

An erroneous decision against a patentee in a suit against one infringer is no ground for not holding other infringers to account to the patentee in another suit for all profits, gains, and savings which defendants have made from the use of his invention during the whole period of this infringement, including the time prior to the reversal of such decision.—Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 8 S. Ct. 894, 31 L. Ed. 664.

Patent No. 228,186, to Maurice Gandy, was for a hard, nonelastic machinery belt, composed of cotton canvas or duck having its warp thread larger than its weft, both warp and weft being hard spun. There had been various prior unsuccessful attempts to make belts of canvas, and Gandy himself had experimented for several years, but found that the canvas of hardspun warp and weft cracked because of the excessive expansion of the outer surface in going round the pulley. He finally conceived the idea of obviating this difficulty by diminishing the thickness of the belt, while retaining the same strength, which he accomplished by making the warp larger than the weft. The belt thus made soon went into large use, both in this country and Europe. Held sufficient to show that the last step involved both invention and utility.—Gandy v. Main Belting Co., 143 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 598, 36 L. Ed. 272, reversing decree (C. C.) 28 F. 570.

The utility of a patented device may be attested by the litigation over it.—(1911) Diamond Rubber Co. of New York v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., 31 S. Ct. 444, 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. Ed. 527, affirming decree (1908) Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. of New York, 162 F. 892, 89 C. C. A. 582.

(D) ANTICIPATION.

50. Prior knowledge or use.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 65-74.

51. — Nature and extent in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 65-69, 72, 74.

The third claim of letters patent No. 224,991, issued March 2, 1880, to A. W. Brinkerhoff, covering an "incline" in cylindrical tubular specula, having slotted sides and closed ends, such incline being for the purpose of preventing injury by impaction against pile tumors, enlarged glands, etc., in withdrawing the instrument, was anticipated by prior devices, where in the incline, though not so pronounced as in the patent, seems to have effectually answered the purpose.—Brinkerhoff v. Aloe, 146 U. S. 515, 13 S. Ct. 221, 38 L. Ed. 1068, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 92.

A mere suggestion in the specifications of a patent that it may be desirable, in some cases, to make certain parts of the machine adjustable, does not operate to anticipate an invention of mechanism for producing such adjustability.—Gordon v. Warder, 150 U. S. 47, 14 S. Ct. 32, 37 L. Ed. 992, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 592.

A proper test of the validity of a patent is in the application of the rule that what would infringe, if later, anticipates, if earlier.—Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 81, 37 L. Ed. 1059.

54. — Unsuccessful and abandoned devices.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 73.

When it clearly appears that a prior device was in all essentials the device of the patent and in fact accomplished practical work and was put to ordinary use, anticipation is made out though the anticipatory device did not operate as perfectly as that of the patent and was not long kept in use.—Brush v. Condit, 132 U. S. 39, 10 S. Ct. 1, 33 L. Ed. 251.

The invention of a winged shaft to be used in a cornsheller to prevent clogging, and made to revolve in the direction of the entering corn, was not anticipated by the previous use of a winged shaft, revolving in the contrary direction, to prevent clogging by driving back some of the ears, which retarded the feed, nor by a rotating shaft, with wheels thereon, placed under the chute, which did not prevent clogging.—Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 L. Ed. 103, reversing decree Adams v. Keystone Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 35 F. 579, and (O. C.) 41 F. 595.

56. — Different use or purpose.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 89.

A process patent is not anticipated by mechanism which might, with slight alterations, have been adapted to carry out that process, unless such use of it would have occurred to one whose duty it was to make practical use of the mechanism described. Decree, Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 37 C. C. A. 593, 96 F. 850, reversed.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 698, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968.

57. Evidence of prior knowledge or use.

59. — Admissibility in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 76.

Under Rev. St. § 4923 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3396], evidence of a prior use in a foreign country is inadmissible, where such prior use is not shown in a patent or printed publication.—Hurlbut v. Schillinger, 130 U. S. 458, 9 S. Ct. 584, 32 L. Ed. 1011.

62. — Weight and sufficiency.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 73.

A patent sued upon will not be declared invalid solely upon oral evidence of the existence and use of unpatented anticipating devices, unless the proof is clear, satisfactory, and beyond a reasonable doubt.—Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co. v. Beat 'Em All Barbed Wire Co., 143 U. S. 275, 12 S. Ct. 443, 36 L. Ed. 154, reversing decree (C. C.) 33 F. 261.

63. Prior patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 79-81.

65. — Sufficiency of description.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 80.

A fair test of whether the American patent was anticipated by, or included in, the foreign patents, is to consider whether the use of the exact process described in the foreign patents would have been enjoined by an American court as an infringement of the American patent.—Commercial Mfg. Co. v. Fairbank Canning Co., 135 U. S. 178, 10 S. Ct. 718, 34 L. Ed. 88, affirming (C. C.) 27 F. 78.

66. — Operation and effect.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 79, 81; 38 Cent. Dig. Mun. Corp. § 1555.

The process claim of the Jones patent, No. 404,414, for mixing molten pig iron so as to secure greater uniformity in chemical composition and avoid the necessity of remelting before further treatment in converters, the dominant idea of which is the permanent retention in a large covered reservoir of so large a quantity of the molten metal as will absorb variations of the product from the blast furnaces received into it and discharged from it into the converters, was not anticipated by prior patents or publications which contemplated the storage or mixture in reservoirs of molten metal from blast furnaces for use in casting or converters, in none of which was the retention of a quantity of the molten metal recognized as essential, or by the practice in steel works of mixing remelted pig iron from cupola furnaces in receiving or reservoir ladles in which a considerable residue was generally maintained.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 698, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968, reversing decree Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 96 F. 850, 37 C. C. A. 598, which reversed (C. C.) 89 F. 721.

69. — Sufficiency of description.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 84.

Unless the earlier printed and published description exhibits the later patented invention in such a full and intelligible manner as to enable persons skilled in the art to which the invention is related to comprehend it without assistance from the patent, or to make it, or repeat the process claimed, it is insufficient to invalidate the patent.—The Driven-Well Cases, 122 U. S. 40, 7 S. Ct. 1073, 30 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree (C. C.) Andrews v. Eames, 15 F. 106.

Anticipation of a combination of cotton with boracic acid and glycerine to form a convenient dressing was not established by previous publications, showing that the specific qualities of glycerine and boracic acid were well known, and that those articles had been successfully used for like purposes, but not indicating that any one had accomplished what the patent described and claimed.—Seabury & Johnson v. Am Ende, 152 U. S. 561, 14 S. Ct. 683, 38 L. Ed. 553, affirming decree Am Ende v. Seabury (C. C.) 36 F. 593, and (C. C.) 43 F. 672.

72. Identity of invention.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 86-91.

In letters patent No. 272,660, granted to Alfred A. Cowles, February 20, 1883, for an improvement in insulated electric conductors, the alleged invention was a fireproof insulator. The wire, having been covered with a layer of fibrous material, was passed through a vessel of metallic paint, and a second layer of fibrous material was added while the paint was fresh, thus forcing the saturation of both layers. The noncombustibility is the result of filling the pores and interstices of the fibrous layers with the metallic paint. In previous English patents, paint had been applied to insulators in connection with inflammable materials, but solely for the purpose of protecting the insulators. It was not shown that previous to the Cowles invention paint had been knowingly used, except experimentally, to make a noncombustible insulator. Held, that the defenses failed, so far as based upon the previous English patents, and the known use of paint as a fireproof covering for electric wires.—Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. Electrical Supply Co., 144 U. S. 11, 12 S. Ct. 601, 36 L. Ed. 327, affirming decree (C. C.) 32 F. 81, and (C. C.) 35 F. 68.

Letters patent No. 116,266 were granted June 27, 1871, to Alanson Cary for an improvement in furniture springs. The improvement related to spiral springs usually made in a conical form of steel wire, and used in upholstering sofas, chairs, etc. Such springs were made of hard-drawn wire, coiled and forced to a proper shape; but in coiling the metal was unavoidably weakened, the outer portion being stretched, and the inner portion crushed. The invention consisted in subjecting the spring to "spring-temper heat," which is about 600° F., by means of which a complete homogeneity in the metal was produced, thereby increasing its durability and power of resistance. The same process, however, had been long before used in the manufacture of "wire bells" for clocks, and in the manufacture of hair balance springs for marine clocks; the object being in the one case to give tone to the bell, and in the other to increase the elasticity and durability of the spring. Held, that this use constituted an anticipation, notwithstanding that the purpose of the process was different from the purposes of the prior use, and that experts in the tempering of steel were surprised by the results produced by the patented process.—Lovell Mfg. Co. v. Cary, 147 U. S. 623, 13 S. Ct. 472, 37 L. Ed. 307, reversing Cary v. Lovell Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 31 F. 344.

A patent for hair crimpers made by passing a strip of soft metal through a liquid cement, and covering it, while wet, with a braid of fibrous material, which thereby becomes cemented to it so that the strip may be cut in any lengths without fraying, is anticipated by crimpers made in the same manner, except that the metal strip receives a cotton covering before it is passed through the cement, both coverings being cemented to the strip for the same purpose.—Giles v. Heysinger, 150 U. S. 627, 14 S. Ct. 211, 37 L. Ed. 1204.

A device to prevent the chute of corn-shellers from clogging which consists of a shaft above the throat with wings, wheels, or projections revolving in the direction of the entering corn was not anticipated by the previous use of a winged shaft, revolving in the contrary direction, to prevent clogging, by driving back some of the ears, which retarded the feed, nor by a rotating shaft, with wheels thereon, placed under the chute which did not prevent clogging.—Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 L. Ed. 103, reversing decree

Adams v. Keystone Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 35 F. 579, and 41 F. 595.

(E) PRIOR PUBLIC USE OR SALE.

75. What constitutes public use.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 92-97.

Where an inventor allows the unrestricted use of his invention by another, without injunction of secrecy or other condition, for more than two years prior to his application for a patent, although such use may be secret, it will constitute a public use, under Rev. St. § 4886 (16 Stat. 201, § 24 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382]), and render the patent subsequently issued void.—Manning v. Cape Ann Isinglass & Glue Co., 108 U. S. 462, 2 S. Ct. 860, 27 L. Ed. 793.

Under section 7 of the act of March 3, 1839, more than two years' public use or sale prior to the date of application invalidated the patent, whether such use and sale was with or without the consent or allowance of the patentee.—The Driven-Well Cases, 123 U. S. 267, 8 S. Ct. 101, 31 L. Ed. 160.

Plaintiff's testimony showed that for more than four years previous to the date of the patent he had been using the invention for profit, and had manufactured and sold several thousand gross of the articles, which the machine was made to produce; that the machine was defective, but that improvements were not made until after it had been in use for more than two years, and that the defects were then only partially remedied. During the years previous to patent it was the only machine producing these articles, and plaintiff alone supplied the market. The evidence in regard to the purpose on the part of the plaintiff to patent his invention, and that his experiments and use of the machine, prior to his application for a patent, were to perfect its mechanism, and improve its operation to that end, was vague and indefinite. Held, that the use of the invention was a public use, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 4886 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], which provides that "any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful . . . machine, . . . not in public use or on sale for more than two years prior to his application, . . . may . . . obtain a patent therefor," and that the patent was therefore void.—Smith & Griggs Mfg. Co. v. Sprague, Adm'r, 123 U. S. 249, 8 S. Ct. 122, 31 L. Ed. 141, reversing Sprague v. Smith & Griggs Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 12 F. 721.

Under Act March 3, 1839, § 7, providing that every person who has or shall have purchased or constructed a newly invented machine before the application of the inventor for a patent shall be held to possess the right to use and vend it to others, and that no patent shall be held invalid by reason of such prior use, except on proof of abandonment of such invention to the public, or that such prior use has been for more than two years before application for a patent, it is not necessary to invalidate the patent that the prior use shall have been with the knowledge, consent, or allowance of the patentee.—Andrews v. Hovey, 124 U. S. 604, 8 S. Ct. 676, 31 L. Ed. 557.

The fact that an inventor of an improvement in dentistry taught it to a large number of dentists throughout the country for several years before applying for a patent, and received pay for such instruction, precludes him from contending that the invention was then in a tentative or experimental stage.—International Tooth-Crown Co. v. Gaylord, 140 U. S. 55, 11 S. Ct. 716, 35 L. Ed. 847.

76. What constitutes public sale.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 92, 98.

Under section 7 of the act of March 3, 1839, more than two years' public use or sale prior to the date of application invalidated the patent, whether such use and sale was with or without the consent or allowance of the patentee.—The Driven-Well Cases, 123 U. S. 267, 8 S. Ct. 101, 31 L. Ed. 160.

79. Use or sale in foreign country.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 101.

The two years' prior public use and sale which, under Rev. St. § 4886 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], precludes the issuance of a patent, is a public use and sale within the United States, and such use and sale in a foreign country do not affect the inventor's right.—Gandy v. Main Belting Co., 143 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 598, 36 L. Ed. 272, reversed decree (C. C.) 28 F. 570.

(F) ABANDONMENT.

82. What constitutes abandonment in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 105-107.

The patentee may claim the whole or only a part of his invention, and if he only describes and claims a part he is presumed to have abandoned the residue to the public. The claim is the measure of his right to relief, and, while the specification may be referred to to limit the claim, it can never be made available to expand it.—McClain v. Ortmayer, 141 U. S. 419, 12 S. Ct. 76, 35 L. Ed. 800, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 284.

83. Delay in making or prosecuting application for patent.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 108, 109.

Where an application for a patent has been rejected, and afterwards withdrawn, and the inventor, without substantial reason or excuse, makes no effort to renew it for eight years, during which time the subject-matter of the invention has been incorporated into many subsequent inventions, he must be deemed to have abandoned the invention.—United States Rifle & Cartridge Co. v. Whitney Arms Co., 118 U. S. 22, 6 S. Ct. 950, 30 L. Ed. 53.

In June, 1861, Green put down a driven well at his house, and in October of that year he publicly drove a well, in the manner described in his original patent for a "driven well," No. 73,426, at some fair grounds, for the use of soldiers there in camp. Having demonstrated its success, he gave orders for the construction of proper apparatus for the driving of such wells, and made arrangements for its transportation with his regiment as it was moved to the seat of war. About that time, and down to 1866, he was harassed by a criminal prosecution and by civil suits. Held, that these acts did not constitute an abandonment, there being no intention to that effect shown; and, under the acts of congress of 1836 and 1839, then in force, there being no evidence of any sale of the invention by Green before his application, and none from which to conclude that there was any use of the invention by others for more than two years prior thereto, an abandonment would not be presumed.—Beedle v. Bennett, 122 U. S. 71, 7 S. Ct. 1090, 30 L. Ed. 1074.

In support of the claim of Daniel Drawbaugh that he "was the original and first inventor and discoverer of the art of communicating articulate speech between distant places by voltaic and magneto electricity," it was in evidence that he had never told any one how earlier instruments with which he experimented were made, or what his process was, until he was called as a witness in December, 1881, in the case of American Bell Tel. Co. v. People's Tel. Co. (C. C.) 22 Fed. 309, 22 Blatchf. 531. This was nearly 20 years after he had begun his experiments, nearly 7 after he had made and used "perfectly adjusted and finished magneto instruments," and more than 5 after he had constructed microphones, and kept them in his shop. It was also nearly 6 years after the date of Bell's patent, more than 5 after the success of Bell's discovery had been proclaimed, and 2 after Bell had brought his first suit for infringement. In the meantime Drawbaugh had had abundant means and opportunities to make his claim known, and his instruments were fairly tested in March, 1882, and failed to produce satisfactory results, and, when offered in evidence, were mere "remains." Held an abandonment.—Dolbear v. American Bell Tel. Co., 8 S. Ct. 778, 126 U. S. 1, 31 L. Ed. 863.

The invention described in letters patent No. 262,126, granted August 1, 1882, to Henry Root, for an improvement in the construction of cable railways, was devised by him in the expectation of being employed as engineer to construct a cable road. The road was in fact constructed by him in that capacity, and since April 9, 1878, has been in successful operation for profit, and was under his superintendence for several years, but he made no application for a patent for more than three years. He testified that he had some doubt about the durability and success of the invention; that in the spring of 1879 he discovered a slight defect in the structure, which he thought might lead to trouble, and that he was not certain of success until 1881; but in the meantime he made no further examination of the defects, and did not express his doubts or discoveries to his employers or others. Held, that sufficient time elapsed to test the structure and apply for a patent within the two years; that the use was not an experimental one; and that he had, therefore, abandoned the invention to the public.—Root v. Third Ave. R. Co., 146 U. S. 210, 13 S. Ct. 100, 36 L. Ed. 946, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 673.

III. PERSONS ENTITLED TO PATENTS.

§93. Employers and workmen.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 125.

An employé under a contract to devise and make improvements in and get up and perfect plows for his employer, a manufacturer of plows, engaged in that work, and at his employer's expense, and with his material, and the aid of his workmen, devised a plow which his employer thereupon manufactured. Subsequently the employment ceased, and the employé took out a patent for his invention. Held, that the employé was not a trustee of the title of the patent for his employer, who had, at most, a mere license to manufacture.—Hagood v. Hewitt, 119 U. S. 226, 7 S. Ct. 193, 30 L. Ed. 369.

A manufacturing corporation which has employed a skilled workman, for a stated compensation, to devote his time and services to devising and making improvements in articles there manufactured, is not entitled to a conveyance of patents for inventions made by him while so employed, in the absence of express agreement to that effect.—Dalzell v. Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co., 149 U. S. 315, 13 S. Ct. 886, 37 L. Ed. 749, reversing decree (C. C.) Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. Dalzell, 38 F. 597.

In a suit for infringement of a patent, defendant filed a plea alleging that the patentee had been in its employ; that his wages were increased in consideration of his agreement to dedicate his skill and inventive talent and genius towards perfecting machines and devices used in defendant's business, and to obtain patents at defendant's expense, and assign them to defendant. The only evidence to support this plea was that plaintiff asked for an increase of salary, saying that he was about to make improvements which would amply justify the same; that such increase was thereupon made; that thereafter plaintiff represented that he had made valuable improvements, for which patents should be obtained; that he offered to procure such patents, and assign them to defendant free of charge, if defendant would pay the expense of obtaining the same; and that patents were so obtained at defendant's expense, but that plaintiff refused to assign them. Held, that this evidence was insufficient to support the contract alleged in the plea, and that the plea should therefore have been overruled.—Id.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 126.

The mere fact that a person is in the employ of the government does not preclude him from making improvements in the machines with which he is connected, and obtaining patents therefor as his individual property.—Gill v. United States, 160 U. S. 426, 16 S. Ct. 322, 40 L. Ed. 480.

IV. APPLICATIONS AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

Finality of decision of court of appeals of District of Columbia on appeal from commissioner of patents, see Appeal and Error, §84.

Jurisdiction and proceedings in courts of District of Columbia, see Courts, §446.

Limitation of action for application, see Limitation of Actions, §130.

Mandamus to compel issuance of letters patent, see Mandamus, §86.

Review by Supreme Court of decisions of Courts of District of Columbia, see Courts, §388.

§98. Requisites of application in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 122.

So far as rule 41 of the Patent Office rules of practice prevents an inventor from uniting in one application process and apparatus claims which are essentially the same invention, it is invalid as an abuse of the discretion vested in the Patent Office to permit or deny a joinder of inventions.—United States ex rel. Stienmetz v. Allen, 24 S. Ct. 416, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. Ed. 555.

§99. Description of invention in specification.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 123-125, 127-129.

The direction given in letters patent No. 58,294, to G. W. Richardson for an improvement in steam safety valves, that the flange or lip is to be separated from the valve seat by about one sixty-fourth of an inch for an ordinary spring, with less space for a strong spring, and more space for a weak spring, to regulate the escape of steam, as required, is a sufficient description, as matter of law, and is not shown to be insufficient, as a matter of fact.—Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co., 113 U. S. 157, 5 S. Ct. 513, 28 L. Ed. 939.

A specification for a new process in the treatment of oleaginous seeds, which stated that it consisted in passing the seeds under powerful rollers and then moistening the crushed seeds in a well-known steam-mixing machine, without passing them under the muller stones, as formerly, when construed with the knowledge of the art at the time of its date, sufficiently describes the process.—Lawther v. Hamilton, 124 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 342, 31 L. Ed. 325, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 811.

Under Rev. St. § 4888 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3383], a patent involving a chemical process cannot be sustained when the specification is not full and clear enough to give one skilled in chemistry such an idea of the particular kinds and character of the chemicals, or combinations of chemicals, with the relative proportions of each, as will enable him to use the invention without resorting to experiments of his own to discover those ingredients.—Bene v. Jean-tet, 129 U. S. 683, 9 S. Ct. 428, 32 L. Ed. 803.

In a patent for borated cotton, the description of the process began thus: "I first prepare a solution of boracic acid in the usual manner, and add thereto a small proportion of glycerine." Held, that this was sufficiently definite, as the solution of boracic acid was well known to persons skilled in the art, and they would have no difficulty in determining the amount of glycerine to be added.—Seabury & Johnson v. Am Ende, 152 U. S. 561, 14 S. Ct. 683, 38 L. Ed. 553, affirming decree Am Ende v. Seabury (C. C.) 86 F. 593, and (C. C.) 43 F. 672.

The failure to describe a complete mechanism in the specifications of a patent for a process is not material if enough is disclosed to indicate to those skilled in such matters the mechanism whereby the method of the patent can be put into operation.—Expanded Metal Co. v. Bradford, 29 S. Ct. 652, 214 U. S. 366, 53 L. Ed. 1034; General Fireproofing Co. v. Expanded Metal Co., Id. Affirming decrees Bradford v. Expanded Metal Co. (1906) 146 F. 984, 77 C. C. A. 230, and Expanded Metal Co. v. General Fireproofing Co. (1908) 164 F. 849, 90 C. C. A. 611.

100. Drawings, specimens, models, or photographs.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 136, 140.

Under Act Cong. July 8, 1870, § 26, providing that an applicant for a patent must file a written description of his invention, etc., the specification of letters patent for a design for a carpet, which is accompanied by a photograph of the design, and which states that the nature of the design is fully represented by the photograph, sets forth a sufficient description.—Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 S. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63.

101. Claims.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 141.

Act Cong. July 8, 1870, § 26, provides that an applicant for a patent must file a written description of his invention, and "particularly point out and distinctly claim the part, improvement, or combination which he claims," etc. The specification of letters patent for a design for a carpet was accompanied by a photograph of the design, and stated that the nature of the design was fully represented by the photograph, and claimed "the configuration of the design hereunto annexed when applied to carpeting." Held to be a sufficient claim.—Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 S. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63.

102. Signature, attestation, and oath.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 142.

A patent issued after the inventor's death, on an application made by him, is not invalidated by the fact that the specifications originally filed with the application were amended, after the inventor's death, without any new oath, such amendment being within the scope of the original oath and description, and by way of limitation of the claims.—De la Vergue Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 13 S. Ct. 283, 37 L. Ed. 138, reversing opinion (C. C.) 49 F. 916.

106. Interferences.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 146-149.

It is error for the patent office, after awarding priority to one party in interference proceedings, to divide the invention, and give to the opposite party a patent for a device which is clearly an equivalent, and which is in fact suggested as an alternative, in the patent issued to the inventor himself.—Du Bois v. Kirk, 158 U. S. 58, 15 S. Ct. 729, 39 L. Ed. 895, affirming decree Kirk v. Du Bois (C. C.) 33 F. 252, and (C. C.) 46 F. 486.

107. Withdrawal or abandonment of application.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 150.

An inventor is not estopped from insisting upon his application for a patent in which were united process and apparatus claims for essentially the same invention by requiring his process claims to be placed in interference with those of an existing patent after receiving a letter from the primary examiner permitting the retention of the process and apparatus claims pending the determination of the interference, but stating that the acceptance of an interference on one of the process claims would be held by the office to be an election of the prosecution of such claims, and further prosecution of the apparatus claims would not be permitted.—United States ex rel. Stienmetz v. Allen, 24 S. Ct. 416, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. Ed. 555.

109. Amendment of application.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 152.

A solicitor of patents has no authority after the death of the inventor to so amend the application as to cover a different invention from that described in the original application which is sworn to by the inventor; and a patent granted on an application so amended is void.—Eagleton Mfg. Co. v. West, Bradley & Carey Mfg. Co., 111 U. S. 490, 4 S. Ct. 593, 28 L. Ed. 493, affirming (C. C.) 2 F. 774.

Amendments of the claim of a patent to correct defects in the original application, which have been discovered in the course of litigation, will not invalidate the patent, if this is not essentially broadened thereby to cover intervening devices. Decree Beach v. Hobbs, 34 C. C. A. 248, 63 U. S. App. 626, 92 F. 146, affirmed.—Hobbs v. Beach, 21 S. Ct. 409, 180 U. S. 383, 45 L. Ed. 586.

The amended specification of the Dolan patent, No. 589,342, for a duplex acetylene gas burner or tip of the Bunsen type, having a series of inclined air passages in the sides, which, for the first time, if at all, indicates as the essence of the invention so short a chamber or cylinder as to prevent the mixing of the air taken into it, and to emit the current of gas surrounded by the greater part of such air as an envelope or film, is void under Rev. St. U. S. § 4892 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3384), because introducing entirely new matter not sworn to, where the original application made no claim for a process, and disclosed no invention of a device. Decrees, American Lava Co. v. Steward (1907) 155 F. 731, 84 C. C. A. 157, and American Lava Co. v. Kirschberger, 155 F. 740, 84 C. C. A. 166, affirmed.—Steward v. American Lava Co., 30 S. Ct. 46, 215 U. S. 161, 54 L. Ed. 139.

111. Appeals in Patent Office.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 154.

An appeal from a decision of the primary examiner upon a motion to dissolve an interference, holding that the party had the right to make the interfering claims, may be prohibited by the rules of the Patent Office without infringing the right of appeal in interferences given by Rev. St. U. S. §§ 482, 483, 4904, 4909 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 272, 3389, 3390], since the appeal therein provided for must be deemed limited to final decisions upon the question of priority of invention, which, under these statutes, is the sole question for determination in interference cases. Judgment, Allen v. United States (1905) 26 App. D. C. 8, affirmed.—United States v. Allen, 27 S. Ct. 141, 203 U. S. 476, 51 L. Ed. 281.

112. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of Patent Office.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 162-165.

While the decision of the commissioner on questions of fact necessary to be decided before issuing a patent is conclusive in an infringement suit, except as the statute gives specific defenses in that regard, yet the statutory defenses are not the only defenses which may be made against a patent; and where it is evident that the commissioner, under a misconception of the law, has exceeded his authority in granting or reissuing a patent, there is nothing to prevent one sued for infringement from availing himself of the illegality.—Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 5 S. Ct. 174, 6 S. Ct. 451, 28 L. Ed. 665.

A patentee cannot insist upon a construction of his patent which will include what the Patent Office has expressly required him to abandon and disavow as a condition of the grant.—Sutter v. Robinson, 7 S. Ct. 376, 119 U. S. 530, 30 L. Ed. 492, reversing decree (C. C.) Robinson v. Sutter, 8 F. 828.

In a suit under Rev. St. § 4915 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3392], to procure an adjudication that complainant is entitled to a patent, a previous decision by the commissioner of patents in interference proceedings upon the question of fact as to priority of invention must be accepted as controlling, unless the contrary is established by testimony which, in character and amount, carries thorough conviction.—Morgan v. Daniels, 153 U. S. 120, 14 S. Ct. 772, 38 L. Ed. 657, reversing judgment (C. C.) Daniels v. Morgan, 42 F. 451.

The issuance of patents on two applications which were pending at the same time, and relate to the same subject-matter, is, in effect, an adjudication by the patent office that there is a substantial difference between the inventions, and raises a presumption that the device of the later patent is not an infringement of the earlier one.—Boyd v. Janesville Hay-Tool Co., 158 U. S. 260, 15 S. Ct. 837, 39 L. Ed. 973.

There is a presumption, from the grant of separate letters patent for two improvements on a prior art, that there is a substantial difference between the inventions. Decree Kitselman v. Kokomo Fence Mach. Co., 108 F. 632, 47 C. O. A. 538, reversed.—Kokomo Fence Mach. Co. v. Kitselman, 23 S. Ct. 521, 189 U. S. 8, 47 L. Ed. 689.

113. Appeals from decisions of Commissioner of Patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 155-161.

The judgment and discretion vested by the original patent law of 1790 in a majority of the three executive officers,—the secretary of state, the secretary of war, and the attorney general,—who were authorized to cause letters patent to issue, "if they shall deem the invention or discovery sufficiently useful and important," was transferred by Act 1836, § 7, to the commissioner of patents, it being made his duty to issue a patent for the invention, "if he shall deem it sufficiently useful and important"; and a decision by the commissioner of patents that an applicant is entitled to a patent is not reviewable by the secretary of the interior.—Butterworth v. United States, 112 U. S. 50, 5 S. Ct. 25, 28 L. Ed. 666.

Under section 6 of the act of February 9, 1893 (26 Stat. 434), especially after the amendment of July 30, 1894 (28 Stat. 160), the court of appeals for the District of Columbia has power to make rules limiting the time for taking of appeals thereto from the decisions of the commissioner of patents. The two-year limitation fixed by Rev. St. § 4894, has no application of such appeals, but refers solely to the abandonment of applications for patents by failure to prosecute the same.—In re Hien, 17 S. Ct. 624, 166 U. S. 432, 41 L. Ed. 1066.

While the commissioner of patents is, generally speaking, an executive officer, yet, in deciding whether or not a patent shall issue, or on questions of interference between contesting claimants, he exercises judicial functions, and it is within the constitutional power of congress to provide for the revision of his decisions in such matters by a judicial tribunal; hence the provision of the act of February 9, 1893, creating the court of appeals for the District of Columbia (27 Stat. 434, c. 74, § 9), giving such court jurisdiction of appeals from decisions of the commissioner rejecting applications, and in interference cases, is constitutional and valid. Judgment United States v. Seymour, 10 App. D. C. 294, affirmed.—United States ex rel. Bernardin v. Duell, 19 S. Ct. 286, 172 U. S. 576, 43 L. Ed. 559.

114. Remedy in equity.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 166.

The provision in Rev. St. § 739 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 587], that no civil suit shall be brought before either the circuit or district courts of the United States against an inhabitant of the United States, "by any original process, in any other district than that of which he is an inhabitant, or in which he may be found at the time of serving the writ," applies to suits brought under Rev. St. § 4915 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3392], providing that, upon the rejection by the commissioner of patents, of an application for a patent, the applicant may have his remedy by bill in equity.—Butterworth v. Hill, 114 U. S. 128, 5 S. Ct. 796, 29 L. Ed. 119.

Although the proceeding by bill in equity, under Rev. St. § 4915 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3392], on the refusal of the commissioner of patents and the supreme court of the District of Columbia, on appeal, to grant an application for a patent, intends a suit, and is not a technical appeal from the patent office, yet the proceeding is necessarily a part of the application for the patent. Such a suit, therefore, not brought within two years after the dismissal of the petition on appeal from the commissioner to the supreme court of the District, is barred by the limitation provided by Rev. St. § 4894 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3384], for completing applications, where no excuse for the delay is set up in the bill, and none is shown in the proof, and it is not alleged in the bill that the delay was unavoidable.—Gandy v. Marble, 122 U. S. 432, 7 S. Ct. 1290, 30 L. Ed. 1223.

Rev. St. § 4915 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3392], provides a remedy by bill in equity whenever a patent on application is refused, either by the commissioner of patents or by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, on appeal from the commissioner, and authorizes the court to "adjudge that such applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention, as specified in his claim, or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear." Held that, as between two applicants claiming prior invention, there can be no adjudication in favor of a patent for either unless the alleged invention is a patentable one.—Hill v. Wooster, 132 U. S. 693, 10 S. Ct. 228, 33 L. Ed. 502, reversing decree (C. C.) Wooster v. Hill, 22 F. 830.

V. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF LETTERS PATENT.

Jurisdiction of Circuit Court of Appeals in suit for cancellation of patent, see Courts, 405.

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court in action involving validity, see Courts, 394(1).

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court on appeal in action for cancellation, see Courts, 382.

117. Execution and issuance.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 169.

A patent was issued to complainants, from which the signature of the secretary of the interior was omitted. Pending suit for infringement the omission of the secretary's signature was supplied. Held that, until the omission was supplied, the patent was inoperative and void, and defendants were not liable as infringers for profits accruing before suit was brought; and, as there was no infringement before suit, no accounting can be claimed for profits accruing subsequently and after the correction.—Marsh v. Nichols, Shepherd & Co., 128 U. S. 606, 9 S. Ct. 168, 32 L. Ed. 538, affirming decree Same v. Nichols (C. C.) 15 F. 914.

118. Validity in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 170, 170½.

The fact that the particular instrument which Bell had, and which he used in his experiments, did not, under the circumstances in which it was tried, reproduce the spoken words so that they could be clearly understood, does not invalidate this patent; the proof being abundant, and of the most convincing character, that other instruments, carefully constructed, and made exactly in accordance with the specifications, did and will operate successfully, though not so perfectly as instruments made on the principle of the microphone or the variable resistance method.—Dolbear v. American Bell Tel. Co., 126 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 778, 31 L. Ed. 863.

A patent issued after the inventor's death upon an application by him, the grant being to the inventor, his "heirs or assigns," is not void, but according to the language of Rev. St. § 4884 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3381], such grant must be construed as running to the inventor, "or his heirs or assigns," and is effective to vest title in his legal representative, whether he be administrator, executor, or assignee.—De la Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 13 S. Ct. 283, 37 L. Ed. 138, reversing opinion (C. C.) 49 F. 916.

119. Inventions included in same patent.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 171.

The mere joinder, in a design patent, of claims for the entire design and for each of its component parts, does not per se invalidate the patent, or any claim, at the objection of a defendant, in a suit for infringement.—Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 114 U. S. 439, 5 S. Ct. 945, 29 L. Ed. 177, reversing decree (C. C.) Bigelow Carpet Co. v. Dobson, 10 F. 385.

120. Patents for same invention.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 172.

In determining the priority and legal effect to be given to two patents issued at different times to the same inventor, the date of the application, and not the date of the patent, controls.—Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co. v. Beat 'Em All Barbed Wire Co., 143 U. S. 275, 12 S. Ct. 443, 36 L. Ed. 154, reversing decree (C. C.) 33 F. 261, Same v. Norwood, 143 U. S. 275, 12 S. Ct. 450, 36 L. Ed. 161.

An inventor cannot have two valid patents for the same invention when the only distinction is that the later one has a broader and more generic claim for matters included in specific form in the prior patent.—Miller v. Eagle Mfg. Co., 151 U. S. 186, 14 S. Ct. 310, 38 L. Ed. 121, reversing decree (C. C.) Eagle Mfg. Co. v. Miller, 41 F. 351.

An inventor who takes out a patent covering specifically his entire invention cannot, even by inserting a reservation, obtain a subsequent valid patent covering more broadly a particular feature of the same invention.—Id.

125. Delay between application and issue.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 177.

When an applicant for a patent complies with the terms and conditions prescribed by the laws and the regulations of the patent office, and files his application therein, he must abide the action of the officers of that department, and cannot be held to suffer or lose any of his rights by reason of any delay on their part, whether reasonable or unreasonable, unless it has been brought about through his corruption of the officials, or through his inducement, or at his instance. Proof that they were in fault, that they acted unwisely, unreasonably, or even that they were culpably dilatory, casts no blame on him and abridges none of his rights.—United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 17 S. Ct. 809, 167 U. S. 224, 42 L. Ed. 144, affirming decree American Bell Tel. Co. v. United States, 68 F. 542, 15 O. C. A. 569.

An error of judgment on the part of the patent office officials in delaying for a long time action upon an application to wait the result of certain pending litigation which may affect the applicant's rights and the mere acquiescence of the applicant in such delay, is no ground for canceling a patent subsequently issued.—Id.

The Berliner patent, No. 463,569, for a combined telegraph and telephone, is not void because of a delay of some 14 years between the filing of the application and the granting of the patent, though the result, as alleged, is to prolong the monopoly during that period, it not appearing that such delay was in any wise due to the fraudulent or illegal action of the applicant.—Id.

126. Correction or amendment.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 178.

Act Cong. Feb. 3, 1887, declaring a certain invalid patent in all respects legal, and valid as corrected, but providing that the act shall not apply to any pending suit, or any prior cause of action, is entirely future in its operation, and gives complainants no additional rights in this suit.—Marsh v. Nichols, Shepherd & Co., 128 U. S. 606, 9 S. Ct. 168, 32 L. Ed. 538, affirming decree Same v. Nichols (C. C.) 15 F. 914.

128. Annulment or repeal.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 181, 182.

The United States can maintain a bill in equity to cancel a patent for an invention obtained through fraud. This power was not taken away by Act Cong. 1836, repealing the provision for a scire facias by private individuals, under the control of government attorneys, to declare a patent void, or by Rev. St. § 4920 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3394], permitting fraud in obtaining the patent to be set up as a defense to a suit for infringement.—United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 128 U. S. 315, 9 S. Ct. 90, 32 L. Ed. 450, reversing (C. C.) 32 F. 591.

A bill praying for the cancellation of two patents is not multifarious, because the patents were issued at different times, where both were issued to the same person, and are held by one defendant, and relate to the same subject, the later being for an improvement upon the invention of the earlier one.—Id.

A bill seeking the cancellation of letters patent upon the ground of fraud, which charges that the patentee, at the time of his application for a patent, knew that he was not the first inventor of the improvement described, and sets forth prior inventions and discoveries alleged to have been known to him, and described with particularity the fraud practiced by him upon their authors, is not demurrable on the ground that it does not set forth any fraud in procuring the patents, or specifically allege the facts constituting the fraud.—Id.

Before the government is entitled to a decree canceling a patent for an invention, on the ground that it was fraudulently and wrongfully obtained, it must establish the fraud and wrong by testimony which is clear, convincing, and satisfactory.—United States v. American Bell Tel. Co., 17 S. Ct. 809, 187 U. S. 224, 42 L. Ed. 144, affirming decree American Bell Tel. Co. v. United States, 68 F. 542, 15 C. C. A. 569.

The government cannot maintain a suit in equity to cancel a patent on the ground that a prior patent to the same party on a divisional application covers the same invention, because, if this be true, it is a matter which renders the patent wholly void, and is provable in favor of all parties by evidence on record in the patent office, thereby affording them an adequate remedy at law; and also because the patent office is a special tribunal intrusted with full powers in the matter of granting patents, and its action based on mere errors of judgment is not subject to collateral review by the courts.—Id.

The government has a standing in court to procure the cancellation of a patent, either in the discharge of its obligation to protect the public against a monopoly it has wrongfully created, or because it owes a duty to other patentees to secure to them the full enjoyment of the rights which it has conferred by its patents to them. In so far as the latter ground is concerned, the suit is brought in the name of the government, simply to help individuals, and in that aspect is subject to the same rules that govern like suits between private litigants; and hence the government will not be permitted to invoke the equity jurisdiction to cancel a patent against which the individual has a perfect legal defense available in any action by or against him.—Id.

←129. Estoppel to dispute validity.

A manufacturer who, in making an article, adopts a feature which is protected by a patent, is estopped from denying the utility of the invention.—Gandy v. Main Belting Co., 143 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 598, 36 L. Ed. 272, reversing decree (C. C.) 28 F. 570.

VI. TERM.

←132. Limitation to term of prior foreign patent.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 1884-191.

An English patent and an American patent were taken out for the same invention by plaintiff's intestate, but plaintiff claimed that the American patent contained certain improvements. Held that, even if so, that fact would not exempt it from the operation of the law fixing its termination. A patent cannot be construed to run partly from one date, and partly from another.—Guarantee Insurance, Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Sellers, 123 U. S. 276, 8 S. Ct. 117, 31 L. Ed. 153, affirming decree (C. C.) Siemens v. Sellers, 16 F. 856.

The United States act of 1839, § 6, allowed a patent to be taken out here at any time after the inventor had taken out a patent for the same invention in a foreign country; provided it should not have been introduced into public and common use in the United States prior to an application for a patent here; and provided, also, that in all cases every such patent should be limited to the term of 14 years from the date or publication of such foreign letters patent. The act of 1861, § 16, provided that all patents thereafter granted should remain in force for the term of 17 years from the date of issue, and all extension of such patents was prohibited. Held that, so far as the "14 years" were concerned, the act of 1861 repealed the act of 1839, and substituted 17 years for 14 years, but that the provision that the term of such patent should commence to run from the time of publication of the foreign patent was not repealed thereby.—Id.

On January 9, 1877, Canadian letters No. 6,938 were issued to John J. Bate for 5 years for the invention described in United States letters No. 197,314, granted to Bate, November 20, 1877, for 17 years. By the Canadian statute in force at the time of and since the applications, the holder of a patent at or before the expiration of its term may obtain an extension for 5 years, and after those 5 years may obtain a further extension for 5 years, not to exceed 15 years in all. On December 13, 1881, the Canadian patent was extended for another 5 years, and the next day was extended for a third period of 5 years. Under Rev. St. § 4887, providing that every patent for an invention previously patented in a foreign country shall be so limited as to expire at the same time as the foreign patent, and shall not be in force more than 17 years, held, that the United States patent does not expire until the termination of the 15 years during which the Canadian patent continues.—Bate Refrigerating Co. v. George H. Hammond & Co., 129 U. S. 151, 9 S. Ct. 225, 32 L. Ed. 645, reversing decree (C. C.) Same v. Hammond, 35 F. 151.

A certificate of the commissioner of patents that the term of the United States patent is limited so as to expire with the Canadian patent does not affect its validity, there being no such limitation on its face.—Id.

Under Rev. St. § 4887 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], providing that "every patent granted for an invention, which has been patented in a foreign country, shall be so limited as to expire at the same time with the foreign patent, or, if there be more than one, at the same time with the one having the shortest term," the United States patent expires at the same time with the term limited to the foreign patent, without regard to the lapse or forfeiture of a portion of such term by the operation of conditions subsequent.—Pohl v. Anchor Brewing Co., 134 U. S. 381, 10 S. Ct. 577, 33 L. Ed. 953, reversing (C. C.) 39 F. 782.

Under Rev. St. § 4887 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], which provides that every patent granted for an invention which has been previously patented in a foreign country shall be so limited as to expire at the same time with the foreign patent, no patent can be issued in the United States for an invention after the foreign patent has elapsed and become void, for the patentee's failure to comply with the laws.—Huber v. N. O. Nelson Mfg. Co., 143 U. S. 270, 13 S. Ct. 603, 37 L. Ed. 447, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 30.

An invention for which a foreign patent was granted between the date of filing the American application and the date of the issuance of the American patent, must be held to have been "previously patented," within the meaning of Rev. St. § 4887 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], which makes an American patent for an invention "previously patented in a foreign country" expire at the same time with the foreign patent.—Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 15 S. Ct. 508, 39 L. Ed. 601, affirming decree (C. C.) 56 F. 713.

A patent for an invention does not expire at the same time with a foreign patent for the same invention, by force of Rev. St. § 4887 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382], unless the foreign patent was obtained by the American patentee or with his consent. Decree Beach v. Hobbs, 34 C. C. A. 248, 63 U. S. App. 626, 92 F. 146, affirmed.—Hobbs v. Beach, 21 S. Ct. 409, 180 U. S. 383, 45 L. Ed. 586.

All claims of a domestic patent do not necessarily expire with a foreign patent because of provisions of Rev. St. U. S. § 4887 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382), that "every patent granted for an invention which has been previously patented in a foreign country shall be so limited as to expire at the same time with the foreign patent," but only those embodied in the foreign patent.—Leeds & Catlin Co. v. Victor Talking Mach. Co., 29 S. Ct. 495, 213 U. S. 301, 53 L. Ed. 805, affirming decree (1906) Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. Leeds & Catlin Co., 148 F. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 536, which affirmed order (C. C. 1906) Same v. Talk-O-Phone Co., 146 F. 534.

Expiration of foreign patents for sound reproducers or recorders does not, under Rev. St. U. S. § 4887 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382), making domestic patents expire with foreign patents, affect duration of the Berliner patent, No. 534,543, for sound-reproducing apparatus, so far as concerns claim 5, for a method, and claim 35, for a combination, though such recorder or reproducer is made the subject of a claim of such patents.—Id.

Expiration of a Canadian patent by failure to pay the fee to keep it alive for the second 6 years of the 18-year term for which it was granted does not affect duration of a domestic patent under Rev. St. U. S. § 4887 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382), making such patents expire with foreign patents for the same invention.—Id.

Term of a United States patent which, under Rev. St. § 4887 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382) would expire with the expiration of the term of a British patent previously granted for the same invention, held not extended by provisions of Treaty of Brussels Dec. 14, 1900, art. 4 bis.—Cameron Septic Tank Co. v. City of Knoxville, 33 S. Ct. 209, 227 U. S. 39, 57 L. Ed. 407.

The omission from Act March 3, 1903, enacted to make effective the Brussels treaty of December 14, 1900, for the protection of industrial property, of any provision to carry out article 4 bis, which article was not self-executing, leaves in force as to existing United States patents provisions of Rev. St. § 4887 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3382), under which such patents expire with the expiration of the term of a foreign patent previously granted for the same invention.—Id.

There is no such identity between the Claude & Hess Patent, No. 664,383, for an apparatus for the storage and distribution of acetylene gas and prior foreign patents for storing such gas, that their expiration will terminate the United States patent.—Fireball Gas Tank & Illuminating Co. v. Commercial Acetylene Co., 36 S. Ct. 86, 239 U. S. 156, 60 L. Ed. 191, affirming decree 198 F. 650, 117 C. C. A. 354.

VII. REISSUES.

134. Power to reissue.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 197.

The reissue of a patent merely to correct an obvious error in one of the drawings is within the jurisdiction of the commissioner of patents, although the error is not such as would impair the patentee's rights under his original design, where the application for the reissue is made in good faith and with a design only of securing to the patentee what he has actually invented. Decree Beach v. Hobbs, 34 C. C. A. 248, 92 F. 146, affirmed.—Hobbs v. Beach, 21 S. Ct. 409, 180 U. S. 383, 45 L. Ed. 586.

136. Grounds of reissue.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 198½.

Letters patent No. 291,139, granted January 1, 1884, to James E. Boyle, for an improvement in water-closets, was for a flushing device, wherein the water flowing from the reservoir to the bowl exhausted the air from the space between two traps in the soil pipe below the bowl, by means of an injector in the flushing pipe and a suction pipe connecting with such air space, thus accelerating the flow of the flushing water by means of air pressure. In each of the six claims of the patent a flushing tank connected with the reservoir was made an essential element of the combination. The patentee, on April 9, 1887, procured these letters to be reissued as No. 10,826, on the ground that the original claim, inadvertently and by mistake, was unduly restrictive of the invention in claiming the flushing tank as an element of the invention, it not being essential, and this element was accordingly omitted from the reissue. It appeared from the affidavits of the patentee and his solicitor that they believed the flushing tank to be essential to produce an "after-wash,"—i. e. to fill the bowl with water after the flushing was completed,—and that it was embodied in the claims of the original patent, because a closet without some device to produce this after-wash would be unsalable. Held, that there was no such mistake as to warrant the reissue, which, as it merely enlarges the claims of the original patent is void.—Huber v. N. O. Nelson Mfg. Co., 148 U. S. 270, 13 S. Ct. 603, 37 L. Ed. 447, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 830.

138. Time of making application.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 201-203.

Eleven years after the issue of a patent for an egg beater, and after the competition of a device better adapted for the purpose, for which also a patent had been issued, had become apparent, the patentee procured a reissue, with claims embracing the later device, which was not an infringement of the original patent. Held, that such reissued patent was invalid.—Turner & Seymour Mfg. Co. v. Dover Stamping Co., 111 U. S. 319, 4 S. Ct. 401, 28 L. Ed. 442.

No invariable rule can be laid down as to what is reasonable time within which a patentee may apply for the correction of a claim which he considers too narrow; but, by analogy to the law of public use before applying for a patent, it is suggested that a longer delay than two years requires that excuse therefor should be made manifest by special circumstances.—Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 5 S. Ct. 174, 6 S. Ct. 451, 28 L. Ed. 665.

A reissue with enlarged claims must be applied for within a reasonable time.—Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 5 S. Ct. 174, 6 S. Ct. 451, 28 L. Ed. 665; Wollensak v. Reiher, 115 U. S. 96, 5 S. Ct. 1137, 29 L. Ed. 350.

Five years after a patent had been issued a reissue was granted, the first claim of which covered a different invention from that described in the original patent. Held, that the first claim of such reissued patent was void because of unreasonable delay in applying for the same.—Torrent & Arms Lumber Co. v. Rodgers, 112 U. S. 659, 5 S. Ct. 501, 28 L. Ed. 872.

An application for reissue, made a little over three months from the issuance of the original, will not warrant the insertion of claims deliberately omitted, without inadvertence, from the original, and where adverse rights have intervened.—Coon v. Wilson, 5 S. Ct. 537, 113 U. S. 268, 28 L. Ed. 963.

No ground for patentability can be derived from the insertion of new matter in a reissue applied for more than seven years and five months after the original patent was granted.—Gardner v. Herz, 118 U. S. 180, 6 S. Ct. 1027, 30 L. Ed. 158, affirming decree (C. C.) 12 F. 491.

The claim in an original patent for a method of preserving the color and flavor of shrimps and other shellfish, in canning them, was for "placing textile fabric between the can and its contents," and the description of the invention throughout specified a textile fabric as the material to be interposed between the shrimp and the can, and in a reissue granted afterwards the claim was for "interposing between the metal can and the shrimps an enveloping material for the shrimps." Held, that the claim in the reissued patent was broader than that of the original one, and as such expansion appeared to be the only object of the reissue, and the application for the reissue was not made until nearly five years after the original was granted, the reissue was unlawfully granted.—White v. Dunbar, 119 U. S. 47, 7 S. Ct. 72, 30 L. Ed. 303, reversing decree (C. C.) Dunbar v. White, 15 F. 747.

Two inventions for improvements in shade rollers were made by different persons at about the same time, and patents were obtained therefor through the same attorney, who, by mistake, assigned priority of invention to the wrong person, giving to the latter claims for the main principle, and to the former claims for a mere improvement. In 1873 the error was discovered and reissues were obtained in 1876, giving claims covering the general principle to the real inventor thereof and claims covering the improvement to the other inventor. Held, that the acquiescence of the real inventor of the general principle in the narrow claims of his original patent was an abandonment of the broad invention, so that his reissue was invalid.—Hartshorn v. Saginaw Barrel Co., 119 U. S. 664, 7 S. Ct. 421, 30 L. Ed. 539.

Where a claim in a patent was for less than the patentee invented, and the reissue correcting the error was not secured till three years afterwards, and no excuse is shown for the delay, the fact that the mistake was the fault of patentee's solicitor does not excuse the laches and want of diligence.—Ives v. Sargent, 119 U. S. 652, 7 S. Ct. 436, 30 L. Ed. 544, affirming decree (C. C.) 17 F. 447.

A reissue whose purpose is to enlarge the claims of the original, to be valid, must be for the same invention, and must show due diligence in discovering the mistake in the original; the lapse of two years being ordinarily taken as an abandonment of the new matter to the public.—Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U. S. 156, 12 S. Ct. 825, 36 L. Ed. 658.

In applying for a reissue for the purpose of broadening the claims, a delay of four years after discovering the mistake is not excused by the fact that it was according to advice of counsel, and in view of pending litigation on another patent relating to the same matters.—Wollensak v. Sargent, 151 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 291, 38 L. Ed. 137, affirming decree (C. C.) 41 F. 53.

A patent describing the invention as "an envelope with an end flap covering its side," and clearly limited by its specifications and claims to such a flap of sufficient size to cover one side of the envelope, was reissued as for "a tag provided with means for attaching it to the merchandise, and with an envelope or pocket to receive a bill or invoice of the merchandise," and with specifications and claims including an envelope with a flap of any size or shape, such reissue being obtained to cover tag envelopes manufactured by another. Held, that the reissue was invalid.—Dunham v. Dennison Mfg. Co., 154 U. S. 103, 14 S. Ct. 986, 38 L. Ed. 924, affirming decree (C. C.) 40 F. 667.

A reissued patent granted upon an application filed four years after issuance of the original, with much broader claims, and without any showing that the specifications of the original were insufficient, that the patentee had claimed more than he was entitled to, or that there was any inadvertence, accident, or mistake, is void.—Eby v. King, 158 U. S. 366, 15 S. Ct. 972, 39 L. Ed. 1018.

139. Surrender of original patent.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 204.

The surrender of an original patent, for the purpose of procuring a reissue, is an abandonment of the original, so that the patentee can claim nothing under it, even if the reissue is declared void.—Eby v. King, 158 U. S. 366, 15 S. Ct. 972, 39 L. Ed. 1018.

Under the patent act of 1870, § 53, amending the act of 1836, § 13, so as to provide that a surrender for reissue "shall take effect upon the reissue of the amended patent," such a surrender does not take effect when a reissue is refused, and the original patent stands, unless, at least, the refusal is on some ground affecting the validity of the original patent. Culp v. Allen, 31 A. 93, 166 Pa. 286, affirmed.—Allen v. Culp, 17 S. Ct. 644, 166 U. S. 501, 41 L. Ed. 1093.

141. Identity of invention.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 206-213.

If a patent, containing a single claim for a combination of several elements, is, within four months before its expiration, reissued and extended, with the same description as before, but with two claims, the one a repetition of the original claim, and the other for a combination of some of the elements only, the reissue is invalid as to the new claim, and valid as to the other.—Gage v. Herring, 107 U. S. 640, 2 S. Ct. 819, 27 L. Ed. 601.

Where the original claim, in a patent for a device for sealing cans, was for a hollow soldering iron with a handle and beveled rim, in combination with a rod to hold the lid of the can firm, and the specifications showed that the hollow iron was intended to fit upon a lid of any shape, a claim in a reissue for "a tool consisting of a soldering iron revolving about a central pivotal rod" is broader than the original and void.—McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U. S. 97, 4 S. Ct. 375, 28 L. Ed. 365, affirming decree (C. C.) McMurry, Lang & Burnham v. D. D. Mallory & Co., 5 F. 593.

In a patent for a soldering iron to seal cans, claiming a hollowed disk combined with a movable rod passing through it to hold the lid of the can while the solder hardens, the disk is an indispensable element; and all claims of the reissue which do not restrict the soldering iron to the form of a disk are void.—Id.

A patent cannot be lawfully reissued for the mere purpose of enlarging the claim, unless there has been a clear mistake inadvertently committed in the wording of the claim, and the application for reissue is made within a reasonably short time.—Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 5 S. Ct. 174, 6 S. Ct. 451, 28 L. Ed. 665; Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Berkshire Nat. Bank, 135 U. S. 342, 10 S. Ct. 884, 34 L. Ed. 168, affirming (C. C.) 26 F. 104.

Patent No. 202,158, to Frank Davis, for an improvement in door bolts, in its reissue, No. 9,901, contained two claims,—one for a pitman operating as a spring also, and the other for the combination of the same with the bolt, not contained in the original. The drawings in the two were the same. Held, that the identity of the drawings, and the fact that such bolts usually contain a spring, by which bolt plaintiff's device was declared to operate, did not imply a claim for a pitman operating as pitman and spring, and therefore the reissue was void, as introducing new matter in the specification, and changing the original patent.—Ives v. Sargent, 119 U. S. 652, 7 S. Ct. 436, 30 L. Ed. 544, affirming decree (C. C.) 17 F. 447.

It being a reasonable inference from the language in the specification of an original patent for a "driven well" that the tube, in the act of being driven into the earth, to and into a water-bearing stratum, would form an air-tight connection with the surrounding earth, and that the pump should be attached by an air-tight connection, the reissue is not broadened by the fact that the specification thereto states that the tube which is to replace the driven rod is "made air-tight throughout its length," and also that, in cases where the aid of a pump to draw water from the well may be necessary, the patentee attaches "to the tube, by an air-tight connection, any known form of pump."—The Driven Well Cases, 122 U. S. 40, 7 S. Ct. 1073, 30 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree (C. C.) Andrews v. Eames, 15 F. 169.

An original specification began with a declaration that the patentee had "invented a new and useful improvement in the manner of sinking and constructing artesian or driven wells, where no rock is to be penetrated, and of raising water therefrom," and the claim was stated to be "the herein described process of sinking wells, where no rock is to be penetrated." The specification in the reissue was, "My invention is particularly intended for the construction of artesian wells in places where no rock is to be penetrated," and the claim was for "the process of constructing wells by driving or forcing an instrument into the ground until it is projected into the water, without removing the earth upward, as it is in boring, substantially as herein described." Held, that the omission of the words, "where no rock is to be penetrated," from the reissue claim, did not have the effect to broaden the reissue; it being evident from the nature and description of the invention that a driven well cannot be made where, through its whole course, the formation is rock, or where the supply of water to be utilized is found in the fissure of a rock formation.—Id.

The invention of a reissued patent must be confined to the invention described in the specification under the original patent; and a reissue embodying, as a part of the invention, a construction shown in the model accompanying the original application, but which is not claimed by the patentee in the original specification as forming a part of his invention, is void.—Parker & Whipple Co. v. Yale Clock Co., 123 U. S. 87, 8 S. Ct. 33, 31 L. Ed. 100, affirming decree (C. C.) 18 F. 43.

A reissue is an amendment, and cannot be allowed unless the imperfections of the original arose without fraud, and from inadvertence, accident, or mistake. Hence a reissue cannot be permitted to enlarge the claims of the original by including matter once intentionally omitted, especially if omitted by requirement of the patent office, either to save the application or escape an interference.—Dobson v. Lees, 137 U. S. 258, 11 S. Ct. 71, 34 L. Ed. 652.

A reissue whose purpose is to enlarge the claims of the original, to be valid, must be for the same invention, and must show due diligence in discovering the mistake in the original; the lapse of two years being ordinarily taken as an abandonment of the new matter to the public.—Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U. S. 156, 12 S. Ct. 825, 36 L. Ed. 658.

A reissue of a patent must be for the same invention as the original.—Id.

The claim of letters patent No. 143,770, issued October 21, 1873, to Edward W. Leggett, was for a "process of coating or lining the inside of barrels, casks, etc., with glue, wherein the glutinous material, instead of being produced by reduction from a previously solid state, is permitted to attain only a certain liquid consistency, and is then applied to the package, and is permitted to harden thereon for the first time." The patentee expressly disclaimed the use of the glue-covered barrel as an article of manufacture. Thereafter he filed an amended specification, setting forth that the glue as applied by his process was more freely absorbed by the wood, and penetrated deeper into its fiber, and procured a reissue.—No. 5,785, of March 10, 1874,—containing the additional claim for "a barrel coated or sized by the material and by the mode or process whereby it is absorbed into and strengthened by the wood fiber." Held, that this claim of the reissue was invalid, being an extension in order to embrace an invention not specified in the original patent.—Leggett v. Standard Oil Co., 149 U. S. 287, 13 S. Ct. 902, 37 L. Ed. 737, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 842.

To warrant new and broader claims in a reissue, such claims must be not merely suggested or indicated in the original specifications, drawings, or models, but it must further appear from the original patent that they constitute parts of the invention intended to be secured thereby.—Corbin Cabinet Lock Co. v. Eagle Lock Co., 150 U. S. 38, 14 S. Ct. 28, 37 L. Ed. 989, affirming judgment (C. C.) 37 F. 338.

A patentee cannot secure in a reissue claims covering what has previously been rejected upon his original application.—Id.

It is not competent for the patentee to abandon, in toto, claims of the original patent which are void because of anticipation, and reconstruct his patent upon a different theory, in order to make it salable, or to hold as infringers other manufacturers, who in the meantime had entered the field, relying upon his original patent as representing what he claimed to have invented.—Eby v. King, 158 U. S. 366, 15 S. Ct. 972, 39 L. Ed. 1018.

143. Abandonment of application.

On the issuance of a patent, the patent office loses all jurisdiction, and cannot revoke, cancel, or annul it; and while, on an application for reissue, it may reject any claims of the original embodied therein, such rejection does not affect the original patent, and, if the application for reissue is abandoned, the original will remain in full force as to all its claims.—McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. v. C. Aultman & Co., 18 S. Ct. 443, 169 U. S. 606, 42 L. Ed. 875.

144. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of Patent Office.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 215-217.

Whether the application is made in reasonable time is matter of law, which the court may determine by comparing the reissued patents with the original, and, if necessary, with the records in the patent office when presented for record.—Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 5 S. Ct. 174, 6 S. Ct. 451, 28 L. Ed. 685.

Whether there has been an inadvertent mistake is, in general, a matter of fact for the commissioner to decide, justifying a reissue, and his decision is conclusive.—Id.

The question whether delay in applying for a reissue has been reasonable or unreasonable is for the court; and the action of the patent office in granting the reissue, and deciding that, from special circumstances shown, the applicant had not been guilty of laches, is not sufficient to explain a delay which otherwise appears unreasonable.—Hoskin v. Fisher, 125 U. S. 217, 8 S. Ct. 834, 31 L. Ed. 759.

146. Reissues of reissued patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 218, 219.

Where the original patent and a second reissue are properly before the court on appeal, the court has a right to compare them, and determine the validity of the second reissue, without regard to the existence of a first reissue, which is not made part of the record.—Hoskin v. Fisher, 125 U. S. 217, 8 S. Ct. 834, 31 L. Ed. 759.

147. Validity of reissued patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 220.

Where the specifications for Moffitt's reissue patent for an improvement in heel stiffeners for boots and shoes cover a contrivance essentially different from that described in the original specification and claim, the claim is void.—Moffitt v. Rogers, 1 Sup. Ct. 70, 106 U. S. 423, 27 L. Ed. 76, affirming decree (C. C.) 8 F. 147.

Reissued letters patent No. 8,169, granted to Washington Wilson, as inventor, April 9, 1878, on an application therefor filed March 11, 1878, for an "improvement in collars" (the original patent, No. 197,807, having been granted to him December 4, 1877), are invalid as to claims 1 and 4.—Coon v. Wilson, 5 S. Ct. 537, 113 U. S. 268, 28 L. Ed. 963.

Reissued letters patent No. 3,204, issued November 4, 1868, to George Asmus, as assignee of F. W. Lurmann, the original patentee, for an improvement in blast furnaces, are void as to claim 1, though applied for in less than a year, since by the addition of that claim, and by changes in the specifications, the original description of a slag-discharge piece or cinder block, constructed and attached in a specific manner, was broadened so as to cover any kind of blast furnace with a closed breast, having a slag-discharge opening, cooled in any manner or to any extent by water.—Freeman v. Asmus, 12 S. Ct. 939, 145 U. S. 226, 36 L. Ed. 685, reversing decree (C. C.) Asmus v. Alden, 27 F. 684.

148. Construction and operation of reissued patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 200, 221, 223.

If the claim of reissued letters patent No. 4,321, Division B, granted to Charles Graebe and Charles Liebermann, April 4, 1871, for an "improvement in dyes or coloring matter from anthracine" (the original patent, No. 95,465, having been granted to them October 5, 1869), namely, "artificial alizarine, produced from anthracine or its derivatives, by either of the methods herein described, or by any other method which will produce a like result," is construed so broadly as to cover a dye-stuff, imported from Europe, made by a process not shown to be the same as that described in No. 4,321, and containing large proportions of coloring matters not shown to be found, to any practically useful extent, in the alizarine of the process of No. 4,321, such as isopurpurine or anthrapurpurine, it is wider in its scope than the original actual invention of the patentees, and wider than anything indicated in the specification of the original patent. If the claim is to be construed so as to cover only the product which the process described in it will produce, it does not cover a different product, which cannot be practically produced by that process.—Cochrane v. Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik, 111 U. S. 293, 4 Sup. Ct. 456, 28 L. Ed. 433, reversing decree Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Cochrane, Fed. Cas. No. 719 [16 Blatchf. 155, 4 Ban. & A. 215].

When the patentee has imposed words of limitation upon himself in his claims, especially if he does so, on the requirement of the patent office in taking out his reissue, he is bound by such limitations in all subsequent suits on the reissue.—Crawford v. Heysinger, 123 U. S. 589, 8 S. Ct. 309, 31 L. Ed. 269.

VIII. DISCLAIMERS.

149. Right to disclaim part of claims.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 223.

Drawings annexed to a patent cannot be used on a disclaimer to change the patent, and make it embrace a different invention from that described in the specification.—Hailes v. Albany Stove Co., 123 U. S. 582, 8 S. Ct. 262, 31 L. Ed. 284, affirming decree (C. C.) 16 F. 240.

Rev. St. § 4917 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3393], which authorizes a disclaimer to be filed in cases where the patentee has claimed more than that of which he was the original and first inventor or discoverer, and section 4922

[U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3396], which enables patentees to maintain suits in those cases, provided a disclaimer is filed without unreasonable delay, give no authority for amending a patent by means of a disclaimer.—Id.

150. Patents and claims subjects of disclaimer.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 224.

Where a patentee, after making affidavit that he believes his original patent to be void by reason of defective specifications, has obtained a reissue which proves to be void because too broad, he cannot revive his original patent by merely filing a disclaimer of all extensions thereof.—McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U. S. 97, 4 S. Ct. 375, 28 L. Ed. 365, affirming decree McMurry, Lang & Burnham v. D. D. Mallory & Co., 5 F. 593.

Under Act July 8, 1870, § 54, where a disclaimer is filed, descriptive matter on which it is claimed matter was based may be erased, but if there was merely a defective or insufficient description the only mode of correction was by a reissue.—Union Metallic Cartridge Co. v. United States Cartridge Co., 112 U. S. 624, 5 S. Ct. 475, 28 L. Ed. 828, reversing (C. C.) 7 F. 344.

One claim of a patent was for arranging a perforated fire pot with a grate bottom within a circular stove, having provision for the admission of air below the point of suspension. Held, that a disclaimer to the perforations or openings in the sides of the suspended fire pot, extending throughout the entire depth of sides, and limiting them to the lower half of the fire pot, changes the character of the invention, and cannot be allowed.—Hailes v. Albany Stove Co., 123 U. S. 582, 8 S. Ct. 262, 31 L. Ed. 284, affirming decree 16 F. 240.

151. Grounds of disclaimer.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 225.

A disclaimer of statements in the specifications of a patent may be entered in a suit for its infringement, when such statements, if retained, might be construed as having the effect of illegally broadening the claim, and there is no purpose of thus obtaining the benefit of a reissue. Decree, Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 37 C. C. A. 593, 96 F. 850, reversed.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 698, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968.

155. Construction and operation of disclaimer.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 227½.

Patent No. 157,124 was issued to Joseph F. Glidden, for an improvement in wire fences, consisting of a twisted fence wire having a transverse spur wire bent at its middle portion about one of the strands of the fence wire, and clamped firmly in place by the other strand twisted upon its fellow. Pending the application for this patent, Glidden filed an application for an improvement in wire stretchers for fences, claiming a slotted tube midway between the posts, in which was a coil spring to spread the wires, and automatically tighten them, and keep them at a proper tension as against expansion and contraction by heat and cold. In this application the inventor disclaims originating the "devices known as 'spurs' or 'prongs,'" but confine myself to the means for holding the spurs at proper intervals on the wires, and the means for attaining a uniform tension of the wires, as claimed." Held, that this disclaimer did not affect the claim of the original patent for the coiled barb held in place by the twisted wire, though a patent was first issued upon the later application.—Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co. v. Beat 'Em All Barbed Wire Co., 143 U. S. 275, 12 S. Ct. 443, 36 L. Ed. 154, reversing decree (C. C.) 33 F. 261.

156. Effect of neglect or delay to disclaim.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 228.

Rev. St. § 4917 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3393], relating to disclaimers by a patentee, in so far as it concerns pending suits, should be read in connection with section 4922 [U. S. Comp. St. p. 3396], and the effect of the two sections is merely to prevent a recovery of costs when the disclaimer is not filed until after a suit for infringement is commenced.—Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 S. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 124.

IX. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF LETTERS PATENT.

(A) IN GENERAL.

[No paragraphs or references in this Digest. But see 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 229-256.]

(B) LIMITATION OF CLAIMS.

165. Operation and effect of claims in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 241.

The scope of letters patent must be limited to the invention covered by "the claim," and cannot be enlarged by the language used in other parts of the specification.—Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Greenleaf, 117 U. S. 554, 6 S. Ct. 846, 29 L. Ed. 952; White v. Dunbar, 119 U. S. 47, 7 S. Ct. 72, 30 L. Ed. 303, reversing decree (C. C.) Dunbar v. White, 15 F. 747.

Features not described in the claims may sometimes be read into them, with a view to showing the connection in which the device is used, and proving that it is an operative device; but there is no principle upon which an element not present may be read into a claim for the purpose of making out a case of novelty or infringement.—McCarty v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., 160 U. S. 110, 16 S. Ct. 240, 40 L. Ed. 358, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 384.

167. Specifications, drawings, and models.

If an applicant, in order to get his patent, accepts one with a narrower claim than that contained in his original application, he is bound by it.—Shepard v. Carrigan, 116 U. S. 593, 6 S. Ct. 493, 29 L. Ed. 723.

The claim in letters patent No. 149,954, issued April 21, 1874, to Herman Royer, is "the treatment of the prepared rawhide in the manner and for the purposes set forth." The treatment described is removing the hair by a sweating process, drying, moistening, and fulling, and other processes common in the treatment of hides, together with the application of a certain mixture of tallow, wood tar, and resin, and a second fulling process. The specification states that the patentee avoids the use of lime, acid, or alkali, and that the use of a preparation substantially like that described is necessary to make the hide useful and durable for belting. The rejection by the patent office of claims covering only the fulling operation and the use of the preserving mixture, for want of novelty, was acquiesced in by the patentee. Held, that the claim was to be construed as covering the whole process, and was not infringed by a process wherein the hair was removed by lime.—Royer v. Coupe, 146 U. S. 524, 13 S. Ct. 166, 36 L. Ed. 1073, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 113.

A claim must be read and interpreted with reference to any claims previously rejected with the patentee's acquiescence, and cannot be so construed as to cover what was rejected.—Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 81, 37 L. Ed. 1059.

The principle that a patentee who acquiesces in the rejection of a claim is thereafter estopped from claiming such a construction of the claim finally allowed as will be equivalent to the original claim applies to a case in which the original claim is narrower than that of the patent, as well as to cases in which it is broader.—Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co., 152 U. S. 425, 14 S. Ct. 627, 38 L. Ed. 500.

Where the applicant acquiesces in the rejection of claims, or in a construction which narrows or restricts them, and where the elements which go to make up the combination are mentioned specifically and by reference letters in the claim, such claim must be confined and restricted to the particular device shown.—Lehigh Val. R. Co. v. Kearney, 153 U. S. 461, 15 S. Ct. 871, 39 L. Ed. 1055, reversing decree Kearney v. Lehigh Val. R. Co. (C. C.) 32 F. 320, and following Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 81, 37 L. Ed. 1059.

Where broad claims for a car-truck bolster having supporting and guiding plates at the ends were amended to meet objections of the patent office, so as to claim such plates only in combination with the other features of the bolster, held, that the patent must be restricted to the combination described, and was not entitled to a liberal construction.—McCarty v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., 160 U. S. 110, 16 S. Ct. 240, 40 L. Ed. 358, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 384.

The words "substantially as described or set forth," in the claim of a patent, do not limit the patentee to the exact mechanism described in his specifications, or prevent recovery against infringers who have adopted mechanical equivalents for such mechanism. Decree Beach v. Hobbs, 34 C. C. A. 243, 63 U. S. App. 626, 92 F. 146, affirmed.—Hobbs v. Beach, 21 S. Ct. 409, 180 U. S. 383, 45 L. Ed. 586.

The claim of the Cramer patent, No. 271,426, for the use in combination of a vertical double brace and a sewing machine treadle provided with trunnions fitted to oscillate in such brace on bearings therein, "substantially as specified," must be deemed to cover only elements in combination having substantially the form and constructed substantially as described in the final specifications and shown in the accompanying drawing, where the Patent Office, after twice refusing to allow the patent because of certain prior patents, evidently was led to take favorable action because of the peculiar form of the described bearing when situated in a vertical cross brace, such as was shown in the drawing, with the described accessories. Judgment 109 F. 652, 48 C. C. A. 588, reversed.—Singer Mfg. Co. v. Cramer, 24 S. Ct. 291, 192 U. S. 265, 48 L. Ed. 437.

168. Proceedings in Patent Office in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 243½, 244.

Where the claims of an application are rejected, and thereupon the patentee amends the same by inserting limitations and restrictions, the patent granted thereunder must receive a strict and narrow construction.—Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., 114 U. S. 63, 5 Sup. Ct. 1021, 29 L. Ed. 67.

The claim for a patent as allowed must be read and interpreted with reference to a claim that has been rejected, and to the prior state of the art, and cannot be so construed as to cover either what was rejected by the patent office or disclosed by prior devices. Decree 20 Ct. Cl. 354, affirmed.—Hubbell v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 24, 179 U. S. 77, 45 L. Ed. 95.

170. State of the art.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 245.

In the present state of the art, the words "rocker-formed collar-bearing, or its equivalent," lent," in such patent, cannot embrace all modes of affording vertical support between the floor-wheel housing and the furniture plate, whereby lateral oscillation of such housing is permitted, but must be restricted to such a bearing resting on a collar beneath the floor-wheel housing.—Phoenix Caster Co. v. Spiegel, 183 U. S. 360, 10 S. Ct. 409, 33 L. Ed. 663.

In view of the terms of the specification and the prior state of the art, said claim could not be so construed as to cover a roller-mill manufactured in accordance with letters patent No. 334,460, granted January 19, 1886, to John T. Obenchain.—Consolidated Roller Mill Co. v. Walker, 11 S. Ct. 292, 138 U. S. 124, 34 L. Ed. 920, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 575.

Letters patent No. 252,280, issued January 10, 1882, to Curtis H. Veeder, for a "seat for bicycles," claim (1) "a suspension saddle, constructed with a flexible portion, and having an under spring in two or more parts, to which the flexible portion is attached at either end, and which metallic parts are extensible"; and (2) "in a velocipede seat, the combination of plates and clamps, stop and adjusting bolt, substantially as described." The patentee states that he is aware "that a spring has been used to support the seat or saddle of a bicycle," and therefore does not claim the general application of a spring for that purpose. Held, that in view of this disclaimer, and of the prior state of the art, as shown by the patent of April 10, 1866, to John C. Miller, the Fowler patent of 1880, the Shire patent of 1879, the Bishop patent of 1859, and others, the invention is a very narrow one, and is not infringed by a seat which employs springs which are different both in form and in the method of adjustment.—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully & Jeffery Mfg. Co., 144 U. S. 238, 12 S. Ct. 637, 36 L. Ed. 419, affirming decree (C. C.) 34 F. 885.

◀ 171. Scope and character of invention.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 247.

The imperfectly successful experiments of Sawyer and Mann with carbonized paper and wood carbon filaments as incandescent conductors for electric lamps did not authorize them to claim the use for that purpose of all fibrous and textile substances; it appearing that there was no such quality common to fibrous and textile substances generally as makes them suitable for that purpose, and that numerous experiments, extending to thousands of different kinds of fibrous vegetable materials, were in fact made before the particular fiber of the commercially successful lamp was discovered by Thomas A. Edison.—Consolidated Electric Light Co. v. McKeeport Light Co., 159 U. S. 465, 16 S. Ct. 75, 40 L. Ed. 221, affirming decree (C. C.) 40 F. 21.

◀ 173. — Primary and pioneer inventions.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 248.

"Pioneer," as used in connection with a patent, is commonly understood to denote one covering a function never before performed,—a wholly novel device, or one of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, as distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what has gone before.—Boyden Power-Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 18 S. Ct. 707, 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. Ed. 1136, reversing decree 70 F. 816, 17 C. C. A. 430.

The fact that an invention of an improved air brake was first in the line of those which resulted in placing it within the power of an engineer, running a long train, to stop in about half the time and half the distance within which any similar train had before stopped, entitled the patent to a liberality of construction not to be accorded to an ordinary improvement upon prior devices; but this liberality must be exercised in subordination to the general principle that the function of a machine cannot be patented, and hence the fact that another machine performs the same function is not conclusive that it is an infringement.—Id.

If an inventor is a pioneer in the art of making a useful device which goes into universal use, his claims will receive a broad and liberal construction.—Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 S. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 124.

The devising of means for utilizing a vertical double or cross brace cast in one piece as a support for a sewing machine treadle cannot be deemed to have involved such an exercise of the inventive faculty as to make the Cramer patent, No. 271,426, for a new and improved sewing machine treadle, a primary one, and entitle the patentee to a liberal construction of his claim, where, at the time of his alleged invention, a vertical cross brace and a lower cross brace or tie rod were common adjuncts of sewing machines, and it was customary to support the lower cross rod or brace in the web of the legs of sewing machines, and to utilize the legs as bearings, and the employment of solid castings as bearings or supports for oscillating shafts where a fixed alignment was essential was a well-known method of machine construction. Judgment 109 F. 652, 48 C. C. A. 588, reversed.—Singer Mfg. Co. v. Cramer, 24 S. Ct. 291, 192 U. S. 265, 48 L. Ed. 437.

Claim 2 of letters patent No. 186,369, to James Sargent, January 16, 1877, for improvements in time-locks, requires that the tumblers of the combination-lock and its spindles shall be free to rotate while the bolt-work is held in locked position by the bolt or bearing of the combination-lock.—Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., 114 U. S. 63, 5 S. Ct. 1021, 29 L. Ed. 67.

Letters patent No. 216,293, for an improved apparatus for resweating tobacco, do not sustain a claim for a process of steaming tobacco by means of steam, or steam and a body of hot water, nor by any process whatever, but must be limited to the apparatus; the precise improvement covered thereby being the substitution of a wooden vessel for holding the tobacco for a metallic one.—Sutter v. Robinson, 7 S. Ct. 376, 119 U. S. 530, 30 L. Ed. 492, reversing decree (C. C.) Robinson v. Sutter, 8 F. 828.

In such an apparatus, the use of the cases, boxes, or packages in which the tobacco was originally packed is not equivalent to the use of the wooden tobacco holder covered by said letters patent.—Id.

The first claim of letters patent No. 228,525, granted June 8, 1880, to William D. Gray for improvements in roller grinding-mills, namely, "(1) in a roller grinding-mill, the combination of the counter-shaft, provided with pulleys at both ends, and having said ends mounted in vertically and independently adjustable bearings, the rolls, C, E, having pulleys connected by belts with one end of the counter-shaft, and the rolls D, F, independently connected by belts with the other end of the counter-shaft, as shown," does not disclose any patentable subject-matter. The application of belting to drive roller grinding-mills did not originate with Gray, and his peculiar arrangement resulted at most in an improvement in degree merely, and said combination evinced only the exercise of ordinary mechanical or engineering skill.—Consolidated Roller Mill Co. v. Walker, 11 S. Ct.

The Covert patent, No. 161,757, for an improvement in clasps or thimbles for hitching devices, is void for want of invention.—Sargent v. Covert, 14 S. Ct. 676, 152 U. S. 516, 38 L. Ed. 538, reversing decree (C. C.) Covert v. Sargent, 38 F. 237.

The claims of a patent, the novelty of which is open to doubt, and which is not for a pioneer invention, should be rigidly construed.—Wright v. Yuengling, 155 U. S. 47, 15 S. Ct. 1, 39 L. Ed. 64.

175. Claims for processes.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 250, 250*.

In a patent for a process, an element in the process, not specifically described in the claim, cannot be deemed to be included therein and covered by the patent from a mere mention of a quality of the product.—Western Electric Mfg. Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co., 114 U. S. 447, 5 S. Ct. 941, 29 L. Ed. 210, affirming decree (C. C.) 9 F. 708.

The fifth claim of letters No. 174,465, of March 7, 1876, to A. G. Bell, for "improvements in telegraphy," is as follows: "The method of and apparatus for transmitting vocal or other sounds telegraphically, as herein described, by causing electrical undulations, similar in form to the vibrations of the air accompanying the said vocal or other sounds, substantially as set forth." Held that, though articulate speech was not mentioned by name in the patent, the sound of articulate speech was one of the "vocal or other sounds" referred to, and that the claim embraced the art of transferring to or impressing on an undulatory current the vibrations of air produced by the human voice in articulate speech, so that the speech would be carried to and received by a listener at a distance on the line of the current.—Dolbear v. American Bell Tel. Co., 126 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 778, 31 L. Ed. 863.

Said claim is not for the use of a current in its natural state as it comes from the battery, but for putting a continuous current in a closed circuit, under such conditions that changes of intensity therein may be produced exactly corresponding to the changes of density in the air caused by the vibrations which accompany vocal or other sounds, and for using that electrical condition, thus created, for sending and receiving articulate speech telegraphically. So construed, the claim is not for the mere use of electricity as distinct from the particular process with which it is connected in the patent.—Id.

The idea of the permanent retention in a reservoir of a large quantity of molten metal as a basis for unification of the product of blast furnaces received into it is sufficiently disclosed in the claim of the Jones patent, No. 404,414, for a process of mixing molten pig iron so as to secure greater uniformity in chemical composition, preparatory to further treatment, which specifies neither the size of the reservoir nor the amount of metal to be left therein, where the specifications call for a reservoir of any convenient size, "holding, say, 100 tons of metal," with the bottom of the discharge spout two feet above the bottom of the vessel in a 100-ton tank, "and more or less according to the capacity of the vessel," for the purpose of leaving a considerable quantity remaining and unpoured with which the fresh additions may mix. Decree, Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 37 C. C. A. 593, 96 F. 850, reversed.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 698, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968.

A construction of the claim of the Jones patent, No. 404,414, for a process of mixing molten pig metal, as covering a method for avoiding abrupt variations in its chemical constituents, preparatory to further treatment in converting it into steel, is not inconsistent with the specification of the patent that its primary object was to render the product of steel works uniform in chemical composition.—Id.

176. Claims for machines or manufactures in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 250*–252.

In patents for combinations of mechanism, limitations and provisos imposed by the inventor, especially such as were introduced into an application after it had been persistently rejected, must be strictly construed against the inventor and in favor of the public, and looked upon as in the nature of disclaimers.—Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., 114 U. S. 63, 5 S. Ct. 1021, 29 L. Ed. 67.

Upon an invention for bronzing iron, two patents were granted,—one for the process, and the other for the product. Held, that the latter patent only covered articles produced by the process described, and not any like articles which might be made in other ways.—Plummer v. Sargent, 120 U. S. 442, 7 Sup. Ct. 640, 30 L. Ed. 737, affirming decree (C. C.) Tucker v. Sargent, 9 F. 299.

Bell, after describing clearly in his patent his process of transmitting speech telegraphically, pointed out two ways in which this might be done: One, by the "vibration or motion of bodies capable of inductive action, or by the vibration of the conducting wire itself in the neighborhood of such bodies"; and the other, "by alternately increasing and diminishing the resistance of the circuit, or by alternately increasing and diminishing the power of the battery." He then said that he preferred to employ for his purpose an electro-magnet, having a coil on one of its legs, and proceeded to describe the construction of the particular apparatus, in which the electro-magnet, or magneto method, was employed. Held, that the fifth claim, set out above, being, first, for the process, and, second, for the apparatus, it was not to be confined to the magneto instrument, and such modes of creating electrical undulations as could be produced by that form of apparatus; but that it included both the magneto and variable resistance methods, and the particular magneto apparatus described, or its equivalent.—Dolbear v. American Bell Tel. Co., 126 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 778, 31 L. Ed. 863.

The third claim of the patent is for the "improvement in the method of stretching hides, which consists in dragging the hide over a stretcher, and also over a friction table or beam, by means of a revolving roller, to which the hide is secured, as described, whereby, as the hide is passed over the table or beam, the thicker portions of the hide are detained or made to lag by pressure applied to such thicker portions, to increase at such points the friction between the hide and the table, substantially as specified." Held, that this claim is merely for the exclusive right of using the machine of the first claim, and cannot be infringed except by infringing that claim.—Weatherhead v. Coupe, 147 U. S. 322, 13 S. Ct. 312, 37 L. Ed. 188, reversing decree (C. C.) Coupe v. Weatherhead, 16 F. 673.

A statement in the specifications of the Dolan patent, No. 589,342, for a duplex acetylene gas burner or tip of the Bunsen type, having a series of inclined air passages on the sides, that, if the burner were cut off, the general shape and condition of the flame would be the same, does not indicate with sufficient definiteness that the essence of the invention is to have so short a chamber or cylinder as to prevent the mixing of the air taken into it, and to emit a current of gas surrounded by the greater part of such air as an envelop or film. Decrees, American Lava Co. v. Steward (1907) 155 F. 731, 84 C. C. A. 157, and American Lava Co. v. Kirschberger, 155 F. 740, 84 C. C. A.

◀177. Claims for combinations.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 253, 254.

In a combination claim, if the patentee specifies any element as entering into the combination either directly by the language of the claim, or by such a reference to the descriptive part of the specification as carries such element into the claim, he makes such element a material part of the combination, and the court cannot declare it to be immaterial.—Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S. 408, 3 S. Ct. 236, 27 L. Ed. 979.

When a patent is for a combination only, none of the separate elements of which it is composed are included within the monopoly.—Rowell v. Lindsay, 113 U. S. 97, 5 S. Ct. 507, 28 L. Ed. 906, affirming decree (C. C.) 6 F. 290.

Letters patent No. 314,142, issued March 17, 1885, to Thomas J. Kirkpatrick, claim "the combination, with the perch or backbone of a bicycle, or similar vehicle, of independent front and rear springs secured to said perch or backbone, and a flexible seat suspended directly from said springs at the front and rear, respectively, substantially as set forth." In the specifications the patentee states that in order to extend the flexible seat as far forward as possible, and at the same time secure the full elasticity of the forward spring, "I construct the said springs with two wings adapted to extend forward of the head, and turn upward and backward to connect with the forward end of the seat." Held, that in view of the Fowler patents of 1880 and 1881, and the Veeder patent of 1882, the patent must be limited to a forward spring adapted to extend forward of the head and turn upward and backward, "substantially as set forth."—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully & Jeffery Mfg. Co., 144 U. S. 248, 12 S. Ct. 641, 36 L. Ed. 423, affirming decree (C. C.) 34 F. 893.

A specific combination claim, containing letters of reference to the elements included, cannot be broadened by interpretation so as to include additional elements not referred to, and which are outside the scope of the patent, as expressed in the specifications.—Wollensak v. Sargent, 151 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 291, 38 L. Ed. 137, affirming decree (C. C.) 41 F. 53.

(A) RIGHTS OF PATENTEES IN GENERAL.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 259-262; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 396.

The obligation of the vendee in a contract for the sale of an invention of an improved automatic coaster brake for bicycles to pay royalties on all devices made or sold embodying the invention, and to use due business diligence to push their sale, cannot be so extended as to require an account for the manufacture and sale of a new device, accomplishing the same results, but differing radically in construction and operation, which may reasonably and honestly have been regarded as superior to the vendor's invention. Decree 24 App. D. C. 311, reversed.—Eclipse Bicycle Co. v. Farrow, 26 S. Ct. 150, 199 U. S. 581, 50 L. Ed. 317.

The lack of novelty in a supposed invention does not, until the final adverse action by the Patent Office, which is to terminate the contract for its sale, relieve the vendee of its obligation under the contract to pay royalties "on all the devices made or sold embodying the invention," where the vendee took an assignment of the inventor's right, title, and interest, took charge of his applications for patents, and agreed to defend the invention against infringement.—Id.

The vendee in a contract for the sale of an invention cannot rescind for failure of consideration because of the rejection of patents for some of the claims, without returning to the vendor those parts of the supposed invention for which the patents were allowed.—Id.

The refusal of patents for some of the claims of invention only exonerates the vendee of such invention from any obligation to pay further royalties on devices made and sold by it which do not embody what remains of the claims, where the contract requires the payment of royalties on all devices embodying the invention until final adverse action by the Patent Office.—Id.

Royalties upon any device found to come within a contract for the sale of an invention are within the scope of a reference to an auditor to state the account, under a decree declaring in general terms, the rights of the complainant to royalties upon all devices manufactured by the defendant and embodying the inventions mentioned in the contract, although both the bill and the decree specifically mentioned but a single device, the bill averring complainant's ignorance of details and want of means of learning them except by discovery, and praying a disclosure, obviously intended to include substitutes for his invention.—Id.

◀184. Exclusive nature of right.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 263-266.

◀187. — Articles made, used, or purchased by others before application for patent.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 264.

Where an inventor constructs and puts in operation his machine for the use of another in that other's business, before he makes application for a patent, he by his own act sets that machine free from his subsequently acquired monopoly, and cannot be said to be deprived of his property without compensation, because the statute (Rev. St. § 4899 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3387]), permits the other to use the machine without liability to him.—Dable Grain Shovel Co. v. Flint, 137 U. S. 41, 11 S. Ct. 8, 34 L. Ed. 618, affirming judgment (C. C.) 42 F. 686.

Under Rev. St. § 4899 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3387), providing that one who purchases of the inventor, or with his knowledge and consent constructs, a newly invented machine before the inventor's application for a patent, or who sells or uses one so constructed, may use or vend to others, to be used, the specific thing, without liability, one who allows his partners to use his invention in the machines owned by the firm, before he obtains his patent or goes out of the firm, cannot thereafter sue them for infringement as regards the same machines. Not even if in going out he reserves the privileges of denying their right to continue the use of said improvements.—Wade v. Metcalf, 129 U. S. 202, 9 S. Ct. 271, 32 L. Ed. 661, affirming decree (C. C.) 16 F. 130.

◀189. Territorial extent of rights.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 267.

Sales consummated in Canada are not an infringement of a patent from the United States in view of Rev. St. § 4884 (Comp. St. 1913, § 9428).—Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Minnesota Moline Plow Co., 35 S. Ct. 221, 235 U. S. 641, 59 L. Ed. 398, reversing decree 183 F. 314, 105 C. C. A. 528.

191. Rights and powers of patentees as to making, use, or sale of invention.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 263.

The exclusive right "to make, use and vend the invention," granted by Rev. St. § 4884 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3381), to the patentee, and his assigns, does not include the right to limit by notice the price at which the patented article may be resold at retail by a purchaser from jobbers purchasing from patentee.—Bauer & Cie v. O'Donnell, 33 S. Ct. 616, 229 U. S. 1, 57 L. Ed. 1041, 50 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1185, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 150.

(B) ASSIGNMENTS AND OTHER TRANSFERS.

Jurisdiction of court of claims, see Courts, 449.

193. Assignability of patents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 270.

One owning a patent with several claims cannot assign a single claim only, so as to convey the legal title, or enable the assignee to sue thereon in his own name, and such an assignment will be construed as a mere license.—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully & Jeffery Mfg. Co., 144 U. S. 248, 12 S. Ct. 641, 36 L. Ed. 423, affirming decree (C. C.) 34 F. 893.

195. Agreements to assign.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 272-274.

A bill for specific performance of a contract to assign to plaintiff any patent that defendant might obtain for certain inventions alleged that defendant, to evade his contract, had obtained the issue of a patent to a third person, defendant being the real inventor. Held, that the bill could not be maintained for an accounting of the profits received by defendant from the use of this patent, as a decree for profits can only proceed on the ground that plaintiff is at least the equitable owner of the patent.—Kennedy v. Hazelton, 128 U. S. 667, 9 S. Ct. 202, 32 L. Ed. 576, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 293.

S., by an absolute assignment, transferred, for a certain consideration, title to a patent, and on the following day he and the assignee entered into a contract, reciting that, instead of the consideration mentioned in the assignment, the assignee should pay certain sums on future dates, and if he should fail to do so the title to the patents should return to S. Held, that the transaction was not an executory contract to assign, but an absolute assignment, and vested the legal title to the patent in the assignee.—Boesch v. Graff, 133 U. S. 697, 10 S. Ct. 378, 33 L. Ed. 787, reversing decree (C. C.) Graff v. Boesch, 33 F. 279.

An inventor entered into a contract with a third person, whereby the latter was to furnish money to apply for and obtain a patent for a half interest. The inventor died after filing an application, and thereafter the third person entered into an agreement with his widow, who was acting as administrator de son tort, whereby the former was to prosecute the application, and to have a sole interest in the patent after a certain sum had been realized by the widow from the profits made on the machine. Thereafter such third person received temporary letters of administration upon the estate of the inventor, and, while acting thereunder, the patent was issued in the name of the inventor, his "heirs or assigns." Held, that such third person had the equitable title to the patent, and the fact that there was no record evidence of these agreements filed in the patent office was immaterial in the absence of any question as to the rights of third parties.—De la Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. Featherstone, 147 U. S. 209, 13 S. Ct. 283, 37 L. Ed. 138, reversing opinion (C. C.) 49 F. 916.

196. Requisites and validity of assignments and grants.

199. — Recording.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 279.

The recording of a mortgage on a patent right in the patent office is equivalent to a delivery of possession, and makes the title of the mortgagee complete against all persons, including the mortgagor; and the mortgagee is the only person who can thereafter sue for an infringement of the patent by third persons, and such an action cannot be maintained by the mortgagor's licensee.—Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 11 S. Ct. 334, 34 L. Ed. 923, affirming decree (C. C.) 29 F. 316.

202. Construction and operation of assignments and grants.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 281-289.

A provision in an assignment of a patent, that the net profits arising from sales, royalties, settlements, or other sources, are to be divided between the parties to the assignment, so as to give the patentee one-fourth thereof, does not in any respect modify or limit the absolute transfer of title.—Rude v. Westcott, 130 U. S. 152, 9 S. Ct. 463, 32 L. Ed. 888.

A clause in an assignment of a patent appointing the assignees attorneys of the patentee, with authority to use his name whenever they deem proper in the management of the business connected with the ownership of the patent, does not in any way restrict the interest or power of the assignees.—Id.

203. Rights and liabilities of assignees and grantees.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 290-294.

A verbal license or interest given by the patentee is not valid, as against a subsequent assignee of the patent, who had no notice thereof.—Gates Iron Works v. Fraser, 153 U. S. 332, 14 S. Ct. 883, 38 L. Ed. 734, affirming decree (C. C.) 42 F. 49.

T., while employed by J. and G., procured patent dated December 27, 1870, No. 110,513, for an improvement in carriage bows. September 1, 1870, he had agreed to permit J. and G. to use the patented articles for a certain royalty, and "that any improvement made on the patented articles shall be for the mutual benefit of the parties." T. thereafter made improvements, for which he obtained patent No. 114,885, dated May 16, 1871, and J. and G. manufactured articles covered thereby under the agreement. The latter patent proved the more valuable of the two. On August 24, 1875, letters patent No. 166,950 were issued to J. for an improvement in bow sockets for buggy tops. In an action by J. and G. to restrain T. from infringing the last-mentioned patent, held, that defendant was entitled to manufacture the articles patented by letters patent No. 166,950 free of royalty.—Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121, 7 S. Ct. 1067, 30 L. Ed. 1110.

License restriction may be imposed on purchaser of a rotary mimeograph that the machine may be used only with supplies made by the patentee, though they are unpatented.—Henry v. A. B. Dick Co., 32 S. Ct. 364, 224 U. S. 1, 56 L. Ed. 645, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880.

—210. — Implied licenses.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 301, 302.

Complainant had a patent on a stack of rollers used in crushing seed. Defendants, with the knowledge of patentee, purchased a set of rollers from his agent. These not working successfully, they returned them, retaining the frame, and purchased rollers of another. Held, that the use of the rollers did not necessarily involve the use of the process for crushing seed, also patented by complainant, and was not a license to defendants to so use it.—Lawther v. Hamilton, 124 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 342, 31 L. Ed. 325, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 811.

The fact that an invention is made by an employé after a long series of experiments conducted at his employer's expense, and that he thereafter remains in the employment for many years, with full knowledge that the employer is applying the invention to its manufactures, raises an indefeasible implied license in favor of the employer, and the inventor cannot thereafter sue him for infringement.—Lane & Bodley Co. v. Locke, 150 U. S. 193, 14 S. Ct. 78, 37 L. Ed. 1049, decree reversed Locke v. Lane & Bodley Co. (C. C.) 35 F. 289.

—211. Construction and operation of licenses.

The sale of a patented article by an assignee within his territory carries the right to use it everywhere.—Hobble v. Jennison, 149 U. S. 355, 13 S. Ct. 879, 37 L. Ed. 766.

An assignment to the government, "for the sum of one dollar, and other valuable consideration to me paid," of the right to make and use, for the full term of the patent, improvements made by a government machinist on machines under his charge, largely in office hours, and entirely with government tools, and for which he took out a patent at the government's expense, gives to the government an absolute right to make and use such machines to the end of the term.—McAleer v. United States, 150 U. S. 424, 14 S. Ct. 160, 37 L. Ed. 1130.

Patented articles which have been once sold by the patentee thereby pass out of the limits of the monopoly, and one who subsequently sells them to others is not an infringer.—Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co., 152 U. S. 425, 14 S. Ct. 627, 38 L. Ed. 500.

Where the rights under a patent have been assigned to different persons for the states of Massachusetts and Michigan, a dealer in Massachusetts may purchase the patented articles of the assignee for Michigan for the purpose of resale in Massachusetts, and may sell them there without liability to the Massachusetts assignee.—Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co., 157 U. S. 669, 15 S. Ct. 738, 39 L. Ed. 848, reversing decree (C. C.) Standard Folding Bed Co. v. Keeler, 41 F. 51.

—212. Rights, remedies, and liabilities of licensees.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 312-314.

Plaintiff agreed in writing to sell the right to use his patent in certain states, to a corporation to be organized, defendants to be among the incorporators, for $25,000, and, by a contemporary agreement, was not to look to the individual incorporators for payment of the money. The project was abandoned, and plaintiff introduced testimony of an agreement between defendants and patentee that they should take the patent at the terms agreed on with the proposed company. Held, that there was evidence that defendants had succeeded to the obligation under the original contract, and that the agreement not to look to the individual defendants had been negatived thereby.—Humiston v. Wood, 124 U. S. 12, 8 S. Ct. 347, 31 L. Ed. 354.

The chief of the government bureau of printing and engraving, being requested by his superior officer to devise an internal revenue stamp, conceived the idea of a self-canceling stamp, and, under his direction, the employés of the bureau, using government property and machinery, prepared a die for printing. Recommending the adoption of this stamp, he stated to the commissioner of internal revenue that he would make no charge for its use because he was in the government employ, and used government machinery in producing it. He, however, applied for a patent, which was issued December 21, 1869, to his assignee. Held, that the government had a right to use the stamp without making any compensation to the patentee.—Solomons v. United States, 137 U. S. 342, 11 S. Ct. 88, 34 L. Ed. 667, affirming judgment 21 Ct. Cl. 479, and 22 Ct. Cl. 335.

A grant, by the owner of a patent, of the sole and exclusive right and license to manufacture and sell the patented article throughout the United States does not include the right to use such patented article, at least if manufactured by third persons, and is therefore a mere license, and not an assignment of any title to the patent, and does not give the licensee the right to sue alone, either at law or in equity, for its infringement.—Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U. S. 252, 11 S. Ct. 334, 34 L. Ed. 923, affirming decree (C. C.) 29 F. 316.

An inadvertent sale in licensee's territory renders licensor liable only for profits actually realized, and not for profits which grantee might have realized if he had made the sale.—Cincinnati Siemens-Lungren Gas Illuminating Co. v. Western Siemens-Lungren Co., 152 U. S. 200, 14 S. Ct. 523, 38 L. Ed. 411.

Patentee selling rotary mimeograph under a license restriction may elect to sue a third person for infringement by sale of ink to the purchaser in violation of the restriction, though he might have sued on a broken contract or to declare forfeiture of the licensee's rights.—Henry v. A. B. Dick Co., 32 S. Ct. 364, 224 U. S. 1, 56 L. Ed. 645, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880.

—213. Assignments and sublicenses.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 315-320.

A license to manufacture a patented article is not assignable, and the corporation that was the licensee having dissolved, and its stockholders having formed a new one under the laws of a different state, the new corporation acquires no right under an alleged assignment.—Haggood v. Hewitt, 119 U. S. 226, 7 S. Ct. 193, 30 L. Ed. 369.

A corporation organized as the successor of a firm, on the same basis, to do the same business in the same place, and with all the property, assets, liabilities, and obligations of the firm, must be held to have succeeded to all the rights of the firm under a license to use an invention, independent of any question as to the assignability thereof, especially when it appears that the patentee has acquiesced therein by remaining in the corporation's employment, with full knowledge that it was using the invention.—Lane & Bodley Co. v. Locke, 150 U. S. 193, 14 S. Ct. 78, 37 L. Ed. 1049, decree reversed (C. C.) Locke v. Lane & Bodley Co., 35 F. 289.

A dealer in territory reserved by the patentee may purchase the patented articles from a licensee of other territory, through an agent in such territory, and import and resell them in the reserved territory, without infringing any rights of the patentee; and it is immaterial that such dealer may have knowledge of a contract whereby such licensee has agreed not to sell, or permit the sale, directly or indirectly, of his articles in such reserved territory.—Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co., 157 U. S. 659, 15 S. Ct. 738, 39 L. Ed. 848, reversing decree (C. C.) Standard Folding Bed Co. v. Keeler, 41 F. 51.

Defendant corporation, which was seeking to control the manufacture of barbed fence wire, purchased from complainant corporation certain barbed wire patents which had been sustained by the courts, agreeing to pay a certain royalty on all wire to be made and sold by it "under said several letters patent, or any of them." Afterwards defendant purchased another barbed-wire patent, which covered wire differing in some respects from the wire of the patents purchased from complainant, and made and sold wire thereunder. Held, that the contract between complainant and defendant did not imply that defendant was to make no wire not covered by the patents purchased from complainant, and therefore, in the absence of any claims that the wire made under the new patent infringed such other patents, defendant was not liable to pay royalty thereon, especially where complainant's claim, after being rejected, was allowed to slumber for several years, during which royalties were paid on wire made under the patents purchased from it.—Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., 159 U. S. 423, 16 S. Ct. 94, 40 L. Ed. 205.

The fact that the employé made the invention out of working hours, and that he used neither the property of his employer, the government, nor the services of its employes, in conceiving, developing, or perfecting the inventions, is immaterial, if the cost of preparing the patterns and working drawings of the machines, as well as the cost of constructing the machines that were made in putting the invention into practical use, was borne by the government, the work being also done under the immediate supervision of the employé.—Gill v. United States, 160 U. S. 426, 16 S. Ct. 322, 40 L. Ed. 480.

An employé, paid by salary or wages, who devises an improved method of doing his work, using the property or labor of his employer to put his invention into practical form, and assenting to the use of such improvements by his employer, cannot, by taking out a patent upon such invention, recover a royalty or other compensation for such use.—Id.

214. Revocation or forfeiture of licenses.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 321-327.

The grant of an exclusive right to make, sell, and use in a specified territory, for five years, self-raising flour by the use of a patented acid preparation, the grantee agreeing to make the flour and use all his business tact and skill to introduce and sell the same, and to purchase all the acid from the grantor, is a mere personal license, which terminates immediately on the death of the grantee before the end of the five-year period, and no rights thereunder pass to his personal representatives.—Oliver v. Rumford

Chemical Works, 109 U. S. 75, 3 S. Ct. 61, 27 L. Ed. 862.

Where it is the clearly understood intention of the parties to an instrument granting a license under a patent that it shall be exclusive, and that understanding is acted on from the time of its execution, a discovery afterwards that the words used do not grant an exclusive right will not invalidate his contract, nor justify the licensee in surrendering his license, and if he refuses the offer of the licensor to correct the error he cannot sue to cancel the license.—Laver v. Dennett, 109 U. S. 90, 3 S. Ct. 73, 27 L. Ed. 867.

A contract granting "the right to make and sell" a certain plow under a certain patent in a specified territory, even if not an exclusive license, is, in the absence of any express limitation, for the life of the patent, and cannot be terminated by the grantee without the consent of the grantor; so that for plows made in accordance with any of the claims of the patent, and sold by the grantee at any time during the existence of the patent, the grantor can recover the royalty fixed by the contract, though the grantee has previously given notice of its termination of the contract.—St. Paul Plow Works v. Starling, 140 U. S. 184, 11 S. Ct. 803, 35 L. Ed. 404, affirming judgment (C. C.) Starling v. St. Paul Plow Works, 29 F. 790.

215. Contracts relating to patents and patent rights.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 328.

The owner of some 65 patents for improvements on bicycles and tricycles granted a license to another to manufacture and sell under 15 of them, in consideration whereof the licensee expressly admitted the validity of all the licensor's patents, covenanted not to manufacture or sell machines covered by any of them after the license expired or was in any way terminated, even after the patents themselves expired, and agreed that on violation of such covenants the licensor might treat him as liable for the breach, or as a mere infringer, and that in either case, on suit brought, an injunction might issue against him without notice. Held that, whether or not an action could be maintained at law for a breach of the covenants not to manufacture and sell the specific devices, the stipulation not to set up any defense to an action under any of the patents was void as against public policy.—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 12 S. Ct. 632, 36 L. Ed. 414.

Defendant was bound by contract to use reasonable diligence to collect from its licensees royalties on patented goods made and sold by them, and pay the same over to complainant. In order to maintain its control of the market, defendant made a settlement of litigation with a competing and alleged infringing manufacturer, purchasing his patents, and granting him a license. Complainant assented to this contract, agreeing to release defendant from all obligation to account for any part of moneys received from such manufacturer either for past infringements or for future royalties under the license granted to him, which moneys might be required to be expended or remitted in making such settlement. An unforeseen result of the settlement was to release certain other licensees of defendant from payment of their full royalties, and to make defendant liable to refund to them certain moneys already collected. Held, that the losses thus accruing were in a legal sense in the contemplation of complainant when it assented to the settlement, and consequently defendant was not bound to make good to it the amount thereof; and that, on the other hand, complainant was not liable to defendant for any part of the sums which defendant was obliged to refund to its licensees.—Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., 159 U. S. 423, 16 S. Ct. 94, 40 L. Ed. 205.

⚡216. Contracts for making, use, or sale of patented articles.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 329.

Attaching a notice to a patented article that it is licensed for sale and use at a specified price, and that a purchase is an acceptance of the condition and that all rights revert to the patentee on the violation of the restriction, does not convert an unqualified sale to a mere license to use the invention.—Bauer & Cie v. O'Donnell, 33 S. Ct. 616, 229 U. S. 1, 57 L. Ed. 1041, 50 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1185, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 150.

⚡217. Royalties.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 330-349.

⚡218. — Rights and Habilities of parties.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 330-338.

Complainant was entitled, under existing contracts, to receive from defendant, which owned numerous barbed fence wire patents, and had granted licenses thereunder, 15 cents for each 100 pounds of such wire made by defendant's licensees, where the license fees were actually collected by defendant, and defendant was bound to use reasonable diligence to collect the same, but, according to the court's construction of the contracts, did not guaranty their collection. Thereafter by a supplementary contract, the amount of the royalty was reduced to 5 cents per 100 pounds, payable only when collected, the reduction to go into effect on June 1, 1883. Defendant in fact paid only 5 cents per 100 pounds for the preceding month of May, which payment was accepted and receipted for by complainant. Held, that after a delay of six years this settlement should not be disturbed, it appearing that 5 cents was all that defendant in fact collected.—Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., 159 U. S. 423, 16 S. Ct. 94, 40 L. Ed. 205.

It was permissible to infer, after so long a time, that complainant acquiesced in defendant's claim that the provision in the supplementary contract, making payment of the royalty dependent upon its collection, extended to royalties falling due in May.—Id.

The alleged invalidity of the patent for the Harvey process of treating armor plate cannot be set up by the United States as a defense to a suit for the royalties due under contract for the use of the process, which provided that the payment of royalties was to cease "in case it should at any time be judicially decided" that the patent was invalid. Judgment, Harvey Steel Co. v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 662, affirmed.—United States v. Harvey Steel Co., 25 S. Ct. 240, 196 U. S. 310, 49 L. Ed. 492.

The defense that the United States has not used the patent for the Harvey process of treating armor plate, if such patent be properly construed, is not available in a suit for the royalties due under a contract for the use of the process "known as the Harvey process," although the process is also identified in the contract as a patented one, where it is not denied that the United States has used the process communicated to it under the contract, which is known in common speech as the "Harvey process."—Id.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 339-349; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 128.

In an action in a circuit court to recover royalties under a contract of license to make a patented article, where defendant, admitting the contract, raises the issues, which the court determines, of infringement and the validity of the patent, an appeal lies, regardless of the amount in controversy, under Rev. St. § 699 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 568], giving appellate jurisdiction to the supreme court "in any case touching patent rights."—St. Paul Plow Works v. Starling, 127 U. S. 376, 8 S. Ct. 1327, 32 L. Ed. 251.

In an action to recover a royalty under a contract granting "the right to make and sell" a certain plow under a certain patent in a specified territory, testimony of a dealer in plows that he sold one substantially the same as the one made and sold by defendant for $45 in competition with one substantially the same as plaintiff's at $25 was immaterial.—St. Paul Plow Works v. Starling, 140 U. S. 184, 11 S. Ct. 803, 35 L. Ed. 404, affirming judgment Starling v. St. Paul Plow Works (C. C.) 29 F. 790.

The finding of the court of claims as to what is a reasonable royalty for the use of a patented invention is a finding of fact which is binding on the supreme court, in the absence of other findings which satisfy the latter court that the finding as to royalty is erroneous.—United States v. Berdan Firearms Mfg. Co., 156 U. S. 552, 15 S. Ct. 420, 39 L. Ed. 530.

XI. REGULATION OF DEALINGS IN PATENT RIGHTS AND PATENTED ARTICLES.

⚡220. Power to control and regulate.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 350.

The requirement that a negotiable instrument taken on a sale of rights under a patent shall show on its face for what it was given, or be void, which is made by Kirby's Dig. Ark. § 513, does not violate Const. U. S. art. 1, § 8, granting to Congress the right to secure to inventors the exclusive right to their discovery, nor Rev. St. U. S. § 4898 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3387], authorizing written assignments of patents or interests therein, which shall be void as against subsequent purchasers unless recorded in the Patent Office. Judgment (1905) 87 S. W. 621, 75 Ark. 323, affirmed.—John Woods & Sons v. Carl, 27 S. Ct. 99, 203 U. S. 358, 51 L. Ed. 219.

The regulation of the sale of patent rights made by Laws Kan. 1889, c. 182, which compels one selling a patent right in any county in the state to file with the clerk of such county an authenticated copy of the letters patent, together with an affidavit of the genuineness of the letters patent and as to other matters, and provides that any written obligation given for the purchase price of a patent right shall contain the words "given for a patent right"—does not violate Const. U. S. art. 1, § 8, granting to Congress the right to secure to inventors the exclusive right to their discovery, nor Rev. St. U. S. § 4898 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3387], authorizing written assignments of patents or interests therein, which shall be void as against subsequent purchasers unless recorded in the Patent Office. Judgment (1905) 80 P. 952, 71 Kan. 378, affirmed.—Allen v. Riley, 27 S. Ct. 95, 203 U. S. 347, 51 L. Ed. 216, 8 Ann. Cas. 137.

⚡222. Marking patented articles.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 352.

The owner of a design patent, who fails to mark "Patented" the articles sold by him, until after the design is copied by another, has the duty of alleging and the burden of proving that the latter was notified of the infringement, and continued the infringement thereafter.—Dunlap v. Schofield, 152 U. S. 244, 14 S. Ct. 576, 38 L. Ed. 426.

XII. INFRINGEMENT.

Claims against United States for infringement, see United States, ⚡97.

Implied contract to pay for use of patent, by United States, see United States, ⚡97.

Jurisdiction of court of claims, see Courts, 449.
Jurisdiction of state courts of question of infringement arising collaterally, see Courts, 489.

(A) WHAT CONSTITUTES INFRINGEMENT.

226. Nature and elements of injury.

Letters patent No. 197,289, issued November 20, 1877, to A. L. G. M., and O. E. Peters, are for an anti-friction journal box, with bearings consisting of elongated rollers, whose relative positions, as they revolve round the axle, are maintained by inserting each end into a ring by means of a ball bearing. Held, that no claim for infringement can be made under the Peters patent, as against one using bearings consisting of spherical balls instead of the elongated rollers, since, if the ball bearings constitute an infringement thereof, the Peters patent itself is an infringement of the prior ball-bearing patents to Jewett (May, 1868) and to Smith (November 20, 1877); the latter, though of the same date as the Peters patent, being upon a prior application.—Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully & J. Mfg. Co., 144 U. S. 238, 12 S. Ct. 637, 36 L. Ed. 419, affirming decree (C. C.) 34 F. 877.

Where the operation of two devices is essentially different, infringement will not be declared because of the accidental adoption of a feature of doubtful value, which was never contemplated by the patentee, or alluded to in his specifications.—Ball & Socket Fastener Co. v. Kraetzer, 150 U. S. 111, 14 S. Ct. 48, 37 L. Ed. 1019.

227. Intent or purpose, and knowledge.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 358.

Evidence of notice of a license restriction as to the use of ink on a patented stencil duplicating machine, disclosed on the baseboard of each machine, is not sufficient to charge a corporation with infringement because of a sale of its own ink for use on such a machine, where it does not appear that it ever solicited an order for ink to be so used, although it may have filled a few such orders, or that it was ever notified by the manufacturers of the rights which they claimed, or that anything which it did was considered an infringement, and where none of the chief executive officers of the corporation had knowledge of this restriction. Judgment (1906) 145 F. 933, 76 C. C. A. 453, affirmed.—Cortelyou v. Charles Eneu Johnson & Co., 28 S. Ct. 105, 207 U. S. 196, 52 L. Ed. 167.

228. Patents for processes.

229. — Identity in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 366, 363.

In a suit for infringement of letters patent No. 73,425, to Nelson W. Green, for a "driven well," it appeared that the defendant bored, instead of driving, until he came to the water-bearing stratum, and then drove the tube downward into the stratum so as to secure those conditions of an air-tight connection between the point of the tube and the surrounding earth, which constitute the principle of the "driven-well" patent. Held an infringement.—The Driven Well Cases, 122 U. S. 40, 7 S. Ct. 1073, 30 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree (C. C.) Andrews v. Eames, 15 F. 109.

Infringement of the process claim of the Jones patent, No. 404,414, for mixing molten pig iron, the dominant idea of which is the permanent retention in a large covered reservoir of so large a quantity of the molten metal as will absorb the variations of the product from the blast furnaces received into it and discharged from it into the converters, results from the use of a covered refractory lined and turtle-shaped tilting vessel of about 300 tons capacity for receiving the molten metal from the blast furnaces and supplying the converters, in the practical operation of which, by not allowing the vessel to tilt beyond a certain point gauged by a chalk mark, there is habitually retained in such vessel about 175 tons of molten metal, notwithstanding a long prior use of an intermediate uncovered receiving ladle for cupola metal, which held considerably more than the amount of metal necessary to charge a converter. Decree, Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 37 C. C. A. 593, 96 F. 850, reversed.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 698, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968.

231. — Identity of result.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 369.

The claim of reissue No. 4,372, to Nelson W. Green, for an improved method of constructing artesian wells, covers not only the process of driving the well, but also the use of the well after it has been driven. The use of a tube, of which the lower portion is perforated with small holes, and the lower end provided with a point, by driving it into the ground until it projects into the water, without removing the earth upward, as in boring, the water entering the tube through the perforations, and being pumped up through the tube by an ordinary pump, is a continuing infringement of the patent, although the persons so using the process used it only for their personal convenience on their own farms, and never sold or offered for sale driven wells, or the materials for driving them.—Beedle v. Bennett, 122 U. S. 71, 7 S. Ct. 1090, 30 L. Ed. 1074.

233. Patents for machines or manufactures in general.

234. — Identity in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 370, 381.

Reloading cartridges, the vents of which are wholly over the fulminate chamber, and do not lead directly to the powder chamber, but lead to a channel cut across the upper face of the anvil and by this to a hole in the base of the powder chamber, so that the explosive force of the fulminate enters the powder chamber in a central stream, do not infringe the Hubbell patent, No. 212,813, for an improvement in metallic cartridges, the distinguishing feature of which is that the anvil plate has two or more openings whose inner edges nearly coincide with the edges of the central chamber of fulminate, so that this chamber, at its sides or outer extreme edges, communicates directly and exclusively with the powder charge, so that the explosive force of the fulminate is not allowed to expand under a larger area of the anvil plate and blow it out, but is compelled to diffuse its explosive force, not in a central stream, but in a diffused body into the base of the powder charge. Decree 20 Ct. Cl. 354, affirmed.—Hubbell v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 24, 179 U. S. 77, 45 L. Ed. 95.

The fact that a few loose grains of powder fall down through the base of the powder chamber of a reloading cartridge, and lie loosely in the groove across the upper face of the anvil, so that they come directly in contact with the flame of the fulminate before the latter enters the powder chamber, when they are not relied upon and do not in fact operate as a means of igniting the charge in the powder chamber, will not make a cartridge, which is so constructed that the explosive force of the fulminate enters the powder chamber in a central stream, infringe the Hubbell patent, No. 212,313, of which the distinguishing feature is that the anvil plate has two or more openings whose inner edges nearly coincide with the edges of the central chamber of fulminate, so that the explosive force of the fulminate does not enter the powder chamber in a central stream, but in a diffused body, into the base of the powder charge.—Id.

A machine which has no mechanical equivalent of the stationary toothed card above the stretcher bar, which is made an essential part of the mechanism described by the combination claim of the Sutton patent, No. 883,258, for an improvement upon machines for plucking furs, does not infringe such claim. Decree American Fur Refining Co. v. Cimiotti Unhairing Mach. Co., 123 F. 869, 59 C. C. A. 357, affirmed.—Cimiotti Unhairing Co. v. American Fur Refining Co., 25 S. Ct. 697, 198 U. S. 399, 49 L. Ed. 1100.

The Brill patents, Nos. 627,898 and 627,900, for improvements in car trucks, in which the only element of novelty, if any, is the suspension of the semielliptic springs supporting the car body by spring or elastic links connected with the side frame of the truck by a pin having a universal ball-and-socket joint at the point of connection, are not infringed by a device which does not use a ball and socket, but instead a rigid link, supported by a relatively unyielding spiral spring in the frame of the truck. Decree (1908) 30 App. D. C. 255, affirmed.—Brill v. Washington Ry. & Electric Co., 30 S. Ct. 177, 215 U. S. 527, 54 L. Ed. 311.

—235. — Identity of principle or mode of operation.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 371.

The first four claims of reissued letters patent No. 3,815, granted to Essek Bussey and Charles A. McLeod, February 1, 1870, for a "cooking-stove," the original patent, No. 56,686, having been granted to said Bussey, as inventor, July 24, 1866, and reissued to him, as No. 3,649, September 28, 1869, namely: "(1) A diving-flue cooking-stove with the exit-flue so constructed as to inclose on the sides and bottom the culinary boiler or hot-water reservoir, B; (2) a diving-flue cooking-stove with the exit-flue constructed across the bottom, and upon the rear upright side of the culinary or hot-water reservoir, B; (3) a diving-flue cooking-stove constructed with an exit-passage, F, below the top of the oven, and an exit-flue, E, E, in combination with an uncased reservoir, B, attached to the rear of the stove, and placed just above such exit-passage, and so arranged that the gases of combustion, in passing through such exit-flue, will impinge upon or come in direct contact with said reservoir, substantially as and for the purposes hereinbefore specified; (4) an exit-passage, F, constructed in the rear of a diving-flue cooking-stove and below the top of the oven, in combination with an uncased reservoir, B, attached to the rear of the stove, the bottom of which reservoir is also below the top of the oven, and so arranged that the gases of combustion will come in contact with, and heat such reservoir by, a direct draft from the fire-box to the smoke-pipe"—are limited to a structure in which the front of the reservoir has no air space in front of it, and in which the exit-flue does expand into a chamber at the bottom of the reservoir, and in which the vertical part of the exit-flue does not pass up through the reservoir. Hence those claims are not infringed by a stove in which, although there are three flues, and an exit-passage below the top of the oven, and a reservoir, the bottom of which is below the top of the oven, no part of the rear-end vertical plate is removed so as to allow the gases of combustion to come into direct contact with the front of the reservoir, nor is any such plate employed as the plate, w, w, of the patent, but there is a dead air space between the rear plate of the flue and the front of the reservoir, and the exit-flue is not a narrow one, carried across the middle of the bottom of the reservoir, as in the patent, but the products of combustion, on leaving the flue space, pass into a chamber beneath the reservoir, the area of which is coextensive with the entire surface of the bottom of the reservoir, and the vertical passage out of such chamber is not one outside of the rear of the reservoir, but is one in and through the body of the reservoir, and removable with it.—Bussey v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., 4 Sup. Ct. 38, 110 U. S. 181, 28 L. Ed. 95, reversing decree (C. C.) 1 F. 640, 1 McCrary, 161.

Patent No. 177,334, to A. H. Hutchins, for an improvement in hydrocarbon stoves, claiming, among other things, a watervessel, surrounding the oil chamber, and having on top of it a perforated top plate for the purpose of causing the air to pass down into the top part of the vessel, and thence up through a hot-air cylinder on top of it and its chimneys, is not infringed by a stove in which the hot-air cylinder rests on three equidistant struts, extending from the base of the chamber to the wall of the water chamber, by reason of the fact that air passes freely through the spaces between the struts.—Sharp v. Riessner, 119 U. S. 631, 7 S. Ct. 417, 30 L. Ed. 507.

The first claim of the Gordon patent No. 77,878 of 1868, for a grain harvester having "a binding arm capable of adjustment in the direction of the length of the grain, in combination with an automatic twisting device," is not infringed by a machine in which the grain binder is a complete and independent mechanism, having all its parts fixed and unadjustable, but being adjustable, as a whole, so as to bring the binding arm and twister opposite the middle of the bundle.—Gordon v. Warder, 150 U. S. 47, 14 S. Ct. 32, 37 L. Ed. 902, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 592.

A patent for an improvement in corn shellers, consisting of a winged shaft placed above the throat and revolving in the direction of the entering corn, is not restricted to corn shellers where the ears are fed into a chute, the device being equally well adapted for use where the ears are brought to the throat by other means, and is infringed by a spiked shaft at the entrance to the throat, revolving in the direction in which the corn is running, for the purpose of compelling the ears to enter, although they are brought to that point directly by carriers.—Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 L. Ed. 103, reversing decree Adams v. Keystone Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 35 F. 579, and 41 F. 595.

The patentee may bring an alleged infringer within the letter of his claims, but if the latter has so far changed the principle of the device that the claims of the patent, literally construed, have ceased to represent his actual invention, he cannot be adjudged an infringer.—Boyden Power-Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 18 S. Ct. 707, 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. Ed. 1136, reversing decree 70 F. 816, 17 C. C. A. 430.

—236. — Identity of form or arrangement.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 372, 373.

A patent for an improvement in a combined lock and handle holder, for traveling bags, consisting of a lock case, with sides notched near its ends to receive and hold the handle rings, is not infringed by the use of an extended bottom plate to the lock case to hold the handle rings; the patentee, upon the rejection of his first application, having so amended his specification as to dispense with an extended bottom plate.—Roemer v. Peddie, 132 U. S. 313, 10 S. Ct. 98, 33 L. Ed. 382.

A claim covering the buttonhole member of a glove fastener, and expressly including the "button head, F," which is shown by the specifications to be imperforate, is not infringed by a fastener having a perforated buttonhole member.—Ball & Socket Fastener Co. v. Kraetzer, 150 U. S. 111, 14 S. Ct. 48, 37 L. Ed. 1019.

No infringement of the combination claim in a patent for an improvement on machines for plucking furs results from the use of the machine, which in lieu of the fixed stretcher bar, made a distinct feature of the claim, substitutes a movable one, operated by an entirely different mechanism, capable of accomplishing a much larger amount of work within a given time. Decree American Fur Refining Co. v. Cimiotti Unhairing Mach. Co., 123 F. 869, 59 C. C. A. 357, affirmed.—Cimiotti Unhairing Co. v. American Fur Refining Co., 25 S. Ct. 697, 198 U. S. 399, 49 L. Ed. 1100.

237. — Substitution of equivalents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 374, 375.

The reissue of a patent for soda-water fountains differed from the original by omitting the words in brackets: "I claim the tin vessel, A, incased by a [steel] cylinder, C, and ends B, B' [soldered to the latter], in the manner as substantially described." The description called for end caps without flanges, and secured to the cylinder by joints of pure tin. Defendant used end caps, with flanges secured by joints of tin and lead solder and rivets. Held no infringement, as, if the effect of omitting the words in the reissue was to cover the use of other solder than pure tin, the reissue was an enlargement and void.—Matthews v. Iron-Clad Mfg. Co., 124 U. S. 347, 8 S. Ct. 639, 31 L. Ed. 477.

The adaptation of a honey frame for the use of comb foundations by putting pieces of wax on it is not a mechanical equivalent for a longitudinal groove in the frame for the guide strip, and constitutes no infringement.—Fornbrook v. Root, 127 U. S. 176, 8 S. Ct. 1247, 32 L. Ed. 97, affirming decree (C. C.) 21 F. 328.

A patent for an improvement in lifting-jacks, by which the pawl which held the ascending bar at the point gained by the lift of the lever was so arranged that it moved in slots at an angle of 45° to the vertical line of the ascending bar, and dropped into the notches or teeth thereon by the force of gravity, instead of the pressure of a spring, as in the usual pawl, is not infringed by a jack in which the pawl is pressed forward by a spring, though such pawl moves on a plane slightly inclined to the ascending bar, but not so arranged that the pawl moves over it by gravity.—Joyce v. Chillicothe Foundry & Machine Works Co., 127 U. S. 557, 8 S. Ct. 1311, 32 L. Ed. 171, affirming decree (C. C.) 15 F. 260.

On a question of the infringement of patent No. 213,323 for an improvement in hide stretching machines, the use on defendants' table or friction beam of outward spreading grooves, which served merely to prevent the hide from wrinkling laterally while being drawn over the same, is not the equivalent of the doubly-inclined stretcher bar of the patent.—Weatherhead v. Coupe, 147 U. S. 322, 13 S. Ct. 312, 37 L. Ed. 188, reversing decree (C. C.) Coupe v. Weatherhead, 16 F. 673.

A glove-fastener socket, depending for its elasticity upon inwardly projecting wings forming part of the walls thereof, is not the equivalent of a socket holding loosely within its cavity an elastic ring, which clasps the ball when inserted.—Ball & Socket Fastener Co. v. Kraetzer, 150 U. S. 111, 14 S. Ct. 48, 37 L. Ed. 1019.

A patent for a coal chute, which shows invention, if any, only in a reservoir or enlargement of the chute below the hopper to hold the coal when not being withdrawn, is not infringed by an apparatus having a chute with no enlargement, but merely a gate, which is kept closed until the coal is to be withdrawn.—Black Diamond Coal Min. Co. v. Excelsior Coal Co., 156 U. S. 611, 15 S. Ct. 482, 39 L. Ed. 553.

238. — Omission of parts.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 376.

In letters patent No. 186,369, granted to James Sargent, January 16, 1877, for improvements in time-locks, the combination-lock forming a member of the combinations claimed by the two claims of the patent is one which has a bolt or bearing that turns on an axis or revolves, as distinguished from a sliding-bolt, and those claims are not infringed by a structure in which the combination-lock has not a turning or revolving bolt.—Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co., 114 U. S. 63, 5 S. Ct. 1021, 29 L. Ed. 67.

Under patent No. 178,463, to George M. Peters, for a sheath for applying the ornamental moulding on the top of carriage dashes, the sheath is stated to be made preferably of two longitudinal pieces, maintained in a parallel position by transverse bolts or screws and washers. The sheath may be adjusted to the diameter of the moulding by varying the washers. Held, that claim 3, which is for a sheath composed of two parts, bolts, or screws and washers, whereby the sheath may be adjusted to the moulding, is not infringed by a device in which no washers are used for adjustment.—Peters v. Active Mfg. Co., 129 U. S. 530, 9 S. Ct. 389, 32 L. Ed. 738, affirming decree (C. C.) 21 F. 319.

The claim in the specification of letters patent No. 144,818, for an improvement in frames for horizontal engines, of a semicircular connecting piece joining the guiding cylinder and the steam cylinder head, is not infringed by an engine in which the guiding cylinder connects directly with the steam cylinder; the purpose of the connecting piece being accomplished, in a measure, by an oval opening near the end of a guiding cylinder, but which does not admit of as ready access to the cylinder head.—Wright v. Yuengling, 155 U. S. 47, 15 S. Ct. 1, 39 L. Ed. 64.

A patentee, having described in his specifications a particular device, and declared it to be an essential feature of his invention, cannot afterwards claim that it is immaterial, or that a machine which dispenses with it is an infringement, though it accomplishes the same purpose in perhaps an equally effective manner.—Id.

239. — Addition of parts.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 377, 378.

A patent for a neck pad for horses, "having an inner lining of crimped leather, and provided with straps to be fastened to the collar," is not infringed by a device which is a single piece of crimped leather having a piece of sheet metal so shaped as to fit it, riveted to its upper side in order to stiffen it and preserve its crimped form, and provided with straps to fasten it to the collar.—Voss v. Fisher, 113 U. S. 213, 5 S. Ct. 511, 28 L. Ed. 975.

240. — Improvements.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 379.

Where an invention is one of a primary character, and the mechanical functions performed by the machine are, as a whole, entirely new, all subsequent machines which employ substantially the same means to accomplish the same results are infringements, though the subsequent machine may contain improvements in the separate mechanisms which go to make up the machine.—Morley Sewing Mach. Co. v. Lan- caster, 129 U. S. 263, 9 S. Ct. 299, 32 L. Ed. 715.

One who appropriates all the valuable features of a patented machine is an infringer, although, for the purpose of evading the wording of the claim, he produces immaterial variations and slight improvements.—Hoyt v. Horne, 145 U. S. 302, 12 S. Ct. 922, 36 L. Ed. 713, reversing decree (C. C.) 35 F. 830.

◀241. — Identity of result.

See 28 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 380.

Plaintiff's patent covered the laying of a concrete pavement in blocks by separating the concrete forming each block as it is laid from the rest of the concrete by slips, thus enabling each block to heave separately by reason of the frost, or to be taken up separately. Defendant's method consisted simply in marking the concrete as laid into squares by a marker that sank into the concrete only one-sixteenth of an inch, effecting no permanent separation, and being for ornamental purposes only. Held no infringement.—California Artificial Stone-Pav. Co. v. Schalicke, 119 U. S. 401, 7 S. Ct. 391, 30 L. Ed. 471.

A patent for an improvement in concrete pavements, describing a pavement laid in sections, separated from each other by slips of tar paper, so as to enable the blocks to heave separately by reason of frost, or to be taken up and relaid separately, is not infringed by a concrete pavement composed of a lower layer of a material, having a slight adhesive tendency, laid in sections, and an upper layer, having a strong adhesive tendency, which was divided into sections by a trowel, at a line corresponding with the joints of the lower layer; the cut being deep enough to compel any tendency to crack to follow the line of the trowel cut.—Hurlbut v. Schillinger, 130 U. S. 456, 9 S. Ct. 584, 32 L. Ed. 1011.

The McClain patent No. 259,700, for a pad for horse collars, claimed, as an improvement, springs attached to such pad, and capable of being opened and clasped around the body of the sides of the collar, one end of the spring being so curved as to partly encircle the fore wale or small roll of the collar, and the other end so curved as to partly encircle and hug the after wale or body side of the collar, which construction would enable the pad to be easily and readily attached to the collar. Patent No. 331,813, to Andrew Ortmyer, was for a pad attachable to the collar by a hook made of wire, "its curved or hooked portion being so bent or formed as to clasp the outer or exposed part of the front roll of the collar." Held, that the hook of the latter patent is not an infringement of the spring in the former, which by its claim is limited to a spring which has a second roll to clasp the after wale of the collar.—McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U. S. 419, 12 S. Ct. 76, 35 L. Ed. 800, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 284.

A patent for a tag envelope, limited by the prior state of the art to the peculiar construction shown, by which the flap can be opened, and the contents taken out, without tearing the envelope, or removing or breaking the fastenings, is not infringed by an envelope in which the flap is so fastened that it cannot be opened without injury to it or to the envelope, and the contents are taken out by opening a flap, no more firmly secured than with gum, at the opposite end of the envelope.—Dunham v. Dennison Mfg. Co., 154 U. S. 103, 14 S. Ct. 986, 38 L. Ed. 924, affirming decree (C. C.) 40 F. 667.

Patents No. 222,895, issued December 23, 1879, and No. 238,677, issued March 8, 1881, both issued to William D. Gray, for improvements in roller mills, consisting in a peculiar construction and arrangement of devices for adjusting the rolls vertically as well as horizontally, whereby any unevenness in the wear of the rolls or their journals or bearings may be compensated for, and the grinding or crushing surface kept exactly in line, and which are only special devices for the more perfect and convenient accomplishment of the same, or practically the same, results as devices covered by the Nemelka patent issued in the United States November 12, 1878, and during the three years prior thereto in foreign countries, are not infringed by a machine which attains the same results in a manner which suggests the Nemelka as strongly as the Gray patent.—Consolidated Rolling Mill Co. v. Barnard & Leas Mfg. Co., 15 S. Ct. 333, 156 U. S. 281, 39 L. Ed. 417, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 527.

Even if a patent be a pioneer, an alleged infringer must have done something more than reach the same result. He must have reached it by substantially the same or similar means; otherwise the rule that the function of a machine cannot be patented is of no practical value.—Boyden Power-Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 18 S. Ct. 707, 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. Ed. 1136, reversing decree 70 F. 816, 17 C. C. A. 430.

The Horton patented machine for applying stays to box corners is an infringement of the Beach reissued patent, No. 11,167, as it accomplishes the same result by the employment of the same combination of the same elements, though it introduces the strip to be pasted on the corner of the box by a back feed on a line parallel to the line of the box corner, instead of by a side feed as in the Beach machine, and contains no mechanism for turning the strip into the inside of the corner, as does the Beach machine. Decree Beach v. Hobbs, 34 C. C. A. 248, 63 U. S. App. 626, 92 F. 146, affirmed.—Hobbs v. Beach, 21 S. Ct. 409, 180 U. S. 383, 45 L. Ed. 586.

◀242. Patents for combinations.

◀243. — Identity in general.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 332-334.

To constitute identity of invention, and therefore infringement, not only must the result obtained be the same, but in case the means used for its attainment is a combination of known elements, the elements combined in both cases must be the same, and combined in the same way, so that each element shall perform the same function; provided, however, that the differences alleged are not merely colorable according to the rule forbidding the use of known equivalents.—Electric Railroad Signal Co. v. Hall Railway Signal Co., 114 U. S. 87, 5 S. Ct. 1069, 29 L. Ed. 96.

Patent No. 155,077, to J. F. Field, for an improvement in glove fastenings, consisting of the combination of a spring inserted in the material of the glove, and extending around the edges of the slit, which permits drawing the glove over the hand, and adjusted so as to spring open by the insertion of the hand, and to close automatically and overlap itself, and cause the edges of the slit to overlap each other, when the glove is on, is not infringed by the use of springs for gloves to be inserted into the material, and with arms extending along each edge of the slit, jointed at the apex, working together like the blade and handle of a jackknife.—Field v. De Comeau, 116 U. S. 187, 6 S. Ct. 363, 29 L. Ed. 596.

No infringement of the claim of the Crammer patent, No. 271,426, for the use, in combination, of a vertical double brace and a sewing machine treadle fitted to oscillate in the brace on bearings therein "substantially as specified," results from the employment of the device covered by the Diehl patent, No. 306,469, for improvements in sewing machine stands and treadles, in which the treadle supports, though serving the same purpose as the device described in the Cramer patent, are substantially different in construction. Judgment 100 F. 652, 48 C. C. A. 588, reversed.—Singer Mfg. Co. v. Cramer, 24 S. Ct. 291, 192 U. S. 265, 48 L. Ed. 437.

245. — Substitution of equivalents.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 386.

A device in one patented combination is not the equivalent of a device in another, unless it perform the same functions.—Rowell v. Lindsay, 113 U. S. 97, 5 S. Ct. 507, 28 L. Ed. 906, affirming decree (C. C.) 6 F. 290.

Patent No. 140,536, to F. L. Pope, for an improvement in electric railroad signals, was for a combination of several previously known elements, and insulated sections of the track of the railroad on which the device might be used were essential to the combination. The patent proceeded upon the idea of unequal circuits to be afterwards equalized. Patent No. 165,170, to T. S. Hall and G. H. Snow, for a similar improvement, provided for the use of the earth for the return of the current, that completes the circuit, instead of insulated sections of track, and embodied the idea of avoiding the necessity of a subsequent rectification of unequal circuits by an original adjustment of equal resistances. Held, that the latter patent did not infringe the first.—Electric Railroad Signal Co. v. Hall Railway Signal Co., 114 U. S. 87, 5 S. Ct. 1069, 29 L. Ed. 96.

A patent for an improvement in relief valves for water cylinders covered a combination of an automatic valve with a contrivance consisting of a pin hole and pin, by which the valve may be raised from its seat, so as to leave the valve hole permanently open, or by which the valve may be rigidly closed upon its seat, making a closed or plug valve. Devices had been used before for opening or closing rigidly an automatic valve. Held, that such patent was not infringed by the combination of such a valve with a screw sleeve or cup to effect the same object.—Blake v. City and County of San Francisco, 113 U. S. 679, 5 S. Ct. 692, 28 L. Ed. 1070.

A claim covering "the combination of soft-metal pins or plugs with the driving gear of a grinding mill" is not infringed by the use of cast iron safety pins in such a combination.—(1894) Gates Iron Works v. Fraser, 153 U. S. 332, 14 S. Ct. 833, 38 L. Ed. 734, affirming decree (C. C.) 42 F. 49.

246. — Omission of elements.

A patent for a combination is not infringed by the use of any number of the parts less than the whole.—McMurray v. Mallory, 111 U. S. 97, 4 S. Ct. 375, 28 L. Ed. 865, affirming decree McMurray, Lang & Burnham v. D. D. Mallory & Co., 5 F. 693, 4 Hughes, 265; Rowell v. Lindsay, 113 U. S. 97, 5 S. Ct. 507, 28 L. Ed. 906, affirming decree 6 F. 290.

A patent for an improvement in washboards consisting of a protector located below the crown piece and between the side pieces of the frame, with springs attached to hold it in position, to permit it to yield to pressure, and to return it to position when the pressure is removed, and so constructed as to allow the protector to fold down into the frame, even with or below the general plane of the board, thus allowing it to be packed flat for shipment, by which less space is required, and the protector is not so liable to injury, is not infringed by a washboard having a protector rigidly fastened to the board, with no device to permit its yielding to pressure, and to return it to position, or to allow it to fold down upon the board, and which requires the detachment of the protector before it can be packed flat.—Sargent v. Burgess, 129 U. S. 19, 9 S. Ct. 220, 32 L. Ed. 604.

An applicant for a patent on swiveling casters for furniture first claimed a combination of three elements,—floor wheels, consisting of two rollers side by side, so as to roll on the floor instead of pivoting; the housing in which the wheels worked; and an antifriction wheel between and vertically above the floor wheels, so as to make the latter adapt themselves to irregularities in the floor, and touch at the same time. Upon the examiner's refusing a patent for want of novelty, the applicant limited the combination, and received a patent therefor, by making the housing opening elliptical, and adding a collar beneath the housing, sustaining the downward pressure at the heel of the housing, and a rocker-formed collar bearing, to permit freedom of oscillation. Held, that a caster with two floor wheels and two antifriction wheels, but without the collar, or the rocker-formed collar bearing, is no infringement.—Phoenix Caster Co. v. Spiegel, 133 U. S. 390, 10 S. Ct. 409, 33 L. Ed. 663.

Where a combination patent, if valid at all, is restricted, by the action of the patent office and the prior state of the art, to the specific elements indicated by the letters of reference to the drawings, there can be no infringement if a single element is omitted from the alleged infringing device; and, in determining whether an element is absent, the patentee is not entitled to the doctrine of equivalents.—Knapp v. Morse, 150 U. S. 221, 14 S. Ct. 81, 37 L. Ed. 1059.

In a patent for a portable chute for receiving coal from vessels, combination claims, which include a screen as one of the elements, are not infringed by an apparatus having no screen.—Black Diamond Coal Min. Co. v. Excelsior Coal Co., 156 U. S. 611, 15 S. Ct. 482, 39 L. Ed. 553.

247. — Addition of elements.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 388.

On trial of a claim against the United States based on a patent for "improvement in breech-loading firearms," it appeared that the patent was only for a combination, no single element of which was new; that it was intended for, and was successful only when used with, rim-fire cartridges; that the government uses only center-fire cartridges; that, in order to adapt his patent to such cartridges, the inventor added a new element, for which neither singly nor in combination did he take out a patent. Held, that, even if the government used the model presented to such board, there was no infringement.—United States v. Berdan Firearms Mfg. Co., 156 U. S. 552, 15 S. Ct. 420, 39 L. Ed. 530.

255. Making, repair of, or substitute for patented article.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 397, 398.

Plaintiffs owned patents for improvements in metallic cotton bale ties, each tie consisting of a buckle and a band. They granted no licenses to make the ties, but themselves made them and supplied the market. They stamped in the metal of the buckle the words "Licensed to use once only." Defendants bought as scrap iron the buckles and bands at the cotton mills, after the bands had been severed to release the bale, and rolled and straightened the pieces of the bands, and riveted together their ends, and cut them into proper length for ties, and sold them with the buckles to be used as ties, nothing being done to the buckles. Held, that defendants had infringed the patents.—American Cotton Tie Co. v. Simmons, 106 U. S. 89, 1 S. Ct. 52, 27 L. Ed. 79.

A dealer residing in the United States cannot purchase in another country articles patented there, from a person authorized to sell them, and import them to and sell them in the United States, without the license of the owners of the United States patent.—Boesch v. Graff, 133 U. S. 697, 10 S. Ct. 378, 33 L. Ed. 787, reversing decree (C. C.) Graff v. Boesch, 33 F. 279.

Ⓒ-259. Contributory infringement.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 400-402.

One who sells toilet paper in a form not patentable, for use with patented fixtures, which the owner of the patent only sells in connection with paper of his own preparation, does not infringe the patent which covers the fixture.—Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co., 152 U. S. 425, 14 S. Ct. 627, 38 L. Ed. 500.

Sale of ink to purchaser of a rotary mimeograph, sold with a license providing that it would be used only with ink supplied by the patentee, constitutes contributory infringement of the patent.—Henry v. A. B. Dick Co., 32 S. Ct. 364, 224 U. S. 1, 56 L. Ed. 645, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 880.

In an action at law for the infringement of a patent, the evidence disclosing the existence of no license fee, and no impairment of plaintiffs' market, and tending only to show plaintiffs' estimate of defendants' profits, it was error to instruct the jury to find more than nominal damages.—Coupe v. Royer, 155 U. S. 565, 15 S. Ct. 199, 39 L. Ed. 263, reversing judgment Royer v. Coupe (C. C.) 29 F. 358.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 240, 432-434.

In an action for the infringement of patent No. 121,385, issued November 28, 1871, to plaintiffs for an improvement in furnaces for smelting lead and other ores, defendant claimed that plaintiffs' invention was anticipated by a machine described in a former publication. There were obvious differences between the two machines in the arrangement of the separate parts, in the relation of the parts to each other, and in their mode of connection with each other, for the purpose of drawing the metal from the furnace, the function for which the machine was intended. Experts disagreed as to whether these differences were material to the result, and whether any improvement in plaintiffs' machine was the result of invention. Held, that these questions should have been left to the determination of the jury.—Keyes v. Grant, 118 U. S. 25, 6 S. Ct. 974, 30 L. Ed. 54.

When the question before the jury is whether a patent covers a patentable invention, it is proper to refuse an instruction that the fact that the patented article has practically superseded all others is strong evidence of its novelty.—Adams v. Bellaire Stamping Co., 141 U.

S. 539, 12 S. Ct. 66, 35 L. Ed. 849 (C. C.) affirming judgment 28 F. 360.

In an action to recover for the infringement of a patent, it is for the jury to determine, under proper definition by the court of the patented invention, as evidenced by the language of its claims, and also of the art or device employed by defendants, whether the first includes the second, so as to constitute an infringement of it by the latter.—Coupe v. Royer, 155 U. S. 565, 15 S. Ct. 199, 39 L. Ed. 263, reversing judgment Royer v. Coupe (C. C.) 29 F. 358.

Where, in a suit on a patent, it appears, by a comparison of the devices therein described with those of older patents in evidence, that the patented claims are not novel, the court should so instruct.—Market St. Cable Ry. Co. v. Rowley, 155 U. S. 621, 15 S. Ct. 224, 39 L. Ed. 284.

In an action against a county for infringing a patent for an improvement in jails, where want of patentability was alleged, and it appears that the invention was not in fact patentable, the direction of a verdict for defendant may be sustained upon that ground, although it was given on the grounds that plaintiff was not the owner of the patent, and that the county, being merely a political subdivision of the state, could not be sued for infringement.—May v. Juneau County, 137 U. S. 403, 11 S. Ct. 102, 34 L. Ed. 729, affirming judgment (C. C.) 30 F. 241.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. § 439.

Jurisdiction of a court of equity over a suit for the infringement of a patent is not defeated on the theory that because the contract between the patentee and his co-complainant conveyed only the patent rights to the machine, and not the process claimed in such patent, the court could not have ordered an injunction against the defendant, who was a mere user of the machine, since, the question as to what the contract provided being an issue in the case, preliminary relief by injunction could have been granted, pending the decision of such question. Judgment 16 App. D. C. 23, reversed.—Busch v. Jones, 22 S. Ct. 511, 184 U. S. 598, 46 L. Ed. 707.

Ⓒ-283. Defenses.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 448-450, 452.

Judgment for and payment of nominal damages upon a bill in equity by a patentee, without joining his licensee, against one who has made and sold a machine in violation of the patent, are no bar to a bill in equity by the patentee and licensee together, for the benefit of the licensee, against another person who afterwards uses the same machine.—Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 5 S. Ct. 244, 28 L. Ed. 768.

A patent for an improvement on an invention is not invalid because it includes the patented invention; and, though it may be an infringement of it, that fact will not avail a stranger, who is made defendant in a suit for infringing the patent on the improvement.—Cantrell v. Wallick, 117 U. S. 689, 6 S. Ct. 970, 29 L. Ed. 1017, affirming (C. C.) Wallicks v. Cantrell, 12 F. 790.

In a suit upon a single claim, which is restricted to an improvement in one particular device of a machine, no advantage can accrue to defendant by reason of the fact that some of the other claims include the remaining parts of the machine in combination with the device in question, thus constituting an organic whole.—Gordon v. Warder, 150 U. S. 47, 14 S. Ct. 322, 37 L. Ed. 992, affirming decree (C. C.) 38 F. 592.

Where a bill for infringement praying an injunction was filed within 29 days of the expiration of the patent by patentees who had invented the device while in the employ of defendant, and had permitted him to use the same for 17 years without complaint other than that he had failed to pay them royalties, held, that the bill was properly dismissed for want of equity.—Keyes v. Eureka Consol. Min. Co., 158 U. S. 150, 15 S. Ct. 772, 39 L. Ed. 929, affirming decree (C. C.) Same v. Eureka Consol. Mfg. Co., 45 F. 199.

Whether the process claim of the Jones patent, No. 404,414, for mixing molten metal, which, when read in connection with the specifications, clearly covered the product of blast furnaces, was intended to include the products of cupola furnaces as well, and is therefore invalid, need not be considered in a suit for infringement by the use of an apparatus for mixing molten metal taken from blast furnaces. Decree, Cambria Iron Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co. 37 C. C. A. 593, 96 F. 850, reversed.—Carnegie Steel Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 22 S. Ct. 693, 185 U. S. 403, 46 L. Ed. 968.

286. Persons entitled to sue.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 453-456.

A grant of the "sole right and privilege of manufacturing and selling" an article protected by a patent is simply a license to the grantee, conveying no interest in the patent, and an assignment thereof will not enable the assignee to maintain an action for damages or profits against infringers.—Hayward v. Andrews, 106 U. S. 672, 1 S. Ct. 544, 27 L. Ed. 271.

A cause of action for the infringement of a patent survives, upon the death of the patentee, to his representatives.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Turrill, 110 U. S. 301, 4 S. Ct. 5, 28 L. Ed. 154.

The legal owner of a patent may, in an action for infringement, recover damages, although a firm of which he is a member is engaged in making and selling the patented article.—Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 117 U. S. 536, 6 S. Ct. 934, 29 L. Ed. 954.

The mere fact that another than plaintiff has an interest in the license fees and recoveries under the patent sued on does not amount to such legal ownership in the patent as will defeat plaintiff's recovery of all gains and profits that defendants have made by infringement of the patent.—*Tilghman v. In a suit for infringement of a patent against United States officers, who used the patented article only for the benefit of the United States, a decree cannot be rendered against such officers for the gains and profits which accrued to the government from the use of such article.—*Belknap v. 288. Jurisdiction.

Where an injunction is applied for to restrain the infringement of a patent, and to recover damages and profits, and the case is one for equitable relief when the suit is instituted, the expiration of the patent soon after the commencement of the suit will not take away the jurisdiction, and preclude the court from proceeding to grant the incidental relief of damages and profits.—Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 7 S. Ct. 217, 30 L. Ed. 392.

Where a patent, having been issued 15 months before a bill for infringement is filed, has nearly 16 years to run, and the bill alleges that the public have generally acknowledged and acquiesced in the validity of the patent, and that the invention has been put in practice by the plaintiff, and has been of great utility, it is not necessary to show a recovery at law to warrant jurisdiction in equity for an injunction and account.—McCoy v. Nelson, 121 U. S. 484, 7 S. Ct. 1000, 30 L. Ed. 1017.

Where the patent was in force at the time the bill was filed, and the complainants were entitled to a preliminary injunction at that time, the jurisdiction of the court is not defeated by the expiration of the patent by lapse of time before final decree.—Beedle v. Bennett, 122 U. S. 71, 7 S. Ct. 1090, 30 L. Ed. 1074.

The Circuit Court of Appeals, in reversing an order of a circuit court granting upon ex parte affidavits a preliminary injunction in a suit for the infringement of a patent, should not dismiss the bill, where complainants apparently had no opportunity, previous to the hearing in the lower court, to inspect the affidavits filed by defendants, and were granted no leave to rebut them.—Brill v. Peckham Motor Truck & Wheel Co., 23 S. Ct. 562, 189 U. S. 57, 47 L. Ed. 708, reversing decree 108 F. 267, 47 C. C. A. 315, on rehearing 110 F. 377, 49 C. C. A. 87.

The nonpatentability of the infringed claim may be availed of as a defense without setting it up in the answer.—Hendy v. Golden State & Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. S. 370, 8 S. Ct. 1275, 32 L. Ed. 207.

On a bill for the infringement of a patent, an answer alleging that the device "had been made and in public use and on sale by sundry and divers persons for many years prior to plaintiff's application," and that for more than five years, and more than four years before the application for the patent, defendant had manufactured and sold the device of the pattern and design of the one filed, and no other, contains a sufficient notice of the defense of want of novelty and two years' public use, under Rev. St. § 4920 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3394], requiring such notices to state the names and residences of those alleged to have invented or to have had prior knowledge of the device.—Anderson v. Miller, 129 U. S. 70, 9 S. Ct. 224, 32 L. Ed. 635.

Where, in a suit for infringing a design patent, one of the claims of which was void for want of novelty, the other claims may be fairly construed to cover only the specific design set forth therein, a demurrer to the bill cannot be sustained for want of novelty in the claims, as the court cannot take judicial notice of prior designs which may have come under its observation, and which are supposed to show a want of novelty.—New York Belting & Packing Co. v. New Jersey Car Spring & Rubber Co., 137 U. S. 445, 11 S. Ct. 193, 34 L. Ed. 741.

An infringer who denies that the patented articles were marked "Patented," as required by the patent laws, and relies on a want of actual knowledge of the existence of the patent, should, in view of the fact that all patents are on record in the patent office, be required to aver want of knowledge in his answer.—Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 S. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 124.

Where a patent is invalid on its face the point may be raised on demurrer to the bill, and the case be determined on the issue so formed.—(1895) Richards v. Chase Elevator Co., 153 U. S. 209, 15 S. Ct. 831, 39 L. Ed. 991, affirming decree Same v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (C. C.) 40 F. 165, and rehearing denied 159 U. S. 477, 16 S. Ct. 53, 40 L. Ed. 225.

—311. — Issues, proof, and variance.

See 33 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 541, 542.

In a suit for the infringement of a patent, similar previous patents, although not set up in the answer, are receivable in evidence to show the state of the art, and aid in the construction of plaintiff's claim, although not to invalidate that claim on the ground of want of novelty.—Grier v. Wilt, 120 U. S. 412, 7 S. Ct. 718, 30 L. Ed. 712.

A patent was issued from which the signature of the secretary of the interior was omitted. Pending a suit for infringement, the omission was discovered, and the patent returned to the patent office, where the then acting secretary signed it as of its original date. Held, that defendant could impeach its validity without pleading the defense, though, when offered in evidence, there was no irregularity apparent on its face.—Marsh v. Nichols, Shepherd & Co., 123 U. S. 605, 9 S. Ct. 168, 32 L. Ed. 538, affirming decree Same v. Nichols, 15 F. 914.

Where, in an action for the infringement of a reissued patent, the complaint alleges that upon surrender of the original patent a new one was issued for the same invention, and the answer denies "each and every, all and singular," the allegations of the complaint, an issue is raised upon the question whether the reissue was for the same invention, and the original patent is admissible in evidence.—Oregon Imp. Co. v. Excelsior Coal Co., 132 U. S. 215, 10 S. Ct. 54, 33 L. Ed. 344.

—312. Evidence.

In a suit on reissued letters the file wrapper and contents in the matter of the reissue are part of the evidence.—Crawford v. Hey singer, 123 U. S. 599, 8 S. Ct. 399, 31 L. Ed. 269.

In a suit for infringement of letters No. 8,637, issued March 25, 1879, to John Bene, for an improvement in the process of refining and bleaching hair by a bath of a solution of a chlorine salt in an excess of muriatic acid, complainants offered no direct evidence that defendant used the patented process, but relied on the correspondence of defendant's article, in respect to smoothness, luster, and pliability, with the hair produced thereby. Defendant's expert produced several samples of hair, which he stated he had refined by the use of chemicals other than those named in the patent, as the result of 12 years' practice. Complainants' expert testified that defendant's article could not be produced except by treatment in a solution of chlorine salt and muriatic acid, or their chemical equivalents, and that he made experiments according to the methods described by defendant's expert, and found them failures, but that they were his first experiments. Held insufficient evidence of infringement.—Bene v. Jeantet, 129 U. S. 683, 9 S. Ct. 428, 32 L. Ed. 803.

A prior foreign publication containing a description of prior constructions is competent evidence in regard to the state of the art, and as a foundation for the inquiry whether it required any invention to pass from such prior structures to the patented structure.—French v. Carter, 137 U. S. 239, 11 S. Ct. 90, 34 L. Ed. 664, affirming decree (C. C.) 25 F. 41.

Plaintiff was properly allowed to show in rebuttal of defendant's principal evidence that he constructed a plow containing the elements of the claim of his patent, in accordance with which defendant's plows were made, before the date of the earliest patents offered by defendant on the question of novelty; this being a matter of rebuttal.—St. Paul Plow Works v. Starling, 140 U. S. 184, 11 S. Ct. 803, 35 L. Ed. 404, affirming judgment Starling v. St. Paul Plow Works (C. C.) 29 F. 790.

Evidence as to a prior use of a lever device, shown in plaintiff's patent, is, in the absence of an offer to prove that it was in a combination operating in the same way and for the same purpose as shown in the claim of plaintiff's patent, properly rejected as immaterial.—Id.

In an action for the infringement of patent No. 26,415, issued December 13, 1859, to Hezekiah Conant, antedated June 22, 1859, the testimony of Conant, the inventor, that he conceived of a machine in 1857, and made some patterns, but in the spring of 1858 he decided on another style of machine, which he completed during the summer,—to the best of his recollection, in July, 1858,—the part of his machine called the "traverse changer" being the same in the first set of drawings as finally used, is insufficient to show that prior to July 22, 1858, Conant had made his invention, especially as there was no claim in the patent for the traverse changer by itself, but only in combination with other things.—Clark Thread Co. v. Willmantic Linen Co., 140 U. S. 481, 11 S. Ct. 846, 35 L. Ed. 521, reversing decree Willmantic Thread Co. v. Clark Thread Co. (C. C.) 27 F. 865.

When an unpatented device is set up as an anticipation and the existence and use thereof rest entirely in the recollection of witnesses, the proofs must be clear, satisfactory, and beyond a reasonable doubt.—Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co. v. Beat 'Em All Barbed-Wire Co., 143 U. S. 275, 12 S. Ct. 443, 36 L. Ed. 154, reversing decree (C. C.) 33 F. 261.

Anticipation of a patented device must be proved by evidence so cogent as to leave no reasonable doubt in the mind of the court that the transaction occurred substantially as stated. Oral testimony, unsupported by patents or exhibits, is open to grave suspicion.—Deering v. Winona Harvester Works, 155 U. S. 286, 15 S. Ct. 118, 39 L. Ed. 153.

A patentee suing to recover from infringer profits, where noninfringing improvements have been added, discharges the burden by showing what part of the profits are due to his invention by proving profits, and the defendant must then carry the burden of separation.—(1912) Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Wagner Electric & Mfg. Co., 32 S. Ct. 691, 225 U. S. 604, 56 L. Ed. 1222, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 653, reversing decree (1909) 173 F. 361, 97 C. C. A. 621.

Where value of patented machine was attributable in part to unpatented features, the patentee must submit evidence calculated to effect an apportionment.—Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Minnesota Moline Plow Co., 35 S. Ct. 221, 235 U. S. 641, 59 L. Ed. 398, reversing decree 183 F. 314, 105 C. C. A. 528.

A patentee does not establish loss of profits by merely showing the number of sales made by the sellers of infringing machines.—Id.

In absence of an established royalty, the value of what was taken by infringing sales may be shown by proving what would have been a reasonable royalty.—Id.

314. Hearing.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 550-553.

In a proceeding to restrain infringement, where it appears that the letters patent in question are void because the device therein described is not patentable, it is proper for the court to dismiss the cause, whether the defense be made or not.—Slawson v. Grand St. P. P. & F. R. Co., 107 U. S. 649, 2 S. Ct. 663, 27 L. Ed. 576, affirming decree (C. C.) 4 F. 531.

Upon an issue involving the validity of a patent, evidence of prior public use, even though not properly pleaded as a defense, if admitted without objection, may be considered by the court upon the question of priority.—Zane v. Soffe, 110 U. S. 200, 3 S. Ct. 562, 28 L. Ed. 119, affirming decree Same v. Loffe (C. C.) 2 F. 229.

The original patent described and claimed only a collar with short or sectional bands; that is, a band along the lower edge of the collar, made in parts or sections, and having a graduated curve. The reissued patent, and claims 1 and 4 thereof, were so framed as to cover a continuous band, with a graduated curve, but not in sections. The defendants' collars were brought into the market after the original patent was issued, and before the reissue was applied for; and the reissue was obtained to cover those collars, and, although it was applied for only a little over three months after the date of the original patent, there was no inadvertence or mistake, so far as the short or sectional bands were concerned, and it was sought merely to enlarge the claim. Claim 2 of the reissue was substantially the same as the single claim of the original patent, and claim 3 had as an element short bands. As the defendants' collars had a continuous band, with a graduated curve, and not short or sectional bands, and did not infringe the claim of the original patent, or claims 2 and 3 of the reissue, and claims 1 and 4 thereof were invalid, the bill was dismissed.—Coon v. Wilson, 5 S. Ct. 537, 113 U. S. 268, 28 L. Ed. 963.

In a suit for the infringement of a second patent alone, the device described in the prior patent, of which plaintiff has become the sole owner, must be considered, on the assessment of damages, as one of those which it was open to defendant to use instead of that described in the patent sued on; for to hold otherwise would assume that the prior patent was owned by plaintiff, was valid, and that defendant had infringed it, which are questions that cannot be raised on the assessment of damages for the infringement of the second patent.—McCreary v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 141 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 40, 35 L. Ed. 817, affirming decree (C. C.) McCrery v. Same, 5 F. 367.

315. Rehearing.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 554-558.

A decree by which the supreme court reverses a decree dismissing a patent infringement suit for want of novelty, and holds that the patent is valid and infringed, finally disposes of these questions, so that the circuit court has thereafter no authority to grant a rehearing on the ground of newly-discovered evidence on the question of novelty.—In re Potts, 17 S. Ct. 520, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. Ed. 994.

317. Permanent injunction.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 559-565.

In a case of clear infringement, complainant is entitled to an injunction, although his damages are found to be merely nominal, and although defendant is able to accomplish the same result by a different method.—Du Bois v. Kirk, 158 U. S. 58, 15 S. Ct. 729, 39 L. Ed. 895, affirming Kirk v. Du Bois (C. C.) 33 F. 252 and 46 F. 486.

318. Profits.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 566-576.

Damages cannot be recovered on account of the infringement of a patent for a mere improvement, unless the patentee shows that the entire value of the device is due to his improvement, or distinguishes by his proofs the profits arising out of his improvement from those ascribable to the device improved upon.—Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 120, 4 S. Ct. 291, 28 L. Ed. 371.

Where the difference in the proportion of fatty acids used in the patented process and the old process, which the infringers might have used, does not affect the commercial value of the product, nothing should be deducted for a loss of fatty acids, by the patented process, in computing the gains and profits made by the in-fringers of this process.—Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 8 S. Ct. 894, 31 L. Ed. 664.

Plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount of gains and profits that defendants have made by the use of his process, although he has established license fees.—Id.

The profits allowed in equity for the injury a patentee has sustained by the infringement of his process cannot bear interest, except from the time the master's report is submitted showing the amount due.—Id.

Where the defendant's machine or article derives its entire marketable value from the use of plaintiff's invention, the measure of damages is the entire profit made by defendant.—Hurlbut v. Schillinger, 130 U. S. 456, 9 S. Ct. 584, 32 L. Ed. 1011.

In estimating the profits of a defendant who has used a patent for a mere improvement upon a previously patented device, plaintiff is limited to such profits as have arisen from the use of the improvement over what defendant might have made by the use of that or other devices without such improvement. This rule applies where plaintiff is owner of both patents, but sues only on the patent for the improvement.—McCreary v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 141 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 40, 35 L. Ed. 817, affirming decree McCreary v. Pennsylvania Canal Co. (C. C.) 5 F. 367.

When only the profits made by one infringing a patent are awarded as damages, it is immaterial in the calculation thereof whether or not the owner of the patent was using the invention in articles sold by him.—Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co. v. Consolidated Safety Valve Co., 141 U. S. 441, 12 S. Ct. 49, 35 L. Ed. 809, affirming decree (C. C.) Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co., 44 F. 66.

In the calculation of profits made on an infringing article, the manufacturer thereof is not entitled to deduct the cost of certain experimental articles of the same kind made by him, and afterwards destroyed without being offered for sale, as this was a loss incurred through his unlawful invasion of the patentee's rights.—Id.

When, in view of the prior state of the art, the entire commercial value of an infringing article is due to the use of the infringing feature, the profits awarded as damages should be calculated with reference to the entire infringing article, notwithstanding that it is made under a patent showing an additional feature, which feature, however, is not covered by the claims thereof.—Id.

It appearing that, before the issuance of letters patent No. 128,925 to Charles A. Taylor, for a metallic trunk fastener, the method universally used for fastening trunk lids, in aid of the lock, was by means of straps, buckles, and dowels, and that defendant had only manufactured the infringing fasteners for use on trunks made by him, the measure of damages is the difference in cost between the fasteners of the straps, buckles, and dowels formerly used.—Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 S. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609, reversing decree (C. C.) 21 F. 124.

The profits realized by an infringer from the patented device as a part of machines made and sold by him, containing other devices contributing to his profits, cannot be estimated from proof of the profits of other manufacturers from the sale of similar devices in similar machines.—Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 L. Ed. 103, reversing decree (C. C.) Adams v. Keystone Mfg. Co., 35 F. 579, and 41 F. 595.

When the infringer's profits are taken as the measure of damages, he should not be allowed interest on the value of the plant used in producing the infringing article, if the same was also used for other business, and there is no evidence on which a satisfactory apportionment can be made.—Seabury & Johnson v. Am Ende, 152 U. S. 561, 14 S. Ct. 683, 38 L. Ed. 553, affirming decree (C. C.) Am Ende v. Seabury 36 F. 593, and 43 F. 672.

No deduction should be allowed to an infringing corporation for services of its president, where it is not shown that any compensation was paid him.—Id.

In an action for infringement on a patent for stove grates, it appeared that the patented grate was for ordinary stoves, and was entirely new and patentable, both in all its parts and as an entirety; that defendants consented to a decree which precluded them from contending that complainant was to be restricted, in his demand for damages, to any one feature or part of the grate; and that the grates on which profits were assessed were not sold as an incident to any particular stove, but as independent, marketable articles. Held, that complainant was properly awarded the entire profits on the grates so sold.—Warren v. Keep, 155 U. S. 265, 15 S. Ct. 83, 39 L. Ed. 144.

Such part only of commingled profits as are attributable to the use of his invention can be recovered by a patentee against an infringer who has added valuable improvements.—(1912) Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Wagner Electric & Mfg. Co., 32 S. Ct. 691, 225 U. S. 604, 56 L. Ed. 1222, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 653, reversing decree (1909) 173 F. 361, 97 C. C. A. 621.

Only nominal damages will be allowed for the infringement of a patent where it appears that other methods in common use produce the same results with equal facility and cost.—Black v. Thorne, 111 U. S. 122, 4 S. Ct. 326, 28 L. Ed. 372.

In a suit in equity for the infringement of a patent for a design for carpets, no profits were found to have been made by defendant, and there was no evidence as to the value imparted to the carpet by the design. Held, that only nominal damages should have been allowed.—Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 114 U. S. 439, 5 S. Ct. 945, 29 L. Ed. 177, reversing decree (C. C.) Bigelow Carpet Co. v. Dobson, 10 F. 385.

Where the plaintiff, the owner of a patent for an improvement in combination locks, granted no licenses, but sold locks made by himself containing the invention, a reduction of prices and consequent loss of profits on the whole of each lock, enforced by infringing competition, is a proper element of damages.—Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Sargent, 117 U. S. 536, 6 S. Ct. 934, 29 L. Ed. 954.

Plaintiff made a certain percentage of profit on the manufacture and sale of carpets containing a patented design. Defendant's carpets, alleged to infringe the said patent, were far inferior, in quality and market value, to those of the plaintiff. There was no satisfactory evidence that those who bought the defendant's carpets would have bought those of plaintiff, or that the design added anything to defendant's price, or helped him to sell his carpets; and none to show what part of defendant's price was to be attributed to the design. Held, that it could not be presumed that defendant's carpets displaced those of plaintiff to the extent of defendant's sales, and that an award, as damages, of the entire profit which plaintiff would have received from the sale of an equal quantity of his own carpets of the same pattern, was improper.—Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 S. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63.

The amount of the royalty charged and paid for the use of the invention may be taken as the measure of damages for an infringement.—Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 7 S. Ct. 217, 30 L. Ed. 392.

Where complainants have failed to establish a royalty as measure of damages, and no evidence of the value of the invention to defendants is adduced, except the conjectural estimates of witnesses who had no practical knowledge of the subject, a decree for anything more than nominal damages cannot be sustained.—Rude v. Westcott, 130 U. S. 152, 9 S. Ct. 463, 32 L. Ed. 888.

In order that a royalty may be accepted as a measure of damages against an infringer who is a stranger to the license establishing it, it must be paid or secured before the infringement complained of; it must be paid by such a number of persons as to indicate a general acquiescence in its reasonableness by those who have occasion to use the invention; and it must be uniform at the places where the licenses are issued.—Id.

Where, on an accounting for infringement, it appears that the complainant has gradually reduced the prices of his patented article from the time his sales commenced down to the time defendant began to compete, and that the reduction continued after defendant was enjoined, the reduction of prices alleged to result from the competition of defendant is conjectural, and damages therefor cannot be allowed.—Cornely v. Marckwald, 131 U. S. 159, 9 S. Ct. 744, 33 L. Ed. 117, affirming decree (C. C.) 32 F. 292.

The sum for which an owner of a patent has settled actions against each of 10 infringers is not a standard by which to measure the damages in an action against another infringer, as the acceptance of such sums does not amount to a price as for a fixed royalty.—Id.

In a suit for infringement of a patent on lamp burners, the evidence showed that complainants, during the time of the infringement, sold 6,000 of the burners, after reducing the price, and that defendants sold only 114 of them. In competition with complainants, defendants sold various other kinds of burners, not protected by complainants' patent. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to show that the reduction of price by complainants was caused by defendants' infringement, and they should recover only for the profits made by defendants in the infringing sales.—Boesch v. Graff, 133 U. S. 697, 10 S. Ct. 378, 33 L. Ed. 787, reversing decree (C. C.) Graff v. Boesch, 33 F. 279.

When damages are awarded for infringement of a patent, interest should be allowed thereon from the date of filing of the master's report, whereby the amount of damages was ascertained.—Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co. v. Consolidated Safety Valve Co., 141 U. S. 441, 12 S. Ct. 49, 35 L. Ed. 809, affirming decree (C. C.) Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co., 44 F. 66, and following Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Turrill, 110 U. S. 301, 4 S. Ct. 5, 28 L. Ed. 154, and Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 8 S. Ct. 894, 31 L. Ed. 664.

The fact that defendants, at the time they made and sold grates which infringed on plaintiff's patent, made and sold at the same price another kind of grate, did not limit complainant's right of recovery to nominal damages.—Warren v. Keep, 155 U. S. 265, 15 S. Ct. 83, 39 L. Ed. 144.

321. Interlocutory decree.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 588, 589.

A design patent contained 19 claims,—a claim for the entire pattern and separate claims for each of its 18 component parts. Held that, after a decree pro confesso, on a bill alleging infringement of the "invention," the patent would be valid for the purposes of the suit.—Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 114 U. S. 439, 5 S. Ct. 945, 29 L. Ed. 177, reversing decree (C. C.) Bigelow Carpet Co. v. Dobson, 10 F. 385.

An objection that a patent for a design is for an aggregation of old ornaments, and embodies no "invention," is concluded, where the bill alleges infringement of the "invention," and is taken as confessed.—Id.

An interlocutory decree, which awards a recovery for profits and damages from the infringement of a design for a carpet, and orders an account of the profits from infringing by the "manufacture, use, and sale of carpeting" bearing the design, and of the damages caused by reason of the infringement, only awards the profits and damages resulting from the infringement.—Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 S. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63.

323. Final decree.

A final decree of a federal Circuit Court in favor of defendant in a patent infringement suit entitles him to continue the business of manufacturing and selling throughout the United States the alleged infringing article, free from all interference by the complainant by virtue of the patent alleged to have been infringed.—Kessler v. Eldred, 27 S. Ct. 611, 206 U. S. 285, 51 L. Ed. 1065.

Defendant's rights under a final decree in his favor rendered by a federal Circuit Court in a patent infringement suit are violated by the action of the complainant therein in thereafter filing a bill against one of the former's customers for an alleged infringement of the patent on account of the use or sale of the same article passed upon in the prior suit.—Id.

A decree enjoining the infringement of a patent for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels, which has been held invalid in other federal circuits, need not go further than to except from its operation the handling, using, or selling of tires and rims authorized by the decrees invalidating the patent, and may reserve until the question properly arises on the facts the determination of the defendant's right to handle or sell other tires or rims throughout those circuits.—(1911) Diamond Rubber Co. of New York v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., 31 S. Ct. 444, 220 U. S. 428, 55 L. Ed. 527, affirming decree (1908) Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. v. Diamond Rubber Co. of New York, 162 F. 892, 89 C. C. A. 582.

After a decree pro confesso the supreme court cannot, on appeal, say, as to a question raised by the defendant upon the allegation of the bill referring to the reissue of letters patent, and as to the validity of such reissue upon the complainant's own statement of the original patents being confirmed in numerous suits, as a mere matter of law, what effect such suits had to show that the original letters patent were valid and operative.—Thomson v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104, 5 S. Ct. 788, 29 L. Ed. 105.

In a suit for the infringement of a patent for a design for carpeting, exhibits of the patented design, and of the carpet alleged to be an infringement, were produced, and there was testimony, although contradicted, that the ordinary observer could not tell any difference between the carpets. The exhibits were not produced on appeal. Held, that a finding of infringement would not be disturbed.—Dobson v. Dornan, 118 U. S. 10, 6 S. Ct. 946, 30 L. Ed. 63.

Where, upon an appeal from a judgment enjoining the infringement of a patent, neither the bill nor the proofs show anything from which the court can infer that a reissue of the patent was illegally granted, and the allegation of the answer, that it was reissued for the sole purpose of expanding the claim, is unsupported by evidence, the court will presume that the reissue was legal.—Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 7 S. Ct. 217, 30 L. Ed. 392.

Upon appeal from a circuit court of the United States to the supreme court, in a suit for infringement of a patent, one of several appellants, plaintiffs below, cannot have the appeal dismissed, against the objection of the others, upon the ground that the supreme court of the state, in a suit between the same parties, has enjoined the appellants from making any claim against the appellee for use of the patented invention.—Marsh v. Nichols, 120 U. S. 598, 7 S. Ct. 704, 30 L. Ed. 796.

Where a bill for infringement of a patent has been heard and decided on its merits, the plaintiff can only file a disclaimer on a rehearing granted upon such terms as the court sees fit to impose, and its action in regard thereto is not a subject of appeal.—Roemer v. Neumann, 132 U. S. 103, 10 S. Ct. 12, 33 L. Ed. 277.

Though the evidence in an infringement suit would have warranted an increase of damages, a decree refusing such increase will not be reversed where actual damages were awarded, and it appears that the infringer carried on the business without profit to himself.—Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U. S. 156, 12 S. Ct. 825, 36 L. Ed. 658.

Concurrent findings of the courts below that the Liddell patent No. 558,969, for an improvement in paper bag machines, which combines a rotary cylinder with a forming plate oscillating about its rear edge upon the surface of the cylinder, is a broad invention, and is infringed by a machine in which the surface of the cylinder is depressed away from the forming plate, while the patent adopts the device of causing the pivot or axis of the forming plate to yield away from the cylinder, will not be disturbed by the federal Supreme Court on certiorari, as clearly erroneous. Decree (1906) 150 F. 741, 80 C. C. A. 407, affirmed.—Continental Paper Bag Co. v. Eastern Paper Bag Co., 28 S. Ct. 748, 210 U. S. 405, 52 L. Ed. 1122.

Defenses of anticipation and want of infringement will not ordinarily be passed on by the Supreme Court on certiorari to a Circuit Court of Appeals to review an order granting a preliminary injunction.—Leeds & Catlin Co. v. Victor Talking Mach. Co., 29 S. Ct. 495, 213 U. S. 301, 53 L. Ed. 805, affirming decree (1906) Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. Leeds & Catlin Co., 148 F. 1022, 79 C. C. A. 536, which affirmed order (C. C. 1906) Same v. Talk-O-Phone Co., 146 F. 534.

Whether or not inventions covered by claims of patent in suit were exhibited in an expired foreign patent will not be considered by the Supreme Court on certiorari to a Circuit Court of Appeals to review a preliminary injunction, where the question is largely of fact, and pertains rather to evidence than to construction of the patents.—Id.

Decrees for nominal damages only will be reversed for a new hearing where owing to conflicting decisions on the subject of apportionment of profits the evidence afforded was insufficient to permit a proper adjustment of the merits.—Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. Minnesota Moline Plow Co., 35 S. Ct. 221, 235 U. S. 641, 59 L. Ed. 398, reversing decree 183 F. 314, 105 C. C. A. 526.

See 38 Cent. Dig. Pat. §§ 607-612.

In a suit in equity for infringement of a patent for a design, the master reported no profits and nominal damages. On exception by plaintiff, the circuit court allowed a sum for damages, but the supreme court reversed this decree. Held, that plaintiff should be allowed costs in the circuit court, to and including the interlocutory decree, and defendant be allowed his costs after such decree.—Dobson v. Hartford Carpet Co., 114 U. S. 439, 5 S. Ct. 945, 29 L. Ed. 177, reversing decree (C. C.) Bigelow Carpet Co. v. Dobson, 10 F. 385.

—327. Operation and effect of decision.

Where, in a suit to restrain the infringement of a reissued patent, a decree pro confesso is entered establishing the validity of the patent sued on, defendant is thereafter precluded from setting up that the reissued patent was for a different invention from that set up in the original patent, or from setting up a delay in applying for the reissue.—Thomson v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104, 5 S. Ct. 788, 29 L. Ed. 105.

A circuit court of appeals is not bound to affirm an order of a circuit court which, upon the ground of comity, followed the decision of the circuit court of appeals of another circuit with reference to the validity and scope of a patent, but may investigate the matter of the validity and scope of the patent for itself, since comity is not a rule of law, but simply a rule of expediency. Decree, Stover Mfg. Co. v. Mast, Foos & Co., 89 F. 333, 32 C. C. A. 231, affirmed.—Mast, Foos & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co., 20 S. Ct. 708, 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. Ed. 856.

A decree of a federal Circuit Court of Appeals denying patentability to the Grant patent, No. 554,675, for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels, does not work an estoppel in favor of one not a party to the suit so as to afford him a defense against a charge of infringement, the patent being afterwards upheld by the Supreme Court, in making such wheels by assembling the various elements because he bought one element, namely, the rubber, from the defendant in the first suit.—Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 34 S. Ct. 403, 232 U. S. 413, 58 L. Ed. 663, modifying decree 183 F. 978, 106 C. C. A. 318.

Defendant's rights under the final decree in a patent infringement suit denying patentability to the Grant patent, No. 554,675, for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels, are not violated by the action of complainants in bringing suit after the patent had been upheld by the federal Supreme Court against defendant's customers who bought from it its rubber tires, purchasing from others certain elements, and thereafter made the patented combination by assembling its various elements.—Id.

A decree dismissing for want of equity a suit for infringement of the Grant patent, No. 554,675, for an improvement in rubber-tired wheels, affords no defense to defendant's customers against a charge of contributory infringement; the patent having been afterwards upheld by the federal Supreme Court, based on the purchase of rubber from the defendant and the other elements from other parties, and the resale of these various elements to be assembled by the purchasers into the patented structure.—Woodward Co. v. Hurd, 34 S. Ct. 409, 232 U. S. 428, 58 L. Ed. 670, answering certified questions Seim v. Same, 34 S. Ct. 406, 232 U. S. 420, 58 L. Ed. 667.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. § 39.

Congress has the constitutional power to make the treasury notes of the United States a legal tender in payment of private debts in time of peace as well as in time of war.—Legal-Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 4 S. Ct. 122, 28 L. Ed. 204.

The acts of congress making notes of the United States a legal tender do not apply to involuntary contributions exacted by a state, such as assessments upon property for local improvements, but only to obligations for the payment of money founded on contracts, express or implied.—Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 4 S. Ct. 683, 28 L. Ed. 569, affirming (C. C.) Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Hagar, 4 F. 366.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 33, 40, 41, 49, 53; 6 Cent. Dig. Banks, §§ 347, 348, 590; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, §§ 753-760.

A creditor who receives negotiable certificates of indebtedness of the debtor for the amount of his debt, and sells them for their market value to a third person, cannot sue the debtor on the original debt.—Looney v. District of Columbia, 113 U. S. 258, 5 S. Ct. 463, 28 L. Ed. 974.

Where the board of public works of the District of Columbia fixed the rates in the bills rendered for work done under a contract so as to raise the aggregate to a sum for which the District bonds paid would be an equivalent to a payment for the work in cash, because the bonds were below par and it was illegal to pay at less than par, the court will not allow that to be done indirectly which cannot be done directly, and the payment of bonds will be taken as cash payment of the amount of their face value, on account.—Shipman v. District of Columbia, 119 U. S. 148, 704, 7 S. Ct. 134, 30 L. Ed. 337.

Payments actually received by state officers in pursuance of a state statute are not void because made in state treasury warrants which had been illegally issued in violation of constitutional provisions against issuing warrants to circulate as money or against bills of credit, or because they were issued in aid of the Rebellion, even if the offer of the state to receive them was not binding while unexecuted.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 33, 42-54, 59-61, 123; 33 Cent. Dig. Land. & Ten. § 851.

Under Act Cong. May 31, 1878, c. 146 (20 Stat. 87 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2397]), which enacts that notes of the United States, issued during the war of the Rebellion, under acts of congress declaring them to be a legal tender in payment of private debts, and since the close of the war redeemed and paid in gold coin at the treasury, shall be reissued and kept in circulation, notes so reissued are a legal tender.—Legal Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 4 S. Ct. 122, 28 L. Ed. 204.

Contracts between residents in the Confederate states during the Civil War, not designed to aid the Rebellion, payable in Confederate money, will be enforced by reducing the nominal amount due to its value in lawful money of the United States at the time and place where such contracts were made.—Effinger v. Kenney, 115 U. S. 566, 6 S. Ct. 179, 29 L. Ed. 495.

United States currency at the rate of exchange prescribed by Congress in Act April 12, 1900, c. 191, § 11, 31 Stat. 77, 80, and not at the rate of $1 for each peso of indebtedness, must be accepted in discharge of the obligation on account of a purchase in 1894 of a plantation in Porto Rico, which was to be satisfied with money current in the province at the rate of 100 centavos for each peso, since this provision evidently contemplated only such change in coins as might occur while Porto Rico remained under the same political power.—Serralles' Succession v. Esbri, 26 S. Ct. 176, 200 U. S. 103, 50 L. Ed. 391.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 55, 56.

Where the personal representatives have accepted payment of purchase money bonds due the decedent in depreciated Confederate currency, that being the only circulating medium to be had in their neighborhood, and have distributed the proceeds to their heirs, the latter, after accepting the distribution and acquiescing in the transaction for 15 years, are concluded by laches from disputing the validity of the payment of the bonds, in the absence of anything to show that it was not made in good faith.—Washington v. Opie, 145 U. S. 214, 12 S. Ct. 822, 36

L. Ed. 680, reversing decree (D. C.) Opie v. Castelman, 32 F. 511.

626. Payment by application of collateral security.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. § 32.

An agreement recited that W.'s stock of goods was sold and conveyed to F. & Co., "with power forthwith, at such times and in such manner as" they "shall deem best, to sell and collect and convert the said goods, wares," etc., "into money, and apply the proceeds" to the payment of W.'s indebtedness. Evidence was admitted to show that at the date of the agreement the value of the stock was about $85,000, but it appeared that all F. & Co. realized from it and credited on W.'s indebtedness when they took charge of the stock, a year later, was $27,343. Held, that the latter amount was all that W. was entitled to credit for.—Goodwin v. Fox, 9 S. Ct. 367, 129 U. S. 601, 32 L. Ed. 805.

A farm conveyed by W. to F. & Co., as security for his indebtedness to them, was subsequently mortgaged by F., assignee of F. & Co.'s rights under the agreement, to a third person, for $12,000. Held, that W. was properly credited with the amount of the mortgage debt and interest, though the mortgagee was not a party to the suit.—Id.

An agreement conveyed to F. & Co. absolutely, and without any clause of defeasance, the lot on which W.'s store was situated, the proceeds realized by F. & Co. from a sale of the lot to be applied to the payment of W.'s indebtedness. Thereafter, in 1875, F. & Co. sold it to F. for $8,000, which was its then fair value. Held, that $8,000, with interest from the date of the sale to F., was the amount for which W. was entitled to credit, and not the value of the lot at the time of suit, several years later.—Id.

630. Payment in goods or specific articles.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 4, 34, 35.

Where, in settlement of a debt, an order was given for 25 wagons on the agreement that they were to be received in payment if delivered in merchantable order, and that the creditor should sell them for the highest price practicable, and that the surplus, after paying the debt and expenses of sale, should be refunded to the debtor, the acceptance by the creditor of 21 wagons, though not in good and merchantable condition, operated a discharge of the debt pro tanto.—Winchester & Partridge Mfg. Co. v. Funge, 109 U. S. 651, 3 S. Ct. 436, 27 L. Ed. 1064.

III. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

652. Payment by third person.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. § 135.

Where a person agrees to pay the debts of another, which are liens upon the debtor's estate, and makes an arrangement whereby the creditors are satisfied, and takes an assignment of the liens to himself, such settlement of them is in substance and effect a payment, and the debtor cannot complain.—Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 406, 5 S. Ct. 213, 28 L. Ed. 733.

IV. PLEADING, EVIDENCE, TRIAL, AND REVIEW.

Parol or extrinsic evidence, see Evidence, 408.

660. Requisites and sufficiency of plea or answer.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 144-148.

Under Code, § 2891, providing that, "where suits are brought in the name of the person having the legal right, for the use of another, the beneficiary must be considered as the sole party in the record," a plea of payment in such a suit, which does not allege a payment to the beneficial plaintiff, or to the person holding the legal title before the former acquired his right, is bad on demurrer.—Mobile & M. Ry. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584, 4 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 527.

The lapse of 20 years after judgment rendered raises the presumption that the debt has been satisfied; and the presumption is no weaker when the suit is brought against the administrator than when against the debtor in his lifetime.—Gaines v. Miller, 111 U. S. 395, 4 S. Ct. 426, 28 L. Ed. 466.

The time during which the statutes of limitation were suspended by Const. Conv. Ala. 1865, Ord. No. 5, § 2, is not to be deducted from the period of 20 years, the lapse of which raises the presumption of payment and satisfaction, and creates a positive bar.—Philippi v. Philippe, 115 U. S. 151, 5 S. Ct. 1181, 29 L. Ed. 336.

669. Admissibility of evidence.

After a bank went into voluntary liquidation, several creditors took in payment of their claims commercial paper belonging to the bank, with the bank's guaranty of payment, which paper was not paid. The president of the bank testified that such paper was received by the bank's creditors in full payment of their demands. Held, that the claims of such creditors must be considered paid.—Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 7 S. Ct. 788, 30 L. Ed. 864, affirming decree (C. C.) Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 27 F. 591.

A partnership, engaged in the milling business, entered into a contract for the purchase of machinery from plaintiff, agreeing to pay part cash, and to give its notes for the balance. During the time in which the machinery was being furnished, the partnership was transformed into a corporation. After the delivery of the machinery, the president and secretary of the milling corporation executed the notes for the deferred payments, signing them with their own names. Plaintiff objected to the form of these notes, and requested that they be signed in the name of the corporation, and that a policy of insurance on the mill be assigned to it as security, stating that no liability attached on the notes beyond the property of the corporation. These requests were complied with, and thereafter plaintiff had one of the notes discounted, and treated the matter as closed for more than a year. Held, that these facts were sufficient to sustain a finding that the notes of the milling corporation were accepted by plaintiff as payment and satisfaction of the original liability under the contract.—Case Mfg. Co. v. Soxman, 138 U. S. 431, 11 S. Ct. 360, 34 L. Ed. 1019.

74. — Receipts.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Paymt. §§ 138, 139, 226-231; 32 Cent. Dig. Land. & Ten. § 856.

A receipt in full on receiving payment of a claim, as reduced by the secretary of war, is a bar to any further demand, when there is no allegation that it was given in ignorance of its purport, or under circumstances amounting to duress.—De Arnaud v. United States, 151 U. S. 483, 14 S. Ct. 374, 38 L. Ed. 244.

By Act June 6, 1872, § 39, this provision was repealed, and the commissioner of internal revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, was authorized to pay such sums as he deemed necessary, not exceeding the amount appropriated, for detecting and bringing to trial persons guilty of violating the internal revenue laws. Held, that one who gave information before the repeal of a violation for which a compromise sum was agreed upon, and paid after the repeal, had no right to an informer's share.—United States v. Connor, 11 S. Ct. 229, 138 U. S. 61, 34 L. Ed. 860.

It is no defense to a prosecution for taking illegal fees, under Act Cong. June 20, 1878 relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases, instituted after the repeal of that act by the act of July 4, 1884, that the repealing act contained no reservation of the right to punish for offenses committed prior to the repeal. Rev. St. § 13 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 6], provides that "the repeal of any statute shall not have the effect to release or extinguish any penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred under such statutes, unless the repealing act shall so expressly provide, and such statute shall be treated as remaining in force, for the purpose of sustaining any proper action or prosecution for the enforcement of such penalty, forfeiture, or liability."—*United States v. ◀10. Payment, checks, and vouchers.

The right of the United States to recover back moneys paid to a bank on pension checks bearing the forged indorsements of the payees is not conditioned either upon demand or the giving of notice of the discovery of the forgeries, since the bank, by presenting the checks for payment, warranted their genuineness, and the United States, cannot, especially in view of the provisions of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4764, 4765 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3284, 3285), contemplating departmental regulations for establishing the identity of pensioners, be charged with knowledge of their signatures. Under Act June 27, 1890, § 4, 26 Stat. 182 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3230], providing that any agent, attorney, or other person engaged in preparing, etc., a claim for a pension, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor for receiving therefor more than $10, it is immaterial what was defendant's regular business; and it is enough to charge that "defendant then and there being a person engaged in preparing, presenting, and prosecuting a claim for pension" in behalf of a certain person.—Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 15 S. Ct. 586, 39 L. Ed. 657.

An indictment under Act June 27, 1890, 26 Stat. 182 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3230], making it a misdemeanor for one prosecuting a claim for a pension to receive or retain more than $10 for services, alleging that defendant received more than $10, "the exact amount thereof being to the jurors unknown," is sufficient.—Id.

Under Act June 27, 1890, § 4, 26 Stat. 182 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3230], declaring it a misdemeanor for any one prosecuting a claim for a pension to retain for his services more than $10, it is immaterial that the claim was not successfully prosecuted, or that the person for whom the claim was prosecuted was not a pensioner.—Id.

The fact that no demand was made on one who received for his services more than $10 to return the excess does not affect the question of his guilt.—Id.

In Rev. St. § 4786, as amended by Act July 4, 1884, c. 181, § 4 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3298], declaring guilty of a misdemeanor any agent or attorney or other person instrumental in prosecuting a claim for a pension who shall wrongfully withhold from the pensioner the whole or any part of the pension due the latter, the word "withhold" does not refer to the fraudulent obtaining of money from a pensioner, but to the withholding of the money before it reaches the hands of the pensioner, and passes under his dominion and absolute control.—Ballew v. United States, 160 U. S. 187, 16 S. Ct. 263, 40 L. Ed. 388.

On the issue of fraud in obtaining a pension, which had been granted to defendant upon his representation that his disability resulted from disease incurred in the war, the uncontradicted evidence showed that defendant, upon entering the war, was strong and healthy; that he contracted disease during the war, was confined for a time in a hospital, and returned home, after his discharge, in very bad health; and that subsequently he suffered a stroke of paralysis, by which he was still afflicted. Two witnesses testified that, after defendant's return from the war, they had seen him thrown from his wagon; and there was evidence to the effect that the paralysis appeared soon afterwards, and that it was the general speech of the community that it resulted from the accident. The defendant denied the occurrence of such accident. It was also shown, by medical testimony, that such an accident might have caused paralysis much more readily in one of defendant's condition at the time it was alleged to have occurred than in a healthy person. Held, that the evidence did not warrant a finding that the pension was obtained by fraudulent representations of the defendant.—Laloue v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 74, 164 U. S. 255, 41 L. Ed. 425.

False swearing in a land contest before the local land office in respect to a homestead entry constitutes perjury, within Rev. St. § 5392 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3653], for, although such a contest is not specifically authorized by statute, it is provided for by the rules of the land department under a general grant of authority to prescribe appropriate regulations for the disposition of the public lands, and has frequently been recognized by acts of congress.—Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 14 S. Ct. 513, 38 L. Ed. 415.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 27-35.

Under Rev. St. § 5392 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3653], defining perjury as a false oath "before a competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any case in which a law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered," the offense is not committed by a bank cashier who makes false returns of the condition of his bank to the comptroller of the currency under oath taken before a notary public, for, prior to Act Cong. Feb. 26, 1881, 21 Stat. 352 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3499], notaries public had no authority under the laws of the United States to administer oaths.—United States v. Curtis, 107 U. S. 671, 2 S. Ct. 507, 27 L. Ed. 534.

Prior to the passage of Act Feb. 26, 1881, 21 Stat. 352 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3499], authorizing notaries public to administer the oath required to be appended to reports of the condition of national banks to be made by its president or cashier and filed with the comptroller, under Rev. St. § 5211 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3498], a notary public had no authority to administer such oath, and hence a false report sworn to before a notary public by the president of a national bank is not sufficient to sustain an indictment against him for perjury.—Id.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 33-54.

A charge of perjury cannot be based upon false statements as to residence and cultivation in an affidavit of a homestead claimant under a regulation of the Land Department adopted pursuant to Rev. St. §§ 161, 441-453, 2478 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 80, 252-257, 1536], conferring administrative powers, or of section 2246 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1371], since these sections do not justify any additions to the requirements of section 2291 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1390], that cultivation and residence be proved by two credible witnesses.—United States v. George, 33 S. Ct. 412, 228 U. S. 14, 57 L. Ed. 712.

The immunity which must, under Const. U. S. Amend. 5, be accorded to a witness compelled to give evidence against himself, relates only to past offenses, and need not exempt the witness from prosecution for perjury committed when so testifying.—Glickstein v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 71, 222 U. S. 139, 56 L. Ed. 128.

The immunity clause in Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 7, subd. 9, 30 Stat. 548 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3425], that no testimony given by the bankrupt under the command of that section shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding, does not bar a criminal prosecution for perjury, for false swearing when giving such testimony.—Id.

The immunity clause in Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, § 7, subd. 9, providing that no testimony of a bankrupt under that section shall be offered in evidence against him in a criminal prosecution, does not bar a prosecution for perjury in giving such evidence.—Cameron v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 244, 231 U. S. 710, 58 L. Ed. 448.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 65, 66, 70, 71.

A count for perjury gave the name of the special examiner of the pension office before whom the alleged false oath was taken, averred that he was competent to administer an oath, and set forth the very words of his statement alleged to have been willfully and corruptly used by the accused, which was, in effect, that defendant had never received any injury to the forefinger of his right hand since his discharge from the army. It further charged that such false statement was part of a deposition given and subscribed by the accused before that officer, and was material to an inquiry then pending before, and within the jurisdiction of, the commissioner of pensions. Held, that the accused was sufficiently informed of the matter for which he was indicted, so as to meet the requirement of Rev. St. § 5396 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3655], that the substance of the charge should be set forth.—Markham v. United States, 160 U. S. 319, 16 S. Ct. 288, 40 L. Ed. 441.

§27. — Subornation of perjury.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. § 95.

Indictment charging subornation of perjury before federal grand jury need not state name of specified defendant under examination.—Hendricks v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 313, 223 U. S. 178, 56 L. Ed. 394.

Indictment charging subornation of perjury before federal grand jury held not too indefinite for failing to specify in what way perjured testimony became material.—Id.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 97-104.

On a prosecution for perjury, committed on the trial of an action, where the indictment accurately describes the trial, the parties to it, the court in which it took place, and the term and the time at which it was tried, a variance of one day in respect to the time of commission of the offense is not material, the charge not being based on any matter of record or other written document.—Matthews v. United States, 161 U. S. 500, 16 S. Ct. 640, 40 L. Ed. 786.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 107-122.

§32. — Admissibility.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perj. §§ 108-114.

Evidence of the general reputation for truth of one accused of having made a false deposition is competent to establish a general character inconsistent with his guilt; and it is error to exclude such testimony, upon the theory that it should be offered only after the defendant has testified, to strengthen his testimony.—Edgington v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 72, 164 U. S. 361, 41 L. Ed. 467.

The right to use testimony of accused for any legitimate purpose in establishing a charge of perjury was saved by the proviso to the immunity provisions of Rev. St. § 860 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 661], and the use of such testimony is not limited to proving that it was in fact given.—Cameron v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 244, 231 U. S. 710, 58 L. Ed. 448.

The immunity afforded by Rev. St. § 860 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 661), against the offering in evidence against the accused in a criminal proceeding of any previous testimony given by him, prevents the introduction in evidence on the prosecution of a bankrupt for perjury before the referee, a special examiner, or a commissioner, of the testimony given in one examination not tending to establish perjury on that occasion, or to establish perjury committed in another proceeding.—Id.

PERPETUITIES.

Scope-Note.

INCLUDES estates inalienable beyond the time allowed by law; restrictions, under either common-law rules or statutes, on creation of future contingent estates, or on suspension of the absolute power of alienation, or on trusts for accumulations; and application of such restrictions to deeds, marriage settlements, trusts, devises, and bequests, etc.]

2. What law governs.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perp. § 2.

A testamentary trust in favor of the Greenwood Cemetery Company of Brooklyn, permitted by the laws of New York, for the perpetual maintenance of a cemetery lot and monument, will, on principles of comity, be upheld in the courts of the District of Columbia, although the testatrix was domiciled in the District at the time of her death, and the funds to be applied to such trust arose from property owned by her in the District at that time, since, under Code D. C. § 669 [31 Stat. 1295, c. 854], grants on similar trusts are permitted to domestic corporations. Decree (1905) 26 App. D. C. 209, affirmed.—Iglehart v. Iglehart, 27 S. Ct. 329, 204 U. S. 478, 51 L. Ed. 575.

3. Constitutional and statutory provisions.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perp. § 2.

The trusts for the perpetual maintenance of cemetery lots and of monuments and other structures erected thereon, expressly authorized by Code D. C. § 669 [31 Stat. 1295, c. 854], are not forbidden because section 1023 of such Code, prohibiting perpetuities and restraints upon alienation, does not in terms make an exception in favor of the trusts provided for in the earlier section. Decree (1905) 26 App. D. C. 209, affirmed.—Iglehart v. Iglehart, 27 S. Ct. 329, 204 U. S. 478, 51 L. Ed. 575.

4. Creation of future estates in general.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perp. §§ 4-44; 47 Cent. Dig. Trusts, §§ 3, 4.

In a will containing legacies, bequests, and devises, each present and immediate in form, to individuals and to charitable institutions, a clause directing that none of them "shall be executed or take effect until" a certain memorial hall (then nearly finished) on land previously conveyed by the testator in trust, "shall be completed and entirely paid for out of my estate," does not suspend the vesting of the legacies, bequests, and devises, and so bring them within the rule against perpetuities, but only suspends the payment thereof.—Jones v. Hlabersham, 107 U. S. 174, 2 S. Ct. 336, 27 L. Ed. 401.

Under the statute of Ohio of December 17, 1811, providing that no estate in lands "shall be given or granted by deed or will to any person or persons but such as are in being, or to the immediate issue or descendants of such as are in being, at the time of making such deed or will," a devise of a vested remainder to grandchildren of the testator, with an executory devise over of the share of any grandchild who shall have died, leaving children, before the coming of age of the youngest grandchild to the children of such deceased grandchild, is valid, so far, at least, as concerns the grandchildren, though born after the testator's death.—McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 5 S. Ct. 652, 28 L. Ed. 1015.

An estate resulting to the grantor in a deed and his heirs by the failure of a trust created by the deed is not subject to the rule against perpetuities.—Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 17 S. Ct. 401, 165 U. S. 342, 41 L. Ed. 739.

A power to sell on the expiration of an estate tail, and to divide the proceeds among persons then ascertainable, is not within the rule against perpetuities.—Barber v. Pittsburgh, F. W. & C. Ry. Co., 17 S. Ct. 488, 166 U. S. 83, 41 L. Ed. 925.

5. Suspension of absolute power of alienation.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perp. §§ 4-56.

6. — In general.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Perp. §§ 4-47, 49-53, 56.

The rule against perpetuities, where the common law prevails, is not violated by a will creating a trust for "as long a period as is legally possible," to terminate when the law requires it "under the statute," to receive the income and pay annuities therefrom to certain named annuitants and their heirs, and, on the termination of the trust, to distribute the trust fund equally among those then entitled to the annuities, since the testator clearly must have intended to limit the duration of the trust to 21 years after the death of the last survivor of the annuitants named in the will, when distribution is to be made.—Fitchie v. Brown, 29 S. Ct. 106, 211 U. S. 321, 53 L. Ed. 202.

A corporation or joint-stock company, to which an annuity is bequeathed will not be deemed a life in being where so to regard it would cause a trust created by the will to violate the rule against perpetuities.—Id.

A trust does not violate the common-law rule against perpetuities because the selected lives in being by which the duration of the trust is limited exceed 40 in number.—Id.

A testator is not forbidden by any rule of public policy to direct that legacies shall be held in trust and not paid over until the youngest legatee reaches 25 years of age.—Shelton v. King, 33 S. Ct. 686, 229 U. S. 90, 57 L. Ed. 1086, affirming decree King v. Shelton, 36 App. D. C. 1.

§8. Remoteness of gifts to charities.

See 29 Cent. Dig. Perp. §§ 57-66.

A conveyance of lands and personalty was expressed to be "for the purpose of founding an institution for the education of youth in St. Louis county, Missouri," and in trust "for the use and benefit of the Russell Institute of St. Louis, Missouri," and directed the grantee to sell the property and pay the proceeds "to Thomas Allen, president of the board of trustees of said Russell Institute at St. Louis, Missouri," whose receipt should be a full discharge. The institution was neither established nor incorporated in the lifetime of the donor nor of Allen. Held, in a proceeding by the heirs at law and next of kin to establish a trust in their favor, that a trust was created for public charitable purposes, and therefore not obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities.—Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163, 2 S. Ct. 327, 27 L. Ed. 397.

Where several devises are made to charitable uses upon conditions against alienation, with a devise over to a further charitable use upon breach thereto, the validity of the gift is not affected by the fact that the contingency may not happen within the limit of the rule against perpetuities, for, both devises being to charitable uses, the rule as to perpetuities is not applicable.—Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, 2 S. Ct. 336, 27 L. Ed. 401.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Pilots, §§ 1-3.

The owners of a steamer trading between Philadelphia and Savannah, employed one S., a Savannah pilot, licensed under the laws of the United States, as their regular pilot to conduct the vessel over Tyler bar and up the Savannah river, with pay from the time the ship left Philadelphia. Held, that from the time of leaving Philadelphia the ship was "under the control and direction" of such pilot, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 4401 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3016]; and hence, under section 4444 [page 3037], she was not subject to any further pilot charges under any regulations established by the state of Georgia.—Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 6 S. Ct. 988, 30 L. Ed. 115.

Code Ga. § 1512, provides that "any person, master or commander of a ship bearing towards any of the ports or harbors of this state, except coasters in this state, and between the ports of this state and those of South Carolina and of Florida, who refuses to receive a pilot on board, shall be liable, on his arrival in such port in this state to pay the first pilot who may have offered his services outside the bar * * * the full rates of pilotage established by law for such vessel." Held, that this section contains such a discrimination in the rate of pilotage "between vessels sailing between the ports of one state and vessels sailing between the ports of different states" as is prohibited by Rev. St. U. S. § 4237 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2903], and as this provision is not separable from the rest of the section the whole section is void.—Id.

A steamship engaged in trade between the ports of Porto Rico and the port of New York is a coastwise seagoing vessel within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. § 4401 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3016], and, when under the control and direction of a pilot licensed under the federal statute, is exempted by section 4444 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3037] from the provisions of state pilotage laws.—Huna v. New York & Porto Rico S. S. Co., 21 S. Ct. 827, 182 U. S. 392, 45 L. Ed. 1146.

No inherent rights guarantied by the federal Constitution are infringed by state regulations providing for the appointment of pilots, and restricting the right to pilot to those duly appointed. Judgment (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320, affirmed.—Olsen v. Smith, 25 S. Ct. 52, 195 U. S. 332, 49 L. Ed. 224.

The state of Louisiana may make it a criminal offense for a pilot not duly qualified under its laws to pilot a foreign vessel from the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans, La., although he holds a license issued under the authority of the state of Mississippi; since New Orleans, although upon the Mississippi river, is not "situate upon waters which are the boundary between two states," within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. § 4236 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2903], authorizing the master of any vessel coming into or going out of any port so situated to employ any pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of either of the states bounded on such waters to pilot a vessel to or from such port, the limit of the waters so referred to being the point at which they cease to be a boundary between the two states.—Leech v. State of Louisiana, 29 S. Ct. 552, 214 U. S. 175, 53 L. Ed. 956, affirming judgment (1907) State v. Leech, 44 So. 285, 119 La. 522.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Pilots, §§ 1-3.

The exemption of coastwise steam vessels of the United States from the operation of state pilotage laws, created by Rev. St. U. S. § 4444 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3037], interferes with such laws only so far as they relate to these vessels, as the section expressly declares that "nothing in this title shall be considered to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state." Judgment (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320, affirmed.—Olsen v. Smith, 25 S. Ct. 52, 195 U. S. 332, 49 L. Ed. 224.

Only the discriminatory features of state pilotage laws are abrogated by the provision of Rev. St. U. S. § 4237 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2903], forbidding such discrimination, and annulling and abrogating "all existing regulations or provisions making any such discrimination."—Id.

No discrimination in state pilotage laws forbidden by Rev. St. U. S. § 4237 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2903], is made by the Virginia compulsory pilotage charge on all vessels (except coasting vessels having a pilot's license) either inward bound from the sea through the Virginia capes to Smith's Point, Yorktown, Newport News, or Norfolk, and intermediate points, or outward bound to the sea from those points through the capes, although compulsory pilotage does not prevail in all the inland waters of the state. Judgment, Darden v. Thompson, 44 S. E. 755, 101 Va. 685, affirmed.—Thompson v. Darden, 25 S. Ct. 660, 198 U. S. 310, 49 L. Ed. 1064.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Pilots, § 8.

Coastwise seagoing steam vessels sailing under register, whether employing federal pilots or not, are not exempt from pilotage fees created by Pol. Code Cal. §§ 2432, 2466, 2468, on tender of resident bar pilot service when entering or leaving port of San Francisco, by Act Feb. 28, 1871, § 51, re-enacted as Rev. St. §§ 4401, 4444 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3016, 3037].—Anderson v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 32 S. Ct. 626, 225 U. S. 187, 56 L. Ed. 1047.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Pilots, § 19.

Members of a voluntary, unincorporated pilot association, which, under the state laws, could neither select nor discharge its members nor control or direct them in the performance of their duties as licensed pilots, whether technically partners or not, are not liable to the owners of piloted vessels for the negligence of each other because, instead of taking their fees as they earn them, such fees go into a common fund, and, after deducting expenses, are distributed to the several members according to the number of days they respectively were on the active list.—Guy v. Donald, 27 S. Ct. 63, 203 U. S. 399, 51 L. Ed. 245.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. ¶ 8, 9.

Judicial notice of facts which the plaintiff has not chosen to rely upon in his pleading cannot make those facts a part of the complaint for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to a federal court, as the averments, if not sufficient in themselves to give jurisdiction, present no controversy in respect of which resort may be had to judicial knowledge. Judgment, McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill Co., 97 F. 670, 38 C. C. A. 354, reversed.—Mountain View Min. & Mill Co. v. McFadden, 21 S. Ct. 488, 180 U. S. 533, 45 L. Ed. 666.

In Texas, an assignment by a firm, which purports to convey firm property only, is void as to creditors who do not accept it, and the property is subject to attachment by them; and in an action by the assignee under such a deed against a United States marshal for an alleged wrongful attachment in behalf of creditors not accepting the assignment, an allegation that "no property was owned by said firm, or any of the members thereof, not conveyed thereby, except such as was exempted from forced sale by the Constitution and laws of Texas," is immaterial, since the officer having in hand an attachment against property so conveyed can only be guided, in the absence of actual notice, by the legal effect of the deed, and since the averment is merely a legal conclusion not in accordance with the terms of the deed or the proper legal construction thereof.—Kennedy v. McKee, 142 U. S. 606, 12 S. Ct. 303, 35 L. Ed. 1131.

In a suit on county bonds issued in aid of a railroad the answer alleged that no legal election authorizing the issue was had, by reason of divers irregularities, which would appear by reference to certified copies of papers sent from several precincts to the clerk of the county court, marked as "exhibits," and made a part of the answer. It was further alleged, as showing the invalidity of the bonds, that the county court was not the proper tribunal to determine whether a legal election had been held; that the false recitals in the bonds to the contrary did not estop the county; that the terms of the order submitting the question to a vote of the people had not been complied with, and therefore the county was not legally bound to pay, and that the railroad had obtained the bonds illegally and fraudulently. Held, that these were allegations of legal conclusions, and that the answer presented no issuable questions of fact going to the merits of the suit, and was bad on demurrer.—Chicot County v. Sherwood, 148 U. S. 529, 13 S. Ct. 695, 37 L. Ed. 546.

The general averments that the judgment sued on was "an irregular and void judgment," and that there was no "jurisdiction or authority on the part of the court to enter such a judgment upon the facts and the pleadings," are but averments of legal conclusions, and so insufficient to impeach the judgment.—Ritchie v. McMullen, 159 U. S. 235, 16 S. Ct. 171, 40 L. Ed. 133.

General averments in an amended answer in an action to recover damages from a railway company for a wrongful death caused by violation of Civ. Code Ga. 1895, § 2222, requiring the slackening of speed at highway crossings, that such statute violates the commerce clause, and is a direct burden upon and impedes traffic, and impairs the usefulness of the railway company's facilities for that purpose, and that it is impossible to observe the statute in carrying mails and interstate commerce business, are not sufficient as against demurrer, since they are mere conclusions, and do not show the number or location of the crossings at which the railway company will be required to check the speed of its trains, nor that the particular crossing is not a dangerous one.—(1910) Southern Ry. Co. v. King, 30 S. Ct. 594, 217 U. S. 524, 54 L. Ed. 868, affirming judgment (1908) 160 F. 332, 87 C. C. A. 284.

An allegation in a complaint attacking the validity of tax deeds, that the sales were "not sufficiently advertised," is a conclusion of law.—Straus v. Foxworth, 34 S. Ct. 42, 231 U. S. 162, 58 L. Ed. 168.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. ¶ 58-65.

An allegation of the record of an assignment in the records of deeds of a county, and that defendant then had notice of the same, followed by allegations that notice was given by filing and record, should not be construed as charging actual notice.—Burck v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 14 S. Ct. 696, 38 L. Ed. 578.

36. Conclusiveness of allegations or admissions on party pleading.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 81-86; 38 Cent. Dig. Partners. § 773.

Allegations in the pleadings are admissions as against the party making them, and as such are part of the evidence in the case.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Paine, 119 U. S. 561, 7 S. Ct. 323, 30 L. Ed. 513.

The owner of certain real property borrowed money for improvements thereon from an insurance company, executing deeds of trust to the company's agent as security. Thereafter, by a deed absolute in form, he conveyed this and certain other property to the agent. In a suit by the former owner against the agent and the company, praying that they account as trustees, the agent, in his answer, alleged that the absolute deed to himself was given for the purpose of securing the company. Held, that this admission was conclusive as between the agent and the former owner.—Balloch v. Hooper, 146 U. S. 363, 13 S. Ct. 128, 36 L. Ed. 1008, affirming decree 6 Mackey, 421.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 153, 159.

The consent of defendant to the appointment of receivers, without setting up the defense that the complainants were not judgment creditors who had issued an execution which was returned unsatisfied, in whole or in part, amounts to a waiver of that defense.—(1908) In re Reisenberg, 28 S. Ct. 219, 208 U. S. 90, 52 L. Ed. 403, dismissing petitions (C. C. 1907) Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. New York City R. Co., 157 F. 440.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 241, 242.

Upon a plea of nil debet, notice of special matter to be given in evidence which can only be sustained by evidence that would be equally admissible under the plea itself is properly stricken out.—United States v. Stone, 106 U. S. 525, 1 S. Ct. 287, 27 L. Ed. 163.

119. Sufficiency of denials under codes of procedure.

Under Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 500, providing that an answer must contain "(1) a general or specific denial of each material allegation of the complaint controverted by the defendant or of any knowledge or information thereof sufficient to form a belief; (2) a statement of any new matter constituting a defense or counterclaim in ordinary and concise language, without repetition,"—an answer which makes certain statements, and then denies every allegation of the complaint, "except as hereinbefore stated or admitted," amounts to a sufficient general denial of all allegations of the complaint not admitted to authorize evidence to be given to show any of such allegations to be untrue.—Burley v. German-American Bank, 111 U. S. 216, 4 S. Ct. 341, 28 L. Ed. 406.

129. Admissions by failure to traverse or deny.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 270-275; 15 Cent. Dig. Damag. § 418; 17 Cent. Dig. Eject. §§ 201-203.

An allegation in the complaint in an action to collect a delinquent special assessment, that defendants' property was contiguous to the improvement, must be taken as true, where not denied by the answer. Decree (Ariz. 1907) 89 P. 501, affirmed.—English v. Territory of Arizona ex rel. Griffith, 29 S. Ct. 658, 214 U. S. 359, 53 L. Ed. 1030.

(D) MATTER IN AVOIDANCE.

131. Form and requisites of plea in general.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 277, 278.

A plea clearly indicating the substance and scope of the military order relied upon as a defense is not defective because it omits to set out the order in terms.—Mitchell v. Clark, 110 U. S. 633, 4 S. Ct. 170, 312, 28 L. Ed. 279.

(E) SET-OFF, COUNTERCLAIM, AND CROSS-COMPLAINT.

Cross-bill in equity, see Equity, 195-199.

144. Matter of set-off in general.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. § 283; 7 Cent. Dig. Bills & N. § 1539.

Pleas in an action on a bond given to secure sales of merchandise on credit, which set up a breach by the obligees of a parol agreement respecting prices, are insufficient where there is nothing in the declaration or bond which shows the existence of any such separate agreement, or that an alteration in the prices could or would have any effect upon the liability of the sureties.—McGuire v. Gerstley, 27 S. Ct. 332, 204 U. S. 489, 51 L. Ed. 581, affirming judgment (1905) 28 App. D. C. 193; Clark v. Same, 27 S. Ct. 337, 204 U. S. 504, 51 L. Ed. 589, affirming judgment (1905) 28 App. D. C. 205.

Facts sufficient to constitute a valid set-off, recoupment, or independent cause of action are not set up by a plea in an action on a bond given to secure sales of merchandise on credit, which avers that the obligees induced one of the principals to dissolve the partnership existing between them, and to enter the employment of the obligees for the purpose of ruining the partnership business, but contains no allegation as to how long the partnership was to continue.—Id.

The particulars of the alleged resulting damages from the breach by the obligees in a bond given to secure sales on credit, of an alleged special agreement respecting prices, pleaded as an offset to the claim on such bond, should be so far set forth that the court may be able to see therefrom that such alleged damages are neither obscure, vague, nor shadowy, but might, and probably would naturally result from the act complained of.—Id.

(F) AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE OR OF MERITS.

IV. REPLICATION OR REPLY AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.

In equity, see Equity, 209-212.

176. Traverses or denials.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 343, 345-353.

An unverified denial of each and every allegation in a counterclaim which sets up assignment of a promissory note for a valuable consideration, the fact of the maker's insolvency, of which the assignor had knowledge, and the nonpayment of the note, puts the allegations of insolvency and nonpayment in issue. Judgment 53 P. 201, 5 Ariz. 409, affirmed.—Daggs v. Phoenix Nat. Bank, 20 S. Ct. 732, 177 U. S. 549, 44 L. Ed. 882.

180. Departure from declaration or complaint.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 358-384; 7 Cent. Dig. Bills & N. § 1572; 28 Cent. Dig. Insurance, §§ 54, 1627; 30 Cent. Dig. Judgm. § 1138.

Plaintiff declared in assumpsit for the value of a quantity of wheat. The answer set up a note, and chattel mortgage to secure the same, and alleged that the wheat was delivered and received in payment for such note. The replication stated a contract, by the terms of which defendant was to convey certain land to plaintiff, who was to pay for the same by such note; that the wheat had been delivered, but that, by reason of defendant's inability to make title to the land, plaintiff had rescinded the contract. Held, that plaintiff might recover upon the complaint; the new matter in the replication not constituting a departure from the cause of action set forth in the complaint, within the provisions of the Code of Washington Territory.—Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 345, 13 S. Ct. 617, 37 L. Ed. 475, affirming judgment 1 Wash. St. 549, 20 P. 583.

Mandamus, 165.

214. Admissions by demurrer.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 525-534; 12 Cent. Dig. Corp. § 2044.

A demurrer admits the truth of all facts well pleaded.—Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co., 109 U. S. 550, 3 S. Ct. 339, 27 L. Ed. 1028.

If a pleading misstates the effect and purpose of the statute upon which the party relies, a demurrer to the pleading does not admit the correctness of the construction, or that the statute imposes the alleged obligations or confers the alleged rights.—Pennie v. Reis, 132 U. S. 464, 10 S. Ct. 149, 33 L. Ed. 428.

Mere epithets charging fraud are not admitted by demurrer.—Kent v. Lake Superior Ship Canal, Ry. & Iron Co., 144 U. S. 75, 12 S. Ct. 650, 36 L. Ed. 852.

A demurrer does not admit conclusions of law.—Id.

The general rule that the truth of material and relevant matters set forth with requisite precision is admitted by demurrer will not be applied in a controversy between states, which involves the question whether one state may wholly deprive the other state and its inhabitants of all the water of a river accustomed to flow through that state, whereby injury is inflicted on such state as an individual owner, and on all the inhabitants of that state, and especially on the inhabitants of that part of the state lying in the river valley.—State of Kansas v. State of Colorado, 22 S. Ct. 552, 185 U. S. 125, 46 L. Ed. 838.

A state court is not concluded as to the proper construction of the statutes of another state and the decision of its courts construing them, on the theory that defendant, by demurring to the complaint, which contained an allegation in the form of an averment of fact as to the meaning of such laws and decisions set forth therein, admitted that such was the correct conclusion to be drawn from them. Judgment (1901) 87 N. W. 255, 111 Wis. 290, affirmed.—

Finney v. Guy, 23 S. Ct. 558, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. Ed. 839.

A demurrer to a pleading admits facts well pleaded, but not conclusions of law, nor conclusions of the pleader on the facts of the cause of action, nor the correctness of averments as to the meaning of an instrument pleaded.—Equitable Life Assur. Society of United States v. Brown, 29 S. Ct. 404, 213 U. S. 25, 53 L. Ed. 682, reversing decree (1907) Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Society of United States, 151 F. 1, 81 C. C. A. 1, 10 Ann. Cas. 402; (C. C. 1908) Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 165 F. 945.

An allegation in a complaint attacking the validity of tax deeds, that the sales were "not sufficiently advertised," being a conclusion of law was not admitted by demurrer.—Straus v. Foxworth, 34 S. Ct. 42, 231 U. S. 162, 58 L. Ed. 168.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 601, 605.

The permitting or refusing amendments to pleadings is a matter within the sound judicial discretion of the trial court.—Gormley v. Bunyan, 138 U. S. 623, 11 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. Ed. 1086.

☞ 237. — Amendment to conform to proofs.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 608-619; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 1752.

Where an action is brought in a state court which might have been removed to the circuit court of the United States had the amount of damages claimed been sufficient, the allowance of an amendment to make the complaint correspond with the evidence, which brings the damages claimed within the jurisdictional amount, cannot be objected to on proceedings in error, on the ground that it forced defendant to submit to a trial in the state court when he was entitled to a removal, where no application for removal was made when the amendment was allowed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Austin, 135 U. S. 315, 10 S. Ct. 758, 34 L. Ed. 218.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 602, 620-625.

Where the court allows an amendment to a petition altering the substance of the demand, it can afterwards modify its order allowing the amendment so as to treat it as a mere addition to the original petition.—Henderson v. Louisville, & N. R. Co., 123 U. S. 61, 8 S. Ct. 60, 31 L. Ed. 92, affirming judgment (C. C.) 20 F. 430.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 636-641.

Where leave is granted to amend the declaration, the defendant to file an answer to the amended pleading within a certain time after a service upon him of a copy thereof, it is error to proceed to trial, and enter judgment for plaintiff, no notice having been given to the defendant of the amendment.—Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 9 S. Ct. 426, 32 L. Ed. 800.

☞ 242. Amendment of declaration, complaint, petition, or statement.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 643-651, 820-822; 36 Cent. Dig. Mun. Corp. § 1719.

The court may permit a defective statement in a complaint by a subcontractor under Act Aug. 13, 1894, as amended by Act Feb. 24, 1905, upon a public contractor's bond, to be corrected so as to show that the action was not prematurely brought.—Illinois Surety Co. v. United States to Use of Peeler, 36 S. Ct. 321, 240 U. S. 214, 60 L. Ed. 609, modifying judgment 215 F. 334, 131 C. C. A. 476.

☞ 245. — Condition of cause and time for amendment.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 635, 653-675; 4 Cent. Dig. Assault, § 31.

An amendment of plaintiff's petition, after verdict and judgment thereon, with no further proceedings taken, by inserting the words "and is a citizen of said state and of the United States of America," after the allegation therein that "plaintiff resides in El Paso, in El Paso county, state of Texas," may be allowed by a circuit court of the United States, under Rev. St. U. S. § 954 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 697], giving the trial court the right at any time to permit either of the parties to amend any defect in process or pleadings, upon such conditions as it shall prescribe.—Mexican Cent. Ry. Co. v. Duthie, 23 S. Ct. 610, 189 U. S. 76, 47 L. Ed. 715.

Allowing amendment after full trial of a declaration seeking recovery of the entire amount due on a contract for purchase of cattle and feed, so as to claim recovery for the portion shown to have been delivered, should not be denied on the ground of surprise. Judgment, Snyder v. Stribling (1907) 89 P. 222, 18 Okl. 168, affirmed.—Snyder v. Rosenbaum, 30 S. Ct. 73, 215 U. S. 261, 54 L. Ed. 186.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 636, 687, 689-706, 708½, 709; 4 Cent. Dig. Assault, § 31.

In an action against a carrier for the loss of a hand bag, dropped out of a car window, the circuit court, sitting in Louisiana, sustained an exception to the petition, on the ground that it set forth no cause of action, and ordered it dismissed, unless the plaintiff should amend, so as to state a cause of action, within five days. The original petition alleged that the hand bag and contents, for the loss of which the defendant railroad was sued, were held and kept by the plaintiff in his immediate possession, and the amended petition, when duly filed, alleged that the defendant received them as his luggage. Held, that the amendment "altered the substance of the demand," within the prohibition of Code Prac. La. art. 419.—Henderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 123 U. S. 61, 8

S. Ct. 60, 31 L. Ed. 92, affirming judgment (C. C.) 20 F. 430.

An amendment to a pleading which changes the ground of an action for a personal injury from the general law to a special statute constitutes a departure, and sets up a new and different cause of action.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Wyler, 158 U. S. 285, 15 S. Ct. 877, 39 L. Ed. 983.

An amendment stating that plaintiff, at the time of the injury, was traveling on defendant's road on a second-class ticket, instead of first-class, as stated in the original complaint, does not change the cause of action.—Atlantic & P. Ry. Co. v. Laird, 17 S. Ct. 120, 164 U. S. 393, 41 L. Ed. 485, affirming judgment 58 F. 760, 7 C. C. A. 489.

Where the original complaint in an action against a railroad company for injuries alleges that defendant was incorporated under the laws of a certain state, an amendment stating that it was incorporated under act of congress does not change the cause of action.—Id.

An amendment of the complaint against two railroad companies for injuries alleged to have been caused by their joint negligence, by merely striking out one of the defendants, and alleging that the injury was caused by the negligence of the remaining defendant, does not introduce a new cause of action.—Id.

A proposed amendment to the bill in a suit by the federal government to enjoin railway carriers from interstate transportation of commodities with which they are associated, or in which they are interested is germane to the original cause of action, where its allegations tend to show such an exercise by the carrier of its power as a stockholder in the corporation manufacturing, mining, producing, or owning the commodity carried, as to deprive the latter of all independent existence, and to make it virtually but an agency, or dependency, or department of the carrier.—United States v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 31 S. Ct. 387, 220 U. S. 257, 55 L. Ed. 458.

253. — Plea or answer to amended pleading.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 744-751.

Where no plea is filed to an amended declaration, and no motion is made for a judgment for the want of a plea, a trial by jury as upon issue joined, and verdict and judgment for plaintiff, are unauthorized.—Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 9 S. Ct. 426, 32 L. Ed. 800.

The plea of the general issue filed to a declaration before the allowance of an amendment joining as party plaintiff in a suit for insurance the person to whom a transfer of the policy is alleged, will not be regarded as traversing the amended declaration, where the record shows that the case was tried on the theory that the transfer was not disputed, but was an established fact.—Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller, 26 S. Ct. 46, 190 U. S. 353, 50 L. Ed. 226.

285. Further, additional, or substituted pleading.

An amended petition, based upon a certain contract and its extensions, may be filed, instead of attempting to file a substitute for the original petition, where the original, which, with all the records in the case, has been lost, was based on that contract and its extensions, with others in addition.—District of Columbia v. Talty, 21 S. Ct. 896, 182 U. S. 510, 45 L. Ed. 1207.

VII. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 853, 856; 38 Cent. Dig. Partit. § 174; 38 Cent. Dig. Partners. § 415.

The fact that a petition for partition of the estate of a decedent is signed by the widow "as administratrix," the petition embracing her claim as widow and heir to a share in the estate, and containing a distinct prayer that partition be had between herself and the children, does not invalidate the proceedings, as being instituted by a person having no interest in the partition.—Robinson v. Fair, 128 U. S. 53, 9 S. Ct. 30, 32 L. Ed. 415.

289. Necessity for verification and effect of omission.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 859, 865, 866½-880, 882-886½; 38 Cent. Dig. Partit. § 174; 40 Cent. Dig. Wills, § 645.

291. — Actions or pleadings based on written instruments.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 864, 865, 866½-879.

In an action on a bill of lading calling for cotton of a higher grade than that actually shipped, under the plea of non assumpsit, not verified, as required by Hurd's Rev. St. Ill. (Prac. Act) § 34, defendant cannot deny the execution of the bills of lading sued on; but evidence is admissible tending to show that the marks on the cotton, when received by defendant for shipment, answered the marks described in the bills of lading, and that the contract contained in them has been fully performed by defendant.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Knight, 122 U. S. 79, 7 S. Ct. 1132, 30 L. Ed. 1077.

Code Civ. Proc. Kan. § 108, provides that "in all actions allegations of the execution of written instruments, and of the indorsements thereon of the existence of a corporation and partnership, * * * duly verified by the affidavit of the party, his agent or attorney, shall be taken as true," unless the denial of the same be verified. Held, that the statute did not apply to an action on county bonds, where the answer was a general denial of the validity of the bonds and the organization of the county; and the reply need not be verified, it not being incumbent on plaintiff in such case to file any reply at all.—Harper County Com'rs v. Rose, 140 U. S. 71, 11 S. Ct. 710, 35 L. Ed. 344.

300. Sufficiency of verification.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 314, 318, 892-906; 38 Cent. Dig. Partners. § 415; 41 Cent. Dig. Quo W. § 59.

An affidavit of verification in an action on county warrants, that the facts stated in the answer as defenses to the various causes of action declared on are true, and that the warrants sued on are not genuine, is a sufficient compliance with a statute requiring the verification of any answer containing a denial of the execution of an instrument on which suit is brought. Judgment 53 P. 187, 6 Ariz. 13, reversed.—Apache County v. Barth, 20 S. Ct. 718, 177 U. S. 538, 44 L. Ed. 878.

304. Operation and effect of verification.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 908, 909.

The verification of an answer containing a denial of the execution of county warrants sued on, in compliance with Rev. St. Ariz. 1887, § 735, which requires the verification of any answer containing a denial of the execution of an instrument on which suit is brought, renders the warrants inadmissible in evidence until their execution is proved. Judgment 53 P. 187, 6 Ariz. 13, reversed.—Apache County

v. Barth, 20 S. Ct. 718, 177 U. S. 538, 44 L. Ed. 878.

The question of the forfeiture of a railroad grant for noncompletion within the time limited by the grant is not put in issue in a suit to annul a patent on the sole ground that it was issued under a mistaken belief as to the location of a terminus, by an allegation in the answer that it was "duly" and "in all respects" constructed in accordance with the law. Decree 95 F. 864, 37 C. C. A. 290, affirmed.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 706, 177 U. S. 435, 44 L. Ed. 836.

Where the complaint alleged a contract for delivery of iron at one place, and the answer at a different place, evidence offered by plaintiff, supporting the answer, was properly admitted under Rev. St. Wis. § 2669, providing that a variance between the pleading and proof shall not be material unless it actually mislead the adverse party to his prejudice.—Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 363, 6 S. In an action to foreclose a statutory lien for construction of a ditch, of dimensions specified in a contract which is made a part of the complaint, proof of the construction of a ditch of different dimensions does not constitute a variance, where there is an allegation that the ditch constructed was accepted and used by defendant, and that there was thereafter a settlement between the parties.—Idaho & Oregon Land Imp. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 10 S. Ct. 177, 33 L. Ed. 433, affirming Bradbury v. Idaho & Oregon Land Imp. Co., 2 Idaho (Hash.) 239, 10 P. 620.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. § 1310.

In an action for the communication of Texas fever from defendants' cattle to plaintiffs, the fact that the declaration alleged that defendants drove their cattle on plaintiff's lands, and "there" communicated the disease, while the court found that it could not be determined whether the communication of disease was on the road, on plaintiff's range, or on defendants' range, was immaterial.—Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 468, 16 S. Ct. 1064, 41 L. Ed. 230.

394. — Written instruments.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1325-1332.

The statement, in a declaration on an insurance policy, of the premiums, paid and payable, as the consideration of the contract, does not create a variance, although the policy contains the expression that it is made "in consideration of the representations made in the application," and of the payment of premiums.—*Phoenix Mut. Where defendant, in an action for real estate, goes to trial, without objection, on a petition which omits to set forth the deed through which plaintiff derives title, as required by Code Prac. La. § 174, he will be taken to have waived the objection.—Waples v. Hays, 108 U. S. 6, 1 S. Ct. 80, 27 L. Ed. 632.

Though plaintiff could have been required to separately state his two causes of action, where no motion to that end was made, the objection is waived.—Shepherd v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 130 U. S. 426, 9 S. Ct. 598, 32 L. Ed. 970.

The question whether the election by a trustee in bankruptcy to avoid a preference should be exercised by a demand before suit, or can be exercised by the suit itself, is not open to the defendant, although it demurred to the complaint, and urged, as a ground of demurrer, the absence of an allegation of a demand, where it did not stand on the demurrer, but answered, and not only traversed the allegations of the complaint, but set up an independent defense, and showed that a demand would have been unavailing. Judgment, Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank (1905) 104 N. W. 98, 125 Wis. 465, affirmed.—Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 27 S. Ct. 391, 204 U. S. 522, 51 L. Ed. 596.

409. Waiver of objections to plea or answer or want thereof.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1375-1383, 1386; 24 Cent. Dig. Fraud. Conv. § 993; 33 Cent. Dig. Libel, § 242; 33 Cent. Dig. Mal. Pros. § 111.

Where, in an answer to an action on a fire policy, a breach of the condition against the keeping of kerosene, benzine, or any inflammable burning fluids on the premises, is imperfectly pleaded, and, on the trial, evidence tending to establish such defense is admitted without objection, it is too late to raise the point after the opportunity for amendment under Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 539, has passed.—Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Gunther, 116 U. S. 113, 6 S. Ct. 306, 29 L. Ed. 575.

When a case is submitted on an agreed statement of facts, the want of an answer becomes immaterial.—Saltonstall v. Russell, 152 U. S. 628, 14 S. Ct. 733, 38 L. Ed. 576.

412. Waiver of objections to replication or reply or want thereof.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1387-1394; 28 Cent. Dig. Insurance, § 1591.

If replications have not been filed when the trial begins, defendant is bound to know it, and failure to ask then for a rule against plaintiff to file them is equivalent to consenting that the trial, so far as the pleadings are concerned, may be commenced as if the issues were properly made up.—J. S. Keator Lumber Co. v. Thompson, 144 U. S. 434, 12 S. Ct. 669, 36 L. Ed. 495.

415. Objections to rulings on demurrer.

416. — In general.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1397-1400.

The issues raised by a plea will be presumed to have been waived or abandoned at the trial, where, after a demurrer to such plea had been sustained without exception taken, defendant went to trial upon the merits without objection, and introduced evidence upon other issues, and no evidence was offered or introduced on either side relating to the matters set out in such plea.—German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Hale, 31 S. Ct. 246, 219 U. S. 307, 55 L. Ed. 229.

—418. — Waiver by pleading over.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1399, 1403-1406; 33 Cent. Dig. Partit. § 182.

Answering over after the overruling of a demurrer to the petition, which failed to state a cause of action, is no waiver of the objection.—Teal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 242, 4 S. Ct. 420, 28 L. Ed. 415.

—427. Objections to evidence as not within issues.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1428-1432; 46 Cent. Dig. Trial, § 286.

A declaration alleged that, "by reason of the negligence and default of the defendant, its servants, agents, and employees," the car on which the deceased was working "was run into by another of the defendant's cars, whereby the plaintiff's intestate, by collision of the said cars, was so crushed and injured that death immediately followed." Held, upon appeal, that it was immaterial whether these allegations were or were not sufficient to allow proof that the collision was the result of a brake so defective that it could not control the cars, which ran back against the deceased, and killed him, where both parties asked instructions upon the theory that the jury were to inquire as to the defectiveness of the brake.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 15 S. Ct. 491, 39 L. Ed. 624.

—428. Objections to evidence on ground of insufficiency of pleading.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1433-1436; 32 Cent. Dig. Libel, § 242; 33 Cent. Dig. Mal. Pros. § 111; 35 Cent. Dig. Mon. Recd. § 69; 35 Cent. Dig. Mtg. § 1218; 35 Cent. Dig. Mun. Corp. § 1724; 46 Cent. Dig. Trial, § 219.

Where an answer is not sufficiently definite and certain in setting out the facts constituting the defense, plaintiff's remedy, under the Code, is, by motion, to compel defendant to make the answer more definite; and, if he omits that remedy, he cannot object to the evidence on the trial.—Burley v. German-American Bank, 111 U. S. 216, 4 S. Ct. 341, 28 L. Ed. 406.

—430. Objections to evidence on ground of variance.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1433-1441; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 1753; 46 Cent. Dig. Trial, §§ 219, 286.

Variance between pleading and proof must be taken advantage of at the trial, or it is waived.—Wasatch Min. Co. v. Crescent Min. Co., 148 U. S. 293, 13 S. Ct. 600, 37 L. Ed. 454; Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 468, 16 S. Ct. 1064, 41 L. Ed. 230.

The variance, if any, between evidence that a servant employed in a dimly lighted stable, who had never been advised of the existence of a hole in the ceiling, nor of its purpose, was struck by a bale of straw dropped through the hole by a fellow employé, without warning, and allegations that the employer's negligence consisted in failing to discharge its duty not to permit hay and feed to be passed through the hole without proper warning and timely notice, is not fatal, where defendant made no objection to the testimony, but replied to it by testimony of like kind, and did not indicate in what way the proof varied from the pleadings, nor move for a continuance.—(1910) Standard Oil Co. v.

—431. Aider by verdict or judgment.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1442-1485; 4 Cent. Dig. Arb. & Aw. § 496; 4 Cent. Dig. Assault, § 34; 7 Cent. Dig. Bills & N. §§ 1473, 1493; 8 Cent. Dig. Can. of Inst. § 81; 9 Cent. Dig. —433. — Defects in or want of declaration, complaint, petition, or statement.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1451-1477; 4 Cent. Dig. Arb. & Aw. § 496; 4 Cent. Dig. Assault, § 34; 7 Cent. Dig. Bills & N. §§ 1473, 1493; 8 Cent. Dig. Can. of Inst. § 81; 9 Cent. Dig. A declaration which sets out a good cause of action, although imperfectly or defectively, is good after verdict, in the absence of objection.—Palmer v. Arthur, 131 U. S. 60, 9 S. Ct. 649, 33 L. Ed. 87.

Rev. St. 1890, § 672, enacts that no judgment shall be reversed or affected for omitting any allegation, without proving which the triors of the issue ought not to have given such a judgment. A petition, not demurred to, to enforce a special tax bill for the construction of a private sewer, was defective, in failing to allege that the board of public improvements made the assessment of the entire cost of the construction of the sewer against the property in the district, and in alleging, instead thereof, "that the president of said board computed the cost thereof." The tax bill was put in evidence without objection, showing that the board of public improvements assessed the cost of the sewer of the district, as required by the St. Louis city charter. Held, that the defect is cured by a judgment enforcing the lien.—Shumate v. Heman, 21 S. Ct. 645, 181 U. S. 402, 45 L. Ed. 916, 922, affirming Heman v. Allen, 57 S. W. 559, 156 Mo. 534.

The lack of essential averments in a declaration in indebitatus assumpsit is cured by the verdict, if the evidence offered was sufficient to support the verdict, and no objection was made to a variance between allegations and proof. Judgment, 108 F. 764, 48 O. C. A. 15, affirmed.—Nashua Sav. Bank v. Anglo-American Land, Mortgage & Agency Co., 23 S. Ct. 517, 189 U. S. 221, 47 L. Ed. 782.

General statements in the innuendo that defendant meant to charge plaintiff with corruption in office will, after verdict for plaintiff, be treated as substantive allegations of fact.—Baker v. Warner, 34 S. Ct. 175, 231 U. S. 588, 58 L. Ed. 384, reversing judgment 36 App. D. C. 493.

—436. — Defects in or want of replication or reply.

See 39 Cent. Dig. Plead. §§ 1482, 1483.

The filing of replications during the progress of the trial without leave of the court is improper and irregular, but it must be presumed that the fact of their being so filed is known to defendant before the trial is concluded, or before judgment is entered, and an objection on this account comes too late after judgment.—J. S. Keator Lumber Co. v. Thompson, 144 U. S. 434, 12 S. Ct. 669, 36 L. Ed. 495.

An insolvent gave certain goods in payment to a creditor, who pledged them. In a suit by other creditors of insolvent to have the pledge set aside, it appeared that, in consideration of $5,000 and two notes of like amount, which the pledgee afterwards paid, the creditor gave him three notes, of $5,000 each, and indorsed warehouse receipts for the goods; that the full terms of the contract of pledge were stated on the face of the notes. Held, that the pledge was a real, and not a simulated, one, and conformed to the requirements of Voorhies' Rev. Civ. Code La. art. 3158, providing that, for a pledge to be good against third parties, it must be in writing and signed; it must mention the amount of the debt, as well as the species and nature of the thing pledged; that pledges of movable property shall be accompanied by delivery, but property in a warehouse shall pass by delivery of the warehouse receipt.—*Freiburg v. Feb. 12, 1855, enacting that certain railroad stock held by the state shall be pledged, together with any dividends that may be declared thereon, to the payment of certain bonds and interest coupons issued by the state, does not create an actual pledge, but, at most, a mortgage.—*Christian v. Advances for the purchase of certain cattle were made by a bank on the agreement by the parties to the sale that the bank should have a lien therefor on the cattle until they should be sold by consignees to whom they were to be shipped, and that a draft for the amount should be drawn on the consignees against the proceeds of the sale by them. Such draft was made and delivered to the bank, with a bill of lading for four car loads of the cattle, but no bill of lading was issued for the two remaining car loads, they being shipped in the name of a third person to enable him to procure a pass to accompany the bank's agent in charge of the shipment. The consignees, before selling the cattle, had notice of the bank's advances and of the draft and bill of lading, and no money was paid nor any right relinquished by them on account of the shipment. Held, that the consignees could not apply the proceeds of the sale to a prior debt of the consignor to them, as against the bank's lien, which was valid against them, even as to the proceeds of the two car loads not included in the bill of lading.—Means v. Bank of Randall, 146 U. S. 620, 13 S. Ct. 186, 36 L. Ed. 1107.

◀18. Operation and effect in general.

A letter to a banker inclosed a note, and asked the banker to discount it, and place the proceedings to the writer's credit, and, in that event, to charge a certain overdraft against the credit. Held, that the banker, having declined the discount, had no right to hold the note as collateral.—Bank of Montreal v. White, 154 U. S. 660, 14 S. Ct. 1191, 26 L. Ed. 307.

◀25. Waiver or loss of lien.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Pigs. §§ 51-57, 60; 7 Cent. Dig. Bills & N. § 357.

Where complainant seeks to recover securities pledged to defendant, and which defendant has sold under the pledge and bought in, the fact that defendant pleads its title under such purchase, which is held invalid, does not deprive it of the right to insist upon its lien as pledgee.—Hubbard v. Tod, 19 S. Ct. 14, 171 U. S. 474, 43 L. Ed. 246, affirming decree 76 F. 905, 22 C. C. A. 606.

Defendant executed notes to a trust company, and delivered choses in action as collateral. The company signed an agreement providing that the proceeds recovered from the choses in action should be applied to pay off the notes, subject to the repayment of moneys expended by the company in prosecuting claims. Held, that the company was not bound to commence or prosecute suits at its own charge and risk.—*Culver v. ◀38. Assignment of pledge or debt.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Pigs. §§ 97-102; 35 Cent. Dig. Mtg. § 604.

Plaintiff E., was indebted to his brother, N., on notes amounting to a large sum, and executed a mortgage to him as collateral security for such amount and for future loans. N. was indebted to U. in a large amount, for which U. held securities as collateral. These N. wished to have released, and asked plaintiff for authority to assign the mortgage to U. as a substitute. Plaintiff wrote to his brother, N., "You are hereby authorized to assign to U. the mortgage which I have given you as collateral security for loans made to me." This letter was intended to be, and was in fact, shown to U. as authority to make the assignment, and the substitution was made. Held that, while the letter was notice that the mortgage was merely a collateral security between the brothers, yet, the letter being unconditional in form, plaintiff was estopped to claim that the mortgage could not be held by U. as security for loans by U. to N., but merely as security for the loans made by N. to plaintiff, which N. had assigned to U.—Matthews v. Warner, 145 U. S. 475, 12 S. Ct. 945, 36 L. Ed. 782, affirming decree (C. C.) 83 F. 369.

Complainants, two years after a sale of bonds pledged as collateral security, without any effort to redeem the bonds, when they had increased to three times their market value at the time of the sale, brought suit to compel the delivery of the bonds, or in default thereof the payment of their present value, less the debt. Held, that as complainants had made no tender of the amount of the debt, and had been credited with the market value of the bonds at the time of the sale on the debt, and had waited until the bonds had greatly increased in value before bringing suit, it must be dismissed when in addition the complainants had indorsed the bonds at the time of the sale knowingly, to enable defendants to give a good title.—Lacombe v. Forstall, 123 U. S. 562, 8 S. Ct. 247, 31 L. Ed. 256.

In a suit in equity to recover securities pledged to defendant by a third person, where it is found that complainant's rights in the securities are subject to the pledge, the court has power to decree the payment of defendant's claim as a condition of their redemption, and, necessarily, to declare complainant's rights extinguished, if the condition is not performed. Decree, 76 F. 905, 22 C. C. A. 606, affirmed.—Hubbard v. Tod, 19 S. Ct. 14, 171 U. S. 474, 43 L. Ed. 246.

56. — Sale of property.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Pigs. §§ 132-133.

K., the owner of the entire capital stock of a corporation whose entire property was invested in land, sold the land to plaintiff, who paid the consideration, and went into possession. K. delivered a deed from the corporation, which was void for defective execution, and agreed to deliver the entire corporate stock, which was then in pledge to a bank for loans to K. Plaintiff, relying on his deed, never required delivery of the stock. Subsequently the bank attempted to foreclose its lien on the stock, by a sale to J., the son in law of the president. J. paid nothing at the sale except a check on the bank, he then having no funds there, which was indorsed by the president. The check was received by the bank, but was never charged to J. or the president. The bank, through an agent, retained the possession of the stock till the agent sold it to J. and another, who was aware of all the circumstances. Held, that the bank was the real purchaser of the stock at the sale, and, as such, continued to hold it subject to redemption by plaintiff.—Minneapolis Agricultural & Mechanical Ass'n v. Canfield, 121 U. S. 295, 7 S. Ct. 887, 30 L. Ed. 962, modifying decree (C. C.) Canfield v. Minneapolis Agricultural & Mechanical Ass'n, 14 F. 801, 4 McCrary, 646.

58. — Actions to enforce right of action pledged.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Pigs. §§ 136-134.

The right of the indorser of a note outstanding and past due to enforce the collateral held by him to secure him against liability on his indorsement, consisting of a note secured by a trust deed, is a matter solely between himself and the pledgors, with which the purchasers of the property covered by the trust deed, under a sale made in attachment proceedings, are not concerned, where they have failed to establish their claim that the collateral had been extinguished by payment. Judgment (1906) 85 P. 459, 16 Okl. 131, affirmed.—Southern Pine Lumber Co. v. Ward, 28 S. Ct. 239, 208 U. S. 128, 52 L. Ed. 420.

A transfer of accounts receivable under a contract by which the transferrer was to make collection at his own expense and retain the proceeds, except discount, advances made, and counsel fees incurred by the transferee to enforce collection, did not embrace counsel fees in bankruptcy proceedings.—*Home Bond Co. v. Act Dec. 17, 1914, § 8, making it unlawful for any person who has not registered or paid tax imposed by the act to have in his possession opium or preparations therefrom, refers to those only who are required by that statute to register and pay the special tax.—United States v. Jin Fuey Moy, 36 S. Ct. 658, 241 U. S. 394, 60 L. Ed. 1061, affirming judgment (D. C.) 225 F. 1003.

1. Control and regulation of postal service in general.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 1.

The power of Congress to establish post offices and post roads is not infringed by Act Pa. April 4, 1868, under which a railway postal clerk, injured in the course of his employment, can have no greater rights against the railway company than if he were an employé.—Judgment (1905) 76 N. E. 1129, 72 Ohio St. 659, affirmed.—Martin v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 100, 203 U. S. 284, 51 L. Ed. 184, 8 Ann. Cas. 87.

2. Constitutional and statutory provisions.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 2.

A state statute requiring every regular passenger train running wholly within the limits of the state to stop at all stations at county seats directly in its course, to take on and discharge passengers, is a reasonable exercise of the police power, and not an unconstitutional interference with the transportation of mail.—Gladson v. State of Minnesota, 17 S. Ct. 627, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. Ed. 1064.

Both the text and the history of Post Office Appropriation Act August 24, 1912, § 2, requiring newspapers and periodicals to file with the Postmaster General and the postmaster at the place where entered, and to publish a sworn statement of the circulation, etc., under penalty of denial of the privileges of the mail, and to mark all paid reading matter "Advertisement," show that the provisions simply supplement existing legislation as to second-class matter, and were not enacted as an exercise of legislative power to regulate the press or curtail its freedom.—Lewis Pub. Co. v. Morgan, 33 S. Ct. 867, 229 U. S. 288, 57 L. Ed. 1190.

3. Post office department.

Persons whose second-class mail privileges have been revoked on the ground that their publications were not periodicals but books, held not entitled to complain of the sufficiency of the hearing before the Department.—Smith v. Hitchcock, 33 S. Ct. 6, 226 U. S. 53, 57 L. Ed. 119, affirming decrees Hitchcock v. Smith, 34 App. D. C. 521, and Same v. Tousey, Id. 535.

The Postmaster General has no authority to contract on behalf of the United States for purchase of devices for pneumatic transportation, either by Post Office Appropriation Act July 13, 1892, § 6, or Rev. St. § 3965 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2708), empowering him to provide for carrying the mails as often as he may think proper.—Beach v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 20, 226 U. S. 243, 57 L. Ed. 205, affirming judgment 41 Ct. Cl. 110.

The authority of a postmaster general under Rev. St. § 161 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 80), to make regulations for the government of the department includes power to prescribe that, in determining the gross receipts of a post office on which under the Act of March 3, 1883, the salary of the postmaster is to be fixed, stamps sold in unusual quantities for other offices shall not be considered: the intent being to make lawful sales, only, the measure of the postmaster's salary and excluding receipts in violation of federal Criminal Code, § 208 (Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, 35 Stat. 1128 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1650]).—United States v. Foster, 34 S. Ct. 668, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing judgment (D. C.) 211 F. 208.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. §§ 5, 6.

Under 12 Stat. 220, c. 84, § 10 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2504], providing that no contract on behalf of the United States shall be made unless authorized by law, or under an appropriation adequate for its fulfillment, except in certain cases in the war and navy departments, the power of the postmaster general "to establish post offices" does not authorize him to bind the United States by a lease for a post office building; there being no appropriation therefor.—Chase v. United States, 155 U. S. 489, 15 S. Ct. 174, 39 L. Ed. 284, affirming judgment (C. C.) 44 F. 732.

7. Postmasters.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. §§ 7-14.

Act Cong. July 1, 1864, classifying postmasters and fixing their salaries, provides (section 2) that "the postmaster general shall review once in two years, and as much oftener as he may deem expedient, and readjust * * * the salary of any office," etc. By the act of June 12, 1866, § 8, the act of 1864 was amended by adding the following proviso to its second section: "That when the quarterly returns of any postmaster of the third, fourth, or fifth class show that the salary allowed is ten per centum less than it would be on the basis of commissions under the act of 1864, fixing compensation, then the postmaster general shall review and readjust under the provisions of said [second] section." Held, that these enactments did not impose on the postmaster general a legal duty to readjust the salaries of postmasters oftener than once in two years; that such readjustment, when it took place, could only establish the amount of the salary for two years thereafter, and could be made only when there were quarterly returns for two years preceding such readjustment on which it could be based.—United States v. Vilas, 124 U. S. 86, 8 S. Ct. 422, 31 L. Ed. 29.

On the raising of a post office to the third class the postmaster is entitled to the increased salary from the first day of the quarter next following the order of the postmaster general assigning the office to such class, and fixing his salary (Act March 3, 1883, c. 142: 22 Stat. 600, 602 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2620, 2622]), and his rights cannot be affected by a subsequent order of the sixth auditor, or by the time of the issue of his commission from the president.—United States v. Wilson, 144 U. S. 24, 12 S. Ct. 539, 36 L. Ed. 332, affirming judgment Wilson v. United States, 26 Ct. Cl. 186.

The act of June 17, 1878 (1 Supp. Rev. St. p. 186, c. 259, § 1 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2614]), provides that the postmaster general, if satisfied that a postmaster has made false returns of his business, may, in his discretion, withhold commissions on such returns, and allow any compensation that under the circumstances he may deem reasonable. Held, that an order of the postmaster general, reciting that he is satisfied that a certain postmaster has made false returns, and fixing a compensation which he deems reasonable, is not conclusive on the postmaster and his sureties in an action on his official bond to recover moneys alleged to have been illegally withheld according to such false returns, but such order is only prima facie evidence, which defendants may contradict by other evidence.—United States v. Dumas, 149 U. S. 278, 13 S. Ct. 872, 37 L. Ed. 734.

A readjustment of the salary of a postmaster, under Acts Cong. March 3, 1883, c. 119 (22 Stat. 487), and August 4, 1886, c. 903 (24 Stat. 256, 307) § 8, when the quarterly returns for a period of two years show that his salary is ten per cent. less than his commissions would have been for that period, under Act June 22, 1854, c. 61 (10 Stat. 298), must be made to begin with the next succeeding quarter, and cannot apply to the biennial period for which the returns have been made. Judgment, Ewing v. United States, 35 Ct. Cl. 374, reversed.—United States v. Ewing, 22 S. Ct. 480, 184 U. S. 140, 46 L. Ed. 471.

The gross receipts of a post office upon which under Act March 3, 1883, compensation of a postmaster is to be fixed, do not include receipts from violations of federal Criminal Code, § 208 (Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, 35 Stat. 1128 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1850]), making it a crime to dispose of stamps outside the delivery of the post office or to induce purchase thereof to increase his compensation.—United States v. Foster, 34 S. Ct. 666, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing judgment (D. C.) 211 F. 206.

10. Letter carriers.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 17.

Under the letter carriers' eight-hour law (Act May 24, 1888; 25 Stat. 157 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2637]) a letter carrier is entitled to extra pay for work in excess of eight hours, whether such excess is employed in duties strictly pertaining to carrying letters, or in other work in the post office, which is authorized by the regulations of the department, and required by the postmaster.—United States v. Post, 148 U. S. 124, 13 S. Ct. 567, 37 L. Ed. 392, affirming judgment Post v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 244.

Under the letter carriers' eight-hour law (Act May 24, 1888 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2637]) the government cannot set off against a claim for extra hours' work on certain days a deficit of hours occurring because the carrier worked less than eight hours on Sundays and legal holidays.—United States v. Gates, 148 U. S. 134, 13 S. Ct. 570, 37 L. Ed. 396.

12. Postal revenues, property, funds, and accounts.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 19.

Rev. St. § 4057, relative to the recovery of funds of the post-office department wrongfully paid out, provides, among other cases, that where such funds have been paid "by the mistake, collusion, or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the postmaster-general shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment." Held, that the word "mistake," as here used, includes the erroneous construction or application of a statute; and therefore where money has been illegally paid, by reason of misconstruction of the law, and the postmaster general has money of the recipient in his possession, he need not pay it over, and then sue for the illegal payments, but he may hold it subject to the decision of the court in a suit by the claimant.—Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 45, 164 U. S. 190, 41 L. Ed. 399.

II. MAILABLE MATTER, TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF MAIL, AND MONEY ORDERS.

Review of fraud orders on certiorari, see Certiorari, 21.

United States, claims against, on purchase of pneumatic transportation devices, see United States, 95.

14. Exclusion of matter from mails.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 21.

The constitutional grant of power to congress to establish post offices and post roads carried with it all the powers necessary to make the grant effective, including the power to forbid the use of the mails to carry matter used in the dissemination of crime or immorality.—Ex parte Rapier, 143 U. S. 110, 12 S. Ct. 374, 36 L. Ed. 93.

With respect to this power no distinction can be made between mala in se and mala prohibita, and the question as to what shall be excluded must be left to congress, in the exercise of a sound discretion.—Id.

Act Cong. Sept. 19, 1890 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2659], excluding lottery matter from the mails, is within the constitutional power conferred by the grant of authority to establish post offices and post roads, and in no way abridges the freedom of the press or the right of free communication.—Ex parte Rapier, 143 U. S. 110, 12 S. Ct. 374, 36 L. Ed. 93; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 12 S. Ct. 407, 36 L. Ed. 126, affirming order (D. C.) United States v. Horner, 44 F. 677.

Books complete in themselves are not, because published at stated intervals and in consecutive numbers, entitled to second-class postage rates under Act March 3, 1879, c. 180, § 10, 20 Stat. 355, 358 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2646], as "periodical publications," although they conform in every respect to the conditions of section 14 of that act, upon which a publication shall be admitted to the second class.—Houghton v. Payne, 24 S. Ct. 590, 184 U. S. 88, 48 L. Ed. 888; Smith v. Payne, 24 S. Ct. 595, 184 U. S. 104, 48 L. Ed. 893.

The refusal by the Postmaster General to admit to the mails as a periodical publication, entitled to second-class rates, a monthly musical publication, each issue of which is complete in itself, treating of the works of a single master musician, with a greater portion of its pages devoted to specimens of his genius, is not so clearly an erroneous exercise of his discretion as to call for interference by the courts.—Bates & Guild Co. v. Payne, 24 S. Ct. 595, 184 U. S. 106, 48 L. Ed. 894.

Books embraced in mail matter of the third class by Act March 3, 1879, § 17, cannot be given the benefit of second-class postal rates accorded by section 14 to periodical publications, by publishing them in a series at regular intervals.—Smith v. Hitchcock, 33 S. Ct. 6, 226 U. S. 53, 57 L. Ed. 119, affirming decrees Hitchcock v. Smith, 34 App. D. C. 521, and Same v. Tousey, Id. 535.

Weekly 32-page publications containing a single story by the same author, containing nothing else, except a roll of honor with answers to inquiries, etc., are not "periodical publications," entitled to second-class postal rates under Act March 3, 1879, § 14, but are "books" which, by section 17, take the higher third-class rate.—Id.

21. Contracts for carrying mails.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. §§ 27-32.

A regulation of the post office department that contracts in a section of the country are to be let for four years cannot be held to impose any obligation on the postmaster general so that a contract, to be implied from services rendered after the expiration of a written contract, should be construed to last four years, but is merely designed to further the administration of business.—Jacksonville, P. & M. R. Co. v. United States, 118 U. S. 626, 7 S. Ct. 48, 30 L. Ed. 273.

Where, in the condition for the carrying of the United States mails, attendant on a land grant to a railroad corporation, the postmaster general is empowered to establish the price until fixed by congress, such power includes the power to prescribe the period of its duration, which is in his discretion, unless collateral stipulations, which could not be enforced without consent of the company, are annexed to the agreement with him; for in that case a contract is created which cannot be disregarded by the government without a breach of good faith.—Id.

Plaintiff, a railroad company, carried the United States mails for four years under a written contract with the postmaster general. It was bound to carry the mails, under the terms of its land grant, at such prices as congress should by law direct. After the expiration of the written contract the company continued to perform the same services for four years more, receiving pay for some months at the old rate, then at a reduced rate fixed by the postmaster general, and then at rates reduced twice successively by acts of congress, of which plaintiff received notice. Held, on action to recover the difference between the rates as reduced by congress and the rate fixed by the postmaster general, that no right could be implied against the government from the continuance of the services, nor was plaintiff bound by the terms of its written contract by reason of such continuance.—Id.

A person entered into two mail contracts, one for "mail messenger service, * * * for carrying the mails between the New York city post office and the railroad stations and steamboat landings, and between the several stations where transfer service is required"; the other for "mail station service * * * between New York city post office and branch offices." Compensation for increased services was excluded in the former contract, but provided for in the latter. Held, that service between station E, No. 465 Eighth avenue, and Hudson River Railroad depot, was "mail station service."—United States v. Otis, 120 U. S. 115, 7 S. Ct. 449, 30 L. Ed. 609.

Service between New York City post office and the Pennsylvania Railroad depot in Jersey City, New Jersey, was "mail station service," and the undertaking contained in the "mail messenger service" contract to perform additional duties without compensation covered only service in the city of New York.—Id.

Rev. St. § 3962 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2704], provides that "the postmaster general may make deductions from the pay of [mail] contractors, for failures to perform service according to contract. * * * He may deduct the price of the trip in all cases where the trip is not performed, and not exceeding three times the price if the failure be occasioned by the fault of the contractor or carrier." Held, that this section, so far as applicable to railroad companies, was not repealed by Act March 3, 1879, § 5 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2648], providing that the postmaster general shall, for every failure of a railroad company to deliver mail on schedule time, deduct not less than one-half the price of the trip, and, where the trip is not performed, not less than the price of one trip, and not exceeding, in either case, the price of three trips. The latter section merely makes an exception to the provisions of section 3962 as to railroad companies, and on repeal of that section of the act of 1879 the provisions of section 3962 are again in force.—Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 127 U. S. 406, 8 S. Ct. 1194, 32 L. Ed. 180.

The contract of plaintiff, a railroad company, for carrying mails, expired June 30, 1877, after which, however, it continued to carry them. Act Cong. July 12, 1876 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2721], directed the postmaster general to reduce the compensation of railroad companies; and such officer, on December 20, 1877, readjusted plaintiff's compensation, allowing from July 1, 1877, to June 30, 1881, the maximum authorized by the act, the order and notice containing the qualification, "unless otherwise ordered." Act June 17, 1878 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2722], directed a further similar reduction of 5 per cent. after July 1, 1878, which was effected by an order of July 12, 1878, and due notice to plaintiff. Plaintiff continued to carry the mails, receiving, without objection, the reduced compensation. Held, that the reservation, "unless otherwise ordered," in the former order, gave the postmaster general the right to make the 5 per cent. reduction, even if such order and its acceptance constituted a contract.—Eastern R. Co. v. United States, 129 U. S. 391, 9 S. Ct. 320, 32 L. Ed. 730.

The order of reduction and notice to plaintiff under the act of June 17, 1878 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2722], constituted an offer which plaintiff might accept or decline; and receiving the reduced compensation without objection constituted an acceptance.—Id.

Where the contract provides that the postmaster general may impose certain forfeitures on the contractor for failure to carry the mail within the prescribed time, the exercise of such authority is not subject to review.—Allman v. United States, 131 U. S. 31, 9 S. Ct. 632, 33 L. Ed. 51.

Rev. St. U. S. § 3960 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2702], provides that "compensation for additional service in carrying the mail shall not be in excess of the exact proportion which the original compensation bears to the original service." Section 3961 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2702], provides that an allowance for increased expedition "shall bear no greater proportion to the additional stock and carriers necessarily employed than the compensation in the original contract bears to the stock and carriers necessarily employed in its execution." Act Cong. April 7, 1880 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2703], provides that the service under a contract shall not be expedited "to a rate of pay exceeding fifty per centum upon the contract as originally let." Held that, where the number of trips per week to be made by the carrier, and the rate of speed, are increased, the compensation for the increased speed will be computed on the allowance for the service, including the additional trips.—Id.

Under the regulations of the post office department of 1873, providing that "the postmaster general may order an increase or extension of service on a route by allowing therefor a pro rata increase on the contract pay," the postmaster general may increase the service by changing a route, and enlarging the distance to be traveled, without advertising for bids, where the carrying of the mails between the original termini is thereby facilitated.—United States v. Barlow, 132 U. S. 271, 10 S. Ct. 77, 33 L. Ed. 346.

Rev. St. U. S. § 3961 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2702], provides that "no extra allowance shall be made for any increase of expedition in carrying the mail, unless thereby the employment of additional stock and carriers is made necessary." Section 4057 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2756], provides that "in all cases where money has been paid out of the funds of the post office department under the pretense that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed, * * * and in all other cases where money of the department has been paid to any person in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by the mistake, collusion, or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the postmaster general shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment."

Held, that payments made for expediting the mail service under a mistake as to the additional number of men and animals required, and in ignorance that none were employed, could be recovered back by the government.—Id.

Where such mistake was caused by fraudulent representations of the contractors, it is immaterial whether or not such fraud was participated in by the subordinate officers of the department.—Id.

Under a contract for carrying the mails "from S., by St. R. and N., to G., 15 miles, and back," the post office department deducted part of the contractor's agreed compensation, by reason of his having made his return trips by another route than that specified. Held, that a finding that the contract was so construed by both the contractor and the department as to permit this, thus allowing the contractor to recover the deductions, could not be sustained on the grounds that, as Rev. St. § 3849 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2617], makes it the duty of postmasters to report delinquencies of contractors to the postmaster general, the presumption was that the postmasters on the route had advised the department of the delinquency, and that an officer of the department had certified that the mails had been carried on the route "without any failure or delinquencies, so far as shown by returns received," where it was not shown that the postmasters knew of the terms of the contract and the delinquency, and it appeared that the postmaster general repudiated the contractor's methods on being informed thereof, as the certificate indicated that the "returns received" did not show the delinquency.—United States v. Carr, 132 U. S. 644, 10 S. Ct. 182, 33 L. Ed. 483.

Under Rev. St. U. S. § 4057 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2756], providing that, "in all cases where money has been paid out of the funds of the post office department under the pretense that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed," suit may be brought for its recovery, money so paid out by mistake may be deducted from other money due the payee.—Id.

Rev. St. U. S. § 3961, provides that no extra allowance shall be made for increase of expedition in carrying the mails, unless employment of additional stock and carriers is made necessary thereby. Section 4057 provides that, where money is paid out of the post office department under pretense that service has been performed, or as additional allowance for increased service actually rendered, when the sum paid was greater than allowed by law, and in all other cases when it was paid in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by mistake, collusion, or misconduct of an officer or employé in the postal service, such money may be recovered by suit. Held that, in such suit, a petition which alleges that defendant, who had a contract to carry the mails on a schedule of 62 hours a trip, represented that the schedule time should be expedited to 40 hours, and certified that 50 per cent. more men and horses would be necessary on the new schedule; that the postmaster general made an order reducing the schedule to 43 hours, and allowing defendant the additional amount; that before the schedule was reduced defendant had been carrying the mail on a line of stage coaches, which he ran for his own convenience and benefit, on a schedule time of less than 43 hours; and that, therefore, no additional men or horses were required on the reduced schedule, —does not state a cause of action, since it does not allege that the additional amount was paid by mistake, or through fraudulent representations of defendant, or that if, instead of using his stage line, he had run on the 62-hour schedule, as he had a right to do, it would not have taken 50 per cent. more men and horses to reduce the time to 43 hours.—United States v. Voorhees, 135 U. S. 550, 10 S. Ct. 841, 34 L. Ed. 258.

Under the regulations of the post office department of 1873, providing that "the postmaster general may order an increase or extension of service on a route by allowing therefor a pro rata increase on the contract pay," the postmaster general may increase the service by changing a route, and enlarging the distance to be traveled, without advertising for bids, where the carrying of the mails between the original termini is thereby facilitated.—United States v. Chidester, 11 S. Ct. 650, 140 U. S. 49, 35 L. Ed. 339.

Rev. St. U. S. § 3961, provides that "no extra allowance shall be made for any increase of expedition in carrying the mail, unless thereby the employment of additional stock and carriers is made necessary." Section 4057 provides that "in all cases where money has been paid out of the funds of the post office department under the pretense that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed, * * * and in all other cases where money of the department has been paid to any person in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by the mistake, collusion, or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the postmaster general shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment." Held, that payments made for expediting the mail service under a mistake as to the additional number of men and animals required, and in ignorance that none were employed, could be recovered back by the government.—Id.

The postal appropriations act of July 12, 1876 (19 Stat. 78 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2722]), provides, in section 13, that railroad companies whose roads were constructed "in whole or in part" by a land grant from congress, on condition that the mails should be transported at the price fixed by congress, shall receive only 80 per cent. of the compensation authorized by this act. With regard to companies owning roads made up of parts, some of which were aided by land grants, and some not, this act was construed from 1876 to 1885 by five successive postmaster generals to reduce the compensation only as to the parts so aided. Held, that this was in accordance with the equities of the case, if not with the literal wording of the statute, and hence the construction of the department should be regarded as conclusive on subsequent officials and the courts.—United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., 142 U. S. 615, 12 S. Ct. 306, 35 L. Ed. 1134.

Even if there was no actual fraud by the contractor, the government was entitled to recover under a count for money paid out by mistake; for if the increased allowances were made in reliance on the contractor's statements as to the increased number of horses and men required, while in fact the number actually required and used was much less, then the payment was by mistake, within the meaning of the statute. Rev. St. § 4057 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2756].—United States v. Piatt, 157 U. S. 113, 15 S. Ct. 498, 39 L. Ed. 639.

In an action by the United States to recover money from a mail contractor, the first count of the complaint, after setting out the original contract, alleged various subsequent agreements for increased compensation for the purpose of expediting the service, and then averred that the additional allowances were made solely upon the basis of defendant's false representations as to the additional "men and horses" required by the expedited schedule, and that by means thereof, and by false vouchers, defendant procured excessive payments. Rev. St. § 3961 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2702], provides that no extra compensation shall be made for increased expedition in carrying the mails, unless thereby the employment of additional "stock and carriers" is made necessary. Held that, whatever might be the meaning of the words "stock and carriers," they at least included men and horses; that, as the postmaster general could only allow increased compensation in conformity with the statute, it must be assumed that he did so on the basis of the representations; and that, as defendants had agreed to the amendments of the contract, they were estopped from asserting that the representation was not intended to bring the contract within the statute; and held, further, that if "stock and carriers" does not include "men and horses," then the postmaster general had no right to make the increased allowances, and the excessive payments might be recovered under the express provisions of Rev. St. § 4057 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2756], relating to the institution of suits to recover moneys paid out of the funds of the post office department under false pretenses, collusion, mistake, etc.; so that, in either event, the count stated a good cause of action.—Id.

Excessive extra allowances paid to a subcontractor for carrying the mails, upon the faith of false representations as to the number of "horses and men" required for expediting the service, which false representations were made by the original contractor in the interest and at the instigation of the subcontractor, may be recovered from the latter by an action brought under Rev. St. § 4057 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2756].—United States v. Piatt, 157 U. S. 113, 15 S. Ct. 498, 39 L. Ed. 639; Same v. Salisbury, 157 U. S. 121, 15 S. Ct. 501, 39 L. Ed. 639.

Where a railroad company whose road was constructed in part by governmental aid has for years accorded free transportation to post-office inspectors pursuant to a claim of the department therefor, contained in their commissions, and has made no demand for payment at the time or long after, such acquiescence amounts to a waiver of any claim for compensation.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 35, 164 U. S. 93, 41 L. Ed. 362, distinguishing Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 104 U. S. 662, 26 L. Ed. 884.

The fact that a railroad company has claimed and been awarded compensation for certain services in connection with the mails, and at the same time has failed to make any charge or claim for the transportation of post-office inspectors, is evidence of a waiver of any claim for the latter services.—Id.

Act June 3, 1856 (11 Stat. 20, c. 43), granting lands to the state of Wisconsin to aid in the construction of certain railroads, provided (section 5) that "the United States mail shall be transported over said roads under the direction of the postoffice department at such price as congress may by law direct," and that, "until such price is fixed by law, the postmaster-general shall have the power to determine the same." Act May 5, 1864 (13 Stat. 66, c. 80), again granted lands to the state for three specified lines of road, expressly providing that the grant was made upon "the same terms and conditions" as the grant of 1856. The general subject-matter of all sections of the act of 1856 except section 5 was expressly re-enacted by act of 1864, such re-enactment being rendered necessary by certain changes in these sections. Held, that the "terms and conditions" referred to by the act of 1864 embraced the condition prescribed by section 5 of the act of 1856.—Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 45, 164 U. S. 190, 41 L. Ed. 399.

Act July 12, 1876 (19 Stat. 78, c. 179), authorizing the postmaster general to readjust the rates of compensation for the transportation of the mails, provides (section 13) that "railroad companies whose railroad was constructed in whole or in part by a land grant made by congress on the condition that the mails should be transported over their road at such price as congress should by law direct, shall receive only eighty per centum of the compensation authorized by this act." A railroad constructed by the aid of a land grant made in 1864 on the above condition was paid full rates for carrying the mails for a portion of the time prior to January 8, 1884. On this date the postmaster general directed that from July 1, 1883, the compensation should be reduced to the rate fixed by the act of 1876, and also restated the account for carrying the mails prior to July 1, 1883, and deducted out of moneys earned since the latter date the excess above 80 per cent. paid for the prior period. Held, that the railroad company was not entitled to recover the sum so deducted. Mr. Justice Peckham dissenting.—Id.

Abandonment of a contract to carry mail is prima facie established in a suit by the federal government on a mail contractor's bond by the introduction in evidence of the official finding of the Postmaster General that he was a failing contractor, together with the official reports of the local postmaster, upon which the finding was based. Judgment, 113 F. 1021, 51 C. C. A. 688, reversed.—United States v. McCoy, 24 S. Ct. 528, 193 U. S. 593, 48 L. Ed. 805.

The Postmaster General may cancel a mail contract, the service under which has been materially decreased by using street cars to carry mail, in the exercise of his authority under the contract and U. S. Postal Laws and Regulations, § 817, to increase, decrease, or extend the service contracted for without change of pay, and to discontinue the entire service whenever the public interests, in his judgment, require it.—Slavens v. United States, 25 S. Ct. 229, 196 U. S. 229, 49 L. Ed. 457, affirming judgment 38 Ct. Cl. 574; Travis v. Same, 25 S. Ct. 233, 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. Ed. 461, affirming judgment 38 Ct. Cl. 590.

A change of service under a mail contract, by directing the carrying of the mails to and from street cars at certain street crossings, is fairly within the power reserved by the contract in the Postmaster General to order, without additional compensation, any additional service caused by change of location of post office, stations, or landings, or by the establishment of others than those existing at the time of the contract, or rendered necessary, in his judgment, from any cause, and to change the schedule, vary the routes, and increase, decrease, or extend the service, without change of pay.—Id.

A contractor for carrying the mails is not entitled to extra compensation for services outside the terms of his contract, which were performed in compliance with the unauthorized demand of the local postmaster, where, upon protest to the Postmaster General, the contractor was promptly relieved from such services, and another contract was made for their performance.—Id.

The adjustment of compensation to a railway company for carrying the mails, made by the Postmaster General in the exercise of his authority under Rev. St. U. S. § 4002 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2719], to arrange the railway routes upon which the mail is to be carried, and to adjust and readjust compensation, may be confined, where an extension is made beyond the terminal of an established mail route, to the extension alone, without readjusting the compensation for the whole route as extended.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. United States, 25 S. Ct. 665, 198 U. S. 385, 49 L. Ed. 1064.

The carriage of the mails up and down the steps at elevated railroad stations is called for by a contract for performing the covered regulation wagon, mail messenger, transfer, and mail station service or a mail route, in which the contractor agreed to take the mails from and deliver them to the post offices, mail stations, and cars. Judgment, 39 Ct. Cl. 420, affirmed.—United States v. Utah, N. & C. Stage Co., 26 S. Ct. 69, 199 U. S. 414, 50 L. Ed. 251.

The positive statement in the government's advertisement for proposals for services on a mail route that the number of elevated stations to be served was two, whereas in fact there were four to be served, entitles the contractor to additional compensation for the extra service thereby necessitated, although the advertisement required bidders to inform themselves as to the facts, and stated that additional compensation would not be allowed for mistakes.—Id.

An increase in the service required on a mail route, as the result of the establishment of a new distributing station in the city of New York, amounting to more than 300,000 miles of additional transfer service, and involving an additional expenditure of nearly $10,000 for ferry tolls, cannot be required by the Postmaster General without extra compensation, under the authority reserved to him in the contract to call for new, additional, mail messenger, or transfer service without additional compensation.—Id.

A railway company carrying the mails over a continuous route which includes certain land-aided railroads is only entitled to the landgrant rates for those portions of the route, under the provisions of Act July 12, 1876, c. 179, § 13, 19 Stat. 82 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2722), that railroad companies whose railroad was constructed in whole or in part by a grant of land made by Congress on the condition that the mails should be transported over their roads at such price as Congress should by law direct should receive only 80 per cent. of the compensation fixed by that act for similar service for nonland-aided roads, which provisions must be construed as extending not only to the original land-aided companies, but to every other company carrying the mails over such roads. Judgment (1908) 43 Ct. Cl. 595, affirmed.—Chicago, St. P., M. & O. Ry. Co. v. United States, 30 S. Ct. 470, 217 U. S. 180, 54 L. Ed. 721.

The service contemplated by a screen wagon mail service contract for carriage between the post office and railway mail stations at Omaha must be deemed to include the mails to and from all the railroads using the union station at that point, although some of such railroads were not specifically named in the contract, where it had long been the practice of the government and the screen wagon contractors to regard such service as a part of the contract, and the public advertisement for proposals, expressly made a part of the contract, warned bidders to familiarize themselves with the situation by personal investigation and inquiry.—(1912) Huse v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 119, 222 U. S. 496, 56 L. Ed. 285, affirming judgment (1908) 44 Ct. Cl. 19.

The authority of the Postmaster General, under Act March 2, 1907, as to additional compensation for railway post office car service, extends to fixing the same price for the longer as for the shorter cars.—Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 702, 225 U. S. 640, 56 L. Ed. 1236.

United States held not liable as on implied contract to pay reasonable value of railway post office car service where the railway company, being under no obligation to supply post office cars, chose to furnish such service.—Id.

The express authority to discontinue a contract to carry the mails on payment of one month's extra pay and to make such contracts as are deemed best, given to the United States by the terms of the proposal that led up to the contract, cannot be read out of it as inapplicable to the situation relating to mails over designated routes in Alaska, whatever may be the difficulties of performance.—Miller v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 570, 233 U. S. 1, 58 L. Ed. 823, affirming judgment 47 Ct. Cl. 146.

The exercise by the Postmaster General of his authority to discontinue the contract for the carriage of the mails over designated routes in Alaska cannot be revised by the courts in the absence of fraudulent motive or bad faith.—Id.

23. Delivery of mail in general.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 43, 45.

The ruling of the Post Office Department that mail addressed to the "National Life Insurance Company" at Chicago, Ill., without street or office address, be delivered to the corporation of that name, and not to a company subsequently incorporated, with a similar name, will not be interfered with because, judging from past experience, the very great majority of the mail so addressed is, in fact, intended for the latter company.—National Life Ins. Co. of United States v. National Life Ins. Co., 28 S. Ct. 541, 209 U. S. 317, 52 L. Ed. 808.

The courts will not interfere, where no palpable error appears, with the ruling of the Postoffice Department, that mail addressed, "Central Trust Co., Chicago, Ill.," with no further designation of the party for whom it is intended, be delivered to the "Central Trust Company of Illinois," an Illinois banking corporation, and not to a foreign corporation, engaged in the mining, promoting, real estate, and trust business, in the city of Chicago, under the name of the "Central Trust Company."—(1910) Central Trust Co. v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois, 30 S. Ct. 341, 216 U. S. 251, 54 L. Ed. 469, 17 Ann. Cas. 1066, affirming decree (1907) 152 F. 427, 81 C. C. A. 569, which affirmed (C. C. 1906) 149 F. 789.

26. Fraud orders and return of mail to senders.

The postmaster general is not justified in prohibiting the delivery of letters addressed to a corporation which assumes to heal disease through the influence of the mind, by the provisions of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 3929, 4041 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2686, 2749], and Act Cong. March 2, 1895, § 4, 28 Stat. 963, 964, c. 191 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3150], which authorize the retention of letters directed to any person obtaining money through the mails by false pretenses or promises, as the effectiveness of such treatment is a mere matter of opinion, and the statutes are only intended to cover cases of actual fraud in fact.—American School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 23 S. Ct. 33, 187 U. S. 94, 47 L. Ed. 90, reversing judgment (C. C.) 102 F. 565.

A financial co-operative scheme which contemplates the creation of a fund out of enrollment fees and monthly dues, to be returned to the members at the end of a fixed period of membership in the shape of "realizations," the amount of which will depend upon the growth in membership, the plan being certain to involve a loss to every one interested as soon as the number of members ceases to increase, because of the absence of any provision for a reserve fund, is a lottery, or scheme for the distribution of money by lot or chance, within the meaning of the provisions of Rev. St. U. S. § 3929 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2686], as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, c. 908, 26 Stat. 465 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2686], and of Rev. St. U. S. § 4041 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2749], and of Act March 2, 1895, c. 191, § 4, 28 Stat. 964 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], empowering the Postmaster General to deny the privileges of the mails and the money order and registered letter service. Judgment (C. C.) 121 F. 927, affirmed.—Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 24 S. Ct. 789, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. Ed. 1092.

The interference with purely private or domestic mail matter of individuals, which may be caused by the seizure and return of letters directed to persons engaged in certain prohibited enterprises, under a "fraud order" issued by the Postmaster General under the authority of Rev. St. U. S. § 3929 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, c. 908, 26 Stat. 465 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2686], and of Act March 2, 1895, c. 191, § 4, 28 Stat. 964 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], does not render such legislation repugnant to the federal Constitution.—Id.

An objection to the constitutionality of the provisions of Rev. St. U. S. § 3929 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, c. 908, 26 Stat. 465 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2686], and of Act March 2, 1895, c. 191, § 4, 28 Stat. 964 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], empowering the Postmaster General to direct the seizure and return to the sender of all mail matter addressed to persons conducting certain prohibited enterprises, on the ground that such legislation authorizes an interference with the purely domestic and private mail matter of individuals, cannot be successfully urged to invalidate a "fraud order" of the Postmaster General which only directs the return of all mail matter directed to the alleged fraudulent concerns or their officers or agents as such.—Id.

A change of title of the property of the addressee of registered letters is not so affected by the seizure and return to the sender, under a "fraud order" issued by the Postmaster General under the authority of Rev. St. U. S. § 3929 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], as amended by Act Sept. 19, 1890, c. 908, 26 Stat. 465 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2686], and of Act March 2, 1895, c. 191, § 4, 28 Stat. 964 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2688], as to render such legislation repugnant to the federal Constitution, as authorizing confiscation.—Id.

It is no defense to an indictment for mailing nonmailable matter, in violation of Rev. St. § 3893 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2658], as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, c. 1039, § 2 (25 Stat. 496), alleging that defendant had in his possession a large number of obscene pictures, and deposited in a certain post office a letter giving information where such pictures might be obtained, that the letter was deposited in the mails at the instance of an officer of the government, where it does not appear that the officer intended to induce the commission of a crime, nor that the letter was directed to a fictitious person, and therefore there could be, in law, no intent to give information to any one, it having been mailed with a view of giving information to the receiver, no matter what his name.—Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 15 S. Ct. 470, 39 L. Ed. 556, affirming judgment (D. C.) United States v. Grimm, 50 F. 528.

On a prosecution for mailing obscene matter, defendant is not entitled to an acquittal merely because he did not know that the matter might be characterized as obscene.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 16 S. Ct. 434, 480, 40 L. Ed. 606.

Rev. St. § 3893 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2658], making it a criminal offense to place in the mails any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious publication" refers only to publications which are immoral by reason of their relation to sexual impurity, the words having the same meaning as is given them at common law in prosecutions for obscene libel.—Swearingin v. United States, 161 U. S. 446, 16 S. Ct. 562, 40 L. Ed. 765.

That defendant's offense was one of which he was guilty through his entrapment by a government inspector affords him no ground of defense.—Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 16 S. Ct. 798, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

It is no valid objection to a conviction of mailing obscene matter that the government inspector who instigated the prosecution, on being informed that the law was being violated, wrote decoy letters, in answer to which defendant mailed the objectionable matter.—Price v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 366, 165 U. S. 311, 41 L. Ed. 727.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 61.

A private letter containing obscene matter, inclosed in an envelope on which there is nothing written but the address, is not within the inhibition of Act Cong. July 12, 1876, § 1 (19 Stat. 90), which makes it a misdemeanor to deposit in the mails any "obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character," or any "letter upon the envelope of which" indecent language is written or printed.—United States v. Chase, 135 U. S. 255, 10 S. Ct. 756, 34 L. Ed. 117.

The insertion of the word "letter," however, after the word "paper," and before the word "writing," in such section, by the amendatory act of September 26, 1888 (25 Stat. 496) [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2661], which declares nonmailable "every obscene * * * book, pamphlet, picture, paper, letter, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character, * * * whether sealed as first-class matter or not," brought such a letter within the inhibition of the statute.—Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 15 S. Ct. 470, 39 L. Ed. 550, affirming judgment (D. C.) 50 F. 528; Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 16 S. Ct. 798, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 54.

On February 11, 1864, the Austrian government, to raise a loan of 40,000,000 florins, issued bonds, each of which was for 100 florins and bore upon its face the number of the series to which it belonged, and its number in that series. The bonds were not payable at any day certain, but the date of payment was to be determined by drawings; whereby it was determined which series was to be redeemed, and the amount to be paid for each bond. For the first ten years there were to be five drawings a year; for the next ten years, four drawings a year; for the third ten years, three drawings a year; and thereafter, up to and including the fifty-fifth year, there were to be two drawings a year, at the end of which time all the bonds were to be paid. Under this plan the smallest amount to be paid for any bond thus selected for redemption during the first year was 135 gulden, during the second year 140 gulden, during the third year 145 gulden, and so on, increasing 5 gulden each year until the amount reached 200 gulden, which amount then remained stationary until all were redeemed. In addition to this there were certain bonds to be paid in each year for which large sums were to be given, ranging from 250,000 gulden to 400 gulden, and these bonds were also to be determined by chance at the drawings. Held, that the scheme of these bonds is an "enterprise, offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance," and was in the nature of "a lottery" or so-called "gift concert," within the meaning of Rev. St. § 3894, as amended by the act of September 19, 1890, 26 Stat. 465 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2659], and that a person who sends through the mails a circular containing an announcement of the bonds redeemed at a certain drawing, and a notification of the time of subsequent drawings, is guilty of a violation of that act.—Horner v. United States, 147 U. S. 449, 13 S. Ct. 409, 37 L. Ed. 237, distinguishing Hohn v. Koehler, 96 N. Y. 362, 48 Am. Rep. 628.

Making false and fraudulent representations through the mails to prospective buyers of cattle, to promote a scheme to defraud by inducing them to come and inspect the cattle, after which inferior cattle were to be substituted in the place of those inspected and sold, is not punishable under Rev. St. § 3894 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2659), making criminal the use of the mails in furtherance of lotteries, or schemes of gain dependent upon chance, or "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," but such acts constitute the offense prohibited by section 5480 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696) of using the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud.—United States v. Stever, 32 S. Ct. 51, 222 U. S. 167, 56 L. Ed. 145.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 55.

Rev. St. § 5480 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], as amended by Act March 2, 1889, provides that if any person, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud by correspondence through the mails, shall, in executing such scheme, place any letter or circular in the post office, he shall be liable to prosecution. Held, that the fact that the communication placed in the mails by the promoter of a fraudulent investment company contained merely statements as to the future profits which would accrue to investors, and not misrepresentations as to existing facts, did not affect his liability.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 16 S. Ct. 508, 40 L. Ed. 709.

Rev. St. § 5480 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], as amended by Act March 2, 1889, provides that if any person, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud by correspondence through the mails, shall, in executing such scheme, place any letter or circular in the post office, he shall be liable to prosecution. Held, that the letters need not have been such as would be effective in carrying out the fraudulent scheme.—Id.

The offense of using the mails in furtherance of "schemes devised for the purpose of obtaining money or property under false pretenses," denounced by Rev. St. § 3894 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2659), includes only schemes having a similitude to the lottery and other like schemes particularly described by the particular words of the section, and does not cover the use of the mails to promote other schemes to obtain money or property by means of false pretenses, which is embraced by the provisions of section 5480 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696), making criminal the use of the mails to carry on any scheme or artifice to defraud.—United States v. Stever, 32 S. Ct. 51, 222 U. S. 167, 56 L. Ed. 145.

The mailing of letters in execution of a scheme to defraud could be made a criminal offense, as was done by Cr. Code, § 215, though the fraudulent scheme be outside the jurisdiction of Congress.—Badders v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 367, 240 U. S. 391, 60 L. Ed. 708.

Persons using false representations in sale of farms held engaged in scheme to defraud within Cr. Code, § 215, making criminal the use of the mails in execution of such a scheme.—United States v. New South Farm & Home Co., 36 S. Ct. 505, 241 U. S. 64, 60 L. Ed. 890.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 56.

A postmaster including in his report as a part of his gross receipts under which his salary is fixed under Act March 3, 1883, the receipts from the sales of stamps in large quantities used at another post office, is punishable under federal Criminal Code, § 206 (Act March 4, 1909, c. 321, 35 Stat. 1128 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 1649]), for making a false return, even though the regulations of the postmaster general adopted under supposed authority of Rev. St. § 161 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 80), that, in determining gross receipts, unusual sales shall not be included, are invalid: section 208 of such Code regarding as criminal sales made outside the delivery of the office and otherwise than as provided by law.—United States v. Foster, 34 S. Ct. 666, 233 U. S. 515, 58 L. Ed. 1074, reversing judgment (D. C.) 211 F. 206.

§37. Illegal sale or other disposition of postage stamps.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 57.

Rev. St. § 5451 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3680], provides that every person who promises or offers any money or other thing of value, or tenders any contract for the payment of money, to any officer of the United States, with intent to influence him to do or omit to do anything in violation of his lawful duty, shall be punished, etc. Act Cong. June 17, 1878 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2682], prohibits postmasters from selling or disposing of postage stamps except for cash. Petitioner wrote to a postmaster of the fourth class, whose compensation was based on the amount of stamps canceled at his office, asking him whether, if he (petitioner) would send a quantity of circulars in addressed envelopes, the postmaster would put stamps on them, and send out a certain number every day, and promising that, if he would do so, petitioner would remit the price of the stamps when the circulars had all been sent out, which would require about 25 days. Held an attempt to induce the postmaster to sell stamps for credit, and to be in violation of the above-named section 5451.—Palliser v. United States, 136 U. S. 257, 10 S. Ct. 1034, 34 L. Ed. 514.

40. Embezzlement of mail matter.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 60, 61.

41. — In general.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 60.

It is only where letters containing nothing of value are embezzled that the offense is cognizable under Rev. St. § 3891, providing that any person employed in the postal service who shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any such letter, although it does not contain any security or other thing of value, shall be punishable, etc., as 17 Stat. 146, on which the above section is founded, in place of "although it does not contain any security," etc., reads, "which shall not contain any security," etc.—United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 10 S. Ct. 625, 33 L. Ed. 1080.

Two classes of offenses—one for embezzling letters containing articles of value, the other for stealing the contents—are created by Rev. St. § 5467 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3691], providing that any person employed in the postal service who shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any letter intrusted to him, or which shall come into his possession, and which was intended to be conveyed by mail, and which shall contain any note, bond, draft, or any other article of value, or who shall steal or take any of such things out of any letter which shall have come into his possession, "and provided the same shall not have been delivered to the parties to whom it is directed, shall be punishable by imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one year nor more than five years," as is seen by resort to 17 Stat. p. 318, § 279 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, § 3691], for which the above section is a substitute, and which, after the words "to whom it is directed," reads, "every such person shall, on conviction thereof, for every such offense, be imprisoned at hard labor not less than one nor more than five years." A semicolon should be substituted for the comma after the word "directed."—Id.

The term "branch post office," as used in Rev. St. § 5469 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3692], making the stealing of a letter from the mail or post office or "branch post office" a penal offense, includes every place within such office where letters are kept in the regular course of business for reception, stamping, sorting, or delivering.—Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 16 S. Ct. 136, 40 L. Ed. 297.

42. — Decoy letters or packages.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 61.

A letter addressed to a fictitious person, known to be such, is a "letter" within the meaning of Rev. St. §§ 5467, 5469 [U. S. Comp. St. pp. 3691, 3692], making the stealing of a letter from the mail a penal offense.—Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 16 S. Ct. 136, 40 L. Ed. 297.

On a prosecution for the stealing of a letter from the post office, the fact that the letter was a decoy is no defense.—Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 16 S. Ct. 136, 40 L. Ed. 297; Montgomery v. Same, 162 U. S. 410, 16 S. Ct. 797, 40 L. Ed. 1020.

Embezzling or stealing the contents of a "decoy" letter, mailed by government officials or detectives to a fictitious person and address, is within Rev. St. § 5467.—Hall v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 237, 168 U. S. 632, 42 L. Ed. 607.

A decoy letter containing marked United States currency, addressed to a fictitious person, and deposited in the mail by post-office inspectors, intended to be intercepted and withdrawn from the mails, is a "letter," within Rev. St. § 5467, providing that any post-office employé who shall embezzle or destroy any letter or steal anything out of a letter coming into his possession shall be punished, etc.—Scott v. United States, 19 S. Ct. 209, 172 U. S. 343, 43 L. Ed. 471.

48. Indictment or information.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 67-80.

An indictment under Rev. St. U. S. § 5480 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], making it a crime for any person, having devised a scheme or artifice to defraud other persons by inciting them to open communication with him through the post office, to place any letter in, or receive any letter from, any post office, is fatally defective if it charge the offense in general language, without disclosing the particulars of the scheme or artifice, and cannot be aided or cured by verdict.—United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 8 S. Ct. 571, 31 L. Ed. 516.

Rev. St. § 5467 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3691], provides that any employé of the postal service who shall secrete or embezzle any letter which was intended to be carried or delivered by any mail carrier, and which shall contain any note or other pecuniary obligation of the government, "any such person who shall steal or take any of the things aforesaid out of any letter . . . provided the same shall not have been delivered to the party to whom it is directed," shall be punished, etc. Held that, in an indictment of a postal employé for secreting and embezzling a letter containing United States treasury notes, failure to allege that the letter had not been delivered to the person to whom it was directed is not a jurisdictional error that can be taken advantage of on habeas corpus proceedings.—Wight v. Nicholson, 134 U. S. 136, 10 S. Ct. 487, 33 L. Ed. 865.

An indictment for mailing nonmailable matter, in violation of Rev. St. § 3893, as amended by Act Sept. 26, 1888, c. 1039, § 2, 25 Stat. 496 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2658], alleged that defendant had in his possession a large number of obscene pictures, and deposited in a certain post office a letter giving information where such pictures might be obtained. Held that, the gravamen of the complaint being the use of the mails for transmitting such information, the indictment was not bad because the possession alleged constituted no offense, that allegation being merely the statement of a fact tending to interpret the letter, nor because the letter was not in itself obscene, nor because the pictures referred to were not incorporated or fully described in the indictment, it being sufficient to allege their character, and unnecessary even to charge or prove unlawful intent as to any particular picture.—Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 15 S. Ct. 470, 39 L. Ed. 550, affirming judgment (C. C.) United States v. Grimm, 50 F. 528.

An indictment for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, under Rev. St. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, 25 Stat. 873 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], which alleges that defendants conspired in devising a scheme to defraud certain persons, to be carried out by each of the defendants representing himself as a merchant, and using, in correspondence, paper with his pretended business printed thereon; defendants mutually to represent each other, to the persons intended to be defrauded, to be entitled to credit; the scheme to be further effected by ordering merchandise from said persons, having no intention to pay for it, but intending to convert it to the use of each and of each other,—states with sufficient clearness the first charge requisite under the section, namely, that the persons charged devised a scheme to defraud.—Stokes v. United States, 157 U. S. 187, 15 S. Ct. 617, 39 L. Ed. 667.

The second requisite of such an indictment, namely, a charge that defendants intended to effect the scheme by opening correspondence with some other person through the post office department, or by inciting such other person to open communication with them, is sufficiently complied with by an allegation that the post office establishment of the United States was to be used for the purpose of executing such scheme to defraud, pursuant to said conspiracy, by opening correspondence with said persons, and by inciting said persons to open correspondence with defendants by means of said post office establishment.—Id.

Such allegations, together with allegations that, for the further purpose of executing said conspiracy to defraud, S. (one of defendants) did deposit in the post office at O. a letter addressed to R., at B., ordering merchandise from him, which letter was inclosed in an envelope deposited in the post office at O., as aforesaid, to be conveyed by the post office establishment to R.; that the letter contained a check on M., a banker, for the amount of the merchandise ordered, payable to R.; that S. never had any funds deposited with M., but the sending of the check was pursuant to the conspiracy, a scheme to defraud R. of his merchandise by not paying, and intending not to pay, therefor, but to convert the same to the use of S. and the other defendants,—sufficiently charge the offense.—Id.

Where an indictment under Rev. St. § 5480, as amended by Act March 2, 1889, 25 Stat. 873 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], for conspiracy to defraud through the mails, charged as one of the acts in furtherance of the conspiracy that B. deposited in the post office a letter addressed to D., applying for an agency to sell its shoes, and ordering shoes, railroad waybills showing a shipment of the shoes by D., and an order by B. to a freight agent to deliver his freight to a certain person, are admissible.—Id.

Under an indictment for devising a scheme to sell counterfeit money through the mails, based on Act March 2, 1889, c. 393 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], providing for the punishment of one using the mails in the execution of "a scheme to defraud, or to sell" counterfeit money, it is not necessary to prove a scheme to defraud.—Streep v. United States, 160 U. S. 128, 16 S. Ct. 244, 40 L. Ed. 365.

An indictment under Rev. St. § 3893 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2658], for depositing an obscene paper in the mails, which alleges that it was done "unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly," sufficiently states knowledge by defendant of the contents of the paper, as against an objection first made after verdict.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 16 S. Ct. 434, 480, 40 L. Ed. 606.

The accused may apply to the court, before the trial is entered on, for a bill of particulars, showing what parts of the paper would be relied on by the prosecution as being obscene, lewd, and lascivious, which motion the court may grant or refuse, as it may, in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, find necessary to the ends of justice.—Id.

The right of the accused to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation with reasonable certainty is not infringed by the omission from the indictment of indecent and obscene matter, alleged not to be proper to be spread on the record of the court, provided the crime charged, however general the language used, is yet so described as reasonably to inform the accused of the nature of the charge.—Id.

The omission to state in the indictment the names of the parties intended to be defrauded, and the names and addresses on the letters placed in the post office in carrying out the fraudulent scheme, is excused by the allegation, if true, that such names and addresses are to the grand jury unknown.—Durland v. United States, 161 U. S. 306, 16 S. Ct. 508, 40 L. Ed. 709.

An indictment for embezzling letters containing money charged that the letters in question came into defendant's possession as a railway postal clerk, to be delivered to the persons addressed. The evidence disclosed that the letters and money belonged to inspectors, who mailed them, and were intercepted by them before reaching the person to whom they were addressed. Held, that this was an immaterial variance.—Montgomery v. United States, 162 U. S. 410, 16 S. Ct. 797, 40 L. Ed. 1020.

An indictment under Rev. St. § 5467, charged a postal clerk with having destroyed a certain letter, and a draft, therein contained, "for fifty francs, D. O. Mills & Co., No. d.08250, on Paris, France," a more particular description of which was to the grand jurors unknown. Held a sufficient description of the draft.—Rosecrans v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 302, 165 U. S. 257, 41 L. Ed. 708.

Whether or not matter forming the basis of a prosecution for improper use of the mails is too obscene to be set out in the record is primarily a question for the district attorney in preparing the indictment, and, in any event, the question is one within the discretion of the trial court.—Dunlop v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 375, 165 U. S. 486, 41 L. Ed. 799.

In an indictment under Rev. St. § 5467, cl. 2, making it an offense for a postal employé to steal anything of value out of any letter or package, an averment that the letter from which the thing of value had been taken was to be delivered by a letter carrier is surplusage, and need not be proved.—Hall v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 237, 168 U. S. 632, 42 L. Ed. 607.

The statute creates two distinct offenses, and it is not a necessary element of the offense described by the second clause that the letter embezzled or the contents of which are stolen shall be intended to be conveyed by mail or delivered by letter carrier, etc., as required by the first clause; and an indictment under the second clause need only show that the letter was one which had come under the jurisdiction and into the possession of the post-office department, and had not yet been delivered to the person addressed.—Id.

An indictment charging that accused violated the laws by depositing in a post office an obscene letter, unfit to be sent through the mails in an envelope bearing a specified address, sufficiently advised the accused, in absence of a demand for a bill of particulars, of the accusation against him.—Bartell v. United States, 83 S. Ct. 383, 227 U. S. 427, 57 L. Ed. 583.

The charge in an indictment alleging that accused knowingly violated the laws of the United States by depositing an obscene letter in the mails, is not so indefinite that accused could not plead conviction in bar of another prosecution, as in such case accused could resort to parol evidence to show the subject-matter of the former conviction.—Id.

An indictment under Cr. Code, § 215, for using the mails to defraud, need only aver the scheme and its attempted execution by placing a letter in the post office, and need not allege that the scheme was to be executed by the use of the mails.—United States v. Young, 84 S. Ct. 303, 232 U. S. 155, 58 L. Ed. 548.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 84-96.

To convict a post office employé of stealing a letter from a branch post office, there being evidence that the office has been known as a post office station, and has been used as such for years, and is a post office de facto, it is unnecessary to show that it was regularly established as a branch post office by law.—Goode v. United States, 159 U. S. 663, 16 S. Ct. 136, 40 L. Ed. 297.

The provision in the statute that nothing therein shall authorize any person to open any letter or sealed matter of the first class "not addressed to himself" does not vitiate the evidence of a post office inspector who opens an obscene letter addressed to himself under a fictitious name.—Andrews v. United States, 162 U. S. 420, 16 S. Ct. 798, 40 L. Ed. 1023.

Where it has been proved that certain newspapers have been received by the addressees, under circumstances strongly indicating that they came through the mails, it is competent to further prove that upon the day these papers were dated large numbers of copies of the same newspaper were deposited in the post office for mailing and delivery.—Dunlop v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 375, 165 U. S. 486, 41 L. Ed. 799.

Under an indictment against J. R. D., as the proprietor, for depositing in the mails a newspaper called "The Chicago Dispatch," containing obscene matter, it is competent to admit in evidence, as tending to prove identity and ownership, a copy of a newspaper bearing the heading "The Dispatch, by J. R. D.," with the additional information that it is the official paper of the city of Chicago and of Cook county.—Id.

For the purpose of showing that letters or papers addressed to a post-office inspector, and which he found on his table or in his private box in the post office, had come through the mails, it is competent for him to testify as to the course of business in delivering their mail to the inspectors, and that it was the duty of a certain messenger to gather such mail from the boxes in the post office, and distribute it in the boxes provided for the inspectors.—Id.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 87-89.

The court may, in its discretion, leave to the jury the character of the paper mailed by defendant, with instructions as to the rules by which they should be guided in determining what is an "obscene, lewd, or lascivious paper," within the meaning of the statute.—Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 29, 16 S. Ct. 434, 480, 40 L. Ed. 606.

In a prosecution for mailing a newspaper containing obscene advertisements, it was shown that a post-office inspector had repeatedly talked with defendant about the paper, of which defendant admitted himself to be the responsible head; that he was warned that there were complaints of its character, and that the district attorney considered the advertisements under certain heads improper and illegal; that defendant replied that he scarcely ever saw the advertisements before publication, but had instructed his agent to scrutinize them with more care. Held, that this was sufficient evidence of defendant's knowledge and responsibility to warrant the court in refusing to direct an acquittal.—Dunlop v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 375, 165 U. S. 486, 41 L. Ed. 799.

§51. Sentence and punishment.

See 40 Cent. Dig. P. O. § 90.

Rev. St. U. S. § 5480 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], provides that the indictment for using the mails to defraud may charge offenses to the number of three when committed in the same six calendar months, but the court shall give a single sentence. The petitioner was indicted for three distinct offenses committed in the same six calendar months, and was convicted and sentenced. At the same term of court he was indicted, convicted, and sentenced for three other offenses under the same statute, committed in the same six months. Held, that three separate offenses committed in the same six months may be joined for the purposes of trial, and when joined there is a single sentence, but there is nothing in the statute to indicate an intention to make a single continuous offense, and punishable as such, of what without it would have been several distinct offenses, each complete in itself.—Ex parte Henry, 123 U. S. 372, 8 S. Ct. 142, 31 L. Ed. 174.

A single sentence on conviction under several indictments for several offenses committed within the same six months, on a prosecution under Rev. St. § 5480 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3696], for fraudulent use of the mails, need not be limited to the sentence prescribed for one offense by that section, since the provisions which authorize the joinder of three offenses in one indictment, and the imposition of a single sentence therefor, do not have the effect of making all the offenses committed within six months amount to a single continuing offense.—Ex parte De Bara, 21 S. Ct. 110, 179 U. S. 316, 45 L. Ed. 207.

The extension of an outstanding mortgage upon an estate which the person extending the same is by will empowered to "incumber by way of mortgage or otherwise, and renew the same," is a valid execution of the power, being identical in effect with the literal exercise of the authority by the creation of a new mortgage in place of the old one.—*Warner v. B. conveyed land to a trustee in trust for his wife for life, and at any time to convey it to such person as she might request or direct in writing, with the written consent of B. Afterwards B. made a deed of the land to a third person. The trustee did not join in this deed, and the wife was not described as a party, but it was duly signed, sealed, and acknowledged by her. Held, that such deed was not an execution of the power of appointment reserved to the wife.—Batchelor v. Brereton, 112 U. S. 396, 5 S. Ct. 180, 28 L. Ed. 748.

- ⌚33. Intent to execute.
See 40 Cent. Dig. Powers, §§ 110-120; 16 Cent. Dig. Deeds, § 406.

When, from the whole scope of an instrument which would be valid as the execution of a power, an intention can be gathered to act under the power, the instrument, though not expressly referring to the power, will be deemed an exercise thereof; and, if the instrument would have no effect unless made in pursuance thereof, the intention will be inferred, ut res magis valeat quam pereat.—Warner v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 357, 3 S. Ct. 221, 27 L. Ed. 962.

Testatrix bequeathed property to her daughter for life, and provided that "my daughter A. is hereby authorized and empowered by her last will and testament, duly executed by her, to dispose of this bequest * * * as she pleases." The daughter in her will recited: "Whereas, I am entitled to legacies under the last will of my deceased mother, and to a distributive share in the several estates of my deceased sister, * * * and my brother, * * * and, notwithstanding my coverture, have full testamentary power to dispose of the same," and devised "the entire property and estate to which I am now in any wise entitled, or which I may hereafter acquire, of whatever the same may consist, to my beloved husband." Held, that this was a valid execution of the power given by the mother's will.—Lee v. Simpson, 134 U. S. 572, 10 S. Ct. 631, 33 L. Ed. 1038, affirming (C. C.) 39 F. 235.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Powers, §§ 153, 154.

Where the grantor of certain real estate has charged the property with a fund to be held by the grantee in trust for such uses as she may appoint, and she fails to appoint a portion of the fund, the land does not, upon her death, become freed from the charge of the unappointed remnant, but it falls into her estate and passes under her will as a part of the personality.—*Hawkins v. I. THE RELATION.

(A) CREATION AND EXISTENCE.

Appointment by court, record of, see Courts, ¶113.

¶3. Agency distinguished from other relations.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 3-9, 11, 12; 32 Cent. Dig. Land. & T. § 10.

A sewing machine company agreed with one E. to appoint him "exclusive vendor," within a defined territory, of its machines, which it contracted to sell him at a specified discount, reserving the right to readjust the discount in case of a change in retail prices and cost of manufacture. E. was required to give his time, attention, and ability primarily to forwarding the interests of the company, and forbidden to deal in machines in any wise infringing on its own. He was also required to maintain the company's retail prices in all sales made by him. It was provided that, if for any reason the connection should be terminated, the company should have the right to repurchase such machines as it chose, at the same prices that it had sold them to E., and that "the appointment or agency" should not be transferable by E. without the written consent of the company. Held, that the effect of this agreement was to make E. agent for the sale of the company's machines in the territory specified.—Willcox & Gibbs Sewing Mach. Co. v. Ewing, 141 U. S. 627, 12 S. Ct. 94, 35 L. Ed. 882.

¶7. Appointment of agent.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 16-23.

¶9. — Agreements for appointment.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 17.

An English mining company, being indebted to D., and desiring to obtain further advances from him to work its mines in Utah, executed a writing, by which it was agreed that D. should advance a certain amount of money, and P. was appointed manager of its property and business until, out of the profits of working the mine, he had repaid to D. all money, with interest, advanced by him, and until he had mined and delivered to D. the amount of ore that the company had, by a previous agreement, sold to him; D. to have the power to remove P. if he was not satisfied with his management, and in the event of his removal to consult with the directors as to the appointment of his successor. The company also executed a power of attorney to P., authorizing him to work and manage the mine. P. employed his brother to haul ore, and he sued D. for the value of his services, claiming that P. was D.'s agent. Held, that P. was not the agent of D., but of the company, and that the agreement was intended only as security for the repayment of the advances made by D. to the company.—Davis v. Patrick, 122 U. S. 138, 7 S. Ct. 1102, 30 L. Ed. 1090.

¶10. — Letters or powers of attorney under seal.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 19-23.

In 1832 the law of Coahuila and Texas did not require a letter power of attorney, to take possession of and sell land granted from the government, to be executed with the same solemnities as the act of sale itself; defects in the execution going only to the proof necessary to authenticate the instrument in legal proceedings.—Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 8 S. Ct. 933, 31 L. Ed. 778.

From the recital, in a power of attorney to sell land, "In the city of Mexico, January 10, 1837, * * * personally appeared * * * a citizen, * * *" it will be presumed, in the absence of proof, that the grantor was a citizen of Mexico, having the right to dispose of land in Texas at the time.—Id.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 26-33.

A lender who, at the request of the borrower, transmits money to a third party out of which to pay a judgment against the borrower, is not responsible for the wrongful detention of a balance left after satisfaction of the judgment.—Dodge v. Tulleys, 144 U. S. 451, 12 S. Ct. 728, 36 L. Ed. 501.

H. negotiated a loan on realty, in some part through C. & Co., bankers. Part of the money was retained by the mortgagee until a building was finished and insured in his favor. In due time, H. brought his policy to C. & Co., who, at his request, drew on the mortgagee for the balance due, and the draft was paid. The day the draft was drawn, H. was credited its amount on C. & Co.'s books, and in the following days checked out a considerable sum, which would else have been an overdraft. Held, that the deposit was his, not the mortgagee's, so far as regarded C. & Co.'s failure, nine days after the draft was drawn.—Merriam v. Haas, 154 U. S. 542, 14 S. Ct. 1159, 18 L. Ed. 29.

¶18. Evidence of agency.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 36-41.

¶23. — Weight and sufficiency.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 41.

One who had borrowed money from a guardian testified that the transaction was exclusively with one acting as agent, to whom he executed a deed of trust as security, and who afterwards agreed with the purchasers of a portion of the land covered by the deed that, upon payment of the price to him or the guardian, he would release his claim as trustee. It was shown, both by the testimony of witnesses and by her accounts, that the purchase money was received by the guardian. Held, that the agency was sufficiently proved to make the agreement for release binding, though the guardian denied that such person was her agent; she having admitted that she did consent to his acting as her agent in one instance, and that she told him the purchasers might have the deed, on paying a certain sum.—Johnson v. Christian, 128 U. S. 374, 9 S. Ct. 87, 32 L. Ed. 412.

(B) TERMINATION.

¶32. Revocation by principal.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 54-63.

¶33. — Right to revoke in general.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 54.

There is nothing in an agreement by which plaintiff was made defendant's agent for the sale of its sewing machines to take it out of the rule that the company may at its pleasure revoke the agency on reasonable notice to plaintiff; for a provision therein that "violation of the spirit of this agreement shall be sufficient cause for its abrogation" is not equivalent to a provision that it shall continue in force until it is revoked for sufficient cause.—Willcox & Gibbs Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Ewing, 141 U. S. 627, 12 S. Ct. 94, 35 L. Ed. 882.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 53.

An interest in the property upon which the power is to operate, and not merely an interest in the exercise of the power, is essential to make a power of attorney one coupled with an interest, so as not to be subject to revocation. Decree (Ariz. 1904) 76 P. 623, affirmed.—Taylor v. Burns, 27 S. Ct. 40, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. Ed. 116.

◄37. — Revocation of letters or powers of attorney.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 59.

A married woman and her husband, in 1859, executed a power of attorney authorizing her brother to sell and convey certain real estate owned by her in the city of Washington. In 1861 the husband became an officer in the Confederate army, and both husband and wife remained within the Confederate lines during the continuance of the war. Before its close the brother sold and conveyed the property, the wife receiving the proceeds with full knowledge of the facts and without objection. Held, that the agency created by the power of attorney was not revoked by the war, and the conveyance was valid against the heirs of the wife.—Williams v. Paine, 18 S. Ct. 279, 169 U. S. 55, 42 L. Ed. 658.

With certain exceptions, a principal named in a power of attorney may revoke such an interest at his mere pleasure, though the agency may be expressly claimed to be irrevocable; but when the authority or power is coupled with an interest, or when it is a part of the security, the power is irrevocable, whether so expressed or not. Judgment, Buffalo Land & Exploration Co. v. Strong (1903) 97 N. W. 575, 91 Minn. 84, affirmed.—Strong v. Buffalo Land & Exploration Co., 27 S. Ct. 780, 203 U. S. 582, 51 L. Ed. 327.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 67-71.

A power of attorney given by three persons is, by the death of two of them, revoked, at least as to the two.—Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 7 S. Ct. 147, 30 L. Ed. 396.

The authority of an agent of a firm or joint owners ceases on the death of one of the joint principals.—Long v. Thayer, 150 U. S. 520, 14 S. Ct. 189, 37 L. Ed. 1167.

Payment to an agent after the principal's death does not discharge the obligation, even if made in actual ignorance of the death.—Id.

After an agreement by which W. "sold and conveyed" to F. & Co. his stock of goods, including notes and accounts, with power to sell and convert them into money, and apply the proceeds to the payment of his indebtedness to them, W. remained in charge of the goods as agent for F. & Co., who sent him, from time to time, quantities of merchandise, to put into the stock. W. sold such merchandise, the proceeds being represented by notes and accounts, and when he finally surrendered the business to F. & Co. these notes and accounts were included, and he received credit on his indebtedness for the amount F. & Co. realized from closing out the business. Held, that while W. could not be charged with the merchandise so furnished, yet, as he had been credited with all that the stock realized, which included the notes and accounts representing such merchandise, the amount thereof should be placed on the debit side of his account.—Goodwin v. Fox, 9 S. Ct. 367, 129 U. S. 601, 32 L. Ed. 805.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 127, 128.

In a suit against administrators for an accounting in respect to moneys sent at various times to their decedent with directions to loan the same at 10 per cent., and to reinvest the interest at the same rate, the evidence strongly tended to show that the moneys had been so loaned. The administrators did not testify, or produce any accounts kept by the decedent of the moneys invested, though notified to do so, and though the correspondence between the parties tended to establish that such accounts were kept. It appeared that, after several years, complainant had written the decedent that, according to his account, the latter then had $10,500 belonging to complainant, and this statement did not appear to have been questioned by the decedent. According to the master's report, the sum at that time, interest being computed at 10 per cent., with annual rests, was $10,495.18. Held that, under all the circumstances, the master was warranted in concluding that the money had been invested at that rate; and he properly charged the administrators therewith, even though an agreement to account for money at the rate of 10 per cent., with annual rests, would have been illegal.—Dillman v. Hastings, 144 U. S. 136, 12 S. Ct. 662, 36 L. Ed. 378.

◄68. Failure to act.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 129.

Plaintiff resided and did business in B., and having large quantities of sugar entered at New York, employed defendant to attend to such entries, and sell the sugar. Improper duties were charged by the government officials, and correspondence was exchanged by the parties, in which plaintiff told defendant that, if the government charged illegal duties, he must place the matter in the hands of some competent attorney, and advised him to employ a certain attorney, unless he knew of a better, which he promised to do. The improper duties having been charged, plaintiff wrote defendant to appeal from the "government assessing duties by tests." Defendant assumed the responsibility of appealing, but asked to await the decision in another suit named. Afterwards plaintiff instructed defendant to allow no cases to escape his attention, and bring actions as fast as the causes arose, and it became necessary. Held, that the correspondence showed an agreement by defendant to attend to the suits, and that, by allowing the time within which they might be brought to elapse without entering them, he became liable to plaintiff for the damages.—Bowerman v. Rogers, 125 U. S. 585, 8 S. Ct. 986, 31 L. Ed. 815.

◄69. Individual interest of agent.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 130-145.

Equity will not assist one who, while employed as a surveyor for another, discovered an error in the public lands whereby it appeared that the latter's lands were not in fact situate, where he supposed, and who procured his grantor to obtain a patent from the state for the land which he knew his employer had possessed and cultivated for many years.—Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 9 S. Ct. 203, 32 L. Ed. 566.

Code Ga. § 3177, providing that, where confidential relations exist, the law will require the utmost good faith, will not compel the setting aside of a deed of gift of real estate to one in charge of the grantor's property as his agent, where there is no evidence of the use of improper influence in procuring its execution.—Ralston v. Turpin, 129 U. S. 663, 9 S. Ct. 420, 32 L. Ed. 747, affirming (C. C.) 25 F. 7.

Plaintiffs, real-estate speculators, agreed to intrust the negotiations for and the purchase of such real estate as they might elect to acquire to defendants, real-estate agents, who agreed to give to plaintiffs their best judgment, knowledge, and experience in the selection of property for purchase, and in all cases negotiate for the purchase of any property at the lowest figure obtainable from the owner, and after obtaining such figure advise plaintiffs as to the desirability of its purchase. The bill alleged purchase of several tracts, and charged fraud on the part of defendants, in that they failed to report to plaintiffs the lowest figures at which the property was obtainable, and also that defendants had a large amount of plaintiffs' money on hand which they had wrongfully appropriated. Defendants answered, denying the fraud, and setting up a counterclaim for services performed. Defendants, before their agreement with plaintiffs, had bargained for a tract of land for $40,000. This tract they offered to plaintiffs at $65,000, without disclosing the fact that they were the owners, which offer was accepted. Held that, while they ought to have disclosed their relation to it, yet as their contract did not give plaintiffs the benefit of existing contracts, and as the latter were willing to accept the tract at those figures, defendants cannot be required to account for the $25,000.—Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 9 S. Ct. 594, 32 L. Ed. 1005.

Where an owner of land accepts an offer to purchase it, made through his agent—not interested in the offer, and having no expectation at the time of becoming the owner—by one purchasing on his own account, without any understanding that the agent is to become interested with him, or take his place in the purchase, and the sale is so far consummated that neither party can rescind, the agency is so far terminated that it cannot prevent the agent from agreeing to take the property from the purchaser, and assume his obligations to the principal; and the agent's failure to give the principal notice of the arrangement, immediately on its being made, is not a fraud upon the principal.—Robertson v. Chapman, 152 U. S. 673, 14 S. Ct. 741, 38 L. Ed. 592.

§79. Actions for negligence or wrongful acts of agent.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 178-193; 1 Cent. Dig. Action, § 59.

Plaintiffs, who owned an undivided half of certain land, gave defendant, who owned the other half, a power of attorney to sell the land. Defendant sold plaintiffs' interest for $200,000, and his own for $300,000. In an action to recover one-half of the amount received by defendant in excess of $200,000 there was evidence that plaintiffs consented to defendant's negotiating the sale, and to the sale of his share for any sum, provided plaintiffs' share brought $200,000. Held, that it was error to charge that plaintiffs were entitled to recover unless defendant told them the price at which he had sold or could sell his share, and they assented to it.—Ranney v. Barlow, 112 U. S. 207, 5 S. Ct. 104, 28 L. Ed. 662.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 194-214, 219, 223.

An agreement made a fortnight before the treaty of Washington of 1871, and by which the owners of a ship and cargo taken by the armed rebel cruiser the Florida employed a person, whether an attorney at law or not, to use his best efforts to collect their "claim arising out of the capture," and authorized him to employ such attorneys as he might think fit to prosecute it, and promised to pay him "a compensation equal to twenty-five per cent. of whatever sum shall be collected on the said claim," applies to a sum awarded to them by the court of commissioners of Alabama claims, established by the act of June 23, 1874, c. 459; and is not affected by section 18 of that act, providing that that court should allow, out of the amount awarded on any claim, reasonable compensation to the counselor and attorney for the claimant, and issue a warrant therefor, and that all other liens or assignments, either absolute or conditional, for past or future services about any claim, made or to be made before judgment in that court, should be void.—Bachman v. Lawson, 109 U. S. 659, 3 S. Ct. 479, 27 L. Ed. 1067.

Plaintiff, as agent of defendant, a loan company, was, under his contract, entitled to one-third of the profits of the business originating in his district (including, among other New England states, Massachusetts), or transacted at the Boston office. Defendant, having for sale bonds of a certain western railroad, negotiated with another western railroad, which had its office in Boston; defendant's president doing the business at the office of the railroad which was to purchase the bonds. At some of the interviews plaintiff was present; at others, not. The negotiations resulted in the purchase of the bonds in question by the railroad. Plaintiff sued defendant for one-third of $117,833.33 its alleged profits. Held, that the business did not originate in plaintiff's district, and was not transacted at the Boston office, and plaintiff was properly nonsuited.—Hubbard v. New York, N. E. & W. Investment Co., 119 U. S. 696, 7 S. Ct. 353, 30 L. Ed. 548.

Defendant notified the secretary of the treasury that a legacy tax was due the United States, and made a contract to collect it, under Act Cong. May 8, 1872, authorizing the secretary to employ persons to assist in collecting money due the United States. The revenue officers knew of the tax before. When it was due the executor, without any knowledge of defendant, wrote the secretary of the treasury about it, and afterwards paid it over to the proper officer. The latter handed the money to defendant, who had previously called upon him to assist in the collection. Defendant forwarded it to the secretary, with the representation that he had collected it, and received his commission. Held, that defendant, having performed no service, was not entitled to the commission, and the United States could recover it.—Sanborn v. United States, 135 U. S. 271, 10 S. Ct. 812, 34 L. Ed. 112.

A contract with the secretary of the treasury under this act, to pay a certain per cent. on all taxes collected of the persons named in the contract, does not entitle the person agreeing to make the collection to his per cent. on taxes collected by the government officers.—Id.

Plaintiff, who was authorized by defendant to sell certain notes, received an offer of $30,000 less than the authorized price, and telegraphed to his principal for instructions; but before leaving the intending purchaser, the latter said that if his offer was rejected he would take the notes at the authorized price. Plaintiff failed to communicate this intelligence to his principal until after receiving notice on the next day that the offer was rejected, and that the notes were sold to another, when, without further communication with the intending purchaser, he telegraphed that he had made a sale at the authorized price, and that the principal was bound to comply therewith. Held, that he failed in his duty to his principal, and was not entitled to the agreed commission.—Wadsworth v. Adams, 138 U. S. 380, 11 S. Ct. 303, 34 L. Ed. 984.

Defendant held contracts for the purchase of certain lands, and plaintiff advanced him money to complete the purchase under an agreement that legal title should be taken in defendant's name, and then conveyed to plaintiff by him; that defendant, after doing everything necessary to an advantageous sale of the lands, the expense of which was to be borne by plaintiff in the first instance, should sell them, and retain a commission, depositing the balance in bank to plaintiff's credit, until the latter should be reimbursed for his advances; that sales were to be made at prices mutually agreed on by plaintiff and defendant, and all contracts made by the latter should require approval by the former; and that, when all advances were repaid with interest, the remainder of the property should belong three-fifths to plaintiff and two-fifths to defendant. Held, that the conveyance of the legal title to plaintiff, and the deposit of proceeds of sale to his credit, were intended only as security for his advances, and defendant retains an equitable interest in two-fifths of the property, subject to plaintiff's claim for reimbursement, which will not be divested by his fraud or misconduct; but his fraudulent representations as to the value of the lands and the purchase price will defeat his right to the stipulated commissions, whether the contract constituted him a partner of plaintiff in the venture or only an agent.—Shaeffer v. Blair, 149 U. S. 248, 13 S. Ct. 856, 37 L. Ed. 721, reversing decree (C. C.) Blair v. Shaeffer, 33 F. 218.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. §§ 224-228.

In an action to compel administrators of a deceased agent to account for money intrusted to him for investment, the evidence showed that the decedent had paid certain taxes, but not that he paid them in behalf of any person other than himself. It appeared that he had money of his own, and that he loaned money in his own name for other persons besides complainant. The loans were made in Ohio, but there was no compliance with the Ohio statute (Rev. St. 1890, § 2735) requiring every person listing property for taxation in behalf of others to list it separately from his own, specifying the name of the person to whom it belongs. Held, that, in view of the failure to produce accounts, the administrators were not entitled to any credits for taxes paid.—Dillman v. Hastings, 144 U. S. 186, 12 S. Ct. 662, 36 L. Ed. 378.

Certain persons secured a contract to construct waterworks for a city, and afterwards all interests under the contract were vested by assignment in one of them. The others were liable to B. on a draft discounted by him to raise the forfeit required by the contract. The assignee of the contract, having failed to perform it, gave a power of attorney to a third person to do all things necessary "to obtain my release from all liability as one of the contractors in said waterworks." Held, that this conferred authority to bind the principal by an adjustment of the debt due B.—Runkle v. Burnham, 153 U. S. 216, 14 S. Ct. 837, 38 L. Ed. 694, affirming judgment (C. C.) Burnham v. Runkle, 40 Fed. 406.

In the subsequent correspondence and dealings, both parties treated the offer as if made by the partner for his own benefit. Held, that he held himself out as the agent of an unknown principal without authority to do so, and that he was bound by his offer to purchase.—Patrick v. Bowman, 149 U. S. 411, 13 S. Where a contract for the sale of lands was made by one assuming to act as agent for the owner, expressly subject to the owner's approval, and the owner subsequently indorsed his approval upon the same, and received the first payments of purchase money according to the contract, held, that he thereby assented to the agency, and became bound by any statements or misrepresentations made by the agent which would entitle the vendee to a rescission.—*Clark v. ◀181. Collusion or fraud of agent.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & A. § 690.

Where it is usual for an agent, and not his principal, to receive letters containing invoices of goods purchased, the mailing of an invoice, addressed to the principal, of goods sold by collusion with the agent, who had been instructed not to purchase, raises no presumption that the principal knew of the sale.—Schutz v. Jordan, 141 U. S. 213, 11 S. Ct. 906, 35 L. Ed. 705, affirming judgment (C. C.) 32 F. 55.

The presumption that the agent informed his principal of what his duty and the interests of his principal required him to communicate does not arise when the agent acts or makes declarations not in execution of any duty owing his principal, nor any authority possessed by him, but to subvert his own personal ends, or commit some fraud against his principal.—American Surety Co. of New York v. Pauly, 18 S. Ct. 552, 170 U. S. 133, 42 L. Ed. 977, affirming judgment 72 F. 470, 18 C. C. A. 644.

The fraud of an agent cannot alter the legal effect of his knowledge with respect to his principal in regard to third parties who had no connection whatever with such agent in relation to the perpetration of the fraud, and no knowledge that any such fraud had been perpetrated. 97. — In general.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 146-168.

Where a wife mortgaged her separate property to secure a note given by her husband alone, and thereby became his surety in respect to the mortgaged property, and then died before the debt matured, and when the husband also mortgaged lands of his own to secure the same debt, the fact that after his wife's death, and after the maturity of the notes, he conveyed all the mortgaged property to a member of the creditor firm by deed absolute, but really upon trust to cultivate or lease them, and apply the net proceeds to the payment of the debt, and, with the grantor's consent, to sell the same for a like purpose, and that part of the lands were actually sold under the trust, did not effect such an alteration of the original contract as would release the lands of the wife from the obligation of suretyship.—Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 528, 12 S. Ct. 67, 35 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree (C. C.) Allen v. O'Donald, 28 F. 348.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 158-161.

A contract to convey land to one who was to erect houses on two lots therein, and reconvey them to the vendors free of all incumbrances, is not so changed as to release the surety on the bond conditioned for the vendee's faithful performance of the contract by an arrangement by which the lots were reserved from the conveyance to save expense of reconveyance.—Wilkinson v. McKimmie, 33 S. Ct. 879, 229 U. S. 590, 57 L. Ed. 1842, affirming judgment 36 App. D. C. 336.

100. — Provisions of building contracts.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 162-166.

The surety on a contractor's bond conditioned for the performance of a contract to construct a dry dock was released by a change made by the contracting parties, without his consent, in the location of the dry dock, which required the contractor to make additional excavations and connections with the water at an increased expense, and gave an increased time of performance, as such a change was not contemplated by the provisions of the contract for such changes in the plans and specifications as might be found advantageous or necessary, affirming judgment 39 C. C. A. 491, 99 F. 237, and (C. C.) 92 F. 299.—United States v. Freel, 22 S. Ct. 875, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L. Ed. 1177.

Provisions in a contract for a public work requiring that changes in the plans or specifications, deemed desirable by the government, be agreed to in writing by the parties to the contract before the work contemplated by such changes is begun, do not require the assent of the sureties in order not to work their discharge.—(1912) United States v. McMullen, 32 S. Ct. 128, 222 U. S. 460, 56 L. Ed. 269, reversing judgment (1909) McMullen v. United States, 167 F. 460, 93 C. C. A. 96.

Stipulations in admiralty are not subject to the rigid rules of the common law with respect to the liability of the surety; and, so long as the cause of action remains practically the same, a mere change in the name of the libellant, as by substituting the real party in interest for a nominal party, will not avoid the stipulation as against the sureties.—The Beaconsfield, 158 U. S. 303, 15 S. Ct. 860, 39 L. Ed. 993.

103. Extension of time for payment or other performance.

Where the holder signifies to the maker its willingness to extend credit on renewal notes executed by the same parties, and the maker pays interest for an extended time, which the holder receives, expecting renewal notes to be executed, but nothing is said about the extension, and no new notes are in fact made, this is not such an agreement for extension as will release the surety, who had no knowledge of it.—Bank of Uniontown v. Mackey, 140 U. S. 220, 11 S. Ct. 844, 35 L. Ed. 485.

The sureties on the bond of a public contractor, conditioned upon the faithful performance of a contract for dredging a channel, were not discharged by an extension of the time fixed for performance, accorded by the government to the contractor, where the contract definitely contemplated what the nature of the work made manifest, that it might be necessary or very convenient to extend the time, and expressly provided for a per diem deduction from the contract price for a delay beyond the time prescribed for the completion of the work.—(1912) United States v. McMullen, 32 S. Ct. 128, 222 U. S. 460, 56 L. Ed. 269, reversing judgment (1909) McMullen v. United States, 167 F. 460, 93 C. C. A. 96.

Waiving the original time limit and calling on the contractor for extra work for which he is paid does not discharge the surety on his bond, where it in terms contemplated an extension of time.—Graham v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 148, 231 U. S. 474, 58 L. Ed. 319, affirming judgment 188 F. 651, 110 C. C. A. 465.

A 60-day extension of time for the payment of a bill for materials furnished to the principal obligor by a third party does not, at least in the absence of any evidence of loss thereby occasioned, discharge the surety on a bond conditioned not only for the faithful performance of the original contract with the United States for the construction of a public work, but for the prompt payment of all persons supplying labor and materials in the prosecution of such work.—United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. United States, 24 S. Ct. 142, 191 U. S. 416, 43 L. Ed. 242.

119. Rescission of contract of principal.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. § 294.

A recovery on a bond securing construction of an electric railway under an ordinance granting the franchise cannot be had for a failure to perform, where the franchise was revoked within the period allowed.—People of Porto Rico v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 33 S. Ct. 362, 227 U. S. 382, 57 L. Ed. 561, affirming judgment 180 F. 641, 103 C. C. A. 607.

123. Neglect to give notice to surety of default.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 304-311.

Where an officer to whom the government has been induced by forged vouchers to give a certificate of nonindebtedness turns out to be a defaulter, the failure to notify the sureties of the defalcation and to sue them for more than three years after its discovery, the principal be ing first sued alone, does not release the sureties, in the absence of evidence that they were damaged by the delay, there being no presumption that they knew of the certificates of nonindebtedness, and a strong presumption that they did know of the suit against the principal.—Moses v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 682, 166 U. S. 571, 41 L. Ed. 1119.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 356-365.

An agreement in writing between the holder and the accommodation indorser of a note, by which the latter "consents that the payment thereof be extended until he gives written notice to the contrary," does not contemplate an extension by agreement between the holder and the maker only, by which the surety on the note is discharged, and the indorser prevented from having recourse to him as well as to the maker.—Bank of Uniontown v. Mackey, 140 U. S. 220, 11 S. Ct. 844, 35 L. Ed. 485.

⚡129. Waiver or estoppel of surety.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 366-372.

A bond by a principal and a surety was conditioned that the principal should pay to V. all indebtedness existing or to exist from the principal to V. under existing or future contracts between him and V., and waived notice of non-payment on all notes executed, indorsed, or guaranteed by the principal to V. Held, in a suit on the bond against the principal and sureties, to recover the amount of notes executed by the principal to V., and other notes indorsed and guaranteed by him to V., that it was not necessary to allege or show any notice to the surety of a default by the principal in paying V.—Murphy v. Victor Sewing Mach. Co., 112 U. S. 688, 5 S. Ct. 324, 28 L. Ed. 856.

IV. REMEDIES OF CREDITORS.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 397-401; 30 Cent. Dig. Judgm. §§ 1010, 1210.

A judgment against the principal in excess of the penalty of the bond is prima facie evidence against the sureties.—Moses v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 682, 166 U. S. 571, 41 L. Ed. 1119.

The surety on a redelivery bond in replevin cannot object that his liability was enlarged beyond his undertaking, so as to discharge him from liability, by the allowance of amendments to the declaration in replevin suit, increasing the alleged value of the property, where the issue as to the propriety of such amendments was in issue in the replevin suit and was decided against the principal in such bond, and the penalty of the bond was not thereby exceeded.—William W. Bience v. Waterhouse, 31 S. Ct. 241, 219 U. S. 320, 55 L. Ed. 237.

⚡147. Recourse to indemnity to surety.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 402-412.

Where joint guarantors of a debt have contracted with each other to be liable therefor in distinct proportions, and have given mortgages each to the other to hold him harmless against liability in excess of his proportion, such mortgages will not inure by subrogation to the benefit of the principal creditor as against the creditors of the guarantors in the event of their insolvency and that of the principal debtor.—Hampton v. Phipps, 108 U. S. 260, 2 S. Ct. 622, 27 L. Ed. 719.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Princ. & S. §§ 423-435.

Where an official bond offered by the principal without seals was returned to him to have the seals put on, and was brought back by him with the seals attached, the consent of the sureties thereto will be presumed in an action on the bond, unless the contrary appears.—*Moses v. 97. — Hearing and determination.

Sufficient proof to justify an order for service of summons by publication is made by evidence that the defendants did not reside in the jurisdiction, and that one of them, which was a corporation, had no managing agent therein, but that its president resided in another jurisdiction, while the proper officer has returned the summons with a statement that after due and diligent search he has been unable to find the defendants, or either of them, or their authorized agents, within the district.—Marx v. Ebner, 21 S. Ct. 376, 180 U. S. 314, 45 L. Ed. 547.

The presumption that a public officer who has received process for service has done his duty and has made the reasonable and diligent search that is required, though not alone sufficient to justify an order for service by publication, may add some weight, when there is other proof of the necessary facts.—Id.

Two publications in each of four consecutive periods of seven days from the date of an order of publication satisfies the requirement of Act Cong. June 8, 1898 (30 Stat. 434, c. 394) § 6, requiring such publication in the District of Columbia at least "twice a week for a period of not less than four weeks," although there was but one publication in the last calendar week of such period. I. NATURE AND GROUNDS.

1. Nature and scope of remedy.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 1.

A writ of prohibition will issue only in case of a want of jurisdiction either of the parties or the subject-matter of the proceeding, and cannot be used as a substitute for exceptions to a libel for insufficiency.—Ex parte Fassett, 142 U. S. 479, 12 S. Ct. 295, 35 L. Ed. 1087.

3. Existence and adequacy of other remedies.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 4-19.

Where, in a libel against a ship for injury to cargo, the time charterer is cited in by the owner of the vessel, claiming that the charterer was liable, as between the owner and charterer, for the negligence, if any, which caused the injury, the court, having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties, will not be prohibited from entertaining the owner's contention against the charterer in the same suit with the libel against the ship, as the error, if any, in so doing, may be corrected on appeal.—In re New York & P. R. Steamship Co., 155 U. S. 523, 15 S. Ct. 183, 39 L. Ed. 246.

A writ of prohibition against proceedings in a circuit court of the United States will not be granted by the supreme court where the case is one in which a decision in the circuit court could be taken by appeal to the circuit court of appeals, and, after final decree, an appeal would lie to the supreme court in respect to the question of jurisdiction, if properly raised and certified.—In re Huguley Mfg. Co., 22 S. Ct. 455, 184 U. S. 297, 46 L. Ed. 549.

The existence under Code N. M. § 3358, of the right to appeal to the district court from judgments of a justice of the peace in actions of forcible entry and detainer, justifies the territorial Supreme Court in refusing to restrain the justice from taking further proceedings in actions of that nature in which judgment had been given against a defendant claiming to be the owner of the property, and alleging a want of jurisdiction to determine the question of ownership in such a proceeding.—Alexander v. Crollott, 26 S. Ct. 161, 199 U. S. 580, 50 L. Ed. 317.

Prohibition against proceedings in the federal Circuit Court to enjoin the prosecution of search and seizure proceedings instituted in the state courts, under Sess. Laws Okl. 1907-08, c. 69, against intoxicating liquors shipped into the state, will not be granted by the federal Supreme Court, since adequate relief is afforded by the full right of review in the latter court and in the proper Circuit Court of Appeals by appeal or certiorari.—Ex parte State of Oklahoma, 31 S. Ct. 426, 220 U. S. 191, 55 L. Ed. 431; Id., 31 S. Ct. 431, 220 U. S. 210, 55 L. Ed. 436.

5. Acts and proceedings of courts, judges, and judicial officers.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 20-30.

A Circuit Court of Appeals before which a criminal case is pending on writ of error may grant a writ of prohibition forbidding the district judge to set aside the conviction on motion after the term because of bias of a juror discovered after such term.—United States v. Mayer, 35 S. Ct. 16, 235 U. S. 55, 59 L. Ed. 129.

6. Acts and proceedings of public officers and boards.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 31-33.

The secretary of the navy being an executive officer, his acts in convening a court-martial cannot be controlled by a writ of prohibition.—Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 L. Ed. 601.

8. Grounds for relief.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 35-54.

10. — Want or excess of jurisdiction.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 57-59.

Where the district court in admiralty is called upon, by the petition of the owner of a vessel, to first determine the question of its liability for loss or damage to property by a fire on land alleged to have been set by the vessel, it having no jurisdiction of the cause of action, and then to determine whether the statutes for the limitation of liability cover the case, a writ of prohibition will lie to prohibit the court from proceeding to give the relief prayed for in the petition.—Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co., 118 U. S. 610, 7 S. Ct. 25, 30 L. Ed. 274.

The supreme court will not issue a writ of prohibition to restrain a district court from taking jurisdiction of a petition for limitation of liability in respect to a barge which was overturned in a squall while having on board a party of excursionists from Brooklyn to Cold Spring Grove, Long Island, thus giving rise to claims for damages for personal injuries and for death by negligence.—Ex parte Fassett, 142 U. S. 479, 12 S. Ct. 295, 35 L. Ed. 1087; Ex parte Engles, 146 U. S. 357, 13 S. Ct. 281, 36 L. Ed. 1004.

Prohibition will not lie to prohibit the judge of an inferior court from proceeding further in the cause, where it is shown that he is vested with jurisdiction over the case.—Morrison v. District Court of United States for Southern District of New York, 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 L. Ed. 60.

Prohibition will not lie to prevent a circuit judge from proceeding on the petition of receivers of a railway company asking authority to enter into an agreement for the partial readjustment of the affairs of the company, and from carrying out the decree rendered.—In re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 15 S. Ct. 149, 39 L. Ed. 198.

One who intervened in a salvage suit after the vessel had been sold, objecting to the jurisdiction on the ground that she had been seized by the marshal of another district, under a libel filed by himself, is not entitled, on the overruling of his objections, to a writ of prohibition from the supreme court, there being issues of fact in the case upon which the jurisdiction depended.—In re Alix, 17 S. Ct. 522, 166 U. S. 136, 41 L. Ed. 948.

¶11. — Errors and irregularities.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 33.

Prohibition will not lie to correct irregularities in judicial proceedings.—Ex parte State of Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 174, 3 S. Ct. 84, 27 L. Ed. 894.

The writ of prohibition which the supreme court of the United States is authorized by Rev. St. § 688 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 565], to issue to the district courts "when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction," is the common-law writ, which lies only to prevent an unlawful assumption of jurisdiction, and not to correct mere errors and irregularities.—Ex parte Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 L. Ed. 232.

¶12. Defenses and grounds of opposition.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 61.

The consent of the United States attorney to the hearing by District Court of motion after the term to set aside a conviction for misconduct of counsel and bias of juror is not a waiver of any right which the government might have to a writ of prohibition in the Circuit Court of Appeals on defendant's writ of error.—United States v. Mayer, 35 S. Ct. 16, 235 U. S. 55, 59 L. Ed. 129.

¶13. Prohibition ineffectual or not beneficial.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 62.

Prohibition against the Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship court to prevent the giving of further effect to a judgment annulling a decree of a federal court in the Indian Territory, admitting persons to citizenship in those nations, or the certifying and delivering of a copy of such judgment to the Dawes Commission, on the ground that the provisions of Act Cong. July 1, 1902, c. 1362, § 31, 32 Stat. 641, authorizing in a test case the proceedings upon which the judgment rests, are unconstitutional will not issue, where the citizenship court, before the application for prohibition was heard, had rendered its judgment, and certified the same to the commission, which was all that it was empowered by the statute in question to do.—Ex parte Joins, 24 S. Ct. 27, 191 U. S. 93, 48 L. Ed. 110.

II. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS, AND RELIEF.

Supreme Court, see Courts, ¶879.

¶16. Jurisdiction or authority to issue.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. §§ 64, 65.

Under Rev. St. § 688 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 565], declaring that "the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of prohibition in the district courts when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction," that court has jurisdiction to proceed by prohibition against the United States district court for the district of Alaska in respect to an admiralty cause.—In re Cooper, 138 U. S. 404, 11 S. Ct. 289, 34 L. Ed. 993.

¶18. Time for application, and laches.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 67.

The granting of a writ of prohibition is not a matter of course, and where the cause has proceeded to sentence, and the want of jurisdiction does not appear upon the face of the record, the party applying therefor may be precluded by acquiescence from obtaining it.—Ex parte Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 L. Ed. 232.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 73.

On petition by defendant to the supreme court to prohibit the district courts from taking jurisdiction of an action against him on the ground that he was a public minister, after its denial of a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, official papers, tending to show that defendant is not a "public minister," are admissible in evidence, though they were not produced in the district court, where defendant was given an opportunity to explain them and introduce other evidence.—In re Baiz, 135 U. S. 403, 10 S. Ct. 854, 34 L. Ed. 222.

¶28. Scope of inquiry and powers of court.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 77.

On an application for a writ of prohibition, after the cause has gone to sentence, where the technical record shows jurisdiction in the lower court, the supreme court will not examine the evidence if such examination would require it to determine a question of national jurisdiction which is a present subject of diplomatic contention with a foreign government.—Ex parte Cooper, 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 L. Ed. 232.

In considering an application for a writ of prohibition to the district court of Alaska in an admiralty case which has gone to judgment, and in which the petitioner has lost his right to a review of the jurisdictional question by appeal because of his failure to ask a finding in respect to a necessary fact, the supreme court must consider itself bound by the findings returned as part of the record, and cannot examine the evidence as to the fact in question.—Id.

See 40 Cent. Dig. Prohib. § 82.

Though the granting or refusing of a writ of prohibition is ordinarily a matter of discretion, and not the subject of a writ of error, yet where it is demanded on the ground that the proceedings sought to be prohibited are without jurisdiction, and objection thereto has been made at the outset, and the petitioner has no other remedy, it becomes a writ of right; and, where all the proceedings appear on the record, the refusal to grant it may be reviewed on error.—Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 L. Ed. 601.

¶2. Cessions and treaties.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 2, 3.

The provision in Act March 1, 1847, creating the land district of Superior, that the president should have authority to set apart such portions of lands within the district as were necessary for public uses, did not empower him to interfere with reservations existing by force of a treaty.—Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 16 S. Ct. 360, 40 L. Ed. 469.

¶3. Extinguishment of Indian title.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 4.

The agreement of the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Dakota and Sioux Indians for the relinquishment of their title to lands granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by Act Cong. July 2, 1864, was accepted on the part of the United States when it was approved by the secretary of the interior, on the 19th of June, 1873. That agreement stipulated to be binding from its date, May 19, 1873, and the Indians retired from the lands to their reservations at that time. Held, that the relinquishment of their title, so far as the United States are concerned, then took place.—Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55, 7 S. Ct. 100, 30 L. Ed.

330, affirming judgment Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Peronto, 3 Dak. 217, 14 N. W. 103.

The manner, time, and conditions of extinguishing the Indian right of occupancy of lands granted by the United States are exclusively matters for the consideration of the government, and cannot be interfered with nor put in contest by private parties.—Id.

Act Aug. 26, 1852, granting to the state of Michigan the right of locating a canal through the military reservation at the falls of St. Mary's river, and authorizing by such description the location of the canal mainly across and through the Indian reserve, extinguished only so much of the Indian reserve as was embraced in the grant to the state for canal purposes.—Spalding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394, 16 S. Ct. 360, 40 L. Ed. 469.

¶4. What are lands of the United States.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 5.

The creation of a school district by California including public land other than school sections or lieu lands granted to the state by Act March 3, 1853, § 6, and Act July 23, 1866, § 6, could not impair the title of the United States to those lands.—Donnelly v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 449, 228 U. S. 243, 57 L. Ed. 820, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710, rehearing denied 33 S. Ct. 1024, 228 U. S. 708, 57 L. Ed. 1035, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 710.

¶8. Trespasses in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 3, 142.

The boxing and chipping of pine trees on public lands covered by an unperfected homestead entry and the extraction of crude turpentine constituted a willful trespass, though defendant did not know that his act was illegal.—Union Naval Stores Co. v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 308, 240 U. S. 284, 60 L. Ed. 644, affirming judgment 202 F. 491, 123 C. C. A. 1.

¶9. Cutting and removing timber.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 9-22.

¶10. — Statutory regulations.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 10.

The use of timber taken from unsurveyed mineral land in the territory of Arizona in roasting ore at a mine in that territory, whether roasting ore be considered a part of mining or of smelting, is authorized by the permission given by Act June 3, 1878, c. 150, § 1, 20 Stat. 88 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1528], to fell and remove such timber for "building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes," notwithstanding a regulation of the Secretary of the Interior, promulgated under the supposed authority of that statute, that no timber can be used for smelting purposes, since the words of the statute, that the felling and use of the timber shall be "subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe for the protection of the timber and of the undergrowth growing upon such lands, and for other purposes," cannot confer upon him the power to take from the industries designated the permission given by Congress. Judgment, 71 P. 954, 8 Ariz. 186, affirmed.—United States v. United Verde Copper Co., 25 S. Ct. 222, 196 U. S. 207, 49 L. Ed. 449.

The authority to cut timber from the public domain under Act June 3, 1878, c. 150, 20 Stat. 88 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1528), upon "lands being mineral, and not subject to entry under existing laws of the United States, except for mineral entry," does not extend to land adjacent to lands valuable for mineral purposes, but only includes lands known to be themselves valuable for minerals, which are the only lands excluded by the federal statutes from any but mineral entry. Judgment (1907) 151 F. 1022, 81 C. C. A. 682, reversed.—United States v. Plowman, 30 S. Ct. 299, 216 U. S. 372, 54 L. Ed. 523.

11. — Illegal cutting or removal.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 9, 11-13.

A settler on a homestead has no right to sell timber for money, except so far as the same may have been cut for the purposes of cultivation.—Shiver v. United States, 159 U. S. 491, 16 S. Ct. 54, 40 L. Ed. 231.

A citizen who has made a regular and proper homestead entry is nevertheless liable to a criminal prosecution under Rev. St. §§ 2461, 5388 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1527, 3649], for cutting and removing standing trees and timber found upon the land.—Id.

Lands entered for a homestead are, as between the United States and the settler, public lands of the United States, within Rev. St. § 2461 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1527], which forbids the cutting of timber from lands reserved for the purpose of supplying materials to the navy.—Id.

Where persons have cut timber from lands belonging to the United States, there is no presumption that they have complied with and come under the conditions of the act of June 3, 1878 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1528], authorizing bona fide residents of mineral districts to cut timber for building, agricultural, or other domestic purposes, under regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the interior. On the contrary, the right to cut being narrow and exceptional, the presumption, in the absence of any evidence of right, is that the cutting was illegal.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 16 S. Ct. 831, 40 L. Ed. 1002.

A homestead entry of mineral lands makes the land so far private property as to withdraw it from operation of Act June 3, 1878, authorizing any citizen to enter on mineral lands open to mineral entry to cut timber therefrom for mining purposes.—Bunker Hill & Sullivan Mining & Concentrating Co. v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 138, 226 U. S. 548, 57 L. Ed. 345, affirming judgment 178 F. 914, 102 C. C. A. 292.

A homestead entryman and his vendee, when sued by United States for cutting timber, are estopped to claim that the land was subject to Act June 3, 1878, authorizing citizens to enter on mineral lands open to mineral entry to cut timber for mining purposes.—Id.

The vendee of a trespasser on public lands, buying with notice, is liable to the United States for timber unlawfully removed by the vendor.—Id.

12. — Right to timber cut.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 14, 15.

Persons cutting trees growing on the lands of the United States, without permission, are mere trespassers, performing an illegal act, and acquire no right, title, or interest in the wood by reason of the severance.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 366, 16 S. Ct. 831, 40 L. Ed. 1002, reversing judgment 51 F. 658, 2 C. C. A. 446, 7 U. S. App. 254.

One illegally cutting cord wood from the lands of the United States, or purchasing the same from others who have so cut it, and removing and piling the same on another part of the public lands, acquires thereby neither any right or title, nor any possession, such as will enable him to maintain an action for damages for its negligent destruction by fire from railroad locomotives.—Id.

Even a settler who takes up a claim on public lands, intending to perfect his right, is not authorized, until he has perfected his claim, to cut the timber, except so far as is necessary and reasonable to prepare for cultivation so much of the land as he intends immediately to cultivate; and, if he cuts additional timber with intent to defraud the government, a purchaser from him acquires no title thereto. But if, in improving the land, he cuts and disposes of surplus timber without intent to defraud, one who purchases from him under the belief that there is no such intent is protected.—Stone v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 778, 167 U. S. 178, 42 L. Ed. 127, affirming judgment 64 F. 667, 12 C. C. A. 451, 29 U. S. App. 32.

The resumption by act of congress of title to unearned lands did not, by relation, revest in the United States title to timber which had been cut and removed therefrom by third persons while the title to the lands remained in the state. Judgment, 71 F. 921, 18 C. C. A. 391, affirmed.—United States v. Loughrey, 19 S. Ct. 153, 172 U. S. 206, 43 L. Ed. 420.

The United States in such case was not entitled to possession of the lands until the act of forfeiture was passed, until which time the title and right of possession remained in the state; and it cannot recover for timber previously severed by a trespasser, under the rule that in trover a defendant cannot defeat recovery by proving title in a third person, without showing himself in privity with such third person, as such rule applies only in favor of a plaintiff who shows his own prima facie title by proof that he was in possession, or entitled to possession.—Id.

13. — Recovery of timber or damages.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 16-18.

Where, in an action of trespass for cutting timber from the public domain, it appears that defendant had a sawmill near the land, and cut and sawed lumber, which he sold for profit, it is error for the court, in its charge, to refer, as a ground of justification, to the fact that the government has always tacitly permitted pioneer settlers to cut timber from the public domain for domestic use.—United States v. Mock, 149 U. S. 273, 13 S. Ct. 848, 37 L. Ed. 732.

In an action of trespass brought by the United States to recover for timber cut from the public lands, where it clearly appears that defendant cut some trees from the land in question, sawed them into lumber, and sold the same for eight or nine dollars per 1,000 feet, the government is entitled, at least, to a verdict for nominal damages, although there is no evidence as to the value of the standing trees.—Id.

The right of the government to recover damages for trees cut from the public domain, manufactured into lumber, and sold for profit, is not affected by the fact that the business, as carried on by defendant, was not in fact profitable.—United States v. Humphries, 149 U. S. 277, 13 S. Ct. 850, 37 L. Ed. 734.

Whether claimants under the homestead and pre-emption laws, who, after occupation for a time, abandon the lands, intended in cutting timber to defraud the government, is a question for the jury.—Stone v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 778, 167 U. S. 178, 42 L. Ed. 127, affirming judgment 64 F. 667, 12 C. C. A. 451, 29 U. S. App. 32.

The value of timber unlawfully cut from the public domain by a railroad company at the time when, and the place where, it was cut, is the measure of damages in a suit by the United States to recover its value, where the cutting was done on the advice of counsel, and in the belief that the lands from which it was cut were "adjacent" to the line of the road, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], and that the action was therefore legal. Judgment (1902) 114 F. 722, 52 C. C. A. 354, reversed.—United States v. St. Anthony R. Co., 24 S. Ct. 333, 192 U. S. 524, 48 L. Ed. 548.

Redress for the wrongful cutting, carrying away, and conversion of timber from the public domain cannot be had in a court of equity on the theory that the remedy at law is inadequate because of various devices resorted to by the principal tort-feasor by way of organizing different corporations to cover up his tracks and to render it more difficult for the United States to prove its case. Decree, 133 F. 274, 66 C. C. A. 652, affirmed.—United States v. Bitter Root Development Co., 26 S. Ct. 318, 200 U. S. 451, 50 L. Ed. 550.

The prevention of multiplicity of suits cannot successfully be relied upon to sustain a bill in equity, filed on behalf of the United States for redress for the acts of persons licensed to cut timber from certain described lands of the public domain, in wrongfully cutting, carrying away, and converting timber from other lands.—Id.

17. Pasturage and hay.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 23.

As there is a recognized public right of pasturage on the public domain which is left open, defendants cannot be enjoined from exercising such right by persons who own parcels of land detached and scattered through a large body of the public domain, and lying open, though thereby defendants' cattle will trespass on complainants' lands.—Buford v. Houtz, 133 U. S. 320, 10 S. Ct. 305, 33 L. Ed. 618, affirming 5 Utah, 591, 18 P. 633.

19. Inclosure.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 25, 26.

Act Feb. 25, 1885, 23 Stat. 321 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1524], was only intended to prevent mere trespassers from inclosing public lands, and in a proceeding thereunder it is a sufficient defense to show that the lands inclosed are not public lands, or that defendant had color of title acquired in good faith.—Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 13 S. Ct. 595, 37 L. Ed. 459, reversing judgment United States v. Cameron, 21 P. 177.

A claim to land by certain boundaries under a Mexican grant of "four square leagues of land in the place called 'San Rafael de la Zanja,'" the limits to be designated by stone monuments, is a claim under color of title, it appearing that such designation was actually made; that judicial possession was delivered in pursuance thereof; and that, though the surveyor general, on application for confirmation of the grant, has reported in favor of limiting it to four square leagues, the claim and report are still pending undetermined before Congress.—Id.

Where, under such circumstances, a portion of the lands is occupied under a claim of title to all within the boundaries thus fixed, it cannot be regarded as part of the public lands of the United States; for it is the settled policy of the government to protect all claims to land, though founded on an inchoate or imperfect title, until their validity is determined by a competent tribunal.—Id.

Color of title exists wherever there is a reasonable doubt regarding the validity of an apparent title, whether the doubt arises from the circumstances under which the land is held, the identity of the land conveyed, or the construction of the instrument under which the party in possession claims title.—Id.

The act of congress of February 25, 1885 (23 Stat. 321), prohibiting the inclosure of public lands of the United States within any state or territory by persons having no right or claim thereto, and providing for the abatement of such inclosures, is constitutional, and under it the government may compel the removal of fences inclosing public lands within a state, though erected on private property.—Camfield v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 864, 167 U. S. 518, 42 L. Ed. 260, affirming judgment 66 F. 101, 13 C. C. A. 359.

The grant by the government of every alternate section of land in a township to a railroad company to aid in the construction of its road does not carry with it the right to a purchaser of such land to inclose it in such manner as to also inclose the intermediate sections, which remain the property of the United States.—Id.

21. Offenses incident to disposal of public lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 23.

Land covered by a homestead claim after entry and before patent is not public land within Act Feb. 25, 1885, § 3, making it unlawful to prevent any person from entering upon or establishing a settlement on public land subject to settlement or entry.—United States v. Buchanan, 34 S. Ct. 237, 232 U. S. 72, 58 L. Ed. 511.

(A) SURVEYS.

24. Method and sufficiency.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 31, 32.

For the purpose of showing the date that a survey on which a party bases his claim to title to public lands was filed in the general land office, copies of official letters written by the commissioner to the party then claiming title under the warrant and survey, reciting the facts, which copies were sworn to by a witness who was a clerk in the general land office, and acquainted with the facts, he having, as such clerk, written the originals for the commissioner, by whom they were signed, are competent.—Coan v. Flagg, 123 U. S. 117, 8 S. Ct. 47, 31 L. Ed. 107, affirming decree 38 Ohio St. 156.

§25. Operation and effect in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 33, 34.

The power to make and correct surveys of public lands belongs to the political department of the government, and the decisions of the general land-office are unassailable by the courts, except by direct proceedings.—Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 9 S. Ct. 203, 32 L. Ed. 566.

§26. Errors and omissions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 37, 38.

The courts cannot interfere with the executive administration of the land department by enjoining, at the instance of persons claiming to be the owners of the land, a survey, under the direction of such department, of certain lands lying between an alleged meander line and the actual waters of a lake, which are claimed by the department to be unsurveyed public lands of the United States. Decree, 109 F. 354, 48 C. C. A. 399, reversed.—Kirwan v. Murphy, 23 S. Ct. 599, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. Ed. 698.

Error in omitting island in navigable stream from field notes and plat of the government survey of 1868 did not divest the United States of title.—Scott v. Lattig, 33 S. Ct. 242, 227 U. S. 229, 57 L. Ed. 490, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 107, reversing decree Lattig v. Scott, 107 P. 47, 17 Idaho, 506.

A tract of agricultural land susceptible of cultivation, which by error of the surveyor was omitted from the survey and designated as a lake, was as much within the operation of the federal settlement laws as if the true character had been reported by the surveyor.—Gauthier v. Morrison, 34 S. Ct. 384, 232 U. S. 452, 58 L. Ed. 680, reversing judgment 114 P. 501, 62 Wash. 572.

Facts held insufficient to raise an inference that an island was not in existence at the time of a government survey.—Moss v. Ramey, 36 S. Ct. 183, 239 U. S. 538, 60 L. Ed. 425, affirming judgment A. B. Moss & Bro. v. Same, 136 P. 608, 25 Idaho, 1.

Errors of the government surveyor in failing to extend the survey over an island in a navigable stream did not make it any the less a part of the public domain.—Id.

§29. Lands subject to entry.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 41-47.

A tract of land, secured by treaty with the Indians to their free and unrestricted use, was so recorded in the general land office, but the land officers of the district permitted land scrip to be located within the boundaries of the tract, and a patent was issued to the person making entry. Held, that such entry was void.—United States v. Carpenter, 111 U. S. 347, 4 S. Ct. 435, 28 L. Ed. 451.

Surveys under the eighth section of the act of July 23, 1866, "to quiet land titles in California," become operative by approval of the United States surveyor general for the state, and his filing in the local land office of the township plats. Upon such approval of a survey and filing of the township plats, lands thereby excluded from a confirmed private land claim become subject to state selections, and other modes of disposal of public lands, and previous approval of the survey by the commissioner of the general land office is not necessary.—Fraser v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 5 S. Ct. 1141, 29 L. Ed. 311.

Act Cong. July 2, 1864, granted certain lands in aid of the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and provided that the United States should extinguish the Indian title to all lands falling within the grant. The Indians agreed to relinquish their title, and retired from the lands May 19, 1873. Held, that no pre-emptive right could be initiated to the land so long as the Indian title was unextinguished.—Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55, 7 S. Ct. 100, 30 L. Ed. 330, affirming judgment Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Peronto, 3 Dak. 217, 14 N. W. 103.

Where, under Act. Cong. July 23, 1866, § 8, "to quiet land titles in California," a survey is made by the United States surveyor general for California of a claim to land under a confirmed Mexican grant, and land is set off by him in satisfaction of the grant, the survey is operative without the approval of the commissioner of the general land office, and land lying outside of such survey then becomes subject to state selection in lieu of school sections covered by the grant, and is open to settlement under the pre-emption laws.—McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 327, 7 S. Ct. 176, 30 L. Ed. 408.

In case of a survey of a Mexican grant made more than 10 months after the act of Congress of July 23, 1866, "to quiet land titles in California," became operative, its approval by the surveyor general had the effect of opening all lands within the exterior boundaries of the grant, but outside of those fixed by the survey, to selection or pre-emption entry as public lands, subject only to a defeat of title if, in the end, the survey as made should be set aside, and the boundaries of the grant finally extended so as to include the selection or the entry.—Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 366, 7 S. Ct. 587, 30 L. Ed. 675.

It was alleged in a bill of equity to cancel patents issued for some lands that the lands in controversy were not subject to settlement and sale under the pre-emption laws, being "known mines," within the description of those laws. Held, that no lands are "known mines" unless at the time the rights of the purchaser accrued there was upon the ground an actual and opened mine, which had been worked, or was capable of being worked.—Colorado Coal & Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 8 S. Ct. 131, 31 L. Ed. 182, reversing decree (C. C.) United States v. Southern Colorado Coal & Town Co., 18 F. 273, 5 McCrary, 563.

In the case of a floating Mexican grant the government retained the right of locating the quantity granted in such part of the larger tract described, as it saw fit, and the United States succeeded to the same right; hence the government might dispose of any specific tracts within the exterior limits of the grant, leaving a sufficient quantity to satisfy the float.—United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 423, 8 S. Ct. 1177, 32 L. Ed. 213, affirming decree (C. C.) 30 F. 147.

No change in the policy of the government to protect from pre-emption and settlement lands claimed under an alleged Spanish or Mexican grant is to be inferred from the fact that the provision in the act (10 Stat. 308) establishing the office of surveyor general for New Mexico (then including Arizona), that "until the final action of congress on such claims all lands covered thereby shall be reserved from sales or other disposals by the government, and shall not be subject to the donations granted by the previous provisions of this act," was omitted from the act (16 Stat. 230) establishing the same office for Arizona, especially as the sundry civil appropriation act for the same year (16 Stat. 304) provides that the surveyor general of Arizona shall have all the powers and perform all the duties enjoined upon the surveyor general of New Mexico.—Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 13 S. Ct. 595, 37 L. Ed. 459, reversing judgment United States v. Cameron, 21 P. 177.

Lands ceded by the Osage Indians to be sold by the United States, and the proceeds held in trust for their benefit, were directed (21 Stat. 143, § 2) to be sold to settlers "having the qualifications of pre-emptors on the public lands." By a subsequent act (Id. 311) Congress directed part of the lands belonging to the Ft. Dodge military reservation to be opened for settlement "under the homestead laws." A small fraction of these lands was included within the overlapping limits of the ceded Osage lands. Held, that this latter act, in the absence of an express repeal of the former one, should be construed as not applying to the Osage lands, especially as the opposite construction would violate the trust established by the treaty.—Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 46, 15 S. Ct. 532, 39 L. Ed. 614.

Under Rev. St. §§ 2258, 2289, excluding from pre-emption and homestead "lands included within the limits of any incorporated town or selected as the site of a city or town," a patent issued by the land department for lands within the limits of a city incorporated, by public act, two years before the patentee's application to enter the land, is void.—Burfenning v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 163 U. S. 321, 16 S. Ct. 1018, 41 L. Ed. 175, affirming judgment 46 Minn. 20, 48 N. W. 444.

No intention on the part of Congress to permit rights to public lands in Alaska to be initiated by a settlement made after the enactment of Act May 17, 1884, c. 53, 23 Stat. 24, can be gathered from the provisions of section 8 of that act that "the Indians or other persons in said district shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands actually in their use or occupation, or now claimed by them, but the terms under which such persons may acquire title to such lands is reserved for future legislation by Congress," especially when considered with a subsequent clause of that section that "nothing contained in this act shall be construed to put in force in said district the general land laws," and with the provision of section 12 for the appointment of a commission to report the facts to enable Congress to determine what limitations or conditions should be imposed when the land laws should be extended to the district.—Russian-American Packing Co. v. United States, 26 S. Ct. 157, 199 U. S. 570, 50 L. Ed. 314, affirming judgment 39 Ct. Cl. 460; Royal Packing Co. v. Same, 26 S. Ct. 159, 199 U. S. 579, 50 L. Ed. 316, affirming judgment 39 Ct. Cl. 566.

Actual disclosure of coal within its boundaries held not essential to constitute a tract of public coal lands which, under Rev. St. §§ 2302, 2318, 2319, 2347-2351 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1410, 1423, 1424, 1440, 1441), are not subject to acquisition under the homestead law.—Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 507, 233 U. S. 236, 58 L. Ed. 936, affirming decree United States v. Diamond Coal & Coke Co., 191 F. 786, 112 C. C. A. 272.

§30. Persons capable to enter or acquire lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 48-50.

Under Rev. St. § 2261, when a party has filed his declaratory statement with a view to the pre-emption of one tract of land, he cannot thereafter file a second declaration for another tract.—Baldwin v. Starks, 107 U. S. 463, 2 S. Ct. 473, 27 L. Ed. 526.

Act Cong. Sept. 4, 1841 (5 Stat. 453), relating to pre-emption of public lands, declares (section 10) that "no person shall be entitled to more than one pre-emptive right by virtue of this act," and (section 13) that, "before any person claiming the benefit of this act shall be allowed to enter on such lands," he shall make oath "that he has never had the benefit of any right of pre-emption under this act." Held, that the exercise of the pre-emption right by the entry of part of a quarter section of land is an abandonment of the right to enter the residue of the quarter section.—Nix v. Allen, 112 U. S. 129, 5 S. Ct. 70, 28 L. Ed. 675.

In the act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. 757), relating to the opening to settlement of certain Oklahoma lands, and in the Indian appropriation act of the subsequent day (25 Stat. 1005), the provisions that any person who, prior to the time the lands are opened, "may enter upon any part of said lands" (as stated in the former act), and "enter upon and occupy the same" (as declared in the latter), shall never be permitted to enter any of said lands or acquire any right thereto, were applicable to the body of said lands as a whole, and not to the particular tracts which claimants desired to enter; and the disqualification therefore attached to any person who was within the boundaries of said lands prior to 12 o'clock on April 22, 1889, when the same were opened by proclamation of the president, and who attempted to make an entry without first departing therefrom.—Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 13 S. Ct. 634, 37 L. Ed. 533, affirming judgment 29 P. 80, 1 Okl. 117.

Under Act Cong. March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. 1005), relating to the opening of certain lands in Oklahoma for settlement, which provides that until the lands are open for settlement by the proclamation of the president no person shall be permitted to enter on and occupy the same, and no person violating the provision shall ever be permitted to acquire any right to said lands, and under the proclamation of the president, declaring that the lands will be open for settlement at 12 o'clock noon on April 22, 1889, an employé of a railroad company whose road ran through the lands in question, who was living on the land opened for settlement before and until noon of April 22, 1889, was disqualified to take a homestead.—Id.

A deputy United States marshal, who was within the Cherokee Indian reservation, opened to settlement under the act of March 2, 1889, prior to 12 o'clock, noon, of April 22, 1889, was disqualified from taking a homestead therein. Smith v. Townsend, 13 S. Ct. 634, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. Ed. 533, followed. Judgment, Payne v. Foster (Okl.) 33 P. 424, affirmed.—Payne v. Robertson, 18 S. Ct. 337, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. Ed. 764.

In the act of March 2, 1889, relating to the opening of the land now included in Oklahoma territory, the proviso of section 12, declaring that the right of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, as defined in Rev. St. §§ 2304, 2305, shall not be abridged, gave such soldiers and sailors no right to enter the country prior to the time fixed by the statute and the president's proclamation, and an entry made by a soldier who had gone into the country prior to that time was void.—Calhoun v. Violet, 19 S. Ct. 324, 173 U. S. 60, 43 L. Ed. 614.

A single application to enter 160 acres of land by a person who has made a contract to divide a quarter thereof, when obtained, with another person, in violation of Rev. St. U. S. § 2262, cannot be sustained as to any part of the land, but is invalid even as to the part which he had not agreed to divide. Judgment, Bishop Iron Co. v. Hyde, 74 N. W. 1016, 72 Minn. 16, affirmed.—Hyde v. Bishop Iron Co., 20 S. Ct. 592, 177 U. S. 281, 44 L. Ed. 771.

One who was outside the territory opened to settlement by Act March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. 757, c. 317), Act March 2, 1889, c. 412 (25 Stat. 980, 1006, c. 412), and the President's proclamation of March 23, 1889 (26 Stat. 1546), at the time of such opening, was not disqualified from participating in the race for the land, because, prior to that date and within the prohibited period, he had been within such territory, where no manifest advantage over his competitors resulted to him from his prior entry into such territory.—Potter v. Hall, 23 S. Ct. 545, 189 U. S. 292, 47 L. Ed. 817.

The description in the President's proclamation of August 19, 1893, opening to settlement a portion of the land ceded by the Cherokee Nation, of the 100-foot strip which might, without gaining any settlement right, be occupied in advance of the time set for the opening by persons intending to take part in the race for the land, as running "around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire tract of country to be opened to settlement under this proclamation," controls any doubt arising from the further statement in that portion of the proclamation defining the purposes for which the strip was to be used, that the inner boundary of such strip "shall be 100 feet from the exterior boundary of the country known as the Cherokee Outlet." Judgment, 69 P. 879, 11 Okl. 565, affirmed.—Winebrenner v. Forney, 23 S. Ct. 590, 189 U. S. 148, 47 L. Ed. 754.

One who was within the Chillico reservation before 12 noon (Central standard time), September 16, 1893, and made the race from such reservation into that part of the Cherokee Outlet which was opened to settlement on that day, is not, by reason thereof, disqualified from filing a homestead entry on a portion of said land. Decree, 78 P. 223, 15 Okl. 52, affirmed.—McCalla v. Acker, 28 S. Ct. 754, 200 U. S. 613, 50 L. Ed. 620.

A special agent of the General Land Office is prevented from making a valid timber culture entry by Rev. St. U. S. § 452 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 257], prohibiting officers, clerks, and employés in the General Land Office from directly or indirectly purchasing or becoming interested in the purchase of any of the public land. Decree (1906) 84 P. 404, 41 Wash. 604, affirmed.—Prosser v. Finn, 28 S. Ct. 225, 208 U. S. 67, 52 L. Ed. 392.

☞ 31. Rights acquired by occupancy.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 51-53.

Where a person goes on land, with intent to enter it as a homestead, with knowledge that it has been withdrawn from sale, pre-emption, and homestead entries, he acquires no equitable rights by his settlement and subsequent occupation.—Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 15 S. Ct. 410, 39 L. Ed. 523.

Occupation of public land with the intention some time to enter it for a homestead, but without any offer to make entry till after it was withdrawn from sale and entry, gave no equitable rights as against a railroad to which the land was granted, all these things having occurred while 12 Stat. 392, making entry at the land office the initial step to acquire rights under the homestead law, was in force.—Maddox v. Burnham, 156 U. S. 544, 15 S. Ct. 448, 39 L. Ed. 527.

A person cannot defend against a patent issued on an entry in a local land office for public land which was subject to disposal by the land department, on the ground that he was in actual possession at the time of its issuance, where he had taken no steps to secure the title. 15 So. 780, 34 Fla. 130, 43 Am. St. Rep. 172, affirmed.—Johnson v. Drew, 18 S. Ct. 800, 171 U. S. 93, 43 L. Ed. 88.

The right of one who has actually occupied public lands, with an intent to make a homestead or pre-emption entry, cannot be defeated by the mere lack of a place in which to make a record of his intent, if he makes his entry as soon as an office is opened where he can do so. Judgment, 53 P. 996, 17 Utah, 352, reversed.—Tarpey v. Madsen, 20 S. Ct. 849, 178 U. S. 215, 44 L. Ed. 1042.

The relative rights of a railroad company and an individual entryman in respect to public lands must be determined by record evidence,—on the one part the filing of the map in the office of the secretary of the interior, and on the other the declaration or entry in the local land office; and the mere occupancy of an entryman who does not file his declaratory statement is insufficient to protect his claim against a land grant.—Id.

The rule that "the law deals tenderly with one who, in good faith, goes upon the public lands with a view of making a home thereon," does not apply to one who, after the original entryman abandons his claim, attempts to dispossess a railroad company of its title under a land grant which has remained apparently perfect and unquestioned for many years.—Id.

A homestead right cannot be initiated by an entry on land then in possession of one who had bought from those acquiring the property in good faith from the apparent owner of the equitable title, who had cultivated the land and made permanent improvements.—Lyle v. Patterson, 33 S. Ct. 480, 228 U. S. 211, 57 L. Ed. 804, affirming decree 178 F. 909, 100 C. C. A. 379.

Title to a part of a street laid on by a survey of a town which had grown up on public land never passed out of the United States, where the survey was never carried into a patent, and the village never accepted such part of the street, and had abandoned the land which was privately occupied for a time not long enough to acquire title.—United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co., 33 S. Ct. 667, 229 U. S. 53, 57 L. Ed. 1063.

☞ 32. Rights acquired by entry in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 54-56.

Continuing in possession after ceasing to be a special agent of the Land Office is not the equivalent of a new timber culture entry, where the original entry was invalid because made in direct violation of Rev. St. U. S. § 452 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 257], while he was such special agent. Decree (1906) 84 P. 404, 41 Wash. 604, affirmed.—Prosser v. Finn, 28 S. Ct. 225, 208 U. S. 67, 52 L. Ed. 392.

☞ 33. Sales.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 57-64.

A person made a series of applications for the same lands in the names of different parties, allowing each application to lapse for want of payment within the 90 days, and thereafter immediately filing a new application, thus keeping the lands from market beyond the statutory time. Finally he made a new application before the expiration of the last 90 days, and a patent was issued thereon. Held that, as against an adverse claimant, a purchaser of this title was estopped from setting up that the prior applications were fictitious, and left the land open for purchase upon the application for which the patent issued.—Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 13 S. Ct. 217, 37 L. Ed. 72.

The provision of Rev. St. § 2357 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1444], that the price to be paid for alternate reserved lands along the line of railroads within the limits granted by any act of congress shall be $2.50 per acre, was not affected or repealed by Act March 3, 1877, c. 207 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1548], providing for the sale of desert lands at $1.25 per acre.—United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136, 16 S. Ct. 247, 40 L. Ed. 369.

—34. Pre-emption.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 65-71.

After the death of one who had settled and lived on public land in anticipation of its being opened for pre-emption, his administrator, in the name of his heirs, filed the declaratory statement required for pre-emption, promptly after the land became subject thereto, paid the price, and, after a contest with others, a patent was issued to them. Held, that a claimant by virtue of an entry on and possession of the land for pre-emption, while it was not in the actual occupation of the heirs, but after their claim had been recognized at the land-office, had no equity superior to their rights under the patent.—Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445, 4 S. Ct. 508, 28 L. Ed. 476.

In an action for the possession of land by the holder of the legal title under a patent from the United States, defendant claimed that, under the pre-emption laws, he was entitled to the patent. It appeared that in 1868 defendant was put in possession of the land by a judgment of the state court, and that he filed his declaratory statement in October, 1873. But he was absent from the land from July, 1869, to October, 1871, from April, 1872, to August, 1874, and from October, 1874, to March, 1875. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover.—Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 5 S. Ct. 782, 29 L. Ed. 61.

Where unsurveyed public land is occupied by a settler with the intention to pre-empt it, but he dies before the survey is made, he has no vested interest which can pass to his heirs. Rev. St. § 2269, providing that "where a party entitled to claim the benefit of the pre-emption laws dies before consummating his claim; by filing in due time all the papers essential to the establishment of the same, it shall be competent for the executor," etc., "or one of the heirs, to file the necessary papers to complete the same," etc., has no application to such a case.—Buxton v. Traver, 130 U. S. 232, 9 S. Ct. 508, 32 L. Ed. 920, affirming 67 Cal. 171, 7 P. 450.

Plaintiff and defendant filed on separate and adjoining tracts of land, and made improvements thereon. Defendant, without the knowledge of plaintiff, obtained permission to amend his declaratory statement so as to include the tract on which plaintiff had settled, and thus bought that tract, and had it included in his patent. Held, that this amendment was in violation of Rev. St. § 2261, which prohibits a pre-emptor from filing at a future time a second declaration for another tract, and the patent thereon issued cannot defeat plaintiff's rights.—Sanford v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 642, 11 S. Ct. 666, 35 L. Ed. 290, affirming decree 19 Or. 1, 13 P. 602.

The word "heirs," as used in Rev. St. § 2269, which provides for the issuance of a patent to the heirs of a deceased pre-emptor, includes illegitimate children, when such children can inherit from their father in the state where he was domiciled and the land located. Gen. St. Kan. p. 786, c. 33, § 22, 23.—Hutchinson Invest. Co. v. Caldwell, 152 U. S. 65, 14 S. Ct. 504, 38 L. Ed. 356, affirming judgment Caldwell v. Miller, 44 Kan. 12, 23 P. 946.

Act 1853, § 6, requires a pre-emption claimant to make proof and payment prior to the day appointed by the president's proclamation for the commencement of a sale, including such lands. The president's proclamation, appointing February 14, 1859, as the day for commencing the sale of public lands in certain townships, expressly excepted mineral lands therefrom. The land in controversy was held by the local officers to be mineral land, though included in such townships, was not offered for sale. Held that, under Act March 3, 1843 (5 Stat. 620), providing that a settler on unoffered land might make proof and payment at any time before the commencement of a public sale which should embrace his land, failure to make final proof and payment within the time limited by the president's proclamation did not render the pre-emption claim an "expired filing."—Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 15 S. Ct. 796, 39 L. Ed. 906 affirming judgment (C. C.) 45 F. 616.

Where unsurveyed lands are claimed by pre-emption, failure to file notice of such claim within three months after the return of the plats of surveys to the land office, as required by Act 1853, § 6 (10 Stat. 246), does not vitiate the proceedings, and cannot be taken advantage of, by one who had acquired no rights prior to the filing.—Id.

The fact that the local land officers wrongfully refused an application to pre-empt certain land does not prevent the attaching of the pre-emption right to the land from the date of the application, so as to except it from a railroad grant subsequently located; and the fact that the applicant finally obtains title by means of an act of congress passed for his relief is immaterial.—Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 16 S. Ct. 72, 40 L. Ed. 253.

The mere occupation and cultivation of land without making entry in the local land office does not create a pre-emption claim which will exclude the land from the operation of a grant by congress to another.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Colburn, 17 S. Ct. 98, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. Ed. 479.

By the pre-emption laws as in force since 1871, embodied in Rev. St. §§ 2257-2267, all claimants of pre-emption rights were required to make proper proof and payment for the lands claimed within 30 months from the expiration of the time prescribed for the filing of the declaratory notices; and, on a failure to make proof and payment within such time, the rights of the claimant in the land expired by operation of law, which fact appears from the records of the land office, regardless of whether or not a formal entry of cancellation has been made thereon by the land officers. Judgment, De Lacey v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 72 F. 728, 19 C. C. A. 157, and Northern Pac. R. Co. v. De Lacey (C. C.) 66 F. 450, reversed.—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. De Lacey, 19 S. Ct. 791, 174 U. S. 622, 43 L. Ed. 1111.

—35. Homestead.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 72-77.

Under Const. art. 4, § 3, giving congress power "to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property of the United States," and Rev. St. § 2289 et seq., providing for a homestead entry by a citizen on public lands, and the completion of title under such entry, the right to make a homestead entry is protected by Rev. St. § 5508 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3712], forbidding any conspiracy "to injure, oppose, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the constitution or laws of the United States."—United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 5 S. Ct. 35, 23 L. Ed. 673, affirming (C. C.) 16 F. 221, 5 McCrary, 155.

One claiming to act under Rev. St. § 2293 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1395], relating to applications to enter land as a homestead by enlisted soldiers whose families were residing on the land, filed his affidavit, properly sworn to, made his application, and paid the fees, and the entry was allowed by the register and receiver of the local land-office, and recorded. The affidavit failed to state that affiant's family, or any member thereof, was residing on the land. Held, that as the entry was not invalid on its face the homestead right had attached, within the meaning of Act Cong. July 4, 1866, granting certain lands to Minnesota in aid of railroads, but excepting those to which it shall appear, when the lines are definitely located, that "the right of pre-emption or homestead settlement has attached."—Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 10 S. Ct. 112, 33 L. Ed. 365, affirming 34 Minn. 538, 27 N. W. 69.

The entry was cured by Rev. St. § 2308 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1417], which declares that where a party, at the date of his entry under the homestead law, was actually enlisted and employed in the army of the United States, his services therein shall, in the administration of such homestead laws, be construed to be equivalent, to all intents and purposes, to a residence for the same length of time upon the tract so entered.—Id.

Rev. St. §§ 2291, 2292 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1390, 1394], providing for the issuance of certificates and patents of homestead lands to the heirs of the homesteader, the former naming the "heirs" generally, and the latter referring to "minor heirs" only, must be construed so as to stand together, and, so construed, the latter applies only when there are minor heirs alone, and the former when there are adult heirs, or adult and minor heirs; and a patent issued to minor heirs, when there are also adult heirs, will inure to the benefit of all alike, and the minors will be compelled to convey the proper shares to the adults.—Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 13 S. Ct. 244, 37 L. Ed. 152, reversing decree 72 Mich. 43, 40 N. W. 50.

Defendant, having the right to enter a certain 160 acres of land as a homestead, went on it for the purpose of making it his home, and has ever since occupied it. His homestead application therefor was wrongfully rejected by the register of the land office, on the ground that the land was within the granted limits of a railroad, was double minimum land, and that 80 acres was the limit of a homestead entry thereon, as to which fact the register was mistaken. Held, that defendant thereby acquires an equity, which he could enforce against the railroad, which thereafter selected the land as indemnity land, and obtained a patent and legal title thereto; and that he did not lose his rights by failure to take an appeal from the register, or by making a pre-emption filing, when his homestead application was rejected, on 80 acres of the land, on the advice of the register that he could prove up on this at the end of a year, and then homestead 80 acres more.—Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 15 S. Ct. 406, 39 L. Ed. 524, reversing judgments Same v. Pratt, 43 Kan. 419, 23 P. 646, and Same v. Brandon, 23 P. 648, 43 Kan. 425.

One having minor children by a former deceased husband has, under Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1468, such absolute title in one-half the latter's real estate that, by a conveyance to her second husband of land which may on partition be included in such half, even though it has been allotted as a homestead to her and her children, the husband acquires a title sufficient to allow him to claim an "additional farm homestead" under Rev. St. §§ 2289, 2290, providing that every person owning and residing on land may enter contiguous unoccupied land.—Stewart v. McHarry, 159 U. S. 643, 16 S. Ct. 117, 40 L. Ed. 290, affirming judgment McHarry v. Stewart, 35 P. 141.

The right to confirmation under Act June 3, 1896, c. 312, 29 Stat. 197 [U. S. Comp. St.

1901, p. 1409], of a commutation entry under the homestead laws, which was only invalid because prematurely made, in actual ignorance of the amendment of Rev. St. U. S. § 2301, by Act March 3, 1891, c. 561, 26 Stat. 1098 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1406], is not defeated by the entryman's subsequent efforts to protect his grantees by taking a reconveyance, and residing again upon the land, for the purpose of enabling him to make proof to secure the title for them. Decree, McCord v. Hill, 84 N. W. 65, 117 Wis. 306, affirmed.—Hill v. McCord, 25 S. Ct. 96, 195 U. S. 395, 49 L. Ed. 251.

A residence for voting purposes in another precinct from that in which a homestead entry lies precludes the entryman from claiming residence at the same time on the land for homestead purposes. Judgment, 72 P. 746, 28 Mont. 413, 104 Am. St. Rep. 691, affirmed.—Small v. Rakestraw, 25 S. Ct. 285, 196 U. S. 403, 49 L. Ed. 527.

A homestead entry on land in Oklahoma territory, which is valid upon its face, although made by one in fact personally disqualified to make a valid entry, prevents the initiation of homestead rights by another while it remains uncanceled of record by some direct action of the land office or by relinquishment. Judgment, 70 P. 189, 12 Okl. 155, affirmed.—McMichael v. Murphy, 25 S. Ct. 460, 197 U. S. 304, 49 L. Ed. 766.

A homesteader who initiates a right as to either surveyed or unsurveyed land, and complies with the legal regulations, may, when he enters the land, embrace in his claim land in contiguous quarter sections, if he does not exceed the quantity allowed by law, and provided that his improvements are upon some portion of the tract, and that he does such acts as put the public upon notice of the extent of his claim.—Judgment, Donohue v. St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. (1907) 112 N. W. 413, 101 Minn. 239, affirmed.—St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Donohue, 28 S. Ct. 600, 210 U. S. 21, 52 L. Ed. 941.

The death of the homestead entryman before perfecting his right is essential to give his widow the right under Rev. St. § 2291 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1390), of residence, cultivation, and patent.—Wadkins v. Producer Oil Co., 33 S. Ct. 380, 227 U. S. 368, 57 L. Ed. 551, affirming judgment Same v. Producers' Oil Co., 57 So. 937, 130 La. 308.

Settler on unsurveyed public land held not to have constructive residence on the land, satisfying the requirement of actual residence under Rev. St. § 2291 (Comp. St. 1913, § 4532), essential to a homestead claim.—Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Hower, 35 S. Ct. 465, 236 U. S. 702, 59 L. Ed. 798, reversing decree 125 P. 159, 69 Wash. 380.

Homesteader from his entry has a title sufficient against third parties to support suits in equity or at law.—Knapp v. Alexander-Edgar Lumber Co., 35 S. Ct. 515, 237 U. S. 162, 59 L. Ed. 894, reversing judgment 130 N. W. 504, 145 Wis. 528, 140 Am. St. Rep. 1091.

Patentee under the homestead laws may recover for timber wrongfully cut from his land by a trespasser after homesteader's entry but before taking possession.—Id.

Right of patentee under the homestead laws to recover for timber willfully cut by a trespasser after homesteader's entry, but before possession, is not defeated by settlement between the United States and the trespasser.—Id.

Heirs of homestead entryman who made final proof before death could take as heirs where a patent issued in his name only under Rev. St. § 248 (Comp. St. 1913, § 5098), and not under Rev. St. § 2291 (section 4532) as beneficiaries under the statute.—Doran v. Kennedy, 35 S. Ct. 615, 237 U. S. 362, 59 L. Ed. 996, affirming decree 141 N. W. 851, 122 Minn. 1.

A homestead entryman who has made final proof is the equitable owner of the land, which, on his death, is subject to the probate jurisdiction of the state.—Id.

37. Desert lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 81.

Act March 3, 1891, amending Act March 3, 1877, in regard to the sale of desert lands, provided (section 6 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1550]) that it should not affect valid rights accrued under said act of 1877, and that all bona fide claims previously initiated might be perfected in compliance with said act, and "upon the same terms and conditions" as if the later act had not been passed. Section 7 provided that a patent should issue within four years after entry, upon satisfactory proof, and on payment of one dollar per acre, "but no person or association of persons shall hold * * * prior to the issue of patent more than 320 acres of such arid or desert lands; but this section shall not apply to entries made or initiated prior to the approval of this act." Held, that cases initiated under the act of 1877, and not completed by final proof until after the passage of the act of 1891, were, as to the price to be paid, governed by the law in force at the time of the entry.—United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136, 16 S. Ct. 247, 40 L. Ed. 369.

38. Timber and stone lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 82.

The question whether lands are "valuable chiefly for timber, but unfit for cultivation," so as to be purchasable under Act Cong. June 3, 1878 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], is to be determined with reference to their present state; and where they are stony and second rate, and covered with a dense growth of fir trees, many of them 200 feet high and 5 feet in diameter, producing from 50,000 to 150,000 feet of the best quality of lumber per acre, the lands come within the statute, notwithstanding that they are capable of being made fit for cultivation after the removal of the forest.—United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 12 S. Ct. 575, 36 L. Ed. 384, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 630.

Public land covered by a heavy growth of timber, which constituted its chief value, was subject to entry under Timber Act June 3, 1878, 20 Stat. 89, c. 151 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], although it would have been fit for cultivation when the timber had been removed. Judgment, Whitney v. Spratt, 64 P. 919, 25 Wash. 62, 87 Am. St. Rep. 738, affirmed.—Thayer v. Spratt, 23 S. Ct. 576, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. Ed. 845.

An entryman who has made an application under the timber and stone act (Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89), as amended by Act Aug. 4, 1892, c. 375, 27 Stat. 348 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545), in good faith, and for his exclusive use and benefit, is not prohibited from subsequently agreeing to convey the land covered by his application to another, and to perfect his entry for the purpose, after patent, of fulfilling his contract, by the provision of the statute forbidding an entryman or applicant from making an application ostensibly in his own name, but in reality for, and on behalf of, another. Judgment (D. C. 1907) 157 F. 264, affirmed.—United States v. Biggs, 29 S. Ct. 181, 211 U. S. 507, 53 L. Ed. 305; Same v. Freeman, 29 S. Ct. 185, 211 U. S. 525, 53 L. Ed. 311; Same v. Sullenberger, 29 S. Ct. 186, 211 U. S. 522, 53 L. Ed. 311.

39. Town sites.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 83-90, 92-99.

The acts of congress relating to town sites recognize the possession of mining claims within their limits, and forbid the acquisition of any mines within them under proceedings by which title to other lands there situated is secured, thus leaving the mineral deposits within town sites open to exploration, and the land in which they are found to occupation and purchase, in the same manner as such deposits are elsewhere explored and possessed, and the lands containing them are acquired.—Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co., 106 U. S. 447, 1 S. Ct. 389, 27 L. Ed. 226.

Land embraced within a town site on a public domain, when unoccupied, is not exempt from location and sale for mining purposes. Its exemption is only from settlement and sale under the pre-emption laws.—Id.

Act Cong. March 3, 1867 (14 Stat. 541), for the relief of the inhabitants of cities and towns upon public lands, provided that the municipal authorities should enter the land so occupied in trust for the occupants thereof. Act Utah Feb. 17, 1869 (Comp. Laws Utah 1876, p. 379), provided that upon the compliance with certain requirements the mayor of the town should make the occupant a deed "under the seal of the corporation." The general law of the territory governing conveyances required a deed to be attested by two witnesses. Held, that the specific provisions control, and that a deed attested by the corporate seal without witnesses was sufficient.—Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 3 S. Ct. 387, 27 L. Ed. 1012.

Lands known to be valuable for their minerals are not subject to the provisions of Rev. St. tit. 32, c. 8 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1454], relating to the reservation and sale of town sites on public lands; and the right of the occupant of a lot in a town site who has no patent, but who claims as one of the beneficiaries of the trust vested by the statute in the probate judge in pursuance of his entry of the town site in the local land office, is subordinate to a patent founded on an entry of the land as a placer mining claim, though made after its occupation as a town site lot.—Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 6 S. Ct. 95, 29 L. Ed. 423, affirming Hawke v. Deffeback, 4 Dak. 20, 22 N. W. 480.

No right in public lands can be acquired by mere occupancy thereof as a town site for town site purposes, without any entry thereof, under Rev. St. tit. 32, c. 8 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1454], which can avail against the patent of the premises, subsequently issued as a placer mining claim.—Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 403, 6 S. Ct. 102, 29 L. Ed. 428, affirming Pierce v. Sparks, 4 Dak. 1, 22 N. W. 491.

In ejectment against one claiming under a town site patent, where plaintiff relies on a subsequently issued patent of the land as mineral, raising the presumption that it was mineral land when the town site patent was issued, defendant should be allowed to prove that it was not known to be mineral land.—Davis v. Wiebold, 139 U. S. 507, 11 S. Ct. 628, 35 L. Ed. 238, reversing judgment Wiebold v. Davis, 7 Mont. 107, 14 P. 865.

Rev. St. tit. 32, c. 8 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1454], relating to the entry of public lands occupied as a town site, and providing (section 2392 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1459]) that "no title shall be acquired" under its provisions "to any mine of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper, or to any valid mining claim, or possession held under existing laws," preserves, as against title held under said act, only mines and mining claims and possessions known at the date of the town site patent.—Id.

Under the special town site act for Oklahoma Territory (26 Stat. 109, c. 207 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1463]), the issuance of a patent to the town site trustees appointed by the secretary of the interior is not a final disposition of the government's title and control, but is a conveyance in trust, to be carried out by the trustees under the control of the secretary; and, although the act devolved upon the trustees the duty of determining adverse claims to lots, the secretary had power to provide for appeals therefrom to the commissioner of the general land office, and finally to himself; and the pendency of such appeals deprives the trustees of power to make conveyances of the lots in controversy, and consequently mandamus will not lie to compel them thereto.—McDaid v. Oklahoma Territory, 150 U. S. 209, 14 S. Ct. 59, 37 L. Ed. 1055, reversing judgment 1 Okl. 92, 30 P. 438.

In order to except mineral lands from the operation of a town site patent, they must be known to be valuable for mining purposes at the date when the patent takes effect; and it is not sufficient that they have once been valuable for mining purposes, or are afterwards discovered to be still valuable therefor.—Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 14 S. Ct. 452, 38 L. Ed. 305, affirming judgment Richards v. Dower, 81 Cal. 44, 22 P. 304.

An act of congress authorizing the probate judge of a county to enter in trust, for the inhabitants of a town for town-site purposes, certain lands reserved by a prior act for school purposes, does not leave such lands open to controversy between town-site settlers and persons who had prior to the act settled upon the lands, but had not complied with the provisions of the pre-emption laws.—Gonzales v. French, 17 S. Ct. 102, 164 U. S. 338, 41 L. Ed. 458.

One claiming under the homestead laws of the United States cannot maintain a suit against Oklahoma townsites trustees to divest them of the title held by them, under Act May 14, 1890, c. 207, 26 Stat. 109 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1463], in trust for townsites occupants, since, until conveyed to an occupant as provided in such act, the title remains, in every essential sense, in the United States. Judgment, 62 P. 799, 10 Okl. 488, affirmed.—Bockfinger v. Foster, 23 S. Ct. 836, 190 U. S. 116, 47 L. Ed. 975.

The selection of a lot in a projected town site in Oklahoma, in accordance with a plat agreed upon by a portion of the occupants at or near the date of the opening to settlement, did not vest such an unconditional title in the selector as will prevail against the right of Oklahoma City to the use and occupation of the lot as a public street under a subsequent survey, made or approved pursuant to Act May 14, 1890, c. 207, 26 Stat. 109 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1463], by trustees appointed under that act to make town site entries for the several use and benefit of the occupants, the selector not being an occupant thereof when the trustees made entry of the land, nor when the conveyance to them was made by the government. Judgment, 73 P. 1012, 12 Okl. 570, reversed.—Oklahoma City v. McMaster, 25 S. Ct. 324, 196 U. S. 529, 49 L. Ed. 587.

The rights of the occupants of town-site lots, fixed by the extent of their occupancy, could not be diminished by conveyances from the mayor trustee according to the plat made and filed under Act Idaho Jan. 8, 1873 (Laws 1873, p. 16), enacted pursuant to Rev. St. U. S. § 2387 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1457], to provide for the disposal of the lots—especially where the state Supreme Court construes such statute as not giving the power to make a survey or plat which did not conform to the lines of occupation. Decree (1907) 90 P. 573, 13 Idaho, 417, affirmed.—Scully v. Squier, 30 S. Ct. 51, 215 U. S. 144, 54 L. Ed. 131.

The town site commission for a town in the Cherokee Nation has jurisdiction to determine a contest resulting from conflicting applications to purchase by Acts June 28, 1898, May 31, 1900, and July 1, 1902.—Ross v. Stewart, 33 S.

Ct. 345, 227 U. S. 530, 57 L. Ed. 626, affirming judgment 106 P. 870, 25 Okl. 611.

Relief will not be given from the decision of a town site commission for a town in the Cherokee Nation in a contest on conflicting applications to purchase, unless material error of law or fraud appears.—Id.

Attorney for contestee in a contest before a town site commission for a town in the Cherokee Nation cannot claim that he was misled into believing that an answer had been filed by the statement of the Indian inspector that the land in question was in litigation.—Id.

The failure of attorney of contestee to file an answer in a contest before the town site commission in the Cherokee Nation is no ground for avoiding a decision where the failure was not attributable to the contestant or the commission, and where the contestee knew of the same while it was within the power of the commission to set aside the default.—Id.

A decision adverse to contestee in contest before town site commission in a Cherokee Nation because of his failure to file an answer held not made without affording him a hearing where he was notified of the contest and was cited to answer.—Id.

Misrepresentation and fraud which will entitle the unsuccessful claimant in a contest before town site commission in a Cherokee Nation to relief must be such as prevented him from presenting his side of the controversy and the commissioners from considering it.—Id.

Rights of occupancy of Chickasaw town site except as to improvements were terminated by the Atoka Agreement of April 23, 1897, embraced in Act June 28, 1898, § 29, conferring preferential right of purchase, or when town-site provisions were put in operation at Chickasaw.—Johnson v. Riddle, 36 S. Ct. 393, 240 U. S. 467, 60 L. Ed. 752, affirming judgment 139 P. 1143, 41 Okl. 759.

Title acquired by preferential purchaser under Atoka Agreement of April 23, 1897, embraced in Act June 28, 1898, § 29, of Choctaw and Chickasaw town-site lots, held not subject to a trust in favor of lessor of such lots because a purchaser derived ownership of improvements from lessee's transferee; both lessor and lessee being trespassers.—Id.

◀40. Abandonment or relinquishment of claim.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 100-102.

Where a settler on public land could by the payment of the statutory price have acquired a valid title thereto, he cannot recover his initial payment on voluntarily abandoning his entry.—United States v. Ingram, 19 S. Ct. 177, 172 U. S. 327, 43 L. Ed. 465.

The rights of a settler in good faith, who takes possession of public land at a time when there is on record a homestead entry by another person who has never made any settlement, will attach instantly on the filing of a relinquishment of the prior entry, though at the same time one who has paid money for such relinquishment makes a new entry; and the settler may thereafter make an entry and perfect his right to a patent as against the prior entry made by a person not in possession. Judgment, 88 F. 181, 31 C. C. A. 447, affirmed.—Moss v. Dowman, 20 S. Ct. 429, 176 U. S. 413, 44 L. Ed. 526.

A sale of a homestead claim before patent has issued, although void, may be treated by the Land Department as a relinquishment or abandonment by the seller of his homestead application and entry. Judgment (1905) 83 P. 882, 33 Mont. 348, affirmed.—Love v. Flabive, 27 S. Ct. 486, 205 U. S. 195, 51 L. Ed. 768, rehearing denied 27 S. Ct. 729, 206 U. S. 356, 51 L. Ed. 1092.

A party who, while in possession of a tract of public land with intent to enter it as a homestead, makes a sale, which the Land Department treats as an abandonment of his right of entry, cannot, by merely continuing in possession, create a new right of entry as against the party in whose favor he has relinquished his right. Rehearing, 27 S. Ct. 486, 205 U. S. 195, 51 L. Ed. 768, denied.—Love v. Flahive, 27 S. Ct. 729, 206 U. S. 356, 51 L. Ed. 1092.

(C) DONATIONS AND BOUNTY LANDS.

42. Grants by Congress in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 106, 107.

Where congress grants nonmineral lands to be selected by the grantees in a certain territory, and requires the surveyor general to make survey and location of the land selected, it becomes his duty, under the supervision of the land department, to determine the character of the land selected, and his decision that it is not mineral, when ratified by the department, is final and conclusive, so that, after title passes, no subsequent discovery of minerals can affect the title or possession.—Shaw v. Kellogg, 18 S. Ct. 632, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. Ed. 1060.

Where congress grants lands, vacant and nonmineral, in a certain territory, to be selected by the grantees within three years, the title passes on such selection and the approval thereof by the land department within the time prescribed, with the same effect as if a patent issued, though no patent is provided for by the act, or is in fact issued.—Id.

44. Oregon donation act.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 112-119.

The donation act of Oregon requires, for the completion of the settler's right to a patent, besides a residence on and cultivation of the lands for a certain time, that he notify the surveyor general of the precise land claimed. A settler, a married man, having died before such notification, held, that a notice by his widow was sufficient.—Brazee v. Schofield, 124 U. S. 495, 8 S. Ct. 604, 31 L. Ed. 484, affirming judgment 3 P. 265.

No right to perfect claims, under Oregon Donation Act Sept. 27, 1850, c. 76 (9 Stat. 496), to lands which have been abandoned before completing the requisite residence thereon, was given by the provisions of Act July 26, 1894, c. 163, 28 Stat. 122 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1522], according to the donees the right "to make and file final proofs and fully establish their rights to donations," especially in view of the second section, which authorizes the Commissioner of the Land Office to cancel a claim proved to be invalid or abandoned, and the third section, which expressly saves adverse claims arising under any law other than the donation act.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 615, 620, 189 U. S. 103, 116, 47 L. Ed. 726, 732, affirming decree in part 109 F. 514, 48 C. C. A. 520, which is reversed in part 23 S. Ct. 673, 190 U. S. 186, 47 L. Ed. 1012.

45. Particular grants and donations.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 120-127.

The organic act of Oregon territory (Act Aug. 14, 1848, c. 177), confirming the title to lands "now occupied as missionary stations" in the several religious societies in possession, being a grant of public lands, must be strictly construed against the grantees. Where it appeared that a certain station had been occupied by the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and had been transferred to the American Board of Missions, by whom it was abandoned before the passage of the act, because of Indian hostilities, and that subsequent to the passage of the act the Methodist missionaries resumed their possession, no title was acquired by them, for it did not come within the language of the act.—Missionary Soc. of M. E. Church v. Dalles City, 107 U. S. 336, 2 S. Ct. 672, 27 L. Ed. 545; Same v. Kelly, 107 U. S. 347, 2 S. Ct. 681, 27 L. Ed. 549.

Whether Act Cong. Feb. 18, 1871, ceding to the state of Ohio lands in the Virginia military district in that state, "remaining unsurveyed," did or did not pass title to lands covered by a previous survey, invalid on account of the excess in the quantity of land embraced, the fourth section of the act of May 27, 1880 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1502], passed for the purpose of construing the act of February 18, 1871, ratified and confirmed the title to such lands sold by the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College, the grantee of the state of Ohio, to a purchaser for a valuable consideration.—Coan v. Flagg, 123 U. S. 117, 8 S. Ct. 47, 31 L. Ed. 107, affirming decree 38 Ohio St. 156.

In an action by a religious corporation against the United States and certain military officers to recover 340 acres of land at Vancouver, formerly within the territory of Oregon, occupied as a military reservation, plaintiff claimed that the land was part of 640 acres to which it was entitled as a missionary station, under Act Cong. Aug. 14, 1848; and it appeared that in a proper proceeding in the land department, on application of plaintiff for such 640 acres, there was a final decision of the secretary of the interior sustaining its claim to less than one-half an acre, on which was situated a church owned by plaintiff, in which its missionaries conducted religious services, and that, whatever occupation of such land there was by the missionaries, it was under, and by permission of, the Hudson Bay Company, which was in prior occupation. Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover.—Corporation of The Catholic Bishop of Nesqueally v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 15 S. Ct. 779, 39 L. Ed. 931.

Act Cong. Aug. 14, 1848 (establishing the territorial government of Oregon), § 1, contains the proviso that the title to the land, "not exceeding 640 acres, now occupied as missionary stations" among the Indian tribes in said territory, together with the improvements thereon, be confirmed and established in the several religious societies to which said missionary stations respectively belong. Held, that such statute was not a grant certain of 640 acres to each religious society having a missionary station on public lands within such territory, but was a grant only of so much land as was actually occupied by such station, not exceeding 640 acres.—Id.

Pursuant to the directions of the acts for platting certain towns on public lands in Iowa (5 Stat. 70, 178), a strip of land 200 feet wide along the river front of Burlington was reserved for highways and other public uses. By the act of 1853 (10 Stat. 157), congress granted to the city these reserved lands, with accretions, especially declaring that the grant was only a relinquishment of the rights of the United States, and should not affect rights of third parties. Held, that this act merely transferred to the city the fee in the reserved strip with full control over it, subject only to the state laws, and to vested private rights.—Burlington Gaslight Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co., 17 S. Ct. 359, 165 U. S. 370, 41 L. Ed. 749.

46. Bounty land warrants.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 128-132.

Act Cong. March 23, 1804, provided, by section 2, that soldiers of the Revolutionary war entitled to bounty lands within the Virginia military district should complete their locations within three years, and make return of their surveys to the secretary of war within five years, from the passage of the act. By section 3 it was provided that such part of the district as should not have been located, and those tracts of land the surveys whereof should not have been returned to the secretary of war, within the time prescribed by the act, should thenceforth be released from any claim for bounty lands. Subsequent acts extended the time for making entries and returning surveys of such lands until the 1st of January, 1852, and also provided for the return of such surveys to the general land office; but section 3 of the act of 1804 was not repealed. Act May 27, 1880, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1502], provided that "all legal surveys returned to the land office," on or before March 3, 1857, on entries made before January 1, 1852, and founded on unsatisfied Virginia military warrants, were valid. Section 3 of the act provided that soldiers entitled to bounty lands in the above-mentioned district which had been entered prior to January 1, 1852, should be allowed three years after the passage of the act to return their surveys to the "office of the principal surveyor of said district." Held, that the "land office" mentioned in the second section of the act of 1880 was the general land office, and not the "office of the principal surveyor," referred to in the third section; and that a claim to such bounty lands, based on an entry made in 1823, and a survey recorded in 1824 in the office of the principal surveyor of the Virginia military district, but never returned to the secretary of war or the general land office, could not be sustained.—Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 550, 5 S. Ct. 631, 28 L. Ed. 993; Same v. Hughes, 113 U. S. 565, 5 S. Ct. 639, 28 L. Ed. 998.

A survey embracing 1,682 acres, on an entry of lands in the Virginia military district made on a warrant for 500 acres, is, by reason of such excess, fraudulent and void, and does not vest the owner of the warrant, or his assignee, with an equitable title to the lands surveyed, as against the United States, so as to entitle him to call for a patent.—Coan v. Flagg, 123 U. S. 117, 8 S. Ct. 47, 31 L. Ed. 107, affirming decree 38 Ohio St. 156.

¶47. Mode and effect in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 133, 137.

The reservation, in a statute directing the platting of a town on public lands bordering the Mississippi river, of a strip 200 feet wide along the river front "for public use," to "remain forever for public use, as public highways, and for other public uses" (5 Stat. 70, 178) is not a reservation for a highway alone, or for uses similar in character, but is for uses which would naturally tend to facilitate commerce, including wharves, storehouses, etc., and a railroad. 59 N. W. 292, 91 Iowa, 470, affirmed.—Burlington Gaslight Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co., 17 S. Ct. 359, 165 U. S. 370, 41 L. Ed. 749.

The use of such lands for a railroad being a "public use," within the meaning of the reservation in the grant, the extent of such use is for the determination of the town authorities, and cannot be enjoined by an abutting landowner, in the absence of special constitutional provisions, whatever may be his rights as to compensation.—Id.

Where congress grants land, not mineral, to be selected by the grantees, and casts upon the surveyor general, under the supervision of the land department, the duty of determining the character of the land selected, it is his duty to make such determination; and neither he nor the land department has any authority to insert in the certificate of approval of the location and survey a reservation of any mineral lands contained therein, and such a reservation is void.—Shaw v. Kellogg, 18 S. Ct. 632, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. Ed. 1050.

The resolution of congress of February 16, 1839 (5 Stat. 364), making provision for carrying into effect the laws of Maryland for disposing of vacant lands, which laws were continued in force in the District of Columbia by the act of February 27, 1821, and which contained a proviso that lands held by the United States for public purposes should not be affected by such laws, was intended to apply only to ordinary vacant public lands, fit for agriculture; and a patent issued by the land office under such resolution to submerged lands in the Potomac, or lands covered by tide water and which were not then capable of ordinary cultivation, is void, as such lands were within the proviso and remained so, though they may thereafter have become capable of some sort of occupancy by the receding of the waters of the river.—Morris v. United States, 19 S. Ct. 649, 174 U. S. 196, 43 L. Ed. 946.

The value of improvements made on public lands in Alaska by a mere trespasser, occupying the land without a shadow of title, cannot be recovered from the United States upon the selection of the land in question by the government, in accordance with Act March 3, 1891, c. 561, § 14, 26 Stat. 1100 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1467, 1468], for a fish-culture station.—Russian-American Packing Co. v. United States, 26 S. Ct. 157, 199 U. S. 570, 50 L. Ed. 314, affirming judgment 39 Ct. Cl. 460; Royal Packing Co. v. Same, 26 S. Ct. 159, 199 U. S. 579, 50 L. Ed. 316, affirming judgment 39 Ct. Cl. 568.

Any rights previously acquired under Act March 3, 1891, c. 561, §§ 12, 13, 26 Stat. 1100 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1467, 1468], by settlement upon and survey of public lands in Alaska, were terminated by the proclamation of the President that the land in question was reserved for the purpose of establishing a fish-culture station, in accordance with the declaration of section 14 of that act, that the provisions of the two preceding sections shall not be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States which shall be reserved for public purposes or selected for fish-culture stations.—Id.

¶49. Parks, woods, and springs.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 135, 137.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1877, § 5, in relation to the tract of land known as the "Hot Springs Mountain," authorizing the appointment of commissioners to hear proofs offered by claimants and occupants of the land, and "finally determine the right of each claimant or occupant to purchase the same," the action of the commissioners therein provided for is final, on matters depending upon conflicting evidence as to the extent of occupation and the value of improvements; but upon the construction of the law, and as to the equities of third persons arising from contracts or fiduciary relations between them, and the person to whom the commissioners adjudge the right to purchase, their action may be reviewed and corrected by the courts.—Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276, 4 S. Ct. 605, 28 L. Ed. 427.

Plaintiff occupied land within the Hot Springs reservation, under an attempted location which was incomplete by reason of the neglect of a public officer, from 1839 until in 1876, when the land was taken by a receiver appointed by the court of claims, his title having been adjudged invalid under Act Cong. June 11, 1870, referring to that court the determination of titles to land in the reservation. Plaintiff had leased the land in 1873, by a lease containing a covenant to surrender at the end of the term. Held, that the lessees, and parties deriving their interest under the lessees, could claim nothing against plaintiff, by virtue either of possession or of improvements, in proceedings under Act March 3, 1877, authorizing commissioners appointed under it to determine the right of each claimant or occupant of such lands to purchase the same.—Id.

The provision of Act Cong. March 3, 1877, relating to the Hot Springs reservation, that "no claim shall be considered which has accrued since the 24th day of April, 1876," did not prevent the consideration of a claim existing at that date, but which was afterwards assigned to another.—Goode v. Gaines, 145 U. S. 141, 12 S. Ct. 839, 38 L. Ed. 654.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 377), creating a commission to determine the rights of claimants to land in the Hot Springs reservation, in Arkansas, one who had long been in possession of a tract under paper title, and had made improvements in a portion thereof, had the "possessory right of occupation" to the whole, so as to entitle him to purchase the same from the government; and the estoppel which prevents a tenant from claiming title adversely to his landlord would operate in his favor with respect to an unimproved lot demise by him to a tenant who made improvements under the terms of the lease, and afterwards claimed to hold in his own right.—Id.

50. Military reservations.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 126, 137.

The right of pre-emption given by Act April 22, 1826, c. 28, § 4 Stat. 154, did not extend to lands which had been appropriated by the United States for a military post, until such post was abandoned. Decree, 121 F. 1021, 56 C. C. A. 684, affirmed.—Scott v. Carrew, 25 S. Ct. 193, 196 U. S. 100, 49 L. Ed. 403.

51. Effect of reservation and grant to state in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 133, 146.

When lists of lands are certified to a state as school lands by the commissioner of the general land office and the secretary of the interior, they convey as complete a title as patents; and such lands are not thereafter open to settlement and pre-emption.—Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 5 S. Ct. 1141, 29 L. Ed. 311.

A selection of lands for the benefit of public schools, made by a state and approved by the secretary of the interior, and the lands listed to the state by the commissioner of the general land office, operated, under Rev. St. § 2449 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1516], to convey the fee as of the date of the selection.—McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 327, 7 S. Ct. 176, 30 L. Ed. 408.

Under Act Cong. July 2, 1862 (12 Stat. c. 130), donating public lands to such of the states as might provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts, which authorized the secretary of the interior to issue land scrip to those states within which there was no land subject to entry, but prohibited any state to which such scrip was issued from locating it in any other state, the state receiving the scrip had only the right to sell it, and could not locate the land, nor could any agent locate such scrip on behalf of the state which held it, or obtain patents for the land represented by it.—Cornell University v. Fiske, 136 U. S. 152, 10 S. Ct. 775, 34 L. Ed. 427, affirming In re Fiske's Estate, 111 N. Y. 66, 19 N. E. 233, 2 L. R. A. 387.

Title did not pass to Oregon under Enabling Act, § 4, providing that sections 16 and 36 in each township "shall be granted" to the state for the use of the schools, until such sections were surveyed, and until such survey Congress could dispose of the land otherwise, compensating the state for deficiencies resulting.—United States v. Morrison, 36 S. Ct. 326, 240 U. S. 192, 60 L. Ed. 599, reversing judgment Morrison v. United States, 212 F. 29, 128 C. C. A. 485.

The authority of Congress to dispose of public lands before title passed by a survey under Enabling Act Or. § 4, was not limited by Rev. St. §§ 2275, 2276, as amended by Act Feb. 28, 1891, protecting settlements made "before the survey of the lands in the field."—Id.

The survey of the Oregon school land grant under Enabling Act, § 4, was not completed, so as to prevent Congress from otherwise disposing of such lands, until the survey was finally accepted in the General Land Office, though the approval of the survey was made after prolonged examination.—Id.

The descriptions by townships of lands withdrawn by the Secretary of the Interior for forestry purposes and reference in the official correspondence to a diagram showing such townships and sections was not an approval of the survey of the Oregon school land grant.—Id.

The exception in the President's proclamation January 25, 1907, enlarging the Cascade Forest Reserve, of all reservations for other purposes, did not apply to subsequently accruing claims of title under school grants as to which Congress had the power of disposition pending a survey.—Id.

52. Lands included.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 139-142, 146, 147.

Land which has been properly selected by a state as indemnity school land, and listed as such by the proper United States official, and which has been patented by the state to an individual, is not open to pre-emption settlement as against the patentee, he being in possession.—Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 366, 7 S. Ct. 587, 30 L. Ed. 675.

The reservation, in section 34 of the act organizing territories of Nebraska and Kansas (10 Stat. 277), of the lands lying in sections 16 and 36 of each township in Kansas for school purposes, though couched in general terms, did not operate upon lands previously set apart by treaty as an Indian reservation; and as congress, by the act admitting Kansas as a state (12 Stat. 127), expressly refused her claim to sections 16 and 36 in each township, "including Indian reservations and trust lands," as set forth in the ordinance accompanying the state constitution, the lands in such reservations remained wholly within the control and at the disposition of congress, subject in the meantime to the Indian right of occupancy.—Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Roberts, 152 U. S. 114, 14 S. Ct. 496, 38 L. Ed. 377, reversing judgment Roberts v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 43 Kan. 102, 22 P. 1006.

The state of Minnesota has no interest in any of the land included in the cession, by the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, of all their title and interest in unsurveyed and unallotted lands, whose fee was in the United States, subject to the Indian right of occupancy, by an agreement made in conformity with Act Jan. 14, 1889 (25 Stat. 642, c. 24), under which such lands were to be sold and the proceeds devoted to the benefit of such Indians, although by a prior provision in Act Feb. 26, 1857 (11 Stat. 166, c. 60), authorizing the organization of the state of Minnesota, there was granted to that state for the use of schools sections 16 and 36 in every township of the public lands in such state, except when sold or otherwise disposed of, in which event the state might take other lands "equivalent thereto and as contiguous as may be."—State of Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 22 S. Ct. 650, 185 U. S. 373, 385, 46 L. Ed. 954.

The state of Wisconsin has not, by reason of the cession for school purposes in Enabling Act Aug. 6, 1846, c. 89, 9 Stat. 57, of the sixteenth section in every township, not sold or otherwise disposed of, any such interest, present or prospective, in the several sixteenth sections of the lands ceded to the United States by the Chippewa Indians in the treaty of March 23, 1843, 7 Stat. 592, where those Indians have not surrendered the right of occupancy reserved therein, as entitlements that state to interfere with the administration, by the Interior Department, for the benefit of the Indians, of such sections of the land so ceded as were subsequently included within the tracts set aside as a part of the Bad River or La Pointe and the Flambeau reservations.—State of Wisconsin v. Hitchcock, 26 S. Ct. 498, 201 U. S. 202, 50 L. Ed. 727.

Only such saline lands as should be selected as a part of the other lands granted and not specifically located were granted to the state of Utah by the provisions of the enabling act (Act July 16, 1894, c. 133, § 8, 28 Stat. 109) granting to the state for university purposes public lands to the extent of two townships in quantity, and in addition 110,000 acres, to be selected and located as therein provided, "and including all the saline lands in said state."—(1911) Montello Salt Co. v. State of Utah, 31 S. Ct. 706, 221 U. S. 452, 55 L. Ed. 810, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 633, reversing decree (1908) State v. Montello Salt Co., 98 P. 549, 34 Utah, 458.

◀53. Indemnity and lieu lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 143-145.

Land known to be coal land is not open to selection by the state as lieu school land.—Mullan v. United States, 118 U. S. 271, 6 S. Ct. 1041, 30 L. Ed. 170, affirming United States v. Mullan (C. C.) 10 F. 785, 7 Sawy. 466.

As Act Cong. March 3, 1853, § 6 (10 Stat. 244, 246), expressly excepted mineral lands from the grant of public lands to California as school lands, coal lands cannot be selected, under section 7, in lieu of such granted lands as were already occupied.—Id.

Act Cong. March 1, 1877, "relating to indemnity school selections in the state of California," confirming to the state the titles to lands selected by and certified to it in case the "selections shall fall by reason of the land in lieu of which they were taken not being included within such final survey of a Mexican grant, or are otherwise defective or invalid," cures all defects in an original selection of whatever nature, if the lands are afterwards certified to the state, and gives title to a grantee of the state as against any entry not antedating the certification.—Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 366, 7 S. Ct. 587, 30 L. Ed. 675.

Under Act Cong. July 2, 1862, donating public lands to the states for colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts (12 Stat. 503, c. 130), no title to lands vested in the states until their selection and listing, and the acceptance of the act by a state did not prevent land which might be selected thereunder from being previously selected by other grantees of the United States of unlocated quantities of land; and after the confirmation, by the act to quiet title to lands in California of July 23, 1866, of lands which had been selected in place of school sections, the township in which the selected lands were situate having been previously surveyed by authority of the United States, they are not subject to the grant to the state for the establishment of such college.—McNee v. Donahue, 142 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 211, 35 L. Ed. 1122, affirming judgment 76 Cal. 499, 18 P. 438.

Section 1 of Act Cong. July 23, 1866, to quiet land titles in California (14 Stat. 218, c. 219), which declares that where selections of any portion of the public domain have been made by the state in part satisfaction of a grant of congress, and the state has disposed of the same to purchasers in good faith under its laws, the lands so selected are confirmed to the state, as modified by section 2, which declares that, when the selections have been made of lands surveyed by authority of the United States, it shall be the duty of the state authorities, when it has not already been done, to notify the register of the United States local land office of such selections, and that this notice shall be regarded as the date of the state's selection, only confirms title to lands which were selected from lands previously surveyed by authority of the United States, and of which selection notification has been, or should thereafter be, given to the register of the local land office.—Id.

The approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a selection of public land in lieu of school sections, made by one claiming to be the agent of a territory, is, if nothing more, a withdrawal from private entry of the selected land, which continues until the approval of the selection is set aside. Judgment, State v. Johanson, 67 P. 401, 26 Wash. 668, affirmed.—Johanson v. State of Washington, 23 S. Ct. 825, 190 U. S. 179, 47 L. Ed. 1008.

Past, as well as future, approval by the Secretary of the Interior of selections of public land in lieu of school sections, was covered by the provision of Act Dec. 18, 1902, c. 5 (32 Stat. 756), confirming title of the state of Washington to lands so selected, "when the same shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior."—Id.

The Secretary of the Treasury was not designated as the officer to make selections of public lands in lieu of school sections by the provision of Act Feb. 26, 1859, c. 53, 11 Stat. 385 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1381], requiring such selections to be made "in accordance with the principles of adjustment and the provisions" of Act Cong. May 20, 1826, c. 83, 4 Stat. 179, which act provided for selection by that officer; but such provision must, in view of the creation of the Interior Department by Act March 3, 1849, c. 108, 9 Stat. 395, and the transfer, to the Secretary thereof, of the supervising powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in respect to public lands, be construed simply as describing the general mode of procedure.—Id.

The approval, by the Secretary of the Interior, of a selection of public lands in lieu of school sections, by a person authorized to represent the territory of Washington, being that of the officer charged with the supervision of the landed interests of the United States, should, unless some direction of Congress manifestly has been violated, be held to be conclusive on the transfer of title.—Id.

The provisions for selection of public land in lieu of school sections, which are made by Act Feb. 26, 1859, c. 58, § 11 Stat. 385 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1381], are, as to cases not provided for by the special provisions of Act March 2, 1853, c. 90, § 20, 10 Stat. 179 (Rev. St. § 1947), for such selection by the territory of Washington, as applicable to that territory as to any other territory.—Id.

54. Sale and conveyance by state.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 152-164, 166-169.

In Act Cong. July 23, 1866 (14 Stat. 218), confirming invalid selections of school lands by the state of California, the exception of "any land held or claimed under any valid Mexican or Spanish grant" applied to land which at the time of selection was part of a claim under a valid Mexican grant, although not within its limits as fixed by the final survey subsequently made, whereby the land was restored to the public domain; and a claimant thereof under the selection by the state has no equity superior to the right of a pre-emptor whose application was the first claim made after such survey, as the statute in express language gives the holder of the invalid state selection the same rights as those of a pre-emption settler on unsurveyed lands, and no more.—Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, 114 U. S. 381, 5 S. Ct. 892, 29 L. Ed. 170; Same v. Sinclair, 114 U. S. 387, 5 S. Ct. 895, 29 L. Ed. 172; Same v. Bangs, 114 U. S. 387, 5 S. Ct. 895, 29 L. Ed. 172.

In adjusting congressional grants of lands to California under Act July 3, 1866, the only questions for consideration by the officers of the general government are whether the state possessed the right to claim the land under her grant, and whether the land was subject to selection by her agents; and they have no jurisdiction to review transactions between the state and her purchasers, nor between the state and her locating agents, and determine whether such purchasers or locating agents complied with the provisions of the laws of California relating to the sale of the lands.—Fraser v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 5 S. Ct. 1141, 29 L. Ed. 311; Good v. Same, 115 U. S. 116, 5 S. Ct. 1148, 29 L. Ed. 316.

Where lands were selected by the state of California under Act Cong. March 3, 1853 (10 Stat. 244, c. 145) § 7, in lieu of school sections Nos. 16 and 36, which were erroneously supposed to be within a private grant, and certified lists thereof were duly issued to the state by the commissioner of the land-office and secretary of the interior, the title so acquired, when conveyed by the state to a grantee, who enters into possession and improves and cultivates the land, cannot be defeated by the pre-emption settlement of one who forcibly or surreptitiously gets possession.—Mower v. Fletcher, 116 U. S. 380, 6 S. Ct. 409, 29 L. Ed. 593.

If a selection of indemnity school lands by a state is bad when made, but would be good at a subsequent date, the certification of such land to the state by the proper United States officer at such subsequent date, no other rights having meanwhile intervened, will transfer the title to the state, and such transfer will inure to the benefit of the state's grantee.—Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 366, 7 S. Ct. 587, 30 L. Ed. 675.

By Act Cong. July 23, 1866, to quiet land titles in California (14 Stat. 218, c. 219), lieu lands, selected in place of school sections after the survey of the township by the United States, were confirmed, and the title of the state thereto was perfected from the date of the act, as effectually as by a grant or quitclaim from the government, and such confirmation inured to the benefit of a prior grantee from the state without any further action of the state authorities.—McNee v. Donahue, 142 U. S. 587, 12 S. Ct. 211, 35 L. Ed. 1122, affirming judgment 76 Cal. 499, 18 P. 438.

Making the entry on the official record of forfeiture of school lands for default in payment prima facie evidence held constitutional.

—(1912) Reitler v. Harris, 32 S. Ct. 248, 223 U. S. 437, 56 L. Ed. 497, affirming judgment (1909) 102 P. 249, 80 Kan. 148.

58. Construction and operation of grant to state in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 180-183, 187-191.

Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850 (9 Stat. 519) granting to each of the states the swamp lands within its borders, had reference only to the states then existing, and no state admitted after the date of the act acquired any rights under it.—Rice v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 110 U. S. 695, 4 S. Ct. 177, 28 L. Ed. 289.

Under Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, granting to Arkansas and other states the swamp lands within their boundaries, a grant in presenti is effected by the enactment of section 1, that the lands "shall be, and the same are hereby, granted" to the states, notwithstanding the provisions of section 2 that the secretary of the interior shall "make out an accurate list and plats of the lands described, and transmit the same to the governor of the state, and, at the request of said governor, cause a patent to be issued to the state therefor, and on that patent the fee simple of the land shall vest" in the state; and purchasers of swamp lands in California, who have obtained certificates of purchase from the state under the California act of April 13, 1859, which makes such certificates prima facie evidence of legal title, acquire rights paramount to the patentees of the United States whose patents have been issued subsequent to the swamp land act, even though the United States land commissioner has refused to certify the lands as swamp lands to the state, pursuant to section 4 of the act of congress of July 23, 1866, "to quiet land titles in California."—Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 7 S. Ct. 985, 30 L. Ed. 1039.

Under Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, granting to Arkansas and other states the swamp lands within their boundaries, a grant in presenti is effected by the enactment of section 1, that the swamp and overflowed lands "shall be, and the same are hereby, granted" to the states, notwithstanding the provisions of section 2, that the secretary of the interior shall "make out an accurate list and plats of the lands described, and transmit the same to the governor of the state, and, at the request of said governor, cause a patent to be issued to the state therefor, and on that patent the fee simple of the land shall vest" in the state; and in ejectment for lands in California plaintiff may introduce a patent from the state, and evidence that the lands are swamp lands, though they have not been patented or listed to the state by the United States.—Irwin v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 136 U. S. 578, 10 S. Ct. 1064, 34 L. Ed. 540, following Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 7 S. Ct. 985, 30 L. Ed. 1039.

Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, granting to the several states all the swamp and overflowed lands within their limits remaining unsold at the date of the act, operated as a present grant, subject to a subsequent determination as to what lands were of that character at the date of the act.—Tubbs v. Wilhoit, 138 U. S. 134, 11 S. Ct. 279, 34 L. Ed. 887, following Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 7 S. Ct. 985, 30 L. Ed. 1039, and affirming 73 Cal. 61, 14 P. 361.

59. Lands included in grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 184, 185.

Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850 (9 Stat. 519), granting to Illinois and other states all unsold swamp and overflowed lands belonging to the United States, did not affect any such land, on which, before the passage of the act, a military land warrant was properly located, under Act Cong. Feb. 11, 1847 (9 Stat. 123), and on which a patent has been issued subsequent to said act of 1850.—Culver v. Uthe, 133 U. S. 655, 10 S. Ct. 415, 33 L. Ed. 776, affirming Gormley v. Same, 116 Ill. 643, 7 N. E. 73.

In 1855 the state of Michigan issued a patent for a piece of land included in the canal grant selection under 10 Stat. 35, c. 92, but not in the swamp land selection under 9 Stat. 519, c. 84. In 1887 it issued a second patent for the same land as swamp land. Held, that in an action of ejectment by the second against the first patentee, parol evidence was inadmissible to show that the land was in fact swampy, within the meaning of the swamp land act, after the secretary of the interior formally approved the selection by which this piece was excluded from the swamp lands and included in the canal lands.—Chandler v. Calumet & Hecla Min. Co., 149 U. S. 79, 13 S. Ct. 798, 37 L. Ed. 657, affirming judgment (C. C.) 36 F. 665.

The selection by a county, as grantee of the state, of part of a section of lands as swamp lands, under the act of September 28, 1850, with the acquiescence of the interior department therein, and the subsequent selection of other lands in the same section by the secretary of the interior as lands inuring to a certain railroad company under the railroad grant of May 15, 1856, is a conclusive determination that the latter lands were not swamp and overflowed at the date of the swamp-land act, and parol evidence is inadmissible to show the contrary.—McCormick v. Hayes, 159 U. S. 332, 16 S. Ct. 37, 40 L. Ed. 171.

Letters patent from the United States to the state of Indiana, purporting to be in pursuance of Swamp Land Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84 (9 Stat. 520), which refer to the official plat of survey and describe the land as "the whole of fractional sections" therein enumerated, convey to the extent of full subdivisions the land under nonnavigable water on which such fractional sections border, as appears from the meander line shown on such plat, beyond which the survey did not extend. Judgment, Mason v. Calumet Canal & Improvement Co., 50 N. E. 85, 150 Ind. 699, affirmed.—Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improvement Co., 23 S. Ct. 651, 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. Ed. 1134.

The unsurveyed area within exterior lines of a township designated on the official plat as a meandered body of water called "Sunk lands" was not conveyed to the state of Arkansas by a patent from the United States, under the Swamp Land Act, though such unsurveyed area was not a lake, but only temporarily overflowed, and not materially different from the adjoining lands.—Chapman & Dewey Lumber Co. v. St. Francis Levee Dist., 34 S. Ct. 297, 232 U. S. 186, 58 L. Ed. 564, reversing decree 139 S. W. 625, 100 Ark. 94. Rehearing denied Same v. Board of Directors of St. Francis Levee Dist., 34 S. Ct. 906, 234 U. S. 667, 58 L. Ed. 1526.

The states acquire only an inchoate title under the Swamp Land Act to lands never listed as swamp lands, though they may have been such in fact.—Id.

The inchoate title of the state of Arkansas to unidentified swamp and overflowed lands under the Swamp Land Act was extinguished by settlement between the state and the United States, approved by Laws Ark. 1897, p. 88, and by Act Cong. April 28, 1898.—Id.

60. Survey, selection, and certification to state.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 136, 137.

Act Cong. March 5, 1872, directing the commissioner of the land office to receive and examine selections of swamp lands in Iowa, and allow or disallow the same, does not make the decision of the commissioner final, but an appeal will lie to the secretary of the interior, as in other cases.—Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co., 112 U. S. 165, 5 S. Ct. 84, 28 L. Ed. 680.

Act Cong. July 23, 1866, § 4, provides that the commissioner of the general land office shall direct the United States surveyor general for the state of California to examine the "segregation maps and surveys of the swamp and overflowed land made by the state," and, if conforming to the United States surveys, to construct township plats accordingly, after approval of which the swamp and overflowed lands are to be certified over to the state. Held, that a survey of land by a county surveyor, on an application to purchase, and plat and field notes made and filed by him in the surveyor general's office, approved by him, and conforming to the United States government survey of the township, and describing the land as swamp and overflowed, is not a "segregation survey," made by the state, within the meaning of the act. It refers to surveys made under Act Cal. May 13, 1861 (Laws 1861, c. 352, § 19), providing that county surveyors shall segregate the swamp and overflowed lands from the highlands, and make maps in legal subdivisions, etc., and such survey cannot vest title in the state.—Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 11 S. Ct. 380, 34 L. Ed. 1063, affirming judgment 71 Cal. 50, 11 P. 842.

Whether lands described in the approved plats of township surveys, made under authority of the United States, as "subject to periodical overflow," are "swamp and overflowed" lands, within Act Cong. July 23, 1866, making it the duty of the commissioner of the general land office to certify over to the state, as swamped and overflowed, all lands represented as such on such plats, is a question for the land department, and its decision is not reviewable by the courts.—Id.

Certain land in C. county, Iowa, claimed by the county as swamp land passing to the state under Act Cong. 1850, and to the county by grant of the state in 1853, was conveyed by the county to plaintiff in 1863. The land had been selected by the county under Act 1850, and reported to the county court in 1858, but it was not reported to the general land office until 1860, nor was any action ever taken on the report. In 1856, congress granted lands to the state in aid of certain railroads, expressly excepting from the grant all lands reserved by any prior act. The state, in 1856, accepted the grant, and transferred the lands to the railroad company; the C. county land being included in the grant, and certified thereunder to the state by the secretary of the interior in 1858. This land was never claimed by, nor certified to, the state as swamp land, nor did the state or the county raise any objection to its being included in the grant of 1856. Held, that the act of the secretary of the interior in certifying the land to the state under Act 1856 was, in effect, a decision that it did not pass as swamp land under Act 1850; and that this certification, and the acceptance and transfer by the state, were conclusive upon plaintiff. American Emigrant Co. v. Rogers Locomotive Mach. Works, 50 N. W. 52, 83 Iowa, 612, reversed.—Rogers Locomotive Machine Works v. American Emigrant Co., 17 S. Ct. 188, 164 U. S. 559, 41 L. Ed. 552.

The act of 1850, granting swamp lands to the various states, was a grant in present, passing title to all lands which at that date were swamp lands; but the determination of what lands were swamp lands was intrusted to the secretary of the interior, and the act contemplated the issuance of patents after such identification, as a means of transferring the title. Judgment, 68 F. 155, 15 C. C. A. 335, affirmed.—

Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 18 S. Ct. 208, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. Ed. 591.

On January 13, 1854, the secretary of the interior forwarded to the governor of Michigan approved lists of swamp lands under the swamp-land grant of 1850. Prior to that time errors and alleged frauds had been discovered in the surveys of the public lands in Michigan, and, pursuant to a request by the state legislature, the government had ordered a resurvey. This survey was proceeding when these lists were approved, and at that time there appeared on the records of the land department notice that the surveys of certain lands in the Ionia land district, some of which were included in the lists, were fraudulent. The new survey having subsequently been completed by which some of the listed lands were shown not to be swamp lands, the secretary certified to the governor a new list, from which such lands were excluded, and the governor thereupon requested that patents should issue in accordance therewith. Held, that this was an acceptance by the state of the resurveys, and rendered them final and conclusive as the basis for the adjustment of the swamp-land grant.—Id.

Where, in an action to quiet title to public lands inadvertently patented to the state as swamp lands, while a contest was pending, the court's finding showed that the claimant was fully qualified to enter the lands, and that the same were not swamp lands, a judgment in favor of claimant will not be disturbed on appeal to the United States supreme court on the ground that claimant may not be able to make final proof, or that the government land department may find the lands to be swamp. Judgment, 72 N. W. 794, 69 Minn. 547, affirmed.—Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. Roy, 19 S. Ct. 549, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. Ed. 820.

The title to lands embraced within patents from the United States in pursuance of Swamp Land Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84 (9 Stat. 520), cannot be affected by a resurvey of the land covered by water at the time of the original survey, and patents granted, pursuant to such resurvey, for tracts below the original water line. Judgment, Mason v. Calumet Canal & Improvement Co., 50 N. E. 85, 150 Ind. 699, affirmed.—Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improvement Co., 23 S. Ct. 651, 190 U. S. 452, 47 L. Ed. 1134.

Prior to identification the state acquired only an inchoate title to swamp lands under Act Sept. 28, 1850, though section 1 denoted a present grant, since the second section required the Secretary of the Interior to identify and list the lands within the terms of the grant.—Little v. Williams, 34 S. Ct. 68, 231 U. S. 335, 58 L. Ed. 256, affirming decree 113 S. W. 340, 88 Ark. 37.

The inchoate title of Arkansas to unidentified swamp lands under Act Sept. 28, 1850, was extinguished by settlement between the state and the United States, approved by Laws Ark. 1897, p. 88, and by Act Cong. April 29, 1898.—Id.

A levee district to which state's inchoate title to unidentified swamp lands under Act Sept. 28, 1850, vested under Laws Ark. 1893, pp. 24, 119, with authority to protect lands from overflow by the Mississippi, was bound by action of the state in accepting other lands theretofore patented to the state under the swamp land act, and relinquishing all their demands against the United States growing out of that act.—Id.

61. Sale and conveyance by state or county.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 192-213.

Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, granting to several states swamp and overflowed lands, provided (section 2) that the proceeds of said lands, whether from sale or direct appropriation in kind, shall be applied exclusively to the purpose of reclaiming said lands by means of levees and drains aforesaid. Held, that the proviso as to the application of the proceeds was a matter between the United States and the states; and the obligation it imposed rested on the good faith of the latter, and was not a trust which attached to the lands themselves, and did not affect the title of a railroad company deriving title from the states.—Mills county v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 107 U. S. 557, 2 S. Ct. 654, 27 L. Ed. 578.

Where a county surveyor's map has been made out under Laws Cal. 1861, p. 855, providing for the segregation of swamp lands, and requiring the county surveyors to segregate the lands in their respective counties, make a complete map thereof, and transmit a duplicate to the surveyor general of the state, and the act of congress of July 23, 1866, providing for the approval of such maps, a copy of such map certified to by the surveyor general is admissible in evidence, though it be not marked as filed, if it is proved that the map was deposited by the county surveyor, that it had remained there ever since, and no other map had ever been used as the segregation map of the district.—Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 7 S. Ct. 985, 30 L. Ed. 1039.

Act Cong. July 23, 1866, provides that "in all cases where township surveys have been * * * made under authority of the United States, and the plats thereof approved, it shall be the duty of the commissioner of the general land office to certify over to the state of California, as swamp and overflowed, all the lands represented as such, upon such approved plats," etc. Held that, where a subdivisive township survey and plat was approved and certified by the United States surveyor general for California, and filed in the proper district land office, and afterwards, upon due application and surveys, a patent was granted by the state, all before the act of 1866, the passage of that act confirmed the patentee's title, notwithstanding that the general land office commissioner did not certify the lands to the state.—Tubbs v. Wilhoit, 138 U. S. 134, 11 S. Ct. 279, 34 L. Ed. 887, affirming 73 Cal. 61, 14 P. 361.

The fact that Act III. June 22, 1852, in providing for the conveyance by the counties of such swamp land granted by the state to the counties, as had been sold by the United States, required the conveyance to be made by the judges of the county courts, did not give to such counties as had no county courts title to the land as against the purchasers from the United States.—Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co., 138 U. S. 635, 11 S. Ct. 435, 34 L. Ed. 1110, affirming judgment 131 Ill. 505, 23 N. E. 629.

Act Or. Oct. 18, 1878, § 9, declaring void all applications for the purchase of swamp lands, made previous to the passage of the act, which have not been made in accordance with law, or which were regularly made, and the applicants have not complied with all the terms and requirements of the law under which they were made, including the payment of the 20 per cent. of the purchase price, does not include an application for purchase regularly made under Act Or. Oct. 26, 1870, which gave the applicant 90 days after publication of the notice of the filing of the map of such lands in the office of the county clerk to make payment of the 20 per cent., where such map was not filed or notice given until after passage of the act of 1878, and the applicant paid the 20 per cent. within the 90 days thereafter, and upon such payment the applicant had a binding contract with the state, which could not afterwards be impaired.—Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 699, 35 L. Ed. 363, affirming decree (D. C.) McConaughy v. Pennoyer, 43 F. 839.

Though the state of Michigan acquired title to land under the swamp land grant of September 28, 1850, after issuing a patent for such lands as part of the canal grant of August 26, 1852, it cannot, except by suit in equity, impeach the title conveyed by such patent, which did not purport to be limited to lands acquired by the canal grant; and a subsequent patent for such land as swamp land does not entitle the holder to maintain ejectment against the prior patentee.—Chandler v. Calumet & Hecla Min. Co., 149 U. S. 79, 13 S. Ct. 798, 37 L. Ed. 637, affirming judgment (C. C.) 36 F. 665.

A levee district to which had passed under Laws Ark. 1893, p. 172, the state's inchoate title to listed lands under the Swamp Land Act, is bound by the subsequent act of the state relinquishing its title to the United States.—Chapman & Dewey Lumber Co. v. St. Francis Levee Dist., 34 S. Ct. 297, 232 U. S. 186, 58 L. Ed. 564, reversing decree 139 S. W. 625, 100 Ark. 94, rehearing denied Same v. Board of Directors of St. Francis Levee Dist., 34 S. Ct. 906, 234 U. S. 667, 58 L. Ed. 1523.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1845, c. 76 (5 Stat. 790), relating to the admission of Iowa into the Union, or Act April 18, 1818, c. 67 (3 Stat. 431), for the admission of the state of Illinois into the Union, by which "five per cent. of the net proceeds" of public lands lying within the state, and afterwards "sold by congress," shall be reserved and appropriated for certain public uses of the state, the state is not entitled to a percentage on the value of lands disposed of by the United States in satisfaction of military land warrants.—State of Iowa v. McFarland, 110 U. S. 471, 4 S. Ct. 210, 28 L. Ed. 198.

In a proceeding in the court of claims by the state of Louisiana to recover from the United States moneys due under Act Cong. Feb. 20, 1811, granting the state 5 per cent. of the net proceeds of the sale of lands to be used in constructing roads and levees, as the legislature might direct; and moneys due under Act Sept. 28, 1850, and Act March 2, 1855, granting to the states all swamp lands therein, and the price of some already sold; held, that these funds were not subject to such a property trust for a particular purpose as would prevent a state from applying them to general purposes; and the United States could offset a claim against the state for interest on what are known as "Indian Trust Bonds," issued by the state.—United States v. State of Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182, 8 S. Ct. 1047, 32 L. Ed. 66.

Under the act of March 3, 1857, providing for a settlement between the United States and the several states of the accounts growing out of the sale of public lands, and requiring the account to be stated on the same principles prescribed in the act of March 2, 1855, relating to a settlement with the state of Alabama, the United States is under no obligation to account to the state of Indiana for the 2 per cent. of the net proceeds of sales in that state, which the United States was to apply to the making of a road "leading to the said state"; for in the case of Indiana the 2 per cent., and much more, was expended for that purpose, while in the case of Alabama the government did not apply the money to the purpose designated, but expressly relinquished the same to the state, to be by her expended for certain public improvements.—

State of Indiana v. United States, 148 U. S. 148, 13 S. Ct. 564, 37 L. Ed. 401.

Under the provision that the money should be applied to making a road "leading to the said state," congress was at liberty to apply it on any part of the road, and hence it was immaterial what part of the entire sums expended on the road was properly chargeable to the states of Ohio, Illinois, and Missouri, under the similar provisions in the acts providing for their admission.—Id.

¶64. Grants in aid of particular improvements.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 222-225.

Under a grant of public lands to a state for the improvement of the navigation of a river, to be selected in alternate sections within five miles of the river (Act Cong. July 12, 1862, c. 161; 12 Stat. 543), the fact that government and state officers, in plats and lists of lands selected, mistook a branch of the river for the main river, in consequence of an imperfect knowledge of the geography of the country, will not affect the validity of the grant as really made, nor subject the lands along the main river to a subsequent railroad grant, within the description of which they would otherwise fall.—Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 109 U. S. 329, 3 S. Ct. 188, 27 L. Ed. 952.

By Act Aug. 8, 1846, congress granted to the then territory of Iowa, to aid in the improvement of the Des Moines river, alternate sections of public lands lying within the five-mile strip on either side of such river, and the state accepted the grant. There being a question as to whether the grant extended to the state boundaries or only to Racoon Fork, the head of the improvement, the entire amount of lands, in the broader construction, was reserved from sale by the United States. The state entered into an agreement with defendant to make the contemplated improvement, to be paid therefor by a conveyance of the lands granted at the rate of $1.25 per acre for the moneys expended, as provided in the grant. After work thereunder was commenced, the legislature, by act of March 22, 1858, reciting a disagreement, offered to convey to defendant certain of the lands, including some above Racoon Fork, in full settlement of the contract, which offer was accepted by defendant and carried out, and the lands included in the offer of settlement at the rate of $1.25 per acre to the extent of the expenses actually incurred by defendant, as certified by the governor, were duly conveyed by the state. Subsequently, and after it had been judicially declared that Racoon Fork was the northern limit of the grant of 1846, congress, by joint resolution of March 2, 1861, relinquished to the state all lands above Racoon Fork which had been improperly certified as a part of such grant, "and which is now held by bona fide purchasers under the state of Iowa"; and by act of July 12, 1862, extended the grant of 1846 to cover the alternate sections to the state boundary. Held, that defendant was a bona fide purchaser within the meaning of the resolution, and by such resolution and the act of 1862 the title in the lands theretofore reserved by the United States passed eo instanti to the state, and, to the extent of the state grants to defendant, immediately vested in defendant.—United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co., 142 U. S. 510, 12 S. Ct. 308, 35 L. Ed. 1099, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 1.

By Act March 28, 1888, the state relinquished and reconveyed to the United States its trust and title to such lands, and the United States brought a bill in equity to set aside the deeds to the defendant and to confirm plaintiff's title on the ground that the lands had not been properly appropriated to the purposes of the original grant. Held that, as the United States was a nominal party only, actual settlers being the real parties in interest, laches and limitations might be insisted on as a ground of defense; that the act of the state legislature in offering settlement to the defendant of its contract conclusively implied full knowledge of all the facts and good faith on its part, and an acceptance of such offer by defendant also implied good faith, and congress, having knowledge of such offer and acceptance, and the fact that the conveyance thereunder embraced a part of the lands above Raccoon Fork, by the resolution of 1861 and the act of 1862 must be assumed to have approved such settlement, and intended to have relinquished to defendant the title supposed to have been conveyed by the settlement and deeds thereunder.—Id.

Under the swamp land grant of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. 519, c. 84), a list of all swamp lands in the state of Michigan was made by the surveyor general, approved by the secretary of the interior, and transmitted to the state authorities, and a patent issued to the state therefor, as provided by the act of August 26, 1852. Congress in the meantime granted certain lands to the state to aid in the building of a canal (10 Stat. 35, c. 92), and the selection of such lands by the state was approved by the secretary of the interior, and his approval certified to the state authorities in accordance with the provision of the act. Held, that the exclusion of a certain piece of land from the selection and patent under the swamp land act, and its inclusion in the selection made by the state under the canal grant act, with the approval of such selection by the interior department and the certification thereof to the state authorities, operated to pass title to the state as completely as a formal patent could have done.—Chandler v. Calumet & Hecla Min. Co., 149 U. S. 79, 13 S. Ct. 798, 37 L. Ed. 657.

Act March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. 519), and Act July 3, 1866 (14 Stat. 81), granted lands to Michigan to aid a ship canal and harbor at Portage Lake, Keweenaw Point, and Lake Superior. The state accepted the grants, and conferred them on a canal company, which completed the canal, and received a certificate of completion from the governor. The title to all of such company's property passed by foreclosure to a new company. Held, that the latter company obtained no title to lands selected by the state's agent appointed to make selections covered by such grants, with the approval of the secretary of the interior, which were part of lands granted by Act June 3, 1856, to aid in constructing a railroad from Ontonagon to the Wisconsin state line.—Lake Superior Ship Canal, Railway & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 15 S. Ct. 103, 39 L. Ed. 183.

The act of congress of March 30, 1822, reserving from sale and giving the use forever for canal purposes only, of 90 feet of land each side of the proposed canal, reserving to the United States the right to resume it if survey and map should not be made within 3 years, or if the canal should not be completed in 12 years, or if the land should ever cease to be used for canal purposes, did not constitute a grant of the title of such land to the state of Illinois; and before the conditions of this act were complied with by adopting a route and filing a map the act was superseded by the act of March 2, 1827, making a grant to the state of one-half of five sections in width on each side of said canal, reserving each alternate section to the United States. Judgment, 54 N. E. 1008, 182 Ill. 25, affirmed.—Werling v. Ingersoll, 21 S. Ct. 570, 181 U. S. 131, 45 L. Ed. 782.

Laches is no defense to a suit by the United States to compel the state of Michigan to account for surplus moneys over and above the cost of the ship canal at St. Mary's Falls, arising from sales of the public lands granted by Act Aug. 26, 1852, c. 92, 10 Stat. 35, to that state in aid of its construction on a right of way therein granted to the state for that purpose, and for any surplus tolls remaining after the formal transfer of such canal to the United States, and for all tools and machinery on hand at the time of such transfer.—United States v. State of Michigan, 23 S. Ct. 742, 190 U. S. 379, 47 L. Ed. 1103.

The ownership by the state of Michigan of surplus tolls and surplus moneys arising from sales of public lands granted by Act Aug. 26, 1852, c. 92, 10 Stat. 35, in aid of the construction of a ship canal at St. Mary's Falls, and of the tools and machinery belonging thereto, was not acknowledged to be free from the trust in favor of the United States created by the acceptance by the state, through Act Mich. Feb. 5, 1853, of the conditions of such grant, by the offer of the United States, under Act June 14, 1880, c. 211, 21 Stat. 189, to accept a transfer of the canal without liability for debts or claims in regard thereto; nor was the liability of such state as trustee altered by its attempt, in accepting such offer through Pub. Acts Mich. 1881, No. 17, to impose the condition upon its payment of such moneys and its transfer of materials belonging to the canal that the United States should build a dry dock to be operated in connection therewith.—Id.

Surplus moneys over and above the cost of the ship canal at St. Mary's Falls, arising from sales of the public lands granted by Act Aug. 26, 1852, c. 92, 10 Stat. 35, to the state of Michigan in aid of its construction on a right of way therein granted to the state for that purpose, and any surplus tolls remaining after the formal transfer of such canal to the United States, and all the tools and machinery on hand at the time of such transfer, must be deemed to be held in trust by the state for the United States in view of the provision of such act, which was accepted by the state subject to all its conditions, by Act Mich. Feb. 5, 1853, that the tolls which the state might charge were to be only such, after it was repaid for the cost, as should be sufficient to pay the necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repairs.—Id.

The acts of congress of March 3, 1863, July 1, 1864, and July 26, 1866, granting lands to the state of Kansas for railroad purposes, are to be construed in pari materia, and as having the one purpose of building a single road from Ft. Riley, down the Neosho valley, to the southern line of that state, and not as distinct grants for different roads, which may come in conflict in the claims under them in regard to the lands granted.—Kansas City, L. & S. K. R. Co. v. Brewster, 118 U. S. 682, 7 S. Ct. 68, 30 L. Ed. 281, reversing decree (C. C.) Brewster v. Kansas City, L. & S. K. R. Co., 25 F. 243.

Act Cong. June 3, 1856, granting lands to the state of Michigan to aid in the construction of certain railroads, operated as a grant in present to the state of the fee to the lands thereafter identified by the location of the roads, and certified by the interior department. Although the act provided that the lands should only be disposed of for the purpose specified and as the work progressed, and that, if any of such roads should not be completed within 10 years, the lands unsold should revert to the United States, such provision was a condition subsequent, which only became effective to divest the title of the state to unearned lands by affirmative action on the part of the United States to enforce the same. Hence, until such action was taken, the United States had no title which would support an action of trover for timber cut on the lands by third persons, such right of action being in the state. Judgment, 71 F. 921, 18 C. C. A. 391, affirmed.—United States v. Loughrey, 19 S. Ct. 153, 172 U. S. 206, 43 L. Ed. 420.

◀70. Construction and operation of grant to railroad company in general.

Under Act Cong. July 1, 1862, § 6, requiring the railroad companies to the Pacific to transport mails, troops, supplies, etc., "at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the amounts paid by private parties for the same service," the roads are entitled only to a quantum meruit, and not to a rate to be fixed in the first instance by the company in the limits prescribed.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, 117 U. S. 355, 6 S. Ct. 772, 29 L. Ed. 920.

A uniform construction put upon a land grant act by the land office and department of the interior for 18 years, and under which lands have been put upon the market and sold, should have considerable weight in determining the meaning of doubtful language in the statute.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 148 U. S. 562, 13 S. Ct. 724, 37 L. Ed. 560, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 551.

General laws offering grants and valuable privileges to corporations or individuals as an inducement to the construction of railroads or other works of a quasi public character through a great, undeveloped public domain, should not be construed with the strictness of a merely private grant, but should receive a more liberal interpretation in favor of the purposes had in view.—United States v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 1, 14 S. Ct. 11, 37 L. Ed. 975; Id., 150 U. S. 16, 14 S. Ct. 16, 37 L. Ed. 980, affirming judgment (C. C.) Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. United States, 34 F. 838.

Mere possession by a town-site company, without filing a plat until after a land-grant railway company constructed its line across the tract, does not give a grantee of the town a title superior to that of the railroad company.—*Northern Pac. ◀71. Vesting of title in railroad company.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 232, 236.

Act Cong. July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. c. 217, p. 365), incorporating the Northern Pacific Company, and granting it lands in aid of construction, imports a grant in present by the words in section 3 "that there be, and hereby is, granted * * * every alternate section of public land * * * designated by odd numbers," subject to such exceptions and reservations as may arise from other disposition of the land previous to the time that the route of the road is definitely fixed; and the provision in section 4, that whenever 25 miles of the road are completed and approved by the commissioners appointed to examine it patents shall be issued confirming the title to the lands situated opposite to the completed section of road, does not impair the previous grant in section 3, whereby the title vested in the company, to attach whenever the specific sections were identified.—St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 139 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 389, 35 L. Ed. 77; affirming decree (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 28 F. 551.

Act Cong. July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), incorporating the Union Pacific and other railway companies, and providing in section 3 "that there be and hereby is granted" to such companies, to aid in the construction of the roads, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers to the amount of five alternate sections per mile, etc., operated as a present grant of the legal as well as the beneficial title, which title became attached to the specific sections of land upon the filing of the maps of definite location of the road.—Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 12 S. Ct. 158, 35 L. Ed. 999, affirming judgment Tarpey v. Deseret Salt Co., 5 Utah, 494, 17 P. 631.

The original grant of lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to aid in the construction of a road from Lake Superior westerly by the most eligible route, on a line north of the 45th degree of latitude, "to some point on Puget sound, with a branch via the valley of the Columbia river, to a point at or near Portland, in the state of Oregon, leaving the main trunk line at the most suitable place, not more than 300 miles from its western terminus" (Act July 2, 1864), did not authorize the running of the main line via the Columbia river valley to Portland, and thence northward to Puget sound; and, by so locating its line, the company acquired no right under that act to lands lying along its route between these places; but it acquired a right to such lands for the first time by the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, whereby it was authorized, with all the privileges and grants of the original act, to locate and construct "its main road to some point on Puget sound via the valley of the Columbia river, with the right to locate its branch from some convenient point on its main trunk line across the Cascade mountains to Puget sound." And under this resolution the company acquired no right to lands along this route which had been disposed of before its passage, and after the act of 1864.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 152 U. S. 284, 14 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 443, reversing decree (C. C.) 41 F. 842.

Since Act Cong. May 12, 1864, granting to the state of Iowa lands to aid in the construction of a certain railroad, directs that the patents be issued, not to the company, but to the state for the company's benefit, the issuance of patents to the state did not vest title in the company, or affect the liability of the lands to forfeiture under the act.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

The act of July 23, 1866 (14 Stat. 218), entitled "An act to quiet land titles in California," which confirmed to the state in "all cases," with certain specified exceptions, for the benefit of its grantees, the title to lands theretofore selected by the state as a part of grants made it, where it had disposed of such lands to bona fide purchasers, applied to and validated a location of land made by the state in lieu of school land, on an application to purchase under a state law by one who had settled on the land in 1858, and to whom the state had issued a certificate of purchase, though such land was within the Pacific Railroad grant, and had been, prior to its location by the state, withdrawn from pre-emption, private entry, and sale, by order of the secretary of the interior, on the filing by the railroad company of the map of its general route, no map showing the definite location of the line of road having been filed.—Menotti v. Dillon, 17 S. Ct. 945, 167 U. S. 703, 42 L. Ed. 333.

Land within the exterior lines of the general route of the Northern Pacific Railroad was not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated by the grant to that company made by the act of congress of July 2, 1864, so as to prevent congress from otherwise disposing of it at any time before the map of definite location was filed. Decree, Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Wilcox, 79 F. 719, 25 C. C. A. 164, affirmed.—Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co., 20 S. Ct. 269, 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. Ed. 368; Messinger v. Same, 20 S. Ct. 271, 176 U. S. 58, 44 L. Ed. 370.

Until identification by government survey of the even and odd numbered sections of the land within the limits of the grant of the odd-numbered sections on each side of the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, made by Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 367, the United States has such a property in the timber growing thereon as enables it to recover the value of the timber cut, and removed by the railroad company or its grantees.—United States v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co., 25 S. Ct. 367, 196 U. S. 573, 49 L. Ed. 604.

The title to land within the place limits of the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, made by Act July 27, 1866, c. 278, 14 Stat. 292, passed on the completion of the road, without any selection or approval by the Secretary of the Interior, unless the land was within the excepted classes. Judgment, 76 P. 460, 8 Ariz. 347, affirmed.—Howard v. Perrin, 26 S. Ct. 195, 200 U. S. 71, 50 L. Ed. 374.

Approval by Secretary of Interior of a plat of station grounds filed under Act March 3, 1875, § 4, by railroad seeking to secure in advance of construction benefits of the grant made by that act of grounds adjacent to its right of way, relates back to date of filing, so as to cut off rights therein founded on a pre-emption claim filed pending such approval and subsequently patented.—(1912) Stalker v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 636, 225 U. S. 142, 56 L. Ed. 1027, affirming judgment (1908) Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Stalker, 94 P. 56, 59, 14 Idaho, 362, 371.

672. Sufficiency of location and adoption of line.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 233.

Act Cong. July 1, 1862, § 3, granted to the Union Pacific Railroad Company every alternate section of public land, designated by odd numbers, within certain limits "on each side of said road, not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a pre-emption or homestead claim may not have attached at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed." Held, that the line of the road was definitely fixed within the meaning of the exception to said section by filing the map of its location with the commissioner of the general land office at Washington.—Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 5 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 1122.

Under Act Cong. July 23, 1866 (14 Stat. 210), granting to the state of Kansas, for the benefit of the St. Joseph & Denver Railroad Company, alternate sections of land adjoining the railroad, not to be open to sale or settlement after the route of the road should be "definitely fixed," the route was so fixed when a map thereof was adopted by the company and filed with the secretary of the interior and accepted by him.—Walden v. Knevals, 114 U. S. 373, 5 S. Ct. 898, 29 L. Ed. 167.

It was not necessary that the Northern Pacific Company should fix its entire route from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, the termini named in its charter, before it could be entitled to the lands granted, but upon the location of such reasonable portions of the general route as would intelligently guide the officers of the land department with reference to the patents to be issued it was entitled to the lands along the located portion of the line.—St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 139 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 389, 35 L. Ed. 77, affirming decree (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 26 F. 551.

The Atlantic & Pacific Company claimed that under its charter it was authorized to build a road from the Colorado river to the Pacific ocean, and thence along the coast to San Francisco, and on April 11, 1872, it filed maps of definite location thereof in four sections. The first point where the route touched the Pacific was at San Buenaventura, but one of the sectional maps began at a point east of that place, passed through the same, and thence to San Miguel Mission, in the direction of San Francisco, so that San Buenaventura was not the terminus of any line of definite location from the Colorado westward. These maps, comprising the whole route to San Francisco, were at first approved by the interior department, but the matter was subsequently re-examined, and it was held that the company was only authorized to build to the Pacific, and the maps were thereupon approved as far as San Buenaventura. Held, that the filing of the maps in sections was immaterial, and that the original filing was valid as to the route between the Colorado and San Buenaventura.—United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 146 U. S. 570, 13 S. Ct. 152, 36 L. Ed. 1091.

The map filed in the office of the commissioner of the general land office by the Southern Pacific Company April 3, 1871, just one month after the grant to it, was not a map of definite location, whereby the grant would attach to specific sections, but was the map of the "general route," as appears from the fact that it is so called by the president of the company in his indorsement thereon, by the fact that the lands bordering said route were thereupon withdrawn from sale by the land office, and by the further fact that the minutes of the directors' meetings show that the line of definite location through the region in question was only adopted by the company on April 10, 1874.—Id.

By the act of July 27, 1866, § 3 (14 Stat. 292), organizing the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, congress, in the usual terms, granted lands to it to aid in the construction of a transcontinental railroad. In section 18 it authorized the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a California corporation, to connect with such road near the California boundary, for a road to San Francisco, and to aid in the construction thereof declared that that company should have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations of the grant to the former company. By the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 573), the Texas Pacific Railroad was incorporated, grants of land were made to it, and in section 23 authority was also given to the Southern Pacific Company to build a connecting road from a certain point on the Colorado river to San Francisco, "with the same rights, grants, and privileges, and subject to the same limitations, restrictions, and conditions," as were granted to it by the act incorporating the Atlantic & Pacific Company, provided that no rights of the latter company should be impaired. Held, that on the filing of the map of definite location by the Atlantic & Pacific Company on April 11, 1872, title to specific sections within its grant limits became vested in it by relation as of July 27, 1866, and, although the two routes crossed each other, no right in any of these sections at the point of intersection passed to the Southern Pacific Company under the act of 1871, whether its road was definitely located before or after the location of the Atlantic & Pacific road.—Id.

By the act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489, c. 120), as amended by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 356, c. 216), a Kansas corporation, thereafter known as the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Eastern Division, and later as the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, was authorized to build a railroad from the Missouri river westward to connect with the Union Pacific at its eastern terminus, which was to be at some point on the 100th meridian; and a land grant of alternate sections within 20 miles of each side of the road was given to said corporation. By the act of July 3, 1866 (14 Stat. 79, c. 159), it was authorized to so change the line of its definite location as to make the connection not more than 50 miles west of the meridian of Denver. Thereafter the line was located westward to Denver; thence northward to connect with the Union Pacific at Cheyenne. The act of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. 324, c. 127), authorized the said corporation to contract with a Colorado corporation for the building and operation of that part of its road lying between Denver and Cheyenne, and to grant the perpetual use of its right of way and other property to the Colorado corporation. It was further provided that each corporation should receive patents for alternate sections along their respective lines in like manner as had been formerly provided for the Kansas corporation. It was made the duty of the two corporations to build and operate a continuous line from Kansas City by way of Denver to Cheyenne, and all existing provisions for the operation of the Union Pacific, its branches and connections, as a continuous line, were continued in force. Held, that the act of 1869 recognized the location to Cheyenne by way of Denver as valid under the act of 1866, and that the line was continuous from the Missouri to its connection with the Union Pacific, within the meaning of said act.—United States v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 148 U. S. 562, 13 S. Ct. 724, 37 L. Ed. 560, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 551.

Act July 26, 1866, granting to the state of Kansas a right of way for a railway between certain points, and also lands for the benefit of such railway, provided that, "as soon as said company shall file with the secretary of the interior maps of its line designating the route thereof, it shall be the duty of the secretary to withdraw from the market the lands granted by this act." Held, that the filing by the company of a map of the line surveyed for the route, in order to secure the withdrawal of the lands granted, operated to definitely locate the line and limits of the right of way, so that it could not be changed in such a way as to affect the rights of one who had in the meantime legally entered other land in the government land office.—Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cook, 163 U. S. 491, 16 S. Ct. 1093, 41 L. Ed. 239, affirming judgment 47 Kan. 216, 27 P. 847.

The filing of a map of the general route of the Northern Pacific Railroad did not, prior to the filing of the map of definite location, constitute such a disposal of lands, within the exterior lines of that route, as to preclude a subsequent grant of the lands to another company. Decree, Oregon & O. R. v. United States, 77 F. 67, 23 C. C. A. 15, affirmed.—United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 261, 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. Ed. 358.

A definite location of the right of way of a railroad, which will entitle it to the benefits of the act of congress of March 3, 1875, granting lands to railroads, is made by the actual construction of the road, although a profile map of the road has not been filed. Judgment, 76 N. W. 227, 7 N. D. 619, reversed.—James-town & N. R. Co. v. Jones, 20 S. Ct. 568, 177 U. S. 125, 44 L. Ed. 698.

The right of the Northern Pacific Railway Company to select its eastern terminus at a point on Lake Superior, in the state of Minnesota or Wisconsin, which it actually exercised by the selection of Ashland, in Wisconsin, under the act of congress of July 2, 1864, was not intentionally or by operation of law ended or determined by the company's compliance with the conditions sought to be imposed by the legislation of Minnesota and Wisconsin respecting branch-line connections, which the legislatures deemed desirable for local advantage, and which were imposed as conditions of the consent of those states to the construction of the road. Judgment, Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Doherty, 75 N. W. 1079, 100 Wis. 39, affirmed.—Doherty v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 20 S. Ct. 677, 177 U. S. 421, 44 L. Ed. 830.

No such reservation of lands within that portion of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company under Act July 2, 1864, c. 217 (13 Stat. 365), which was forfeited to the United States by Act Sept. 29, 1890, c. 1040, 26 Stat. 496 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1598], as to except from the grant made to that company by the joint resolution of May 31, 1870 (16 Stat. 378), the lands common to both grants, was effected by the transmission to the Secretary of the Interior in 1865 by the president of the company of a map of the general line of the road, which was not authorized by the company, and which was not accepted by the Land Department, and the filing, two months after the date of such resolution, of two maps of general route, which included the line authorized by the resolution.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 24 S. Ct. 330, 193 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 593.

No rights under Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], granting rights of way to railroads, can be initiated before a profile map of the road has been filed in the local land office and approved by the Secretary of the Interior—unless actual construction is sooner begun—in view of the provisions of section 4 of that act, that any railroad company desiring to secure the benefit of the statute shall, within a definite time after location, file such profile map with the register of the local land office, that upon approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the plats in such office, and that "thereafter" all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way. Judgment, Doughty v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co. (N. D. 1906) 107 N. W. 971, affirmed.—Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co. v. Doughty, 28 S. Ct. 291, 208 U. S. 251, 52 L. Ed. 474.

The grant of lands within place limits, made by Act July 1, 1862, c. 120, § 14, 12 Stat. 489, as amended by Act July 2, 1864, c. 216, § 17, 13 Stat. 356, in aid of a branch railroad to be constructed on the same terms and conditions as the main line, is not taken out of the general rule that the grant is one in present, and that, on filing the map of definite location, the title passes to the railway company so that it can be held adversely, even as against such company, because the road which might build the branch was not, or may not have been, in existence at the time of the passage of the amendatory act, nor because of its provision that said company shall be "entitled to receive" alternate sections of land for 10 miles in width on each side of the way, along the whole length of the branch, nor because of the supposed limited character of the forfeiture provided for failure to complete the branch.—Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Wiese, 28 S. Ct. 294, 208 U. S. 234, 52 L. Ed. 466, affirming judgment Wiese v. Union Pac. Ry. Co. (Neb. 1906) 108 N. W. 175; Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Wrich, 28 S. Ct. 299, 208 U. S. 250, 52 L. Ed. 473, affirming judgment Wrich v. Union Pac. Ry. Co. (Neb. 1906) 108 N. W. 178.

A definite location of a railway right of way under Act March 3, 1875, is made by completion of the grading, though a map is not filed in the local land office.—Barlow v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 36 S. Ct. 456, 240 U. S. 484, 60 L. Ed. 760, affirming judgment Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Barlow, 143 N. W. 903, 26 N. D. 159.

673. Lands included in grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 236, 237.

Congress in 1856 granted to the state of Iowa, to aid in the construction of a railroad upon a designated route, six sections of land for every mile of the road constructed. This land was made over by the legislature of Iowa to the plaintiff corporation. By Act Cong. June 2, 1864, amending the previous act, the plaintiff was permitted to build by a shorter way, being "entitled for such modified line to the same lands, and to the same amount of lands per mile, as originally granted." Held, that the plaintiff was only entitled to six sections for each mile of road actually constructed, and not to six sections for each mile of the original route.—Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 3 S. Ct. 485, 28 L. Ed. 56.

In the act of congress of March 3, 1865, increasing the quantity of lands granted by the act of 1857 to Minnesota for railroad purposes, the reservation from the four sections was of land previously granted, which was located within them. The previous grant was of lands in place, for it was of alternate sections, designated by odd numbers, for six sections in width on each side of the road, and that portion of it was reserved from the subsequent grant which fell within the four new sections, also in place.—Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228, 6 S. Ct. 654, 29 L. Ed. 858, reversing (C. C.) 24 F. 889.

Plaintiff in ejectment claimed a tract of land under Act Cong. March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. 195), which granted land "to the territory of Minnesota" to aid in the construction of a railroad whose terminus was to be some point "between the foot of Big Stone Lake and the mouth of Sioux Wood river." Prior to the passage of this act, and on February 26, 1857, congress had passed an enabling act for the proposed state of Minnesota which so located the boundary that the terminus of the road might be within or without the state. The terminus of the road was fixed at a point on the boundary line. The land in controversy lay within the territory, but was beyond the boundary of the proposed state. Held, that the grant was none the less effectual to pass the land, which in other respects was within the prescribed limits, because the railroad was built wholly within the state of Minnesota while the land lay outside of it and in the adjoining territory.—St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 11 S.

Ct. 168, 34 L. Ed. 767, reversing decree (C. C.) 26 F. 569.

There were not two separate grants, each terminating at Denver, by lines drawn at right angles to the course of the respective roads, thus excluding lands lying to the southwest (being on the exterior of the right angle made by the two roads), but there was one continuous grant, which included such lands. The fact that a land grant road makes a curve or right angle does not render the grant inoperative at that point, for there is no requirement that the sections granted shall be reached by a line run at right angles to the road.—United States v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 148 U. S. 562, 13 S. Ct. 724, 37 L. Ed. 560, affirming decree (C. C.) 37 F. 551.

674. Reservations and exceptions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 238-246.

675. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 238-240.

By act of congress of August 8, 1846, there was granted to the territory of Iowa, to aid said territory to improve the Des Moines river from its mouth to the Raccoon Fork, one equal moiety, in alternate sections, of the public lands remaining unsold, and not otherwise disposed of, in a strip five miles in width on each side of said river. Under this grant the improvement was carried on for several years, the land between the mouth of the river and Raccoon Fork being certified to the state by the secretary of the treasury as needed. Afterwards the state insisted that the grant included a moiety of the lands on the river above Raccoon Fork, but such construction of the grant was denied by the secretary. In 1850 the secretary issued an order withholding the lands in controversy above Raccoon Fork from the market, which order has never been revoked. In 1856 congress granted to the state of Iowa, to aid in constructing several railroads across that state, every alternate section, as shown by odd numbers, of the lands on either side of said roads, each of which crossed the Des Moines river, and ran through the lands which the state claimed had been granted to it for the purpose of improving the navigation of that stream. In 1860 the supreme court decided that the grant of 1846 did not extend above Raccoon Fork. By joint resolution, congress, in 1861, relinquished to the state "all the title which the United States still retain" in such portions of land above Raccoon Fork as had been improperly certified to the state as a part of the grant of 1846, "and which is now held by bona fide purchasers under the state of Iowa." In 1862 congress extended the grant of 1846 so as practically to accede to the claims made by the state for land above Raccoon Fork. A proviso in the grant to the railroads in 1856, in effect withheld from them all the land withheld from market under the secretary's order in 1850. Held, in an action to quiet title, brought by one who had settled upon odd sections of land above Raccoon Fork, and within five miles of the river, after the resolution of congress in 1861, but before the act of 1862, that said resolution did not have the effect to end the reservation of such lands from public entry. Consequently the settler's title cannot prevail over a title derived from the state of Iowa after the act of 1862.—Bullard v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co., 122 U. S. 167, 7 S. Ct. 1149, 30 L. Ed. 1123.

The exception in the grant to the Northern Pacific Company of lands otherwise disposed of before the definite location of its route does not cover subsequent grants for the construction of other roads before the location of the Northern Pacific road, as to permit such exception would be to embody in the first grant a repugnant provision.—St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 139 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 389, 35 L. Ed.

77, affirming decree (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 26 F. 551.

The section of Act Cong. March 3, 1871, granting lands to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, provided that said section should in no way affect or impair the rights, present or prospective, of the Atlantic & Pacific Company. Held, that this language did not constitute an exception from the grant, nor a reservation in favor of the United States, but that it made the grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company subject and subordinate to any rights the Atlantic & Pacific Company, a prior grantee, may then have secured, or might thereafter acquire under the law.—United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co., 146 U. S. 615, 13 S. Ct. 163, 36 L. Ed. 1104.

Lands granted by congress to a railroad company chartered by a state are excepted out of a subsequent grant to another company, even if the state corporation is without power under its charter to obtain the benefit of the grant.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 152 U. S. 284, 14 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 443, reversing decree (C. C.) 41 F. 842.

Rev. St. U. S. § 2280, establishing the price of public reserved lands within the place limits of railroad grants, does not affect the right of entry of such lands under 19 Stat. 377, authorizing an entry of "any desert lands" within the states and territories named therein; and hence a valid entry may be made under that act on such land, though located within a railroad grant.—United States v. Ingram, 19 S. Ct. 177, 172 U. S. 327, 43 L. Ed. 465.

The grant of public lands made to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of congress of July 2, 1864, was in the nature of a float, and excluded all lands that had been reserved, sold, or otherwise appropriated before the filing of a map showing the definite location of the line of the road. Decree, Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 77 F. 67, 23 C. C. A. 15, affirmed.—United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 261, 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. Ed. 358.

Land within the 20-mile limit of the grant to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company by Act March 3, 1871, c. 122 (16 Stat. 573) § 9, was excepted from the grant by section 23 of that act, to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, by the proviso therein that such section "shall in no way affect or impair the rights, present or prospective, of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company or any other railroad company." Decree, 109 F. 913, 48 C. C. A. 712, affirmed.—Southern Pacific R. Co. v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 567, 189 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 896.

Land which, at the date of the grant by Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365, 367, to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, was withdrawn of record for the benefit of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad under the prior grant by Act May 5, 1864, c. 79, 13 Stat. 64, was not "public land" within the meaning of the later grant, and did not pass under it when or because it was subsequently ascertained that such land was without the line of the definite location of the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad, and was within the place limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad, as defined by its map of definite location, but such land, when freed from the earlier grant, became a part of the public domain, subject only to be disposed of under the general land laws. Decree (1905) 139 F. 614, 71 C. C. A. 598, affirmed.—Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 27 S. Ct. 249, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. Ed. 438.

Proceedings instituted prior to the definite location of a railway, for the purpose of bringing under the operation of the swamp land act (Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. 519 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1586]) certain lands within the place limits of the land grant made to the railway company by Act May 12, 1864, c. 84, 13 Stat. 72, do not except such lands from the railway land grant as being previously reserved, if they were not in fact swamp or overflowed lands.—(1910) United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 31 S. Ct. 7, 218 U. S. 233, 54 L. Ed. 1015, affirming judgment (1908) 160 F. 818, 87 C. O. A. 592.

76. — Indian reservations.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 241.

The grant by the act of congress of July 2, 1864, to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, of lands to which the Indian title had not been extinguished, operated to convey the fee to the company, subject to the right of occupancy by the Indians.—Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55, 7 S. Ct. 100, 30 L. Ed. 330, affirming judgment Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Peronto, 3 Dak. 217, 14 N. W. 103.

That part of section 3, Act Cong. July 2, 1864, granting lands in aid of the Northern Pacific Railroad, which excepts from the grant lands reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and to which a pre-emption and other rights and claims have attached, when a map of definite location has been filed, does not include the Indian right of occupancy within such "other rights and claims."—Id.

Act Cong. July 2, 1864, granted certain lands in aid of the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and provided that the United States should extinguish the Indian title to all lands falling within the grant. The Indians agreed to relinquish their title and retired from the lands May 19, 1873. Held, that on the definite location of the line of the railroad on the 26th of May, 1873, the right of the company, freed from any incumbrance of the Indian title, immediately attached to the alternate sections.—Id.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1857, granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad, and providing, by section 6, that if any of the lands are within any Indian territory no title shall accrue until the Indian title is extinguished, the fact that the land was at the time of the grant in the possession of an Indian tribe made the right to the land a float, which became vested when the Indian title was extinguished.—St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 11 S. Ct. 168, 34 L. Ed. 767, reversing decree (C. C.) 26 F. 569.

Lands in the Indian Territory, being set aside to the Indian tribes, do not pass under a railroad grant which excepts lands already "granted, sold, reserved, * * * or otherwise disposed of," and gives the grantee the right to select other lands in lieu thereof.—Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 17 S. Ct. 348, 165 U. S. 413, 41 L. Ed. 770.

Grant of alternate sections of land through the Indian Territory in aid of railroads under Act July 25, 1866, § 9, did not attach to lands which by subsequent acts have been distributed in severalty to the members of the Five Civilized Indian Tribes, or have been sold for their benefit.—Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 6, 235 U. S. 37, 59 L. Ed. 116, affirming decree 47 Ct. Cl. 59.

77. — Spanish or Mexican grants.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 242.

Patents issued to the Central Pacific Railroad Company under its land grant, for any sections lying easterly of range 6 E., within the outside boundaries of the Moquelamos grant, are valid; there being enough land lying west of range 7 to satisfy the floating grant of 11 square leagues.—United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 8 S. Ct. 1177, 32 L. Ed. 213, affirming decree (C. C.) 30 F. 147.

Only the quantity actually granted by the Mexican floating grants was reserved during the examination of the validity of the grant; the residue being still part of the public domain. If within the boundaries of a land grant made in aid of a railroad, such land grant would take effect, except as to the quantity of land or float actually granted, and, if that quantity lying together was left to satisfy the grant, the railroad company would be entitled to patents for the odd sections of the residue.—Id.

A Mexican grant of quantity—as of a certain number of leagues of land lying within a larger tract, whose boundaries are given—is a float, subject to location within the tract by the government before it can attach to any specific lands; and hence the grant does not operate, before such location, to exclude the whole tract from pre-emption or sale, or to except it from the operation of the Union Pacific Railroad grants (12 Stat. 489, c. 120; 13 Stat. 356, c. 216); and under those acts, if the land lay within the granted sections, all but enough to satisfy the Mexican grant would pass to the railroad company.—Carr v. Quigley, 149 U. S. 652, 13 S. Ct. 961, 37 L. Ed. 885, following United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 8 S. Ct. 1177, 32 L. Ed. 213.

The objection that there had not been the final order of confirmation requisite under Act March 3, 1851, c. 41, § 13, 9 Stat. 631, to justify an official survey of a Mexican grant, because the federal government had appealed to the federal Supreme Court from the decree of confirmation in the district court, is not available to defeat the contention that lands within the place limits of a railroad grant, which were also, when the map of definite location was filed and approved, included by the lines of such survey, were sub judice, and therefore excluded from the grant to the railroad company, where such appeal had practically been abandoned before the survey through a delay of 10 years in filing the transcript of record in the appellate court, and the government did not question the right to the survey when the application therefor was made. Decree, 133 F. 682, 66 C. C. A. 560, affirmed.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 26 S. Ct. 298, 200 U. S. 354, 50 L. Ed. 512.

Lands within the place limits of a railroad land grant, but which were also included by the lines of an official survey of a Mexican grant, made at the instance of the person to whom such grant was confirmed to remove the uncertainty as to its boundaries due to the generality of the description in the decree of confirmation, must be deemed sub judice, at least, until the survey is set aside, and therefore excluded from the grant to the railroad company, although the claimant may not have insisted upon the boundaries as so established.—Id.

678. — Mineral lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 243.

Under acts of congress granting lands in aid of Union Pacific, Central Pacific, and Western Pacific Railroads, but excepting mineral lands from such grant, a patent including mineral lands, which were known to be such by the applicant, the agent of the railroad company, will be set aside at the suit of the United States as "issued by mistake and without authority of law."—Western Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 107 U. S. 528, 108 U. S. 510, 2 S. Ct. 802, 27 L. Ed. 806.

The reservation of mineral lands, in Act Cong. July 1, 1862, § 3, granting land to the Union Pac. Ry. Co., is not repealed by the amendatory act of July 2, 1864, increasing the grant made by the act of 1862, by declaring that "5" in the old act shall be "10" where the number of sections is mentioned, and that "10" shall be "20" where the limits within which the section may be found are described, and that the term "mineral lands" in the exception in the grant shall not be construed to mean iron or coal lands, and declaring that "any lands granted by this act shall not include any government reservation or mineral lands or the improvements of any bona fide settler on any lands returned and denominated as mineral."—Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 5 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 1122.

Under Act July 2, 1864, § 3, granting to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company alternate sections of land, "not mineral," on its railroad line, with a proviso that "all mineral lands be excluded from the operations of this act," and the joint resolution of January 30, 1865, that no such act should be "so construed as to embrace mineral lands," actual mineral lands were excluded from the grant, though not known to be such at the time of the definite location of the railroad and the identification thereupon of the sections to which the grant attached, subject to other specified exceptions then arising.—Barden v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 154 U. S. 288, 14 S. Ct. 1030, 38 L. Ed. 992, reversing judgment (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Barden, 46 F. 592.

The filing in the local land office of a plat of a survey including such lands, and reporting them as agricultural, and not mineral, and afterwards of lists by the railroad company embracing the same as portions of its grant, and its payment of the fees for such filing, without the issue of a patent for the lands as provided by the grant, gave the railroad company no title, as the determination of the character of the lands is for the officers of the land department, and their designation thereof in the patent issued is, in the absence of fraud, imposition, or mistake, conclusive against collateral attack.—Id.

No right of the railroad company to mineral lands, not known to be such at the time of the definite location of its road, can be implied from the fact that congress subsequently authorized it to mortgage its entire property, or on the ground that otherwise the states and territories through which the road passed could not tax its property, for the property granted—the land without minerals—was subject to such mortgage, and to taxation.—Id.

Under the grant of July 2, 1864, to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, of odd sections, "not mineral," to which the United States had full title, free from pre-emption "or other claims," at the time of the definite location of the road, no title passed to lands in the odd sections which, at the time of the definite location of the road, there were pending applications to purchase as mineral lands, though they were ascertained not to be mineral lands.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders, 17 S. Ct. 671, 166 U. S. 620, 41 L. Ed. 1139, affirming judgment, 49 F. 129, 1 C. C. A. 192.

Lands valuable solely or chiefly for granite quarries are "mineral lands" within the meaning of the exception of such lands, in the act of July 2, 1864, c. 217 (13 Stat. 365), from the grant made therein to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. Decree, 104 F. 425, 43 C. C. A. 620, affirmed.—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Soderberg, 23 S. Ct. 365, 188 U. S. 526, 47 L. Ed. 575.

Mineral lands known to be such at the issue of a patent therefor to a railroad under Railway Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, were not included in the grant, being expressly excluded by the provisions of section 3.—Burke v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 907, 234 U. S. 669, 58 L. Ed. 1527.

A clause excluding all mineral lands in the tracts aforesaid, inserted in a patent from the land department under the Railway Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, which in section 3 excludes mineral lands from its operation, is beyond the authority of the land department, notwithstanding provision of joint resolution June 28, 1870, adopted to sanction a rule which the Secretary of the Interior had disapproved, that that official shall issue patents for lands coterminous to each constructed section, reserving all rights of actual settlers with other restrictions provided for in section 3 of the granting act, which provision is a direction not to patent to the railroad lands occupied by settlers or otherwise excepted from the grant.—Id.

Petroleum or mineral oil is "mineral" within the meaning of that term as used in Railway Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, which in section 3 excluded all mineral lands from the act other than iron and coal lands.—Id.

◀79. — Lands entered for pre-emption or homestead.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 244-246.

The claim of one making a homestead entry on land within the limits of the grant to said company having attached at the time of fixing the definite location of the road, the subsequent failure of the person making such claim to comply with the acts of congress concerning residence, cultivation, and building on the land, or his actual abandonment of the claim, does not cause it to revert to the railroad company, and become a part of the grant.—Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 5 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 1122.

Act Cong. July 2, 1864, granting land to the Northern Pacific Railroad, excepting lands reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and to which a pre-emption and other rights and claims have attached, when a map of definite location has been filed, does not except pre-emptions on lands on which there was an Indian right of occupancy, made after the extinguishment of such right of occupancy, as section 6 declares that the right shall not be subject to pre-emption.—Buttz v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 119 U. S. 55, 7 S. Ct. 100, 30 L. Ed. 330, affirming judgment Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Peronto, 3 Dak. 217, 14 N. W. 103.

Act Cong. June 22, 1874 (18 Stat. 203, c. 424), extended the time for the completion of the St. Paul & Pacific Railroad till March 3, 1876, and no longer, on condition that the rights of actual settlers on the lands previously granted the railroad be saved to them. In 1872, after the map of location of the road was filed, the secretary of the interior withdrew certain sections from settlement. This order he afterwards vacated. An actual settler in good faith settled on the lands while this order was pending. The order withdrawing the lands from settlement was afterwards restored. Held, that the settler obtaining the lands while open to settlement was protected in his rights as against the railroad.—St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Greenalgh, 139 U. S. 19, 11 S. Ct. 395, 35 L. Ed. 71; Same v. Wenzel, 139 U. S. 23, 11 S. Ct. 396, 35 L. Ed. 73, affirming decree (C. C.) St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Greenhalgh, 26 F. 563.

Act Cong. July 2, 1864, granting lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, did not operate upon lands for which a receiver's receipt and register's certificate of purchase had already been issued to the heirs of a pre-emptor; and the subsequent cancellation of the pre-emption entry did not bring the land under the operation of the grant, but merely restored it to the public domain, and rendered it again subject to pre-emption.—Bardon v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 145 U. S. 535, 12 S. Ct. 856, 36 L. Ed. 806.

Act July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), granted in aid of the Central Pacific Railroad land within certain limits "to which a pre-emption or homestead claim may not have attached." Prior to such grant, a pre-emption declaratory statement on land within the limits of such subsequent grant had been filed, which statement remained intact until after the final location of the road, when it was canceled, because claimant had never lived on the land. Held, that, nevertheless, the pre-emption claim had attached to the land within the meaning of the act, and hence such land was excluded from the grant, and was open to settlement after such cancellation.—Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 15 S. Ct. 796, 39 L. Ed. 906, affirming judgment (C. C.) 45 F. 616.

When land is not subject to disposition as a part of the public domain, owing to a decision by the secretary of the interior that it is subject to a pre-emption right, the action of the land department in including it in a list of lands certified to the state to aid in the construction of railroads is ineffectual to pass any title.—Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 16 S. Ct. 72, 40 L. Ed. 253.

Under the Pacific Railroad land grant of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), which granted, within certain limits to be thereafter fixed by the location of the road, every odd-numbered section of the public lands "not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States * * * at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed," and the amendatory act of July 25, 1864 (13 Stat. 356), providing that the grant should "not defeat or impair any pre-emption, homestead, swamp land, or other lawful claim," and further providing that congress might at any time alter, amend, or repeal the act, the right was reserved to congress to otherwise dispose of any of the land at any time prior to the definite location of the line of the railroad.—Menotti v. Dillon, 17 S. Ct. 945, 167 U. S. 703, 42 L. Ed. 333.

Under such acts no title passed to the railroad company to any specific sections until identified by an accepted map of the definite location of the line of road, and an order of the secretary of the interior, made in accordance with the acts on the filing of a map of the general route of the road, withdrawing the lands within the exterior lines from pre-emption, private entry, and sale, in no manner affected the right of congress to dispose of any of such lands, or to ratify a previous entry thereof.—Id.

The joint resolution of congress of May 31, 1870 (16 Stat. 378, Resolution No. 67), making a further grant of lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, did not operate to extinguish or supersede in any manner the original grant made by the act of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 365, c. 217); and the fact that at the time of the passage of the resolution a pre-emption claim had been filed, and was then in existence, which exempted a tract of land from the grant therein made, does not affect the rights of the company thereto under the act of 1864, where the land is within the limits of both grants. Judgment, De Lacey v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 72 F. 726, 19 C. C. A. 157, and (C. C.) 66 F. 450, reversed.—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. De Lacey, 19 S. Ct. 791, 174 U. S. 622, 43 L. Ed. 1111.

Where between the passage of the act of July 2, 1864, making a grant of lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and the time of the filing of the map of definite location of the road which determined the location of the grant in place, a pre-emption claim was filed on a tract of land, and a declaratory statement made, but at the time of the filing of the map of location by the railroad company, in 1884, which brought the land within the limits of its grant, more than 30 months had elapsed after the time prescribed for filing the declaratory statement, and no steps had been taken by the pre-emptor to make proof or payment under his claim, there was no existing claim in favor of the pre-emptor shown by the records of the local land office which would prevent the land from passing to the railroad company under its grant.—Id.

Lands which a limited class of persons are entitled to purchase by the act of congress of June 15, 1880, because of entries thereof made under the homestead laws, are "appropriated" by that statute, so as to be excluded from a railroad grant of lands not otherwise appropriated. Judgment, Amacker v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 58 F. 850, 7 C. C. A. 518, affirmed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amacker, 20 S. Ct. 236, 175 U. S. 564, 44 L. Ed. 274.

The alternate odd-numbered sections within the exterior limits of the general route of the Northern Pacific Railway Company were not so vested in that company by the mere filing of the map of general route and a withdrawal order based thereon as not to be subject to occupancy in good faith by homestead settlers prior to the definite location of the road, although Act July 2, 1864, c. 217 (13 Stat. 365) § 6, declares that the "odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or pre-emption before or after they are surveyed, except by said company," since this section must be read in connection with section 3, which restricts the grant to such odd-numbered sections as are free from pre-emption or other claims or rights at the date of definite location, and authorizes the company to select other lands in lieu of any found at that date to be "occupied by homestead settlers." Judgment Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Nelson, 61 P. 703, 22 Wash. 521, reversed.—Nelson v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 23 S. Ct. 302, 188 U. S. 108, 47 L. Ed. 406.

Continuous occupation of public land, with a bona fide intention to acquire it under the homestead laws as soon as it should be surveyed, constitutes, when begun prior to the definite location by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company of its route, a "claim" upon the land within the meaning of Act Cong. July 2, 1864, c. 217 (13 Stat. 365) § 3, restricting the grant in aid of such railroad to such odd-numbered sections within specified general limits as were free from pre-emption or "other claims or rights" at the date of definite location, and authorizing the company to select other lands in lieu of any found at that date to be "occupied by homestead settlers."—Id.

One who in good faith occupies unsurveyed public land within the exterior limits of the general route of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, after an order of withdrawal based on the map of general route, but before the definite location of the road, is entitled to perfect his title under the homestead laws as soon as the land is surveyed, by Act Cong. May 14, 1880, c. 80, § 3, 21 Stat. 140 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1382], in force when the occupancy was begun, which allows one who has settled or "shall hereafter" settle on public lands, with a view to acquiring them under the homestead laws, the same time to file his homestead application and perfect his original entry as is allowed to settlers under the pre-emption laws, and declares that his rights shall relate back to the date of settlement.—Id.

Lands on which a settlement was made under Oregon Donation Act Sept. 27, 1850, c. 78, 9 Stat. 496, and Act Feb. 14, 1853, c. 69, 10 Stat. 158, amendatory thereof, but which were abandoned, without compliance with the conditions as to residence or proof, 15 years before their selection as lieu lands under the grant of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. 239, c. 242), to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, were not "reserved" from sale, within the meaning of that act, so as to prevent the grant from attaching to such lands, although the donation notification had not been formally canceled.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 615, 620, 189 U. S. 103, 116, 47 L. Ed. 726, 732, affirming decree in part 109 F. 514, 48 C. C. A. 520, which is reversed in part 23 S. Ct. 673, 190 U. S. 186, 47 L. Ed. 1012.

The relinquishment of a homestead entry after final decision of the Secretary of the Interior in favor of the entryman in a contest with a railway company claiming under a subsequent selection of indemnity lands does not inure to the benefit of the railway company, in view of the provision of Act Aug. 5, 1892, c. 382, 27 Stat. 390, confining such selection to lands not mineral and not reserved, "and to which no adverse right or claim shall have attached or have been initiated," and such land, by the express provisions of Act May 14, 1880, c. 80, 21 Stat. 141 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1393), is open to settlement and entry. Judgment, Donohue v. St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. (1907) 112 N. W. 413, 101 Minn. 239, affirmed.—St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Donohue, 28 S. Ct. 600, 210 U. S. 21, 52 L. Ed. 941.

Unsurveyed public land within the place limits of the grant of July 2, 1864 (chapter 217, 13 Stat. 365), to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, which, at the time of the definite location of the line, was actually occupied by a settler intending in good faith to acquire title under the homestead laws as soon as the land should be surveyed, was excepted from the operation of the land grant, although such occupancy was not evidenced by a record of any kind.—(1911) Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Trodick, 31 S. Ct. 607, 221 U. S. 208, 55 L. Ed. 704, affirming judgment (1908) Trodick v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 164 F. 913, 90 C. C. A. 653.

A delay beyond the time fixed by Act May 14, 1880, c. 80, 21 Stat. 140 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392), within which a homesteader must file his application after a survey of the land, cannot inure to the benefit of a railway company claiming the land under the land grant of July 2, 1864 (Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365), on the theory that it had acquired an interest therein by the mere definite location of its land at a time when the land was in the actual occupancy of the homestead settler.—Id.

§80. Withdrawal of lands from public entry or sale.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 247-249.

Where the location of a railroad line, whether valid or not, is approved by the land office, land withdrawn to satisfy a grant, as determined by such location, is not thereafter open to entry under the pre-emption or homestead laws; and a person attempting to make a homestead entry thereon cannot question the legal title of the railroad.—Hamblin v. Western Land Co., 147 U. S. 531, 13 S. Ct. 353, 37 L. Ed. 267.

Where the legal title to certain land has been in controversy between two railroads, each claiming under a land grant, a third party, who has attempted to make a homestead entry on the land after the location of the two lines of railroad has been approved by the land office and the land withdrawn from sale, cannot question the force and effect of a decree determining the controversy in favor of one of the railroads.—Id.

Withdrawal of public lands granted to railroad companies from sale, pre-emption, and homestead entries may be made by the interior department, either as executive acts or pursuant to command of congress, and need not be made by proclamation of the president.—Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 15 S. Ct. 410, 39 L. Ed. 528.

On May 29, 1856, all the lands in the district wherein the land in controversy is situated were withdrawn from sale or location, in anticipation of Act June 3, 1856, granting certain lands in aid of railroads. Lands to which pre-emption claims had attached were excluded from operation of the grant. On June 12, 1856, a continuance of the withdrawal was directed. On October 26, 1856, the commissioner of the general land office directed the local land officers to cease to permit locations for any purpose within 15 miles of the route as soon as a certified map of the route was filed in their office. In May and June, 1858, two pre-emption declaratory statements were filed with respect to the land in controversy. Thereafter a map of the line of route was filed, and the local officers were again notified to withhold from sale all lands within the indemnity limits. The lands in controversy were included in the place limits of the grant. Held, that the order withdrawing all the land in the district was not void for the reason that it withdrew too much land, and that, therefore, the pre-emption claims never attached so as to exempt the land in question from the operation of the grant. —Spencer v. McDougal, 159 U. S. 62, 15 S. Ct. 1023, 40 L. Ed. 76.

An order of the Land Department directing the local land office to suspend from pre-emption, settlement, and sale a "body of land about 20 miles in width," is not so uncertain and indefinite as to be without legal force as to lands which are coterminous and within 10 miles of the line of the general route of the railroad for the benefit of which the order was made, as such route is defined on a map or diagram to which the order refers. Decree (1905) 139 F. 614, 71 C. C. A. 598, affirmed.—Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 27 S. Ct. 249, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. Ed. 438.

The withdrawal from sale, pre-emption, or settlement of lands within the indemnity limits of the railway land grant act of March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. 772, c. 98), which withdrawal was unauthorized, because the road had not then been definitely located, does not prevent a homestead claim or right from attaching to such land before definite location, and such right will be protected as against the subsequent selection of the land by the railway company. Judgment (1906) 87 P. 366, 74 Kan. 424, 118 Am. St. Rep. 321, affirmed.—Brandon v. Ard, 29 S. Ct. 1, 211 U. S. 11, 53 L. Ed. 68.

The Secretary of the Interior had no authority to withdraw from settlement lands within the indemnity limits of the Hastings & Dakota Railway land grant of July 4, 1866, in advance of a selection approved by him, based upon ascertained losses in the place limits. Judgment (1909) 119 N. W. 1135, 107 Minn. 568, affirmed.—Osborn v. Froyseth, 30 S. Ct. 420, 216 U. S. 571, 54 L. Ed. 619.

—81. Indemnity and lien lands.

By Act Cong. June 2, 1864, the railroad company, in case the sections designated were occupied by bona fide settlers, was at liberty to select other sections within 15 miles of the road. The company was required to file in the land office a map of the modified route whenever it was established, and it then became the duty of the secretary of the interior to reserve an amount of land within 15 miles of the road, equal to that originally authorized. Held, that until the company filed the map and selected the sections to which it was entitled, it could acquire no lien upon any part of the land out of which the selection was to be made; but that settlers entering in the interval were entitled to hold their claims.—Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 3 S. Ct. 485, 28 L. Ed. 56.

Act Cong. March 3, 1857, granted to the territory of Minnesota, in aid of the construction of certain railroads, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers for six sections in width on each side of such roads; and in case it should appear, when the lines of such roads were definitely fixed, that the government had sold any of the sections so granted, or that the right of pre-emption had attached to the same, lands were to be selected from the lands of the United States nearest to the tiers of sections above specified equal in quantity to and in lieu of the lands sold by the United States or pre-empted. Held, that the indemnity clause covered losses from the grant by reason of sales and the attachment of pre-emption rights before the date of the act, as well as such losses accruing after such date and before the final determination of the route of the road.—Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 5 S. Ct. 606, 28 L. Ed. 1109.

Act Cong. March 3, 1865, § 3, provided that any lands granted to Minnesota by Act March 3, 1857, in aid of railroads which might be located within the limits of the extension made by the act of 1865 to the original grant made by the act of 1857, should be deducted from the full quantity of lands granted by the act of 1865. Held, that said section 3 applied to "granted lands" of the former grant falling within the six-mile limit, and not to possible "indemnity lands" which might be afterwards acquired.—Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228, 6 S. Ct. 654, 29 L. Ed. 858, reversing (C. C.) 24 F. 889.

Act Cong. May 5, 1864, gave to the state of Wisconsin, to be transferred to a railroad company, a specified quantity of land, designated by alternate sections, along the route of the proposed railroad; and provided that if the government had, when the line of the road should be determined, sold or reserved any of the land thus granted, or if the right of pre-emption or homestead had attached, other sections, within a prescribed limit, should be selected by a state agent, subject to the approval of the secretary of the interior. Held, that the indemnity clause covered losses from the grant by reason of sales and attachment of homestead and pre-emption right previous to the date of the grant, as well as between such date and the date of the location of the railroad.—Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 10 S. Ct. 341, 33 L. Ed. 687.

Act Cong. March 3, 1863, § 1 (12 Stat. 772, c. 98), granted to the state of Kansas, to aid in constructing certain railroads now owned by the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Galveston Railroad Company, every alternate odd-numbered section of land within 10 miles on each side of the road, as finally located; and provided that, in case it were found that the United States had sold any of such lands, or that the right of pre-emption or homestead settlement had attached, it should be the duty of the secretary of the interior to select a sufficient number of odd sections to make up the deficiency from lands lying nearest to the tiers of sections granted, and within 20 miles of the road. Section 2 provided that sections which shall remain to the United States within 10 miles on each side of said road, being the even-numbered sections, "shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of the public lands when sold, nor shall any of said lands become subject to sale at private entry, until the same shall have been first offered at public sale to the highest bidder, at or above the increased minimum price"; saving to bona fide settlers under the pre-emption and homestead laws the right to purchase "at the increased minimum price," and provided that settlers on any of said "reserved sections," under the homestead law, should be entitled to patents for an amount not exceeding 80 acres. Held, that the even-numbered sections within the 10-mile limit were "reserved" by the United States, within the meaning of Act Cong. July 26, 1866, making similar grants to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Branch, (now the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company,) with right to make up similar deficiencies "from the public lands of the United States nearest to" the sections granted, and not "heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of congress," for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement "or other purpose whatever;" and hence, although the 10-mile limit of the former road was overlapped by the 20-mile indemnity limit of the latter, such even sections could not be selected as indemnity to the latter. Held, that as the act of 1863 did not apply its provisions respecting the sale of the even sections at double the minimum price of public lands at public auction, etc., to the lands lying outside the 10-mile limits, and inside the indemnity limits, the even sections in the latter tract were not "reserved," and were subject to selection for indemnity to the Missouri-Kansas Company, under the provision of the act of 1866, allowing it to be indemnified "from the public lands of the United States nearest to the sections above specified," namely, the odd sections within the place or grant limits of the latter road.—United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 141 U. S. 358, 12 S. Ct. 13, 35 L. Ed. 766, reversing decree (C. C.) 37 F. 68.

The full legal title to the even-numbered sections within the indemnity limits of the Leavenworth road remained in the United States until those sections were actually selected and set apart for indemnity to the Missouri-Kansas Company; and hence such sections were subject, in the meantime, to the homestead pre-emption laws, and any rights acquired thereunder by third parties were not displaced by subsequent selection and patent to the railroad company.—Id.

The grant by Act Cong. May 12, 1864, to the state of Iowa, to aid in the construction of two railroads in that state, of alternate sections of land within 10 miles of the railroads, being restricted to sections within the 10-mile limit, except when such sections had previously been disposed of by the government, and there being no statement of the number of acres to be covered, the United States was not bound to make up deficiencies caused by the fact that some of the sections contained less than 640 acres.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

Lands lying within the indemnity limits of an earlier railway grant, and which were withdrawn from sale by the secretary of the interior prior to the definite location of the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, were excluded from the grant to the latter company under the act of July 2, 1864, which passed only lands to which the United States had full title, "not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption, or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed." Decree, 68 F. 993, 16 C. C. A. 97, affirmed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging & Manufacturing Co., 18 S. Ct. 205, 168 U. S. 604, 42 L. Ed. 596.

The construction given by the land department since 1888 to the Northern Pacific land grant act of 1864, that the land department was not authorized thereby to withdraw from the settlement laws any lands within the indemnity limits of the grant upon the mere receipt and approval of the map of definite location of the railroad, is not so plainly or palpably erroneous as to justify the supreme court of the United States in adopting a different construction, in view of the provisions of section 6 that "the odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale, or entry, or pre-emption before or after they are surveyed except by said company as provided in this act," but that the provisions of the pre-emption and homestead laws "shall be, and the same are hereby, extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company."—Hewitt v. Schultz, 21 S. Ct. 309, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. Ed. 463, reversing judgment 78 N. W. 230, 7 N. D. 601; Powers v. Slight, 21 S. Ct. 319, 180 U. S. 173, 45 L. Ed. 479, affirming judgment 55 P. 1103, 20 Wash. 712; Moore v. Cormode, 21 S. Ct. 324, 180 U. S. 167, 45 L. Ed. 476, affirming judgment 55 P. 217, 20 Wash. 305.

The secretary of the interior is not authorized, by the act of July 2, 1864, to withdraw from sale or entry under the pre-emption and homestead laws of the United States the odd-numbered sections of land within the indemnity limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company as defined by its map of definite location, in advance of any selection based on ascertained losses of distinct tracts in the place limits. Judgment, 55 P. 1103, 20 Wash. 713, affirmed.—Moore v. Stone, 21 S. Ct. 322, 180 U. S. 180, 45 L. Ed. 483.

The secretary of the interior was not authorized, by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. 292), making a land grant in aid of the Southern Pacific Railroad, to withdraw from settlement lands within the indemnity limit of such grant in advance of any selections by the railroad company based on ascertained losses in the place limits, in view of the provisions of section 6 that the "odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or pre-emption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company as provided in this act," but that the provisions of the pre-emption and homestead laws "shall be and the same are hereby extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company."—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Bell, 22 S. Ct. 232, 183 U. S. 675, 46 L. Ed. 383, affirming judgment 58 P. 1116, 125 Cal. xix; Groock v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 22 S. Ct. 268, 183 U. S. 690, 46 L. Ed. 390.

Even-numbered sections of land within the place limits of the grant to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by the Acts of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489, c. 120), and July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 356, c. 218), were not open to selection by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad Company as indemnity lands in satisfaction of the grant by the act of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat. 289, c. 270), after the passage of the act of March 6, 1868 (15 Stat. 39, c. 20), doubling the price of the even-numbered sections of land within the place limits of the Union Pacific railroad grants, and providing that they should be subject only to entry under the pre-emption and homestead laws. Judgment, 62 P. 1116, 62 Kan. 866, affirmed.—Clark v. Herington, 22 S. Ct. 872, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. Ed. 1128.

The approval by the land department of the selection by a railroad company as indemnity lands of sections which, under an act of congress, were subject only to entry under the homestead and pre-emption laws, did not operate to vest the title in the company.—Id.

Indemnity selections cannot be made by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company from lands within the indemnity limits of the grant to it by Act March 3, 1871, c. 122 (16 Stat. 573) § 23, which are also within the forfeited place limits of the grant to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company by section 9 of the same act. Decree, 109 F. 913, 48 C. C. A. 712, affirmed.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 567, 189 U. S. 447, 47 L. Ed. 896.

The selection of lands within the indemnity limits of the grant made by Act July 25, 1866, c. 242 (14 Stat. 239), to the California & Oregon Railroad Company to supply deficiencies in the place limits, cannot defeat or destroy the rights of a settler under that act arising from a previous bona fide occupancy with the intention of perfecting title under the homestead laws as soon as the land should be surveyed.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 615, 620, 189 U. S. 103, 118, 47 L. Ed. 726, 732, affirming decree in part 109 F. 514, 48 C. C. A. 520, which is reversed in part 23 S. Ct. 673, 190 U. S. 186, 47 L. Ed. 1012.

The rights of one who has settled in good faith on an odd-numbered section within the indemnity limits of the grant by Act July 25, 1866, c. 242 (14 Stat. 239), to the California & Oregon Railroad Company prior to their selection by that company to supply deficiencies in the place limits, cannot be affected by the fact, subsequently appearing, that all the odd-numbered sections within such indemnity limits were needed to supply deficiencies in the place limits.—Id.

Delay upon the part of the Commissioner of the Land Office in making the survey called for with all "convenient speed" by Act May 4, 1870, c. 69 (16 Stat. 94), granting land in aid of railroad construction, cannot defeat the rights of a settler attaching under that act in virtue of his bona fide occupancy of lands within the indemnity limits of such grant in advance of their selection to supply a deficiency in the place limits, with the intention of perfecting his title under the homestead laws as soon as the lands should be surveyed.—Id.

No interest in any specific sections of land within the indemnity limits of the grant made by Act July 25, 1866, c. 242 (14 Stat. 239), to the California & Oregon Railroad Company, could be acquired by that company in advance of their actual and approved selection to supply deficiencies in the place limits.—Id.

Under the land grants to the Oregon & California Railroad Company of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. 239), and May 4, 1870 (16 Stat. 94), the title to all lands within the indemnity limits remained in the United States, and such lands subject to disposition and to settlement under the homestead and pre-emption laws, until the fact of a deficiency in the primary grant had been ascertained, the indemnity lands in lieu thereof selected, and such selections approved by the secretary of the interior.—Id.

The Secretary of the Interior was not authorized, upon the mere acceptance of the map of definite location, to withdraw from the operation of the settlement laws any lands within the indemnity limits of the grant made to the California & Oregon Railroad Company by Act July 25, 1866, c. 242 (14 Stat. 239), which provided for the selection of lands within such limits in lieu of any within the place limits which should be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, and empowered the Secretary of the Interior, upon the filing of the map of the survey, to withdraw from sale "public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified."—Id.

The protection afforded to bona fide settlers by Act March 3, 1837, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], against the preferential right of purchase given by that section to bona fide purchasers from the railway company of lands excepted from the operation of its congressional land grant, does not cover a subsequent settlement of land within the indemnity limits of such grant, made with knowledge that it had been withdrawn from entry, and had been selected to supply deficiencies claimed to exist within the place limits. Judgment, O'Connor v. Gertgens, 89 N. W. 866, 85 Minn. 481, affirmed.—Gertgens v. O'Connor, 24 S. Ct. 94, 191 U. S. 237, 48 L. Ed. 163.

The doctrine of relation precludes the United States from retaining, as against its grantees of lands within the indemnity limits of the grant made by Act June 3, 1856, c. 41 (11 Stat. 17), in aid of railway construction, a sum which it collected from trespassers thereon for the removal of iron and stone from the land during the period between the selection of such lands to supply in part a large deficiency in the place limits, and the approval of such selection by the Secretary of the Interior. Judgment, In re Alabama State Land Co., 38 Ct. Cl. 759, affirmed.—United States v. Anderson, 24 S. Ct. 716, 194 U. S. 394, 48 L. Ed. 1035.

A certification to the state of Minnesota, made by the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of a railway company, of land within the indemnity limits of Railway Land Grant Act July 4, 1866, c. 168 (14 Stat. 87), even if erroneous, is not absolutely void because of a previous application to enter the land as a homestead after a prior homestead entry had been canceled for abandonment, which application was refused because the land in question had then been withdrawn from market by the Land Department, where this refusal was acquiesced in and an entry was then made under an amended application, which did not cover the land in question, although the entryman thereunder made use of such land in connection with his own, but without laying claim to it as land which he had attempted to enter, and which had been improperly or wrongfully refused him. Judgment, 116 F. 969, 54 C. C. A. 545, affirmed.—United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 25 S. Ct. 113, 195 U. S. 524, 49 L. Ed. 306.

No interest in lands within the indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, made by Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365, was acquired by that company by virtue of a filing of its list of selections of such lands to supply deficiencies within the place limits, but such lands remain open as before to settlement or occupation under the pre-emption or homestead laws until the selections were formally approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Judgment, 95 N. W. 763, 90 Minn. 108, reversed.—Sjoli v. Dreschel, 26 S. Ct. 154, 199 U. S. 564, 50 L. Ed. 311.

The selection of land within the indemnity limits of the railroad land grant of July 4, 1866, to supply deficiencies in the place limits, confers no rights upon the railway company as against a person then actually occupying, in good faith, a portion of the lands so selected, and claiming it as a homestead, although his entry was subsequently rejected by the Land Department, either because the Secretary of the Interior had, though without authority, withdrawn the lands from settlement, or because of defects in his application. Judgment (1909) 119 N. W. 1135, 107 Minn. 568, affirmed.—Osborn v. Froyseth, 30 S. Ct. 420, 216 U. S. 571, 54 L. Ed. 619.

An attempt by a railway company to select lieu lands within the indemnity limits of the grant of July 4, 1866, which was unsuccessful because such selection was rejected by the Secretary of the Interior for the failure of the railway company to furnish a list of the lands lost within the place limits for which the lieu lands were selected, cannot carry back the title of those claiming under the railway company under a second selection, made when the land in question was in the actual bona fide occupancy of a person claiming it as a homestead.—Id.

Lands lawfully embraced in a list of indemnity selections filed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company with the Land Department, and subsequently approved by the Secretary of the Interior, were not subject to entry or purchase under the federal land laws during the interim between the date of filing and the date of such approval.—(1911) Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 31 S. Ct. 300, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. Ed. 258, reversing decree Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser (1908)

161 F. 324, 88 C. C. A. 404; (1911) Campbell v. Weyerhaeuser, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 424, 55 L. Ed. 279, affirming decree (1908) 161 F. 332, 88 C. C. A. 412; (1911) Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Wass, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 426, 55 L. Ed. 280, reversing judgment (1908) 117 N. W. 1126, 105 Minn. 525.

A valid basis is afforded for the selection by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company of lands within the second indemnity limits, under the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, No. 67 (16 Stat. 378), where certain lands did not pass under its land grant of July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365, 367, c. 217, because they fell within the indemnity limits of the grant of May 5, 1864 (Act May 5, 1864, c. 79, 13 Stat. 64), in aid of another railroad, as adjusted to the line of definite location of that road, and were selected by that road after the date of the Northern Pacific land grant, but prior to the definite location of that line of road.—Id.

A selection of indemnity lands by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, under Act July 2, 1864, c. 217, 13 Stat. 365, and the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, No. 67, 16 Stat. 378, is not unlawful because the tract selected was not on the same side of the railroad as the tract lost, and was not the nearest unappropriated land.—Id.

Lands within the indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company could not be claimed under the provisions of Act July 1, 1893, c. 546, 30 Stat. 620, enacted to settle the disputes arising out of conflicting rulings of the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting its land grant, by a person relying upon an alleged purchase under the timber and stone act, where, prior to January 1, 1893, nothing more had been done than to file application for the land.—Id.

Residence and occupancy by a homestead claimant between the rejection, because not accompanied by a designation of the loss in the place limits, of a selection within the indemnity limits of the railroad land grant July 4, 1866, and a second approved indemnity selection of the same tract, initiated a homestead right superior to the indemnity selection.—Svor v. Morris, 33 S. Ct. 385, 227 U. S. 524, 57 L. Ed. 623, reversing judgment Morris v. Svor, 136 N. W. 852, 118 Minn. 344.

Failure of a homestead settler to assert his claim at the local land office within three months from settlement, as required by Act May 14, 1890, § 3, and Rev. St. § 2265, is not a matter of which advantage can be taken by a railroad company, in connection with an indemnity railroad selection.—Id.

Lands lawfully embraced in indemnity selections of the Northern Pacific Railway Company filed with the Land Department and approved by the Secretary of the Interior are not subject to entry or purchase between the date of filing and the approval.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Houston, 34 S. Ct. 113, 231 U. S. 181, 58 L. Ed. 176, reversing judgment Houston v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 123 N. W. 922, 109 Minn. 273, 18 Ann. Cas. 325.

82. Survey, selection, and certification of lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 236, 253-256.

Where, by Act Cong. July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 365), granting lands in aid of the Northern Pac. R. Co., it is provided that "congress may, at any time, having due regard for the rights of" the company, "add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act," it is competent for congress to provide, by a statute (Act July 17, 1870); 16 Stat. 291) enacted before any of the road had been built or any of the land earned under the terms of the grant, that the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the land shall be paid into the treasury of the United States before any of the land granted shall be conveyed to the company.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Rockne, 115 U. S. 600, 6 S. Ct. 201, 29 L. Ed. 477.

In an act granting land to a railroad in 1871, nothing was said as to payment of the costs of survey, although incurred at the time. Held, that that fact did not bring the grantee within the clause of the act of July 31, 1876 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1475], saving from its operation such grantees as should be exempted by law from the payment of such costs.—New Orleans Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 124 U. S. 124, 8 S. Ct. 417, 31 L. Ed. 383.

By an act of March 3, 1871, certain surveyed lands were granted to a railway provided its line should be complete within five years, and, if the company should fail to complete the road within the time, congress might secure its speedy completion. Act of July 31, 1876 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1475], provides that before any land granted to any railway shall be conveyed, the costs of survey shall be paid by the party in interest. The line was not completed within the time stipulated. Held, that congress had a right to impose a new condition on its grant, and that the company was not entitled to recover the money paid by it for surveys under protest; and that the right of congress to impose such condition was not affected by the authority given it to complete the road.—Id.

Section 21, requiring that the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the lands shall be paid before the patents are issued, does not show an intention to retain title in the government until that time, but merely affords a means of compelling the payment of such costs.—Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 12 S. Ct. 158, 35 L. Ed. 990, affirming judgment Tarpey v. Deseret Salt Co., 5 Utah, 494, 17 P. 631.

Act July 15, 1870 (16 Stat. 305), requires the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, before it shall be entitled to a conveyance of the lands thereby granted, to pay into the treasury of the United States the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying such lands; and, where it does not appear that such costs have been paid, a grantee of the company has not such title to the land as a vendee in a contract for the sale thereof can be compelled to accept.—Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 345, 13 S. Ct. 617, 37 L. Ed. 475, affirming judgment 1 Wash. St. 549, 20 P. 583.

84. Conditions of grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 259-265.

85. — Construction and operation in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 263.

The act of congress of 1863 provided for two railroads, the first from the city of Leavenworth by way of Lawrence to the southern line of the state in the direction of Galveston Bay. The second was from the city of Atchison by way of Topeka to the western line of the state, with a branch from where this last-named road crosses the Neosho river, down the valley of that river, "to the point where the Leavenworth road enters the valley of the Neosho," and granted lands to that point. Held, that the junction of this branch road with the one from Leavenworth, "where the Leavenworth road enters the valley of the Neosho," was not required to be on the very crest of the Neosho valley, as reached by the latter road, but at a convenient point for such crossing in the narrow valley of the Neosho river; and as this point has been adopted by the companies building both roads, and accepted by the officers of the land department in selecting indemnity lands, certification of these lands to the state for the company which has built the road and received the patents of the state will not be vacated.—Kansas City, L. & S. K. R. Co. v. Brewster, 118 U. S. 682, 7 S. Ct. 66, 30 L.

Ed. 281, reversing decrea (O. C.) Brewster v. Kansas City, L. & S. K. R. Co., 25 F. 243.

Provisos in Railway Land Grant Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, § 4, as to terms of sale to actual settlers, are not conditions subsequent, a breach of which incurs a forfeiture, but valid and enforceable covenants.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 908, 238 U. S. 393, 59 L. Ed. 1360.

86. — Performance.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 260, 262-265.

Any forfeiture of a grant of land to a railroad, consequent upon a failure to comply with the conditions thereof, can only be enforced by the United States in a proper proceeding, and cannot avail a subsequent pre-emptor of a portion of the lands affected.—Van Wyck v. Knevals, 108 U. S. 360, 1 S. Ct. 836, 27 L. Ed. 201.

Defendant in ejectment claimed title by mesne conveyances under Act Cong. Feb. 9, 1853 (10 Stat. 156), granting lands to the states of Arkansas and Missouri in aid of a certain railroad, but it appeared that at the time his deed was executed a sufficient number of miles of road had not been built to authorize the sale of the land under the provisions of the act that if the road was not completed within 10 years the lands unsold should revert to the United States. The road was not completed in accordance with the provisions of that act, but by Act Cong. July 28, 1866 (14 Stat. p. 338, c. 300), the provisions of the original act are revived for the term of 10 years, and all the lands therein granted which by the terms thereof had reverted to the United States were restored to the same custody, control, and condition, and subject to the same uses and trusts, as they were at the time the reversion took place, except that all mineral lands within the limits of the grant are reserved to the United States. Held, that no forfeiture was declared by the latter act, and that defendant's title was not affected by a sale under a lien in favor of the state, made after the expiration of the time limited for the completion of the road.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. McGee, 115 U. S. 469, 6 S. Ct. 123, 29 L. Ed. 446; Doe v. Larmore, 116 U. S. 198, 6 S. Ct. 365, 29 L. Ed. 598.

Though Act Cong. July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. 239), making a grant of a portion of the public land and a right of way through it in aid of the railroad therein mentioned, provides in section 6 that in case of the failure to complete the road within the prescribed time the "act shall be null and void," mere failure to complete the road in the time limited does not forfeit the right to construct it, for the grant is on condition subsequent, and no forfeiture takes effect without some action by the grantor manifesting an intention to resume its title.—Bybee v. Oregon & C. R. Co., 139 U. S. 663, 11 S. Ct. 641, 35 L. Ed. 305, affirming judgment (C. C.) 26 F. 586.

The grant to the Union Pacific and other railway companies by Act Cong. July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), of every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers to the extent of five alternate sections per mile, etc., was not qualified or restricted by section 4 (as amended by Act July 2, 1864, § 6), which authorized the issuance of patents for the proper sections of land only upon the completion of each 20 miles of the road, which section only served to furnish to the companies conclusive evidence that all the conditions of the grant have been fulfilled, and to compel the application of the lands to the purposes prescribed.—Deseret Salt Co. v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 12 S. Ct. 158, 35 L. Ed. 999, affirming judgment Tarpey v. Deseret Salt Co., 5 Utah, 494, 17 P. 631.

By Act May 4, 1870, congress granted lands to aid in the construction of "a railroad and telegraph line from P. to A. and from a suitable point of junction near F. to the Y. river near M." F. lay nearly due west from P. in the general direction of the road from P. to A.; and M. lay nearly due south from F. and entirely out of the line from P. to A. The road was built from P. to F., and thence, nearly at a right angle, from F. to M. No other part of the road having been completed within the time limited by the granting act, congress, by Act Jan. 31, 1885, declared so much of the granted lands "as are adjacent to and coterminous with the uncompleted portions of said road, and not embraced within the limits of said grant for the completed portions," forfeited to the government. Held, that the granting act contemplated two roads, a main line from P. to A. and a branch from F. to M., and therefore the lands lying within the quadrant formed by imaginary lines drawn north and west from F. at right angles to the courses of the roads from P. to F. and M. to F., respectively, were forfeited by Act Jan. 31, 1885. Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 14 C. C. A. 600, 67 F. 650, reversed.—United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 105, 164 U. S. 526, 41 L. Ed. 541.

Act April 20, 1871, passed after breach by the company of certain conditions of Act 1866, authorized the company to mortgage its property, and provided that if it "shall hereafter suffer any breach of the conditions of" Act 1866, the rights of those claiming under any mortgage of the lands granted should be restricted to lands coterminous with or appertaining to portions of the road completed at the time of the foreclosure. Held, that this provision did not extend the time limited by Act 1866 for completing the road.—Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 17 S. Ct. 348, 165 U. S. 413, 41 L. Ed. 770.

A contention that Congress was without authority to annex a new condition, under Amending Act April 10, 1869, to Railway Land Grant Act July 25, 1866, as amended June 25, 1868, comes too late where, instead of a rejection of such act there was a repeated assent to Act July 25, 1866, and the amendments by the beneficiary railroad.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 908, 238 U. S. 393, 59 L. Ed. 1360.

The United States is not precluded from enforcing covenant in railway land grants under Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, § 4, as to sales to actual settlers, on theory of waiver or estoppel, where the government's position was that enforcement of such covenant was for the courts, and not for legislative and executive action.—Id.

The character of lands, as regarding their fitness for settlement, is no excuse for violation of railroad company of a covenant in land grants under Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, § 4, as to the conditions of sale to actual settlers.—Id.

Grant under Act Aug. 20, 1912, of authority to compromise with purchasers from railroad companies suits brought under Joint Resolution April 30, 1908, to assert rights of the United States, under Railroad Land Grant Acts of July 25, 1866, June 25, 1868, and May 4, 1870, is not a waiver of breaches by the railroads of covenants in sales to actual settlers, except where the suit involves lands excluded from the application of Act Aug. 20, 1912.—Id.

The so-called settlers' clause in Railway Land Grant Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, § 4, was not abrogated as to Oregon lands by any ratification in Sinking Fund Act May 7, 1878, of transfer of the California & Oregon Railroad and its land in California to the Central Pacific Railroad Company.—Id.

Any implied power of railway companies to mortgage lands embraced in their land grants did not carry right to sell on foreclosure, divested of obligations of Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, as to provisions of sales to actual settlers.—Id.

87. — Partial performance.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 261.

The act granting lands to a state, to aid in the construction of railroads, providing that the state should not dispose of the lands granted except in the manner prescribed, which was that patents should be issued for 100 sections on the completion of each 10 miles of road, as certified to by the governor of the state, the company was not entitled to any additional lands for the construction of an additional fractional part of 10 miles, unless the road was entirely completed.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

In determining the quantity of acres earned under a land grant by the partial construction of the stipulated railroad, the latest official measurement of the area of the granted limits, not shown to have been fraudulently made, may be accepted as the best evidence.—Id.

88. Forfeiture and revocation of grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 235, 266-269.

The Atlantic & Pacific Company having failed to build its road according to the conditions of the grant to it, congress by the act of July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. 123), declared its lands to be "forfeited and restored to the public domain." Held, that the Southern Pacific grant could not attach, on this forfeiture, to the land along the overlapping routes; for the forfeiture was in terms for the benefit of the government, and it was apparently not the intention of congress, in passing the acts of 1866 and 1871, that any lands granted to the Atlantic & Pacific Company should go to the Southern Pacific Company in case the former grant failed to take effect; for in section 3 of the act of 1866, which by section 18 of that act and the act of 1871 became a condition of the Southern Pacific grant, it was provided that, if the route was found to lie on the route of any other road whose construction was aided by a land grant from the government, "the amount of land heretofore granted shall be deducted from the amount granted by this act," and by section 9 it was declared that if any breach of the conditions was made by the Atlantic & Pacific Company, and allowed to continue for more than one year, "the United States may do any and all acts which may be needful and necessary to insure the speedy completion of the road," thus, in effect, declaring that it might use for that purpose all the lands granted.—United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 146 U. S. 570, 13 S. Ct. 152, 36 L. Ed. 1091.

Lands which lie within the grant limits of a railroad company, but which do not pass to it, because they fall within a prior grant to another company, do not accrue to it when the grant to the latter company is forfeited by act of congress for failure to build the road in the time specified, but they are thereby restored to the public domain.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 152 U. S. 284, 14 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 443, reversing decree (C. C.) 41 F. 842.

Under Act June 3, 1856, granting lands to Wisconsin in aid of railroads, and act of same date granting to Michigan lands in aid of certain roads, and subsequent acts passed in connection with such grants, a governor of Michigan, under Act Mich. Feb. 21, 1867, had no authority to execute a certificate of surrender and nonincumbrance of the land granted in aid of the railroad from Ontonagon to the state line, and the filing of such certificate in the general land office did not transfer the lands to the United States.—Lake Superior Ship Ca- nal, Railway & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 15 S. Ct. 103, 39 L. Ed. 183.

By Act March 2, 1889, declaring a forfeiture of certain railroad lands, but providing that it should not prejudice the rights of the Portage Lake Canal Company, the title of the canal company was confirmed as to lands selected with the approval of the secretary of the interior, in satisfaction of the canal grant, which were within the railroad grant to the Ontonagon Railroad Company under Act Mich. Feb. 14, 1857, and which were forfeited by the act of 1889, subject to bona fide pre-emption or homestead claims existing May 1, 1888, and asserted by actual occupancy.—Id.

Where the governor of Michigan released a certain railroad grant by authority of the legislature to the United States, and without authority released a grant to another road crossing the first-mentioned road, the lands of the second road, within the "place" limits of the roads, are held by the state and the United States in undivided moiety.—Donahue v. Lake Superior Ship Canal, Railway & Iron Co., 155 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 115, 39 L. Ed. 194.

Act Cong. May 12, 1864, granted to the state of Iowa, to aid in the construction of two railroads in that state, alternate sections of land within 10 miles of the railroads, and provided that, if the roads were not completed in 10 years after acceptance of the grant, the lands granted and not patented were to revert to the state "for the purpose of securing the completion of the said roads," and that "should the state fail to complete said roads within five years after the ten years aforesaid, then the said lands undisposed of as aforesaid shall revert to the United States." The state accepted the grant, and conferred upon an Iowa company all rights thereunder in regard to the construction of one of the roads. Held, that the company having completed only a part of this road within the time limited, and having received the quantity of lands to which such partial construction entitled it, and the state, which held in trust the title to the lands not earned by the company, not having disposed of them for the purpose of completing the road, and not intending so to do, such lands were to be regarded as "undisposed of" within the meaning of the act, and as equitably the property of the United States.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

By Act Cong. May 12, 1864, lands were granted to the state of Iowa to aid in building two railroads, one from Sioux City to the Minnesota state line, and another to intersect therewith, to the total amount of the alternate odd-numbered sections within the limit of 10 miles on each side of the railroad. In a proceeding between the two railroad companies it was decided that where the grants conflicted at the point of intersection of the roads each road took half the designated land. Held that, upon the failure of one of the companies to earn its moiety of the land at such point, it reverted to the United States, and that the other road had no title thereto.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 372, 16 S. Ct. 26, 40 L. Ed. 185, affirming judgment (C. C.) United States v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 46 F. 502.

The legislature of Iowa cannot, as against the United States, on the failure of one of two railroad companies to earn its share of the lands granted to two companies by the United States to aid in the construction of their roads, confer the forfeited share of one of the companies on the other.—Id.

Lands granted to the state of Iowa by Act Cong. May 12, 1864, to aid in building a railroad, and reconveyed to the United States by the governor as not having been earned, were properly restored to entry under the United States laws.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Countryman, 159 U. S. 377, 16 S. Ct. 28, 40 L. Ed. 187.

Where an act of legislature simply takes away from one railroad company lands previously granted to it, because of its entire failure to comply with the conditions of the grant, and bestows them on another company, the courts cannot hold, in the absence of any provision in the statute to that effect, that the lands were transferred burdened with a continuing obligation for the debts of the former company, for the creditors of that company could have no legal or equitable claims on lands thus forfeited.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. Ry. Co., 163 U. S. 31, 16 S. Ct. 917, 41 L. Ed. 60.

Act Cong. July 27, 1866, granted lands to aid in construction of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad on condition (section 8) that the work should be begun within two years, and completed by July 4, 1878. Section 9 imposed the "further condition" that upon any breach by the company of the conditions of the grant, continued for one year, the United States might do anything needful to secure the speedy completion of the road. Section 20 reserved to congress power to alter, amend, or repeal the act. Held, that section 9 did not deprive congress of power to pass Act July 6, 1886, declaring unearned lands forfeited for failure of the company to complete the road within the time limited.—Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 17 S. Ct. 348, 165 U. S. 413, 41 L. Ed. 770.

It is no defense to a forfeiture of a railroad grant for failure of the company to complete the road within the time limited that the government has failed to keep its agreement to have the granted lands surveyed "as fast as may be required for the construction of the road," where such failure has not prevented the company from mortgaging the lands for their full value.—Id.

Congress may declare a forfeiture of a grant of public lands without a judicial inquiry to determine whether there has been a breach of the conditions by the grantee or the grantor; leaving the question of such breach to be determined by subsequent judicial proceedings.—Id.

Act 1866, § 2, providing that the United States should extinguish "as rapidly as may be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the Indians, and only by their voluntary cession," the Indian title to all lands granted by the act was not an absolute undertaking by the government to extinguish such title; and the company could not claim a breach by the government of its undertaking, nor set up the failure to extinguish such title as an excuse for the company's failure to complete the road, without showing that the Indians were willing to cede the lands, and that their interest and public policy required such cession.—Id.

Nor was it an excuse for failure of the company to complete the road within the stipulated time that the government, after passage of the act, made other reservations to the Indians of lands within the limits of the grant.—Id.

Lands opposite completed road are not forfeited or resumed by the act of congress of 1890 (28 Stat. 496), forfeiting lands theretofore granted to aid "in the construction of a railroad, opposite to and coterminous with the portion of any such railroad not now completed and in operation." Decree 81 F. 544, 28 C. C. A. 499, reversed.—United States v. Tennessee & C. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 370, 176 U. S. 242, 44 L. Ed. 452.

Some affirmative action, legislative or judicial, is necessary for the forfeiture of the grant of lands by the act of congress of 1856 to the state of Alabama for aid to railroads, which provides that "if any of said roads are not completed within 10 years, * * * the lands unsold shall revert to the United States."—Id.

A prayer in a bill for a forfeiture of an entire land grant does not preclude a forfeiture of a part of it.—Id.

Land granted to a railroad company does not, ipso facto, revert to the United States by mere failure to complete the road within the period prescribed by congress in the grant; but, to effect a forfeiture, some act is essential on the part of the government evincing an intention to take advantage of such failure. Decree, 95 F. 864, 37 C. C. A. 290, affirmed.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 706, 177 U. S. 435, 44 L. Ed. 836.

Land within the indemnity limits of the grant made by Act Cong. July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. 292, c. 278), to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad did not, by reason of the forfeiture of such grant by Act July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. 123, c. 637), pass to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, although such land was within the place limits of the grant to the Texas & Pacific Railroad made by Act March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 573, c. 122), the rights under which subsequently became vested in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, which built the road and selected the land under that act, since the forfeiture of the earlier grant did not inure to the benefit of the later grantee, but to the benefit of the United States. Decree, 62 P. 269, 129 Cal. 673, affirmed.—San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co., 23 S. Ct. 487, 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. Ed. 765.

A breach of the conditions upon which a railway right of way was granted in present by Act June 4, 1898, c. 377, 30 Stat. 430, viz., that the railway company shall commence grading within six months after the approval of its map of definite location or its location shall be void, and that the right therein granted shall be forfeited unless the company shall construct 25 miles of road within two years after the passage of the act, does not of itself work a forfeiture, but, such conditions being conditions subsequent, there can be no forfeiture without some appropriate judicial or legislative action.—(1911) Spokane & B. C. Ry. Co. v. Washington & G. N. Ry. Co., 31 S. Ct. 182, 219 U. S. 166, 55 L. Ed. 159, affirming decree (1908) 95 P. 64, 49 Wash. 280.

None of the lands lying within either the granted or the indemnity limits of the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by the Act of July 27, 1866, were subject to selection as indemnity lands by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, under the Act of March 3, 1871, § 23, although lying within the indemnity limits of such grant, and although the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company had forfeited its grant by the Act of July 6, 1886, before the Southern Pacific Railroad Company made its selection.—(1912) Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 32 S. Ct. 325, 223 U. S. 560, 56 L. Ed. 551, affirming decree (1909) 167 F. 514, 93 C. C. A. 150.

Lands within primary limits of grant to Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company under Act July 27, 1866, and within indemnity limits of grant to Southern Pacific Railroad Company, might, after forfeiture by the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company of its grant by Act July 6, 1886, be selected as indemnity lands by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.—(1912) United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 326, 223 U. S. 565, 56 L. Ed. 553, modifying decree (1909) 167 F. 510, 93 C. C. A. 146.

Determination, in suit by United States against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to quiet title against claims under the branch line grant made by Act March 3, 1871, that it took no title of lands within grant to Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by Act July 27, 1866, held not a bar to a claim by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of the same land as indemnity lands, after forfeiture by Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company.—Id.

—89. Purchasers from company.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 270-272.

One purchasing for value and in good faith, from a railroad company, lands which, while actually public lands and free from any individual or other claims, were certified by the government to the state for the benefit of the company, is a "bona fide purchaser," within Act 1896 (29 Stat. 42), confirming the title of such purchasers, though such lands were, by the true construction of the grant, excepted therefrom.—United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 368, 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. Ed. 789, affirming decree 67 F. 948, 15 C. C. A. 96.

One purchasing from a railroad company land which, when certified to the state for the benefit of the company, and at the time of the purchase, was occupied under a recorded pre-emption claim, is not a bona fide purchaser, within the protection of Acts 1887 and 1896, relative to cancellation of patents and certifications erroneously made.—Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 381, 165 U. S. 483, 41 L. Ed. 798, affirming decree United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 67 F. 969, 15 C. C. A. 117.

The act of March 3, 1887, providing for the adjustment of land grants in aid of railroads, the forfeiture of unearned lands, etc., and the concurrent resolution of June 10, 1896, by which the right and title of bona fide purchasers of lands contained within the limits of railroad grants are confirmed as against the United States, cannot operate to free the title of a purchaser from the railroad company of reservations contained in its deed to him. A patent thereafter made would not affect the reservation contained in such deed. Decree Adams v. Reed, 40 F. 720, 11 Utah, 480, affirmed.—Adams v. Henderson, 18 S. Ct. 179, 168 U. S. 573, 42 L. Ed. 584.

Persons who have contracted with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for unpatented lands so situated with respect to its constructed road as to be apparently within the scope of its grant are protected by the act of March 3, 1887, c. 376, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], not only as to purchases prior to the date of such act, but as to any made before the time of final adjustment. Decree, 98 F. 45, 38 C. C. A. 637, modified.—United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 22 S. Ct. 285, 184 U. S. 49, 46 L. Ed. 425.

Purchasers for value and in good faith, of lands patented to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company as within the scope of the grant made to that company by Act March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 573, c. 122), are bona fide purchasers, and as such are protected by Act March 2, 1896, c. 39, 29 Stat. 42 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1603], although they had notice of a change of opinion on the part of the officers of the government as to the validity of the title of the railroad company to such lands.—Id.

One is not a bona fide purchaser, from a grantee of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, of lands apparently within the scope of its grant, which had not been conveyed to or for the use of such company, so as to be protected by Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 557 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1597], who pays nothing therefor except by giving his legal services and making advances of money in the way of taxes, under his agreement with such grantee to protect it in its purchase money and receive for himself whatever he could obtain over and above that sum.—Id.

A recovery of damages for a breach of a covenant of warranty in a conveyance by the grantee of a railroad company of lands selected by it as indemnity lands, which were open only to pre-emption and homestead entry, cannot be defeated by a contention that the land department, which had canceled such selection and patented the land to another party, was without power to make such cancellation because no notice had been given to the railroad company's transferees. Judgment, 62 F. 1116, 62 Kan. 866, affirmed.—Clark v. Herington, 22 S. Ct. 872, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. Ed. 1128.

No protection is given to innocent purchasers for value of lands unlawfully selected by a railroad company as indemnity lands, by the act of March 2, 1896, c. 39, 29 Stat. 42 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1603], where the railroad company has never received any patent or certificate therefor.—Id.

Innocent purchasers for value of lands unlawfully selected by a railroad company as indemnity lands are not protected by the act of March 3, 1887, c. 376, 24 Stat. 557 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1596], unless they are citizens of the United States, or have declared their intention of becoming such citizens.—Id.

One who enters on public land and constructs a pipe line thereon, under a claim of ownership of a water right, is entitled to the protection afforded vested ditch and water rights by Act Cong. July 26, 1866, c. 262, § 9, 14 Stat. 251 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437], as against subsequent purchasers of the land from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, whose only claim to such land rests upon the right of purchase from the United States, given by Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], to bona fide purchasers from railway companies of forfeited lands. Decree, 62 F. 269, 129 Cal. 673, affirmed.—San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co., 23 S. Ct. 487, 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. Ed. 765.

The preferential right of purchase from the government given by Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], to "bona fide purchasers" from a railway company of lands excepted from the operation of its congressional land grant, inures to the benefit of a person seeking to bring settlers on such lands, who was given, by written agreement with the railway company, the right to purchase for himself and others lands within the indemnity limits of its grant when title thereto should be acquired by the company. Judgment, O'Connor v. Gertgens, 89 N. W. 866, 85 Minn. 481, affirmed.—Gertgens v. O'Connor, 24 S. Ct. 94, 191 U. S. 237, 48 L. Ed. 163.

The protection afforded by Adjustment Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 4, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], to bona fide purchasers from any grantee railway company to whom lands had been erroneously certified or patented, does not extend to one who purchased, after the date of that act, certain unearned lands included in the grant made by Act May 12, 1864, c. 84, §§ 1, 2, 3 (13 Stat. 72), to the state of Iowa, in aid of railway construction, the title to which the state, before the passage of the adjustment act, had first resumed by legislative enactment, upon the railway company's default, and then relinquished to the United States.—Knepper v. Sands, 24 S. Ct. 744, 194 U. S. 476, 48 L. Ed. 1083.

A purchaser of land certified by the Secretary of the Interior to the state of Minnesota in aid of railway construction, and conveyed by that state to a railway company, occupies the position of a purchaser in good faith, protected as such by Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 4, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], although the certification was erroneous, and might have been avoided and the land recovered back by the government while in the hands of the railway company, where such purchaser had no notice, actual or constructive, of the claim of the government. Judgment, 116 F. 969, 54 C. C. A. 545, affirmed.—United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 25 S. Ct. 113, 195 U. S. 524, 49 L. Ed. 306.

Sales or contracts made by the Northern Pacific Railway Company after its acceptance of Act July 1, 1898, c. 546 (30 Stat. 597, 620), cannot defeat the operation of the provisions of that act, enacted to settle disputes arising out of conflicting rulings in the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting the Northern Pacific land grant, by permitting any purchaser or settler claiming, in good faith, under any law of the United States or ruling of the Land Department, any land so situated that a right thereto in the railroad grantee or its successor in interest attached by reason of definite location or selection, to elect whether to retain or transfer his claim, and requiring the Secretary of the Interior to furnish the company with a list of the lands so retained, and allowing the company to select other lands in lieu thereof upon executing a proper relinquishment although the statute contains a provision that the railroad grantee or its successor in interest shall not be bound to relinquish lands sold or contracted by it.—Humbird v. Avery, 25 S. Ct. 123, 195 U. S. 480, 49 L. Ed. 286.

Delay cannot successfully be urged to prevent bona fide purchasers from a railway company of land excepted from its grant from exercising the right to purchase the same from the government, conferred by Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 557 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], where the application to purchase was made within 10 months after the land had been stricken from the company's list, pursuant to a decision of the Land Department, and prior to such decision both the railway company and the Land Department had assumed that the land was already the property of the railway company's grantee by virtue of its purchase from that company. Decree, Ramsey v. Tacoma Land Co., 71 P. 1024, 31 Wash. 351, reversed.—Ramsey v. Tacoma Land Co., 25 S. Ct. 286, 196 U. S. 360, 49 L. Ed. 513.

A state corporation is a citizen of the United States, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 557 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], conferring upon such citizens who are bona fide purchasers from a railway company of land excepted from its grant the right to purchase the same from the government.—Id.

The failure of the Northern Pacific Railway Company to acquire title to lands lawfully selected by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company as within the second indemnity limits of its land grant will not avail persons claiming such lands by virtue of an alleged purchase under the timber and stone act, who are seeking to charge as trustees the grantees of the railway company.—(1911) Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 31 S. Ct. 300, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. Ed. 258, reversing decree Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser (1908) 161 F. 324, 88 C. C. A. 404; (1911) Campbell v. Weyerhaeuser, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 424, 55 L. Ed. 279, affirming decree (1908) 161 F. 332, 88 C. C. A. 412; (1911) Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Wass, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 426, 55 L. Ed. 280, reversing judgment (1908) 117 N. W. 1126, 105 Minn. 525.

Land grant under Act May 12, 1864, to the state of Iowa in aid of railroads, not having been adjusted by the Land Department, was within Adjustment Act March 3, 1887, § 1, authorizing Secretary of the Interior to adjust the same, notwithstanding the declaration of Laws Iowa 1882, c. 107, that the state resumed all lands not earned by the railway company, and Laws Iowa 1884, c. 71, that all lands resumed are relinquished to the United States.—Logan v. Davis, 34 S. Ct. 685, 233 U. S. 613,

Subsequent as well as prior purchasers in good faith are within the protection of Adjustment Act March 3, 1887, § 4, given bona fide purchasers from railway company to which land had been erroneously certified or patented.—Id.

Constructive notice of defect in railway company's title does not deprive bona fide purchaser, in ignorance thereof and relying on apparent transfer of title by certification, of the protection afforded by Adjustment Act March 3, 1887, § 4.—Id.

No trust in favor of actual settlers or those who should become such was created by railway land grants under Act April 10, 1869, and Act May 4, 1870, § 4, regulating sales of lands to actual settlers.—Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 908, 238 U. S. 393, 59 L. Ed. 1360.

◀90. Mortgages by company.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 273.

The act incorporating a railroad company, and a mortgage given by it, restricted the lien of the mortgage to real and personal estate "appurtenant to or necessary for the operation of said main line of railroad." Subsequently land was granted to aid in the construction of the road, but the line was not definitely fixed until 10 years thereafter, when the mortgagor transferred all its rights, etc., to another road, which located the line, and received patents for the land. It did not appear that the mortgagor company ever did anything to earn or acquire any title to any part of the land grant, or that the mortgage was executed with any reference to such grant. Held, that the land grant did not pass under the mortgage as an "appurtenant."—New Orleans Pac. Ry. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 12 S. Ct. 364, 36 L. Ed. 66, affirming decree (C. C.) Parker v. New Orleans, B. R. & V. R. Co., 33 F. 693.

The trustees of a mortgage on lands claimed under a grant made by congress to aid in the construction of a railroad, and also the holders of bonds secured thereby, are affected with notice of the conditions under which the secretary of the interior was authorized to issue patents in pursuance of the grant.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

By Act July 23, 1866, c. 212, the United States granted to the state of Kansas, for the use of the St. Joseph & Denver Railroad Company, the 10 alternate sections designated by odd numbers on each side of the proposed road, provided that if, when the route was definitely fixed, it appeared that any of these lands had been sold or pre-empted, others should be substituted therefor; that, upon the certificate by the governor of Kansas of the completion of any section of 10 consecutive miles of said road, patents for the sections opposite thereto shall be issued to the railroad company; that, upon the filing with the secretary of the interior of maps designating the proposed route, the lands granted shall be immediately withdrawn from the market. Held, that this grant was in present, and took effect when the route was "definitely fixed" by the filing of the required map of the line, and had the effect to cut off a pre-emption claim entered subsequently thereto.—Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 1 S. Ct. 336, 27 L. Ed. 201.

Where a railroad company which has been granted land within a certain distance of its road has adopted a route designated on a map filed with the secretary of the interior, and accepted by that officer, a deviation from the routes so adopted will not avail a pre-emptor, where it appears that the land claimed by him is within the required limit, whether measured from the line of the road as adopted or from that constructed.—Id.

Act Cong. July 1, 1862 (12 St. at Large, 489), granted to plaintiff railroad company for each mile of road constructed by it five sections of public land designated by odd numbers on each side of the line of the road, not sold or otherwise appropriated at the time plaintiff's line was fixed. Act July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. 356), doubled the grant, and extended the limits to 25 miles. On February 6, 1866, the odd-numbered sections within 20 miles of the road were withdrawn from sale, and reserved to plaintiff's use. Act March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. 772), granted to the state of Kansas in aid of the construction of railroads the odd-numbered sections of public lands for 10 sections in width on each side of the proposed road. The act further provided that, in case it should appear when the line of the railroad was fixed that any section granted had been sold or otherwise disposed of, the secretary of the interior might select an equal amount of land nearest the tiers of sections specified. Defendant began the construction of its railroad under the act of 1863, but its line was not fixed until 1866, when it appeared that a large part of the land lying within 10 miles of its line had been disposed of. To supply the deficiency, the secretary of the interior selected land lying within 20 miles of plaintiff's road. Held, that Act March 3, 1863, gave defendant only a right of selection as to land outside the 10-mile limit, which right could not have been exercised until the location of its road in 1866, while Act July 1, 1862, as amended by Act July 2, 1864, vested in plaintiff title to the lands thereby granted, and defendant could not hold such indemnity lands as against plaintiff.—Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414, 5 S. Ct. 208, 28 L. Ed. 794, reversing (C. C.) 13 F. 106, 2 McCrary, 550.

Where the indemnity limits of one company conflict with the indemnity limits of the other, the company which makes the first selection is entitled to priority, without regard to priority of location of the road.—St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 112 U. S. 720, 5 S. Ct. 334, 28 L. Ed. 872.

Act Cong. March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. 195), granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of certain railroads every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers, for 6 miles in width on each side of said roads, and provided that, if any of the sections thus granted should have been disposed of when the roads were located, they should have the right to select from other public lands within 15 miles of the roads enough land to supply the deficiency. Held, that on the location of the roads the title to the land within the 6-mile limit related back to the date of the act of congress, so that priority of location did not give priority of title as to such land; but where the indemnity limits of one road conflicted with the primary 6-mile limit of the other, the title of the latter to the land within such primary limit would prevail as against the company seeking the right of selection therein, though the latter was first located.—Id.

Act Cong. July 1, 1862, § 7, granting to the Union Pacific Railroad Company the alternate sections of land within certain limits on each side of the road, provided that within two years after the passage of the act "said company shall designate the general route of said road, as near as may be, and shall file a map of the same in the department of the interior, whereupon the secretary of the interior shall cause the lands within 15 miles of said designated route to be withdrawn from pre-emption, private entry, and sale." The amendatory act of July 1, 1864, § 5, extended the time for designating the general route of the road, and for filing the map of the same, for one year. Act July 3, 1866, provided that said company might designate the general route of its road, and file a map thereof at any time before the 1st day of December, 1866, and that, upon the filing of said map, the lands along the entire line of the road, so far as the same might be designated, should be reserved from sale by order of the secretary of the interior. Held, that the filing of a map of the general route of its road by said company under the latter statute did not invalidate a subsequent homestead entry of land within the limits of the grant to the company.—Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 620, 5 S. Ct. 566, 28 L. Ed. 1122.

The act of Congress of 1857, granting land to Minnesota to aid in the construction of certain railroads, was a grant by description, being of every alternate section designated by odd numbers for six sections on each side of the road; and the indemnity clause provided for loss by reason of sales or the attachment of pre-emption rights before the road became definitely fixed. The indemnity lands were to be selected within 15 miles from the line of the road. Act of 1865 enlarged the quantity granted from 6 sections to 10, and the indemnity limits from 15 miles to 20, provided that any lands which may have been granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of any railroad, which lands may be located within the limits of this extension of such grant or grants, shall be deducted "from the full quantity of lands thereby granted." Held, that the only lands granted by the act of 1865 were the four sections for each additional mile to the original six, accompanied with the right to select indemnity lands within 20 miles of the road, and the words "the full quantity granted" only denoted the extension; and, where the grant previously made to Minnesota to aid in the construction of the Minnesota & Cedar Valley Railroad Company interfered with the extension of the grant, the extension must be abandoned.—Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 5 S. Ct. 606, 28 L. Ed. 1109; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 117 U. S. 228, 6 S. Ct. 654, 29 L. Ed. 858, reversing Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. (C. C.) 24 F. 889.

A party entering lands included in the grant made by Act Cong. July 23, 1866, for the benefit of a railroad company, subsequently to the performance by the company of the conditions required in that act, is affected with notice, and can take no title.—Walden v. Knevals, 114 U. S. 373, 5 S. Ct. 898, 29 L. Ed. 167.

Where, upon certain lands granted to the state of Iowa by Act Cong. May 12, 1864 (13 Stat. 72), to aid in the building of two railroads, the Sioux City Railroad and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad cross each other, the prior construction of the former road does not entitle it to the land, nor does the prior location of the latter road entitle it to such land, each to the exclusion of the other. The title acquired relates back to the date of the grant, and neither company can obtain any superiority over the other, but they take the lands in equal undivided moieties. But as regards the indemnity lands in the grant, to be taken outside of the 10-mile limit, the priority of selection gives priority of title.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 117 U. S. 406, 6 S. Ct. 790, 29 L. Ed. 923, reversing judgment (C. C.) 10 F. 435, 3 McCrary, 280.

The act of 1871 granted the St. Paul & Pacific Company certain lands on condition it released lands previously granted on another route. The release was executed in December, 1871. The Northern Pacific Company filed the map of the definite location of its route in November, 1871. Held, that the grant in the act of 1871 only took effect upon the execution of the release, and that the Northern Pacific Company had the prior right as to the conflicting grants.—St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 139 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 389, 35 L. Ed. 77, affirming decree (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 26 F. 551.

By Act Cong. March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. c. 99, p. 195), lands were granted to the Minnesota & Pacific Railroad Company, which subsequently became the St. Paul & Pacific, in aid of its construction on a route designated, and some of the lands thus granted were the same as those granted to the Northern Pacific Company by Act July 2, 1864. This route was subsequently changed by joint resolution Cong. July 12, 1862 (12 Stat. pp. 624, 625). By Act Cong. March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. c. 105, p. 526), this joint resolution was repealed, and the lands granted by the act of 1857 were again granted to the St. Paul & Pacific Company. By act Cong. March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. c. 144, p. 588), the route of the St. Paul & Pacific was again changed, and other lands granted it in consideration of its relinquishing those previously granted on certain portions of its route. Held that, in so far as the lands granted to the St. Paul & Pacific Company by the acts of 1865 and 1871 were identical with those granted by the act of 1864 to the Northern Pacific Company, the grant was inoperative.—Id.

The title of a railroad company, beneficiary, to lands granted by act of May 15, 1856, to the state of Iowa to aid in the construction of certain railroads, does not attach until the map of definite location is filed in the general land office, and, where a pre-emption right attaches to land before the filing of such map, although after the line of the road is surveyed and staked out over it, it will not pass under the grant to the railroad.—Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffee, 143 U. S. 32, 12 S. Ct. 362, 36 L. Ed. 64, affirming judgment 72 Iowa, 505, 34 N. W. 304.

By Act July 27, 1866, § 3 (14 Stat. 292), organizing the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, congress, in the usual terms, granted lands to it to aid in the construction of a transcontinental railroad. In section 18 it authorized the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a California corporation, to connect with such road near the California boundary, for a road to San Francisco, and, to aid in the construction thereof, declared that that company should have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations of the grant to the former company. By the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 573), the Texas Pacific Railroad was incorporated, grants of land were made to it, and in section 23 authority was also given to the Southern Pacific Company to build a connecting road from a certain point on the Colorado river to San Francisco, "with the same rights, grants, and privileges, and subject to the same limitations, restrictions, and conditions," as were granted to it by the act incorporating the Atlantic & Pacific Company, provided that no rights of the latter company should be impaired. Held, that the fact that the latter act (March 3, 1871), in terms, bestowed upon the Southern Pacific Company the same rights, grants, and privileges as it received under the act of 1866, did not operate to make the grant relate back to that date, so as to present the case of simultaneous grants of the same lands to different companies.—United States v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 146 U. S. 570, 13 S. Ct. 152, 36 L. Ed. 1091.

The grant of May 4, 1870, to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, took the lands within its common grant limits out of the body of public lands, so that they could not pass to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, although the latter filed its map of general route before the former filed its map of definite location.—United States v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 152 U. S. 284, 14 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 443, reversing decree (C. C.) 41 F. 842.

Act Cong. June 3, 1856 (11 Stat. 20), granted to the state of Wisconsin, for railroad aid purposes, alternate sections for six miles on each side of the proposed road, or in lieu thereof, if previously sold, land to be selected within 15 miles of such road. October 28, 1856, the commissioner of the land office reserved from sale all land within such 15-mile limit. Act Cong. May 5, 1864 (13 Stat. 66), made a similar grant, for similar purposes, of alternate sections for 10 miles on each side of the proposed road, but excepted from the grant all lands previously "reserved to the United States * * * in any manner, or for any purpose." Held, that the land reserved by the commissioner's order passed by the second grant, though the two grants overlapped.—Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 15 S. Ct. 1020, 40 L. Ed. 71, reversing judgment (C. C.) 43 F. 867.

When lands are granted by one act to aid in the construction of two intersecting railroads, and the act does not provide for a selection of lands for either road on account of the undivided moiety of the lands, within the common place limits, to which the other is entitled, such right of selection will not be implied.—Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 16 S. Ct. 17, 40 L. Ed. 177.

Each of two separate railroad companies, to whom by the same act or by acts of the same date grants of land are made, in so far as the limits of their grants conflict by crossing or lapping, takes an equal undivided moiety of the lands within the conflict, and neither acquires all by priority of location or priority of construction. Decree, 98 F. 27, 38 C. C. A. 619, reversed.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 154, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. Ed. 307.

The construction by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of a railroad from San Francisco to the eastern boundary line of California, along the route approved by the joint resolution of January 28, 1870, as authorized by the act of July 27, 1866, making a land grant in aid of its projected line to connect with the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad at such point near the boundary line of California as was deemed most suitable for a railroad to San Francisco, entitles it to an equal undivided moiety in all the alternate sections within the place or granted limits of such road so far as they conflict with the limits of the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad by that act.—Id.

◀92. Grant of right of way.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 276-282.

Under Act March 3, 1875 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], granting railroads right of way across public lands, the title of the railroad becomes vested on the identification of the lands by the location of the road and the approval thereof by the secretary of the interior; and an attempt by the latter's successor in office to annul such approval is an attempt to deprive the company of its property without due process of law, which may be restrained by injunction.—Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co., 147 U. S. 166, 13 S. Ct. 271, 37 L. Ed. 123, affirming decree Union River Logging R. Co. v. Noble, 20 D. C. 555.

The specific grant of a right of way in fee through any reserved lands, which is contained in the proviso to the act of July 26, 1866, granting lands to aid in the construction of the Union Pacific Railway Company, Southern Branch, vested in that company the full title and right of possession to a right of way subsequently located through the Osage Indian reservation, with the approval of the president.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Roberts, 152 U. S. 114, 14 S. Ct. 496, 38 L. Ed. 377, reversing judgment Roberts v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 43 Kan. 102, 22 P. 1006.

The United States has full control of the fee in lands reserved by treaty for the occupation of Indians; and while a grant, without reference to possession, and without designation of any use, requiring the delivery of possession, is subject to the Indian right of occupancy until the same is extinguished by the government, yet a grant for a purpose necessarily involving possession, as a railroad right of way, operates of itself to extinguish the Indian right, and carries both title and right of possession.—Id.

An act of congress granting to a railroad a right of way, and authority to construct and operate a road thereon, through an Indian reservation created by congress within the limits of a territory previously organized, in the absence of any treaty with the Indians preventing such grant, withdraws the land from the act of reservation, to the extent of the grant, and for the purposes thereof, and re-establishes, over the property and rights withdrawn, the authority of the territory, including the power to tax.—Maricopa & P. R. Co. v. Territory of Arizona, 156 U. S. 347, 15 S. Ct. 391, 39 L. Ed. 447.

The claim of one who has settled on and improved public lands with the declared intention of obtaining title under the pre-emption laws is a "possessory claim," within the meaning of Act March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States, and providing that the legislature of the proper territory might provide the method of condemning possessory claims on the public lands.—Washington & I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 160 U. S. 103, 16 S. Ct. 219, 40 L. Ed. 346.

A company which surveys a line over public lands beyond the termini fixed by its charter, and afterwards files supplemental articles of incorporation authorizing an extension covering the survey, acquires no right of way beyond such termini, under Act March 3, 1875 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], as against another company which, having full powers, makes a survey over the same land after the other company's survey, but before the filing of its supplemental articles.—Washington & I. R. Co. v. Cœur D'Alene R. & Nav. Co., 160 U. S. 77, 16 S. Ct. 231, 40 L. Ed. 355, affirming decree 60 F. 981, 9 C. C. A. 303, 15 U. S. App. 359.

The first platting being the result of a mistake not discovered till the completion of the railroad on the route finally adopted, and not being intended to deceive any one, another company, claiming the same right of way, cannot, if not misled or prejudiced by such mistake, complain of the change of route.—Id.

Under Act March 3, 1875 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], granting to railroads a right of way through public lands, a railroad company which, in pursuance of the act, has adopted one line of survey along the route provided for in its articles of incorporation, and has filed a plat thereof, may subsequently, and within the time allowed by law, adopt another route, and, instead of filing a second plat, may construct the road on the line surveyed and adopted, so long as the rights of others have not intervened.—Id.

A grant by congress of a strip 400 feet wide for a railroad right of way is a conclusive determination that a strip of that width is necessary, and it is immaterial, as between the company and one claiming adverse title to a part of the strip, that only 25 feet in width is in actual use for railway purposes.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Smith, 18 S. Ct. 794, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. Ed. 157, reversing judgment 69 F. 579, 16 C. C. A. 336.

The grant to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by Act July 3, 1866, c. 159, 14 Stat. 79, of a right of way through the "public lands," did not give that company the right to run its road through lands which, at the time of the passage of that act, were in the actual occupation of an entryman under the homestead laws. Judgment (1907) 91 P. 68, 76 Kan. 255, affirmed.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Harris, 30 S. Ct. 138, 215 U. S. 386, 54 L. Ed. 246.

Congress did not infringe any rights of the Indians to whom the lands in Delaware Diminished Indian Reservation were assigned in severalty under the Treaty of May 30, 1860, by grant to a specified railway of a right of way through the public lands made by Act July 1, 1862.—(1912) Kindred v. Union Pac. R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 780, 225 U. S. 582, 58 L. Ed. 1216, affirming decree (1909) 168 F. 648, 94 C. C. A. 112.

Lands in Delaware Diminished Indian Reservation assigned in severalty under Treaty of May 30, 1860, are included in the term "public lands" as used in Act July 1, 1862, granting a railroad a right of way through the public lands.—Id.

Grant of way through public lands from the Missouri river to the Union Pacific Railroad on the 100th meridian, under Act July 1, 1862, § 9, for the benefit of the Leavenworth, Pawnee & Western Railroad Company, was extended westerly to the point where that road connected with the Union Pacific by Act July 2, 1864, § 9.—Stuart v. Union Pac. R. Co., 33 S. Ct. 338, 227 U. S. 342, 57 L. Ed. 535, affirming decree 178 F. 753, 103 C. C. A. 89.

The Leavenworth, Pawnee & Western Railroad Company or its successor was not excluded from the benefit of Act July 2, 1864, § 9, under which any company authorized by the act to construct a road from the Missouri to the initial point of the Union Pacific was authorized to connect with the latter road at a point farther west because its construction was not authorized by that act in view of Act July 1, 1862, § 9.—Id.

A provision in Act July 3, 1866, that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Eastern Division, should be entitled only to the same amount of bonds as though it had connected its line with the main line on the 100th degree of longitude as required by law, is not a legislative determination that Act July 2, 1864, required such union.—Id.

A right of way is a benefit within Act July 2, 1864, § 9, by which certain railroads were authorized to unite with the main line of the Union Pacific and were entitled to all the benefits of that act.—Id.

Railroad right of way granted by Acts July 1, 1862, and July 2, 1864, extends to the statutory width of 200 feet from the center line of its track, though never used to such width.—Id.

Some act of the United States is necessary to forfeit the right of way in aid of railroad construction granted by Act July 1, 1862, and to reinvest title in the United States.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Snow, 34 S. Ct. 104, 231 U. S. 204, 58 L. Ed. 184, reversing judgment Snow v. Union Pac. R. Co., 133 P. 1037; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Sides, 34 S. Ct. 107, 231 U. S. 213, 58 L. Ed. 189.

§93. Grant of right to timber and other materials.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 283.

There is no inconsistency between the special act of June 8, 1872, granting to the Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company a right of way over the public domain, with the right to take timber and other material adjacent to its road for the construction thereof, and the general act of March 3, 1875 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], making similar grants to any companies accepting its provisions; and, the right of the said company to take under the special act having ceased, as to the uncompleted part of its road, by reason of its failure to build to certain points in the time limited, it was entitled, as to the unfinished parts, to all the rights granted by the general act, on complying with the provisions thereof.—United States v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 1, 14 S. Ct. 11, 37 L. Ed. 975; Id., 150 U. S. 16, 14 S. Ct. 16, 37 L. Ed. 980. Affirming judgment (C. C.) Denver & R. G. Ry. Co. v. United States, 34 F. 838.

The grant in the act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], of a right to take timber "adjacent" to the right of way, implies no limitation as to the place of use, and the company may transport timber thus taken for use on any part of its road, however remote.—Id.

The grant in the same act of the right to take the material "necessary for the construction of said railroad" is for the railroad as a completed structure, including station buildings, depots, machine shops, side tracks, turnouts, and water tanks.—Id.

Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 482, c. 152), granting to railroad companies the right of way through public lands, and the right to take from the public lands "adjacent to the line of the said road" timber necessary for its construction, restricts the right to lands in proximity or near to the road, and does not authorize the taking of timber from lands 50 miles distant, though there be no available timber nearer.—Stone v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 778, 167 U. S. 178, 42 L. Ed. 127, affirming judgment 64 F. 667, 12 C. C. A. 451, 29 U. S. App. 32.

Submerged lands along the shore of Lake Michigan were not included in the grant to the Illinois Central Railroad Company by its charter, authorizing it to enter upon and use "any lands, streams, and materials of every kind," and declaring that "all such lands, waters, materials, and privileges belonging to the state are hereby granted to said corporation for said purposes." Decree, 50 N. E. 1104, 173 Ill. 471, 53 L. R. A. 408, affirmed.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. City of Chicago, 20 S. Ct. 509, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. Ed. 622.

A prima facie case on the part of the United States in an action of trover against a railroad company for the value of timber cut upon the public domain is made out by proof of the government ownership of the lands, the cutting and asportation of the timber, its value, and subsequent possession by the railroad company, although special acts of Congress exist, conferring authority on such company to take timber from the public domain for certain specified purposes. Judgment, 66 P. 550, 11 N. M. 145, reversed.—United States v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., 24 S. Ct. 33, 191 U. S. 84, 48 L. Ed. 106.

The burden of proving the purpose for which timber was taken from the public domain by a lumber company acting as the agent of a railroad company rests in the first instance on the railroad company, in an action of trover brought by the United States against that company for the value of the timber, where such company relies upon the authority conferred by Act Cong. June 8, 1872, c. 354, 17 Stat. 339, and Act Cong. March 3, 1877, c. 126, 19 Stat. 405, to take from the public lands the timber required for the construction and repair of its railway and telegraph line.—Id.

Lands 20 miles distant from a railroad right of way are not "adjacent," within the meaning of Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568], granting to certain railroad companies the right of way through the public lands to the extent of 100 feet on each side of the central line of the road, with the right to take materials for its construction from the public lands adjacent to the line of the road. Judgment, 114 F. 722, 52 C. C. A. 354, reversed.—United States v. St. Anthony R. Co., 24 S. Ct. 333, 192 U. S. 524, 48 L. Ed. 548.

(I) PROCEEDINGS IN LAND OFFICE.

Immunity of United States from suit as protection to land officers, see United States, § 127.

Restraining proceedings, see Injunction, § 36, 75, 114.

§95. Registers and receivers.

Where the register and receiver of a newly-created land office engages, at request of the commissioner of the general land office, in securing and fitting up rooms to be occupied by the office, advertising the date of its opening, and doing such other work as is necessarily incidental to opening the office, he has "entered upon the discharge of his duties," within Rev. St. § 2243, providing that the compensation of registers and receivers shall be computed from the time they enter upon the discharge of their duties.—United States v. Delaney, 17 S. Ct. 84, 164 U. S. 282, 41 L. Ed. 435.

The Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Commissioner of the General Land Office, had the right to charge the various registers and receivers with the duty to sell the lands ceded by the Osage Indians to the United States by the treaty of September 29, 1865 (14 Stat. 687), to be sold for their benefit, and to limit the annual compensation of such officers for this and all other services to the existing legal maximum of $2,500. Judgment (1904) 39 Ct. Cl. 321, affirmed.—Stewart v. United States, 27 S. Ct. 631, 206 U. S. 185, 51 L. Ed. 1017.

No commissions for selling the lands ceded by the Osage Indians to the United States by the treaty of September 29, 1865 (14 Stat. 687), to be sold for their benefit, beyond what brings his annual compensation to the legal maximum of $2,500, can be claimed by a register of the land office who received his appointment after the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Commissioner of the General Land Office, had charged the various registers and receivers with the duty of selling such lands, and had limited their annual compensation for this and all other services to the existing legal maximum.—Id.

§96. Authority and duties of officers in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 285-287.

Rev. St. § 2263, providing that, before pre-emption entries can be made under section 2259, "proof of the settlement and improvement required shall be made to the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands lie," does not constitute those officers a tribunal, so that, without the presence of both, no business can be done, and it is no defense to an action on the official bond of the receiver to recover moneys paid for such pre-emptions that at the time they were received the register was absent from the land office.—Potter v. United States, 107 U. S. 126, 1 S. Ct. 524, 27 L. Ed. 230.

The receiver of public moneys for a district of land subject to sale is not entitled to the military bounty land fees received by him during his term of office, over and above the amount required, with his commissions on cash sales of public lands, to make up his salary of $2,500 per year.—United States v. Brindle, 110 U. S. 688, 4 S. Ct. 180, 28 L. Ed. 286.

Act Cong. Aug. 31, 1852, § 18, prohibiting persons holding office under the United States, whose salary amounts to $2,500, from receiving compensation for discharging the duties of any other office, does not apply to services entirely unconnected with their official position; and where the receiver of public moneys, at a government land office, was appointed special receiver and superintendent to assist in disposing of lands held by the United States in trust for the Indians, the trust moneys paid for the land not being public moneys, the receiver, whose official duty only required him to receive public moneys, was entitled to take, in addition to his salary, the compensation provided by government for the separate services rendered in respect of the trust lands.—Id.

Whether, under Rev. St. § 2297 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1398], providing that proof of abandonment is to be made out to the satisfaction of the register of the land office, the receiver of the land office may validly take part in such inquiry in the land office, will not for the first time be considered on appeal in a suit to set aside the patent for the land in dispute before the land office.—Carr v. Fife, 156 U. S. 494, 15 S. Ct. 427, 39 L. Ed. 508.

Whenever a granting act specifically provides for the issue of patents, the rule is that the legal title remains in the government until the patent issues; and, while so remaining, the grant is in process of administration, and the land department retains jurisdiction to inquire into the extent and validity of the rights claimed under the grant, as against the government.—Judgment, 68 F. 155, 15 C. C. A. 335, affirmed.—Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 18 S. Ct. 208, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. Ed. 591.

The act of March 3, 1857, providing that "the selection of swamp and overflowed lands granted to the several states * * * heretofore made and reported to the commissioner of the general land office * * * be, and the same are hereby, confirmed, and shall be approved and patented to the said several states, in conformity with the provisions" of the granting act, did not operate as a conclusive confirmation to the state of Michigan of lands erroneously listed to the state by the secretary of the interior as swamp lands at a time when it was known both to the state authorities and to congress that there had been errors and frauds in the original survey of the public lands in Michigan, and that a new survey was then in progress; and hence the act did not deprive the land department of authority to correct such lists in accordance with the new surveys.—Id.

Local land officers were given no power to decide upon the sufficiency of an application, under Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 36 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1541], for vacant public lands in lieu of lands relinquished in the forest reservation, by Act March 3, 1883, c. 101, 22 Stat. 484 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1369], imposing upon them the duty of furnishing plats of townships showing what lands were vacant and what lands taken.—Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 692, 24 S. Ct. 860, 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230; Pacific Land & Improvement Co. v. Elwood Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 698, 24 S. Ct. 861, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. Ed. 1073, affirming decree, 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230.

§97. Mode and rules of procedure in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 283, 289.

The authority of the Commissioner of the General Land Office under Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 3, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], to prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of that act, does not embrace the power to require an applicant to make oath on final hearing of his bona fides and of the absence of contract or agreement in respect to the title, which Congress has in that act, by express intent, excluded from the requirements to be observed on such final hearing.—Williamson v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 163, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. Ed. 278.

The Land Department had the power to adopt reasonable rules and regulations for the administration of Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, § 1, 30 Stat. 36 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1541], authorizing the selection of public lands in lieu of lands relinquished in a forest reserve.—(1911) Roughton v. Knight, 31 S. Ct. 297, 219 U. S. 537, 55 L. Ed. 328, affirming decree (1909) 103 F. 844, 156 Cal. 123.

§98. Making and record of entries, and proceedings thereon.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 290.

No equitable title to lands selected, under Act June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 36 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1541], in lieu of land relinquished in a forest reservation, vests in the selector because the local land officers received, accepted, and filed his deed of relinquishment, abstract of title, and nonmineral affidavit, entered his selection upon the official records, and certified that it was free from conflict, as such action could not amount to a decision that the statute had been complied with, since authority so to decide was not conferred on such officials by that statute, and the regulations of the Land Department required all applications for change of entry or settlement to be forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office "for consideration," together with a report "as to the status of the tract applied for."—Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 692, 24 S. Ct. 860, 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230; Pacific Land & Improvement Co. v. Elwood Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 698, 24 S. Ct. 861, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. Ed. 1073, affirming decree 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230.

A soldier's declaratory statement filed during the time allowed for an appeal to the Secretary of the Interior from a decision of the Commissioner of the General Land Office against the validity of a prior homestead entry confers no rights upon the applicant, where, by a rule of the Land Department in force when a patent for the land is finally issued, no application will be received or any rights recognized as initiated by the tender of an application for a tract embraced in an entry of record until said entry has been canceled from the records of the local office. Decree (1904) 79 P. 265, 15 Okl. 12, affirmed.—Holt v. Murphy, 28 S. Ct. 212, 207 U. S. 407, 52 L. Ed. 271.

Regulation of Land Department requiring affidavit by a homestead entryman stating whether he has made other entries is properly addressed to the enforcement of the prohibition of the homestead laws (Act May 20, 1862, § 6, Act March 3, 1891, § 5) with respect to the amount of land which any one person may secure.—United States v. Smull, 35 S. Ct. 349, 236 U. S. 405, 59 L. Ed. 641.

A department regulation that a homestead entryman must make affidavit whether he had made other entries is not repugnant to Rev. St. § 2290, as amended by Act March 3, 1891,

§ 5, in relation to affidavit to be made by such applicant.—Id.

—99. Duties and proceedings as to sales.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 291.

The omission in Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 3, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], exacting on the final application some of the requirements made necessary on the original application for the purchase of land under that act, of any reiteration of the requirements of the statute regarding a speculative purpose on the part of the applicant, his bona fides, and his intent to acquire the land for himself alone, is equivalent to an express declaration by Congress that these requirements shall not be exacted at the final hearing.—Williamson v. United States, 28 S. Ct. 163, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. Ed. 278.

—102. Cancellation of entries, receipts, certificates, and warrants.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 294-297.

Defendant entered two tracts of land as subject to entry as public lands of the United States, paid the full purchase price, and received a receipt from the receiver of the land office. On discovering that one tract was not subject to entry, the commissioner of the general land office canceled the entry as to both tracts, without notice to defendant, and without returning or offering to return the purchase money. Held, that the order was invalid as to the tract subject to entry, and that defendant could rely on the original entry, and was entitled to have conveyed to him the legal title held by one who had received a patent for said tract after the order of cancellation.—Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 9 S. Ct. 122, 32 L. Ed. 482, affirming 58 Wis. 237, 16 N. W. 550.

The commissioner of the general land office or the secretary of the interior has power to cancel and set aside a pre-emption entry after the local land officers have approved the evidences of settlement and improvement, received the purchase money, and issued the receiver's final receipt. 61 N. W. 1036, 4 N. D. 452, 50 Am. St. Rep. 669, affirmed.—Parsons v. Venzke, 17 S. Ct. 27, 164 U. S. 89, 41 L. Ed. 360.

Proceedings to contest a homestead entry, without any notice to a mortgagee of the entryman's interest, though commenced by a subsequent grantee of such interest, do not amount in law to a fraud on the mortgagee's rights. Judgment, 69 N. W. 41, 6 N. D. 108, affirmed and modified.—Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 20 S. Ct. 425, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. Ed. 540.

The cancellation of a homestead entry upon due notice to the entryman, and after a hearing in the case, cannot be regarded as a mere nullity, when set up against his mortgagee, because the latter had no notice of the proceeding, but the entry no longer constitutes prima facie evidence in favor of such mortgagee.—Id.

The land department has jurisdiction to cancel an original entry for public lands at any time before a patent is issued. Decree, Diller v. Hawley, 81 F. 651, 28 C. C. A. 514, affirmed.—Hawley v. Diller, 20 S. Ct. 986, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. Ed. 1157.

Failure to give notice to transferees of an entryman of an order of the secretary of the interior to send to him the papers in proceedings for the cancellation of the entry is immaterial, if they had an opportunity to be heard before the secretary while the case was in his hands.—Id.

A decision by the secretary of the interior, reversing a decision of the commissioner of the general land office and rejecting and canceling an entry under the timber and stone act for fraud, is not in excess of the jurisdiction conferred upon him by law, because the attorney general did not join in the consideration of the matter, since the requirement of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2450, 2451, of the approval of a commissioner's decision by the secretary and the attorney general acting as a board, applies only to decisions sustaining irregular entries, and thereby divesting the United States of its title, and does not extend to decisions rejecting or canceling entries.—Id.

Reliance, in making a timber culture entry, upon the opinion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, that the provisions of Rev. St. U. S. § 452 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 257], prohibiting officers, clerks, or employes in the General Land Office from entering lands within the public domain, did not embrace a special agent of the Land Office, can confer no interest upon such special agent which will prevent the government, by its proper officer or department, from canceling his entry. Decree (1906) 84 P. 404, 41 Wash. 604, affirmed.—Prosser v. Finn, 28 S. Ct. 225, 208 U. S. 67, 52 L. Ed. 392.

Evidence in a homestead entryman's contest before the Land Department held sufficient to support finding that the homestead entryman before perfecting his entry entered into a prohibited agreement to convey the land to another.—Bailey v. Sanders, 33 S. Ct. 602, 228 U. S. 603, 57 L. Ed. 985, affirming decree 177 F. 667, 101 C. C. A. 293.

Evidence before Land Department that a homestead entryman before perfecting his entry had entered into prohibited agreement to convey the land to another held to justify a cancellation of the entry.—Id.

—103. Determination of adverse claims.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 298, 299, 307.

The regulations of the commissioner of the general land office, whereby an adverse claimant may be held to prove his better right to enter public lands, do not oust the jurisdiction of the courts.—Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S. 578, 14 S. Ct. 192, 37 L. Ed. 1189.

Since Rev. St. § 2273, gives the land department exclusive jurisdiction of contests involving rights of pre-emption arising between settlers, if the secretary of the interior, on the passage of a special act of congress confirming the entry of one of the parties to such a contest suspends the contest proceedings, and a patent issues, the other party to the contest cannot, by mandamus, compel the secretary to proceed with the contest on the ground that the special act was unconstitutional and void.—In re Emblen, 161 U. S. 52, 16 S. Ct. 487, 40 L. Ed. 613.

A selection of swamp lands was made by a state under the swamp-land act of September 28, 1850, as supplemented by the act of March 12, 1860, and the selection was approved by the secretary of the interior; but subsequently the secretary revoked the approval and canceled the selection. Held that, no patent having been issued to the state as contemplated by the act, the legal title remained in the United States so that the rights of a purchaser from the state must be decided by the land department, rather than by the courts, and a bill will not lie in behalf of a purchaser from the state to enjoin the secretary from enforcing the order of cancellation.—Brown v. Hitchcock, 19 S. Ct. 485, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. Ed. 772.

A mere grantee by deed of the interest of one who has made a homestead entry does not take the title under the entryman, within the meaning of the rule which prevents one who takes title under another from questioning that other's title, but such grantee may make a contest of his grantor's entry before the land department. Judgment, 69 N. W. 41, 6 N. D. 108, affirmed and modified.—Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 20 S. Ct. 425, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. Ed. 450.

The Land Department has full jurisdiction over matters involving the right of parties to a patent for public lands selected under Act Cong. June 4, 1897, c. 2, 30 Stat. 36 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1541], in lieu of lands relinquished in a forest reservation.—Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 692, 24 S. Ct. 860, 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230; Pacific Land & Improvement Co. v. Elwood Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 698, 24 S. Ct. 861, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. Ed. 1073, affirming decree 112 F. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230.

The right of entry given by Act Cong. May 14, 1880, c. 89, § 2, 21 Stat. 141 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1392], to a contestant who procures the cancellation of a homestead entry, inures to the benefit of one who, by his contest, induced the relinquishment in the local land office of a homestead entry of land in Oklahoma territory prima facie valid, but made by one in fact disqualified to make the entry, although a settlement was made intermediate the homestead entry and the initiation of the contest, since such entry, though ineffectual to vest any rights in the entryman, was sufficient to prevent the acquisition of homestead rights by another until it had been set aside. Judgment, 70 P. 383, 12 Okl. 313, affirmed.—Hodges v. Colcord, 24 S. Ct. 433, 193 U. S. 192, 48 L. Ed. 677.

A court of equity will not undertake to determine, in advance of the final action of the Land Department, the respective rights of grantees from the Northern Pacific Railway Company of land claimed to be within the indemnity limits of the land grant of July 2, 1864, and settlers and purchasers from the United States or their grantees, whether holding patents or not, who claim the protection of Act July 1, 1898, c. 546 (30 Stat. 597, 620), enacted to settle disputes arising out of conflicting rulings in the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting the Northern Pacific land grant, by permitting any purchaser or settler claiming, in good faith, under any law of the United States or ruling of the Land Department, any land so situated that a right thereto in the railroad grantee or its successor in interest attached by reason of definite location or selection, to elect whether to retain or transfer his claim, and requiring the Secretary of the Interior to furnish the company with a list of the lands so retained, and allowing the company to select other lands in lieu thereof upon executing a proper relinquishment.—Humbird v. Avery, 25 S. Ct. 123, 195 U. S. 480, 49 L. Ed. 286.

Jurisdiction of a suit by a homestead settler to re-establish the possession which trespassers have invaded, that he may continue his efforts to earn the title, may not be declined by a state court on the ground that it will amount to an interference with the Land Department because the land in question forms part of a tract of agricultural lands which were designated on the survey as a lake.—Gauthier v. Morrison, 34 S. Ct. 384, 232 U. S. 452, 58 L. Ed. 680, reversing judgment 114 P. 501, 62 Wash. 572.

104. Appeals from decisions of register and receiver.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 300.

The duty imposed by Rev. St. § 453 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 257], upon the commissioner of the general land office, to perform, under the direction of the secretary of the interior, "all executive duties" appertaining to the sur-vveying and sale of the public lands, vests in the commissioner and secretary a right to review the action of the register and receiver in accepting proofs of settlement and improvement under the pre-emption laws, whether such proofs are made solely by affidavit or by oral evidence in addition thereto; and the provision of Rev. St. § 2263, requiring such proofs to be made "to the satisfaction" of the register and receiver, does not make their action final.—Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 15 S. Ct. 635, 39 L. Ed. 737, affirming judgment Pierce v. Frace, 2 Wash. St. 81, 26 P. 192, 807.

105. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 301-306.

106. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 104, 301, 302.

A finding by the land department that an applicant for a patent is disqualified as a pre-emptor because he had filed a former declaratory statement as to other lands is a finding of fact and conclusive. Where fraud has been practiced, or there has been a mistake as to the law applicable to the facts, a court of equity may give relief, but the mere question of fact depending on conflicting evidence cannot be reviewed.—Baldwin v. Starks, 107 U. S. 463, 2 S. Ct. 473, 27 L. Ed. 526.

Where a patent is issued for land bounded by a lake or stream, the title to the land under the water passes from the government, and subsequent action of the land department, in surveying and granting the latter land, being without authority, cannot be res adjudicata, as against one claiming under the first patent, though he appeared before the department and resisted its action.—Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 11 S. Ct. 808, 35 L. Ed. 428, reversing judgment (C. C.) 16 F. 823.

In a suit by one person to set aside a patent to another, the decision of the land office as to the facts in a contest before it as to the rights to a patent cannot, in the absence of fraud and imposition, be reviewed.—Carr v. Fife, 156 U. S. 494, 15 S. Ct. 427, 39 L. Ed. 508, affirming decree (C. C.) 44 F. 713.

A decision of the land department on adverse claims to lands is not conclusive on the courts, when it is based, not on any question of fact, but on a construction of the law.—Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 15 S. Ct. 1020, 40 L. Ed. 71, reversing judgment (C. C.) 43 F. 867.

A state court has no jurisdiction to re-examine the conclusions of the United States land department as to whether one's residence on land was such as to entitle him to claim an additional farm homestead in adjoining land. under Rev. St. §§ 2289, 2290 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1388, 1389], in the absence of a clear showing that the decision was procured by fraud or imposition.—Stewart v. McHarry, 159 U. S. 643, 16 S. Ct. 117, 40 L. Ed. 290, affirming judgment McHarry v. Stewart, 35 P. 141.

The issuance of a patent for public land by the land department, in the absence of fraud, is conclusive upon the courts as to all questions of fact on which the right of the grantee to such patent depends. 15 So. 780, 34 Fla. 130, 43 Am. St. Rep. 172, affirmed.—Johnson v. Drew, 18 S. Ct. 800, 171 U. S. 93, 43 L. Ed. 88.

A finding by the land department, on appeal in contest proceedings, that a homestead claimant to lands in Oklahoma entered the territory prior to the time fixed by the statute and the president's proclamation pursuant thereto (25 Stat. 980), is a finding of fact which is not reviewable by the courts.—Calhoun v. Violet, 19 S. Ct. 324, 173 U. S. 60, 43 L. Ed. 614.

An order of the land department canceling an entry, if based upon a misconstruction of the law, can be corrected by the courts. Decree, Diller v. Hawley, 81 F. 651, 26 C. C. A. 514, affirmed.—Hawley v. Diller, 20 S. Ct. 986, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. Ed. 1157.

In matters passed on by the land office, and which are open for review by the courts, the findings of fact made in the land department are final, and will not be reviewed in the courts, in the absence of fraud, imposition, or mistake.—De Cambra v. Rogers, 23 S. Ct. 519, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. Ed. 734, affirming Rogers v. De Cambra, 64 P. 894, 132 Cal. 502, which affirmed 60 P. 863, 132 Cal. 502.

The final conclusion of the land department that no substantial advantage over others taking part in the race for land opened to settlement by Act March 1, 1889, c. 317 (25 Stat. 757), Act March 2, 1889, c. 412 (25 Stat. 980, 1000), and the President's proclamation of March 23, 1889, (26 Stat. 1546), resulted to an entryman who made the start from the boundary line with the others, because, of his prior entry into such territory some three or four hours before the start was made, involves but the finding of an ultimate fact, and not a conclusion of law, and is therefore not reviewable by the courts. Judgment, 65 P. 841, 11 Okl. 173, reversed.—Potter v. Hall, 23 S. Ct. 545, 189 U. S. 292, 47 L. Ed. 817.

The cancellation of a certificate of entry under Timber Act of June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], is not conclusive as against a transferee who had no notice and no opportunity to be heard upon the question of the original validity of such entry, but he is left free to prove the validity of the entry by any means other than the certificate. Judgment, Whitney v. Spratt, 64 P. 919, 25 Wash. 62, 87 Am. St. Rep. 733, affirmed.—Thayer v. Spratt, 23 S. Ct. 576, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. Ed. 845.

The conclusiveness on the courts of a finding of the Land Department, made in allowing a homestead entry, of the sufficiency of settlement, residence, and improvements, is not affected by a later decision, in a second contest between the same parties, that the alienation of the land was a bar to supplemented proofs offered in aid of a premature commutation entry. Decree, McCord v. Hill, 94 N. W. 65, 117 Wis. 306, affirmed.—Hill v. McCord, 25 S. Ct. 96, 195 U. S. 395, 49 L. Ed. 251.

Findings of fact found by the officers of the land department are binding on the courts, in the absence of the evidence in the contest case. Decree, 66 P. 337, 11 Okl. 189, affirmed.—Hartwell v. Havighorst, 25 S. Ct. 793, 196 U. S. 635, 49 L. Ed. 629.

A petition to declare a resulting trust, which discloses that there was some evidence on which the findings of fact in a decision of the land department could be based, fails to state a cause of action, and a demurrer directed there-to on that ground should be sustained.—Id.

The findings of fact found by the officers of the land department will not be disturbed, if there is any evidence on which such findings of fact could be made.—Id.

Perjury on a hearing before the Land Department of a contest over an entry under the homestead laws is not ground for equitable relief against the decision of the Department. Decree, 73 P. 303, 12 Okl. 537, affirmed.—Estes v. Timmons, 26 S. Ct. 85, 199 U. S. 391, 50 L. Ed. 241.

The conclusion as to ultimate facts finally reached by the Land Department must be accepted by the courts, although differing from the conception of such facts entertained by the department at previous stages of the controversy. Decree (1907) 88 P. 1054, 18 Okl. 160, affirmed.—Greenmeyer v. Coate, 29 S. Ct. 345, 212 U. S. 434, 53 L. Ed. 587.

The land department's finding in favor of a homestead entry against persons claiming to have been occupants of the premises as a town site, which rests, not solely on the fact that application for such entry was filed a few hours before that of the trustee for the town site occupants, but rather chiefly on priority of the homesteader's equitable rights, must be held conclusive by the Supreme Court, especially where reinforced by judgments of the state courts, unless there is the clearest and most convincing evidence of mistake or injustice. Judgment (1907) White v. Whitcomb, 90 P. 1080, 13 Idaho, 490, affirmed.—Whitcomb v. White, 29 S. Ct. 599, 214 U. S. 15, 53 L. Ed. 889.

A finding of land officers in proceedings resulting in the issuance of patents on commuted homestead entries, that such lands were agricultural and not coal lands, is not conclusive against the government in a suit to cancel the patents as fraudulently procured by misrepresenting their character.—Washington Securities Co. v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 725, 234 U. S. 76, 58 L. Ed. 1220, affirming decree 194 F. 59, 114 C. C. A. 79.

Courts cannot review findings of fact by the land department within its province.—Daniels v. Wagner, 35 S. Ct. 740, 237 U. S. 547, 59 L. Ed. 1102 L. R. A. 1916A, 1116, reversing decree 205 F. 235, 125 C. C. A. 93; Same v. Merrithew, 35 S. Ct. 747, 237 U. S. 570, 59 L. Ed. 1113, reversing decree Same v. Wagner, 205 F. 235, 125 C. C. A. 93; Same v. Cradock, 35 S. Ct. 749, 237 U. S. 574, 59 L. Ed. 1118, reversing decree Same v. Wagner, 205 F. 235, 125 C. C. A. 93; Sawyer v. Gray, 35 S. Ct. 842, 237 U. S. 674, 59 L. Ed. 1170.

Findings of fact by an Indian inspector for Indian territory in a contest over right to purchase Chickasaw town-site lot affirmed by the Secretary of the Interior are binding on the courts in absence of gross mistake or fraud.—Johnson v. Riddle, 36 S. Ct. 393, 240 U. S. 467, 60 L. Ed. 752, affirming judgment 139 F. 1143, 41 Okl. 759.

107. — Commissioner of General Land Office.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 303, 306.

A certificate of the commissioner of the general land office, of a deficiency in the grant of lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, can be given no effect in an action in ejectment in which defendants claim title as purchasers from the railroad company, of lands within the indemnity limits of the grant, where the certificate was not given in any proceeding pending between the parties in the land department, and has never been recognized by the department, and the company has not been relieved from the specification of losses in making indemnity selections on account of an ascertained deficiency in the grant.—Hewitt v. Schultz, 21 S. Ct. 309, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. Ed. 463, reversing judgment 76 N. W. 230, 7 N. D. 601; Powers v. Slaughter, 21 S. Ct. 319, 180 U. S. 173, 45 L. Ed. 479, affirming judgment 55 P. 1103, 20 Wash. 712; Moore v. Cormode, 21 S. Ct. 324, 180 U. S. 167, 45 L. Ed. 476, affirming judgment 55 P. 217, 20 Wash. 305.

A railway company will not be required to account to the United States in equity for the proceeds of the sale of lands patented to the company as within the place limits of the railway land grant made by Act May 12, 1864, c. 84, 13 Stat. 72, on the theory that what was done under or in execution of the swamp land act (Act Sept. 28, 1850, c. 84, 9 Stat. 519 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1586]) prior to the filing of the map of definite location, operated to except such lands from the railway land grant as being previously reserved, where to grant such relief would be to disregard a subsequent decision of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, made after full notice and hearing, that such lands were not in fact swamp or overflowed, and that neither the state nor any of its counties claiming them as such were entitled to said lands, which decision has never been appealed from, and still remains, after nearly 30 years, unreversed and unmodified.—(1910) United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 31 S. Ct. 7, 218 U. S. 233, 54 L. Ed. 1015, affirming decree (1908) 160 F. 818, 87 C. C. A. 592.

108. — Secretary of the Interior.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 304, 306.

A decision by the secretary of the interior, in 1871, adverse to plaintiff's claim to lands claimed to have been granted by Act Cong. March 3, 1857, in aid of a railroad, was not binding as the law of the case, and its action to recover the land in 1884 was brought in time.—St. Paul, M. & M. Ry. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 11 S. Ct. 168, 34 L. Ed. 767, reversing decree (C. C.) 26 F. 569.

Under Rev. St. § 441 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 252], by which "the secretary of the interior is charged with the supervision of public business relating to * * * the public lands," and sections 453 and 2478 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 257, 1586], which provide that the commissioner of the general land office, "under the direction of the secretary of the interior," shall perform all executive duties respecting the public lands, etc., the secretary of the interior is the supervising agent of the government in matters relating to the sale and disposition of the public lands, the surveying of private land claims, and the issuing of patents thereon, etc., and as such he has power to set aside an order of the commissioner of the general land office approving a survey of land included in a confirmed claim, and order a new survey. He may exercise this power not only on formal notice or appeal according to the rules of the department, but on his own motion; and his action in such a matter is unassailable in the courts in a collateral proceeding.—Knight v. United Land Ass'n, 142 U. S. 161, 12 S. Ct. 258, 35 L. Ed. 974.

The secretary of the interior has no authority to annul the action of his predecessor in office approving the location of a railroad right of way over public lands, under the act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. 482 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1568] on the ground that such approval was obtained by misrepresentation and fraud, and that the railroad was not used as a common carrier for hire, but merely to carry property belonging to its owners, for the existence of the railroad with the duties of a common carrier was a quasi jurisdictional fact, which the prior secretary had authority to determine, and his action therein is not subject to collateral attack.—Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co., 147 U. S. 165, 13 S. Ct. 271, 37 L. Ed. 123, affirming decree Union River Logging R. Co. v. Noble, 20 D. C. 555.

A decision by the secretary of the interior that the mere occupation and cultivation of land creates such a claim as will prevent it from passing under a grant by Congress to a railroad company is a decision on a question of law, which does not conclude the parties, but may be reviewed in a collateral proceeding to recover the purchase money, by one to whom the company had agreed to convey title. Colburn v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 34 P. 1017, 13 Mont. 476, reversed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Colburn, 17 S. Ct. 98, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. Ed. 479.

The fact that a finding of the secretary of the interior that an assignment of a land warrant, was a forgery, and his order canceling the warrant, were made without notice to the assignee, does not constitute a valid objection by a defendant not in privity with the assignee, but claiming under a sale of the land for taxes after the cancellation, where the assignee had accepted the adjudication of the secretary as binding, and the fact that the assignment was forged is admitted by defendant.—Hussman v. Durham, 17 S. Ct. 253, 165 U. S. 144, 41 L. Ed. 664.

A decision by the secretary of the interior finally disposing of an application for a patent to public lands may be re-examined by his successor, on a proper application for a rehearing. 19 C. C. A. 392, 73 F. 120, affirmed.—Beley v. Naphtaly, 13 S. Ct. 354, 169 U. S. 353, 42 L. Ed. 775.

Courts will not entertain an inquiry as to the extent of the investigation by the Secretary of the Interior and his knowledge of the points involved in his decision of a contest in the land department, nor as to the methods by which he reached his determination. Judgment, Rogers v. De Cambra, 60 P. 863, 64 P. 894, 132 Cal. 502, affirmed.—De Cambra v. Rogers, 23 S. Ct. 519, 189 U. S. 119, 47 L. Ed. 734.

A finding by the Secretary of the Interior that the residence of a homestead entryman for voting purposes was in another precinct from that in which the land lies cannot be said to be erroneous as a matter of law, where it was admitted that the entryman, on one occasion after his entry, voted in another county from that in which the land is situated, and it does not clearly appear that the Secretary did not have other evidence before him on that question. Judgment, 72 P. 746, 28 Mont. 413, 104 Am. St. Rep. 691, affirmed.—Small v. Rakestraw, 25 S. Ct. 285, 196 U. S. 403, 49 L. Ed. 527.

Findings of fact made by the Secretary of the Interior in a contest over public lands, when attached to a petition to declare a resulting trust, are conclusive on demurrer to such petition in the absence of a complete copy of the evidence, and, if the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior is consistent with his findings, a demurrer to the petition should be sustained. Decree, 78 P. 223, 15 Okl. 52, affirmed.—McCalla v. Acker, 26 S. Ct. 754, 200 U. S. 613, 50 L. Ed. 620.

Findings of the Secretary of the Interior to the effect that a designated party to a controversy in the Land Department had the right to enter the land as a homestead does not prevent such Department, if patent has not issued, from instituting further inquiry, and upon such inquiry, finally awarding the land to the party held to have a better right. Judgment (1905) 83 P. 882, 33 Mont. 348, affirmed.—Love v. Flahive, 27 S. Ct. 486, 205 U. S. 195, 51 L. Ed. 768, rehearing denied 27 S. Ct. 729, 206 U. S. 356, 51 L. Ed. 1092.

Where findings by the General Land Office, approved and adopted by the Secretary of the Interior, were not made on any controverted facts, the conclusions of the officers were not really conclusions of fact, but of law, and subject to revision by the courts. Judgment, Buffalo Land & Exploration Co. v. Strong (1903) 97 N. W. 575, 91 Minn. 84, affirmed.—Strong v. Buffalo Land & Exploration Co., 27 S. Ct. 780, 203 U. S. 582, 51 L. Ed. 327.

The Secretary of the Interior, having complete jurisdiction of a contest before the Land Department, is not bound by prior findings of fact made by his predecessor. Decree (1907) 88 P. 1054, 18 Okl. 160, affirmed.—Greenameyer v. Coate, 29 S. Ct. 345, 212 U. S. 434, 53 L. Ed. 587.

The courts must assume that the facts which, under the joint resolution of May 31, 1870, No. 67, 16 Stat. 378, establishing the second indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, must appear in order to entitle that company to the lands selected as indemnity lands, were shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior, where he has approved the company's selections.—(1911) Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 31 S. Ct. 300, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. Ed. 258, reversing decree Hoyt v. Weyerhaeuser (1908) 161 F. 324, 88 C. C. A. 404; (1911) Campbell v. Weyerhaeuser, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 424, 55 L. Ed. 279, affirming decree (1908) 161 F. 332, 88 C. C. A. 412; (1911) Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Wass, 31 S. Ct. 321, 219 U. S. 426, 55 L. Ed. 280, reversing judgment (1908) 117 N. W. 1126, 105 Minn. 525.

Decision of Secretary of Interior, on evidence in a contest before the Land Department, that one of the parties was a purchaser in good faith within Railway Land Grant Adjustment Act March 3, 1887, § 4, is conclusive on the courts, unless founded on errors of law and misconstruction of statute.—Logan v. Davis, 34 S. Ct. 685, 233 U. S. 613, 58 L. Ed. 1121.

Decision of Secretary of Interior that patents to public lands should issue held not conclusive against the government, suing to cancel such patents for fraud.—Linn & Lane Timber Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 440, 236 U. S. 574, 59 L. Ed. 725, affirming decrees 196 F. 593, 116 C. C. A. 267 and 203 F. 394, 121 C. C. A. 498.

109. Actions and proceedings to set aside decisions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 307.

Newly discovered evidence on the issue of fraud made before the Land Department, which complainant had abundance of time and opportunity to discover and present, is not ground for relief in equity from its final action, where no fact is alleged that anything was done to prevent complainant from discovering or presenting such evidence except the general allegation that cunning and deceit were practiced on him. Decree (1907) 88 P. 1054, 18 Okl. 160, affirmed.—Greenmeyer v. Coate, 29 S. Ct. 345, 212 U. S. 434, 53 L. Ed. 587.

112. Delivery, acceptance, and record.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 311, 312.

When a patent for land has been executed by the president, and recorded in the general land office, all power of the executive department over it has ceased, and the return of a patent to the land office, by order of the commissioner of that office, the tearing from it of the seals by him, his erasing the president's name from it, and mutilating the record of it, are all nugatory acts.—Bicknell v. Comstock, 113 U. S. 149, 5 S. Ct. 399, 28 L. Ed. 962.

113. Requisites and validity.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 313.

Patents issued to fictitious parties cannot transfer title, and no one can derive any right under a conveyance in the name of the supposed patentees; and therefore there is in such case no room for the doctrine that subsequent purchasers are protected.—Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 5 S. Ct. 10, 28 L. Ed. 623.

114. Construction and operation in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 314-322.

21 Stat. 141, § 3 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1393], provides that any settler who has settled or who shall hereafter settle, on public lands, with the intention of claiming the same under the homestead laws, shall be allowed the same time to file his homestead application, and perfect his original entry, as is allowed to settlers under the pre-emption laws to put their claims on record, and his right shall relate back to the date of settlement. Rev. St. § 2339 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1437], provides that, where rights to the use of water on public lands have vested, and are recognized by local customs and laws, the owners of such rights will be protected in the same, and may have the right of way for ditches, etc.; and the amendatory act of July 9, 1870, provides that all patents granted, or homesteads allowed, shall be subject to any vested water rights acquired under the above statute. The local customs and laws of Dakota recognize the right to locate water rights, and divert and appropriate the waters of streams, when such location does not conflict with prior vested rights. Held, that upon the filing of the homestead entry on land in Dakota for which a patent is subsequently issued, riparian rights in a stream flowing over the land become vested, and the waters thereof are no longer subject to the right of appropriation.—Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 10 S. Ct. 350, 33 L. Ed. 761.

Where the official plat of the survey of government lands shows a river as one boundary of a certain lot in accordance with Rev. St. § 2395 et seq. [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1471], a subsequent patent for the land, describing it by number, and referring to the plat on which it is marked as containing a certain amount, and deeds describing the lot by number, pass all accretion to the lot up to their respective dates.—Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co., 134 U. S. 178, 10 S. Ct. 518, 33 L. Ed. 872, affirming (C. C.) East Omaha Land Co. v. Jeffries, 40 F. 386.

A conveyance by the United States of the legal title to land does not operate by relation back of the time when the consideration for the land was paid.—Hussman v. Durham, 17 S. Ct. 253, 165 U. S. 144, 41 L. Ed. 664.

The exterior lines of a survey, as shown by a map accompanying the patent, included the whole of the inner bay of San Pedro. The map also showed the exterior lines of the bay itself, but across that part of the map which designated the bay were the words, "Inner Bay of San Pedro (Exception)." The map also had on its face a table of courses and distances, under the heading, "Traverse of Inner Bay of San Pedro, to be Excluded from Survey of the Claim." The concluding portion of the survey designated the land surveyed, "exclusive of the land above described as covered by the navigable waters of the inner bay of San Pedro," as being certain numbered lots on the plats of the public survey, neither of which lots includes any portion of the land within the exterior boundaries of the inner bay of San Pedro. Held, that the exclusion embraces, not only the land covered by the navigable waters of the inner bay, but all the land within its exterior lines, including an island almost covered with water at high tide. 27 P. 761, 91 Cal. 400, affirmed.—De Guyer v. Banning, 17 S. Ct. 937, 167 U. S. 723, 42 L. Ed. 340.

Patents for fractional sections of land facing on a marsh, which recite the number of acres granted, and refer to the official plat of the survey, by which plat the marsh is shown as the boundary, while the computed areas conform to the area included within the surveyed lines, without including any part of the marsh, must be limited by the surveyed boundaries, without including any land which is a part of the marsh. Decree, 85 F. 45, 29 C. C. A. 5, affirmed.—Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 20 S. Ct. 124, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. Ed. 171.

A patentee of a part of a fractional section whose patent, through the carelessness of the Land Department in relying on the description in his homestead entry, refers, for the description of the land conveyed, to the original survey, which calls for a water boundary on the east, although a resurvey had then been made at his instance, cannot recover from a subsequent patentee under the second survey any land lying east of the meander line as shown on the earlier survey, since otherwise he would profit by a mistake of the government of which he must have been cognizant.—Gleason v. White, 25 S. Ct. 782, 199 U. S. 54, 50 L. Ed. 87.

Patents for fractional lots on the east bank of the Snake river, a navigable stream forming the boundary between Idaho and Oregon, do not embrace an island lying between such lots and the thread of the stream.—Moss v. Ramey, 36 S. Ct. 183, 239 U. S. 538, 60 L. Ed. 425, affirming judgment A. B. Moss & Bro. v. Same, 136 P. 608, 25 Idaho, 1.

115. Conclusiveness.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 322-323.

116. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 323, 325-323.

In ejectment, the legal title must prevail, and a patent of the United States to public lands passes that title. It cannot be assailed collaterally on the ground that false and perjured testimony was used to secure it.—Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co., 106 U. S. 447, 1 S. Ct. 389, 27 L. Ed. 226.

Where an act of congress confirming a claim to land provides that it shall "not be so construed as to extend to any lands occupied by the United States for military purposes," a person claiming the land under a patent issued after the date of the act must show that the land claimed by him was occupied for military purposes at the date of the act.—Whitney v. Morrow, 112 U. S. 693, 5 S. Ct. 333, 28 L. Ed. 871, affirming 50 Wis. 197, 6 N. W. 494.

Where a selection of lands for the benefit of public schools was made by the state of California in 1868, which was subsequently approved by the secretary of the interior, and the lands listed, to the state by the commissioner of the general land office, such listing operated, under Rev. St. § 2449 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1516], to convey the fee as of the date of the selection, and a patent for the same lands, issued on a settlement made in 1869 under the pre-emption laws, confers no title as against the state.—McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 327, 7 S. Ct. 176, 30 L. Ed. 408.

A patent from the United States may be collaterally attacked by showing that the land covered by it was a portion of a Mexican grant, which had previously been conveyed by the Mexican authorities to a private person; that said conveyance had been confirmed by the United States land commissioners, and, on appeal, by the district and supreme courts; and that, therefore, the officers of the government had no authority to issue the patent.—Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 8 S. Ct. 1228, 31 L. Ed. 844.

A patent issued in 1863 to land included within that withdrawn from sale and entry before the patentee took possession, on account of a difference of opinion among the land officers as to the extent of the original grant by congress of lands in aid of the improvement of the Des Moines river, is void, and gives the patentee no title.—Riley v. Welles, 154 U. S. 578, 14 S. Ct. 1166, 19 L. Ed. 648.

Under the act of congress of March 3, 1851, providing for the appointment of a board of commissioners to ascertain and settle private land claims in California, as it was within the power of the district court to require a survey in exact conformity with its decree of confirmation, any objection to the survey as not being in conformity with that decree should have been made before patent was issued; and therefore a patent issued avowedly in execution of such decree is conclusive between the United States and the claimants, and, until canceled, it alone determines, in an action to recover possession, the location of the land that passed under the decree. 27 P. 761, 91 Cal. 400, affirmed.—De Guyer v. Banning, 17 S. Ct. 937, 167 U. S. 723, 42 L. Ed. 340.

Plaintiff settled on public land subject to entry under the homestead laws, and applied to the proper officer to enter the same, but was informed by him that it was unnecessary to do so because of charges made against the survey of the township. Thereafter, on learning that the state claimed the land as swamp lands, under Act Cong. March 12, 1860, he again legally applied to enter the same, and from the refusal of his application appealed to the general land office, and during the pendency of the appeal the land was patented to the state by inadvertence. Held, that plaintiff was not precluded from attacking such patent because he had not made final proof of his claim at the time the patent was issued, provided his acts, if unobstructed, would entitle him to complete his claim in future. Judgment, 72 N. W. 794, 69 Minn. 547, affirmed.—Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. Roy, 19 S. Ct. 549, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. Ed. 820.

A legal title passed by patent for public lands is good as against a stranger with no equities, whether it is valid or not as against some other party. Decree, 85 F. 45, 29 C. C. A. 5, affirmed.—Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 20 S. Ct. 124, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. Ed. 171.

The issuance by the land department of a patent to a railroad under Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, which in section 3 excludes mineral lands from the operation of the act without any investigation, though irregular, does not avoid the patent, but the title passes subject to the right of the government to attack it by a suit to annul.—Burke v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 907, 234 U. S. 669, 58 L. Ed. 1527.

A railway company and its lessee are not estopped to deny validity of a mineral exception clause inserted in a patent to a railway company under Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, as against strangers, because such clause was inserted with the railway company's consent, and under an agreement with the Land Department that the clause should keep in the United States title to any mineral lands described in the patent.—Id.

117. — Collateral attack.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 324.

A patent from the Land Department under Railway Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, which in section 3 excludes mineral lands from the act, is, on collateral attack, a conclusive declaration that the land is agricultural and that all requirements preliminary to the issuance of the patent have been complied with.—Burke v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 907, 234 U. S. 669, 58 L. Ed. 1527.

118. Cancellation of certification to state.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 230.

A bill filed by the United States to set aside a grant of land to a state on the ground of fraud and mistake is sustainable on the ground of mistake, though no fraud is shown.—Williams v. United States, 138 U. S. 514, 11 S. Ct. 457, 34 L. Ed. 1026, affirming decree (C. C.) United States v. Williams, 30 F. 309.

Defendant conveyed part of the land on which he had made a desert land entry, and his grantees made valuable improvements. Afterwards he filed papers for relinquishment of the desert land entry, and at the same time applied to the state for purchase of the land, including what he had conveyed, and the state applied to the United States for certification of the land, under Act Cong. June 16, 1880, which granted to the state 2,000,000 acres of land, to be selected from any unappropriated nonmineral land in the state. The lands were included in a list of land certified to the state, but through mistake, and after the land department had notice of the grantees' claim. On discovery of the mistake, the secretary of the interior telegraphed the governor to return the list for correction, and a few minutes afterwards defendant telegraphed the governor to have his deed executed at once. The grantees' claim had been noted in pencil on the list in the land office at Washington, but had been erased by some unknown person. Held, that the certification should be set aside for mistake.—Id.

Where it is claimed that the title to land was illegally acquired from the United States by a state, which has since granted the equitable, but retained the legal, title, the United States may sue the holder of the equitable title alone to divest him thereof.—Id.

In a suit by the government to cancel the erroneous certification of lands to the state for the benefit of a railroad company, and which have been sold by the company to a bona fide purchaser, a decree will not be granted against the company for the value of the lands, on refusing cancellation, where the government has not asked such decree, and it does not appear that the company has received more lands than were granted, or that there were not within the granted or indemnity limits other lands which the company might have rightfully received but for the erroneous certification.—United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 368, 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. Ed. 789, affirming decree, 67 F. 948, 15 C. C. A. 96.

119. Cancellation of patent.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 331-340.

120. — Suit by United States.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 332-335.

The fact that land patents were fraudulently issued by the officers of the government will not preclude the government from maintaining a suit to cancel the patents.—Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 5 S. Ct. 10, 28 L. Ed. 623.

A bill to cancel patents issued to fictitious persons need not offer to return the consideration for the patent.—Id.

In a suit by the United States directly assailing a patent and seeking its cancellation for fraud in the conduct of their officers, the burden of proof is on the government to show a fatal irregularity or corrupt conduct on their part.—Id.

Rev. St. § 2262, having provided that one who has sworn falsely in proceedings in the land office to obtain a patent shall forfeit any money paid for the land, the United States need not, on filing a bill in chancery to vacate a patent obtained by false swearing, offer to refund the purchase money.—United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 5 S. Ct. 836, 29 L. Ed. 110.

The provision of Rev. St. § 2262, that one who has falsely sworn, in proceedings in the land office to perfect his right to a patent that he has not made any contract by which his title shall inure to the benefit of anybody but himself, etc., shall forfeit any money he has paid for the land, and the liability of one so swearing falsely to an indictment for perjury do not preclude the United States from proceeding in equity to set aside a patent obtained by such false swearing.—Id.

The decision of the officers of the land department that an applicant for a patent is entitled thereto, based solely upon the ex parte statements and affidavits of the applicant that he has fulfilled all the requirements of the land law, does not conclude the United States from instituting proceedings in equity to set aside the patent on the ground that such statements and affidavits were false.—Id.

The state of California having selected, as lieu school land, coal land which was expressly excepted from the grant to it by Act Cong. March 3, 1853 (10 Stat. 244, 246), a patent for land reserved from sale by law can be vacated, and the titles thereunder annulled, in a suit in equity brought by the United States for that purpose, even though the land was listed to the state by the proper authorities.—Mullan v. United States, 118 U. S. 271, 6 S. Ct. 1041, 30 L. Ed. 170, affirming (C. C.) United States v. Mullan, 10 F. 785, 7 Sawy. 466.

While courts of equity have the power to set aside, cancel, or correct patents or other evidences of title obtained from the United States by fraud or mistake, and to correct, under proper circumstances, such mistakes, this can only be done on specific averments of the mistake or the fraud, supported by clear and satisfactory proof.—United States v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 122 U. S. 365, 7 S. Ct. 1271, 30 L. Ed. 1211.

Where the title of the defendants rests on the strongest presumptions of fact, which, although they may be rebutted, can be overthrown only by full proofs to the contrary, the burden of producing these proofs rests on the government, and to raise a suspicion, however strong, of the fraud and wrongdoing of its own officers, is not enough to justify the government in casting on defendants the burden of establishing their title.—Colorado Coal & Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 8 S. Ct. 131, 31 L. Ed. 182, reversing decree (C. C.) United States v. Southern Colorado Coal & Town Co., 18 F. 273, 5 McCrary, 563.

It was alleged that certain of the United States government officials had, by means of fictitious persons, obtained patents for some mineral lands. It was fully established by the evidence that there were in fact no actual settlements and improvements on any of the lands, as falsely set out in the affidavits in support of the pre-emption claims, and in the certificates issued thereon. Held, that it was not such a fraud as prevents the passing of the legal title by the patents, and that to a bill in equity to cancel the patents upon those grounds alone the defense of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice was perfect.—Id.

On a bill to annul a patent, the testimony must be clear and convincing, and the patent will not be set aside, on a bare preponderance of evidence, which leaves the issue in doubt.—Id.

A suit may be brought by the United States to set aside, cancel, or annul a patent issued in its name, obtained by fraud or mistake; but the right exists only when the government has an interest in the remedy sought by reason of its interest in the land, or the fraud has been practiced on the government and operates to its prejudice, or it is under obligation to some individual to make his title good by setting aside the patent, or the duty of the government to the public requires it.—United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273, 8 S. Ct. 850, 31 L. Ed. 747, affirming decree (C. C.) 23 F. 279, 10 Sawy. 639.

The United States, if not the real party in interest in an action by it to cancel a land patent obtained by fraud, is affected by the laches of those whose interests it asserts, and a lapse of 45 years since the action accrued is a bar.—United States v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338, 8 S. Ct. 1083, 32 L. Ed. 121.

The attorney general may sue in equity, in the name of the United States, to annul a land patent obtained by fraud of the patentee, where the government is under an obligation to issue a patent to the rightful owner of the land.—Id.

A bill in chancery by the United States to set aside and vacate a patent issued under its authority is not to be treated as a writ of error or petition for rehearing, nor as if it were a mere retrial of the case as it was before the land office, with such additional proof as the parties may be able to produce.—United States v. Marshall Silver Min. Co., 129 U. S. 579, 9 S. Ct. 343, 32 L. Ed. 734.

In a suit to cancel a patent to land for a private claim, on the ground of fraud, it appeared that the surveyor general's report of the survey was at first disapproved by the secretary of the interior because it did not conform to the boundaries set out in the decree confirming the grant. He made a second report, stating that if the survey was made to conform to the decree it would include more land than the survey which had been made, and, as the owners were satisfied, he urged the approval of the survey, which was given. Notice of the survey was published in a paper published in another county, and some distance from the claim, while there was a paper published in the same county, and within two miles. It appeared that one H. had been for 10 years deputy surveyor for that district; that he had owned an interest in the grant, but had sold it to his brother; and that he acted as his brother's general agent. There was no evidence that he made the survey in question, or had anything to do with the matter, in suggestion or otherwise. The person who made the examination on which the surveyor general's report was founded had no interest in the claim, though, some time after the patent was issued, he accepted a small tract of the land as a present. Held, that the evidence does not show fraud.—United States v. Hancock, 133 U. S. 193, 10 S. Ct. 264, 33 L. Ed. 601.

The United States may maintain a bill in equity for the cancellation of patents alleged to have been issued by it to certain railroad companies without authority of law, especially so when homestead and pre-emption rights have attached to the same lands in favor of numerous third persons, whose individual assertion thereof would lead to a multiplicity of suits, all depending upon the same facts and provisions of law.—United States v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 141 U. S. 358, 12 S. Ct. 13, 35 L. Ed. 766, reversing decree (C. C.) 37 F. 68.

Where a bill by the United States to cancel patents alleged to have been issued to railroad companies without authority of law alleges in general terms that a large number of citizens, over 21 years of age, and otherwise having all the qualifications required by the homestead laws, went upon the lands before their selection for indemnity purposes for the railroad companies, and did every act necessary to procure patents under the homestead and pre-emption laws, except that the receiver and register would not permit any act to be done with or by them officially for the purpose of procuring title, and the bill is demurred to generally for want of equity, and no specific objections are made, the defendant, on appeal, cannot question the sufficiency of these allegations as to the persons who have acquired homestead and pre-emption rights, or as to the particular pieces of land to which their rights have attached.—Id.

In a suit to annul a timber land patent issued under Act Cong. June 3, 1878, § 2, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], which requires the applicant to make oath that he desires the land, not for speculation, but for his own exclusive use and benefit, and that he has not directly or indirectly agreed that the title to be obtained shall in any manner inure to the benefit of any person except himself, there was no direct evidence of such an agreement, or even that the applicant and his subsequent vendee had ever met before he paid the money to the land officers; but it appeared that they both lived in Portland, Or.; that the conveyance was made in less than a month after such payment, for a consideration of one dollar; that several years afterwards the patentee falsely stated to a government agent that he still held the land, and had not sold it, but that it was "in soak;" that the vendee had purchased numerous other tracts in the same vicinity; that the title to 21 of these tracts was procured from the government within a year by various parties, but with the same two witnesses in each case to the application, one of them being a land agent of the vendee; that the purchases by the vendee were made shortly after payment to the government, and in two instances a few days before; that the deeds in each case recited a consideration of one dollar, and, in all cases but two, were acknowledged before the same notarial officer. Two witnesses swore that the vendee had offered them money to enter tracts of land and convey to him, one of which transactions was carried out. The bill required answers under oath, and the patentee and vendee both answered, specifically denying any prior agreement in respect to the lands, but neither testified as a witness. Held, that the proof of fraud was insufficient to overcome the presumption of validity which attaches to a patent from the United States.—United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 12 S. Ct. 575, 36 L. Ed. 384, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 630.

The government had a right to call the patentee and purchaser and cross-examine them as adverse witnesses, and, in view of its failure to do so, no presumptions can be made in its favor from their failure to testify, as against the sworn denial of their answer.—Id.

Upon the filing of motions to review a decision of the secretary of the interior canceling a location of land, an order was made, as provided by a rule of the department, suspending all action under the decision. Subsequently R. and others applied to enter the same land, and, R.'s application being approved, the other applicants appealed to the commissioner of the general land office. In ignorance of such order and appeals, a clerk in the land department approved R.'s entry, and upon this approval a patent was issued to R., the officials signing it also being ignorant of the conflicting claims. Held, on a bill by the United States, that a decree canceling the patent, so as to leave the determination of the disputed questions of fact to the land department, was proper.—Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 337, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. Ed. 754, affirming decree 58 F. 334, 7 C. C. A. 256.

The concurrent findings of the two lower courts that a patentee of lands conveyed to him by the entrymen immediately after entry under the pre-emption laws was not guilty of fraud in acquiring the title, so as to permit the United States to maintain an action to set aside the patents, will not be disturbed by the federal Supreme Court, where the suit was begun 40 years after the alleged fraud, when the property had passed into the possession of the receiver of the patentee, appointed at the instance of his creditors, and the testimony of those of the still living pre-emptors who were called to testify on the question of fraud was conflicting. Decree, 125 F. 907, 60 C. C. A. 615, affirmed.—United States v. Stinson, 25 S. Ct. 426, 197 U. S. 200, 49 L. Ed. 724.

A patent from the United States, invalid when made, after five years without attack, must be deemed to have the same effect as against the United States in a suit to remove a cloud on title as though it were valid when issued, in view of Act March 3, 1891, c. 561, § 8, 26 Stat. 1099, although this section in form only bars suits to annul the patent. Decree (1907) 152 F. 25, 81 C. C. A. 221, affirmed.—United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co., 28 S. Ct. 579, 209 U. S. 447, 52 L. Ed. 881.

A bill by the United States to cancel a patent sufficiently alleges the facts upon which are based the charge of fraud, in procuring and commuting the homestead entry on which the patent was founded, where it avers that the patentee secured his patent by deceiving the land office by false testimony as to the extent of his improvements, cultivation, and residence.—J. J. McCaskill Co. v. United States, 30 S. Ct. 386, 216 U. S. 504, 54 L. Ed. 590.

Concurrent findings of the two lower courts that a patentee deceived the land office by false testimony as to the extent of his improvements, cultivation, and residence, and secured his patent by that deception, are sustained by the evidence, where his statement and proof on final hearing were that his improvement consisted of a habitable dwelling and a garden cultivated two seasons, and that, after making his settlement, he was absent only two or three times on account of his health, the longest absence being not over three months, and the evidence in the case at bar shows that the house was unfit for habitation, that the patentee never moved his family there, that he did not stay there more than one night in a week, and that he had admitted to a government agent that he had not lived on the homestead entry, and thought he was going to lose it.—Id.

The defense of the statute of limitations under Act March 3, 1891, as amended by Act March 3, 1891, § 8, is not available in a suit brought by the United States to annul patents issued in the mistaken belief that the lands were granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company by Act July 2, 1864, while in fact they formed part of the Yakima Indian reservation, under the treaty of June 9, 1855, with the Yakimas.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 368, 227 U. S. 355, 57 L. Ed. 544, affirming decree 191 F. 947, 112 C. C. A. 359.

A homestead patent covering mineral lands secured by submitting false proofs, though not void or open to collateral attack, may be annulled in a suit by the government against the patentee or a purchaser with notice.—Diamond Coal & Coke Co. v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 507, 233 U. S. 236, 58 L. Ed. 936, affirming decree United States v. Diamond Coal & Coke Co., 191 F. 786, 112 C. C. A. 272.

The government is charged with the burden of proof in a suit to annul a homestead patent as wrongfully covering mineral land.—Id.

To justify annulment of a homestead patent as wrongfully covering mineral lands, it must appear that the known conditions were such as to engender the belief in the patentee that the land contained mineral deposits justifying expenditures for their extraction.—Id.

Arid sagebrush lands held sufficiently shown to have been known to be valuable for their coal at the time proceedings in the land department, resulting in the issuance to a coal company of a patent for such lands upon soldiers' additional homestead entries purchased by it.—Id.

A finding that a corporation purchasing from the patentees under the homestead laws took title with knowledge that the patents were fraudulently procured by falsely representing that the lands were agricultural in character and not known to be valuable coal lands held supported by the evidence.—Washington Securities Co. v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 725, 234 U. S. 76, 58 L. Ed. 1220, affirming decree 194 F. 59, 114 C. C. A. 79.

A bona fide purchase from a homestead entryman is a valid defense which grantee must establish to defeat right of government to cancel a patent as obtained by fraud.—Wright-Blodgett Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 339, 236 U. S. 397, 59 L. Ed. 637, affirming decree Wright, Blodgett & Co. v. Same, 203 F. 263, 121 C. C. A. 461.

The government, in an action to cancel for fraud a patent held by a grantee of the entryman, may show the grantee's knowledge of the fraud.—Id.

A decree canceling patents for timber lands, as made on fraudulent entries, will not be disturbed, where evidence of defendants is outweighed by inferences drawn from their conduct.—Booth-Kelly Lumber Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 659, 237 U. S. 481, 59 L. Ed. 1058, affirming decree United States v. Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., 203 F. 423, 121 C. C. A. 533.

Offer to return land scrip certificates received when commutation homestead entry was made held not prerequisite to suit to annul patent because of entryman's agreement that title when acquired should inure to another's benefit.—Causey v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 365, 240 U. S. 399, 60 L. Ed. 711, affirming decree 203 F. 1022, 121 C. C. A. 668.

◀122. — Suit by third person.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 339, 340.

In a suit to set aside a patent on the ground of misconduct of land officials in a contest case, defendant may introduce the record of their proceedings.—Carr v. Fife, 156 U. S. 494, 15 S. Ct. 427, 39 L. Ed. 508.

Persons not in privity with the government when a patent was issued under Railway Land Grant Act July 27, 1866, cannot attack such patent for fraud or irregularity in its issuance.—Burke v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 907, 234 U. S. 669, 58 L. Ed. 1527.

◀123. Recovery of price by United States.

Irrespective of the adjustment acts (Act March 3, 1887, c. 376, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], and Act March 2, 1896, c. 39, 29 Stat. 42 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1603]), the federal government had the right to sue a railroad company to recover the value of lands erroneously patented to such company, and sold by it to persons who dealt with it in good faith. Decree, 133 F. 651, 66 C. C. A. 581, affirmed.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 26 S. Ct. 296, 200 U. S. 341, 50 L. Ed. 507.

◀124. Relief to claimant of land.

127. — On ground of mistake.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 343.

In 1836 the application of S., defendant's grantor, to the proper United States land office for the purchase of a certain S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ section was duly accepted, and payment made. The office entries then made showed that he had bought and paid for the S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$, but the register, in writing the application and the certificate thereon, by mistake described the S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$, which had been previously entered by another. S., by himself or grantees, has ever since held possession of the S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$, asserted title, and paid taxes, not discovering the mistake until after plaintiff's entry of the S. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ in 1871. The office entries meanwhile had been altered without authority. Plaintiff had been familiar with the records for many years, and his testimony showed that the alteration was apparent. Held, that plaintiff was chargeable with notice of the rights of S., and a decree requiring him to convey the legal title to defendant should be sustained.—Widdicombe v. Childers, 124 U. S. 400, 8 S. Ct. 517, 31 L. Ed. 427.

The locator of a land warrant on a tract of public land, who does all that is required to entitle him to a patent, becomes the equitable owner of the land, though by mistake it is incorrectly described in his application; and where he and his grantees take possession of, improve, and pay taxes on the land, another who procures a patent therefor from the government with knowledge of such facts is a purchaser in bad faith, and may be compelled to convey the legal title to the holder of the superior equity.—Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 17 S. Ct. 922, 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. Ed. 320.

128. — Establishment of trust.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 344; 47 Cent. Dig. Trusts, § 101.

In a proceeding in equity to have the holder of a patent to public land declared a trustee for the benefit of complainant, the findings of the secretary of the interior as to the character and purpose of a settlement by complainant is a finding of fact, and, in the absence of fraud and imposition, is conclusive.—Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 6 S. Ct. 249, 29 L. Ed. 570.

The waiver of a preferential right of entry under a decision in a contest in the Land Department, filed before the patent was finally issued, coupled with a delay of four years in attempting to enforce such preferential right, defeats any right to charge the patentee and his grantees with a resulting trust. Decree (1904) 79 P. 265, 15 Okl. 12, affirmed.—Holt v. Murphy, 28 S. Ct. 212, 207 U. S. 407, 52 L. Ed. 271.

Title acquired under an indemnity railroad selection approved by the Secretary of the Interior is an ex parte proceeding without knowledge of the fact that between the filing of the selection and the rejection of a prior indemnity selection a homestead had been initiated and will be deemed to be held in trust for the homestead claimant by a purchaser with knowledge of occupancy and claim.—Svor v. Morris, 33 S. Ct. 385, 227 U. S. 524, 57 L. Ed. 623, reversing judgment 136 N. W. 852, 118 Minn. 344.

Bona fide purchase from homestead entryman is an affirmative defense to be established to defeat right of railroad claiming under land grant under Act Aug. 5, 1892, to have trust declared in the land in question.—*Great Northern Ry. United States is not a necessary party to a suit by entryman whose entry has been rejected by the land department in favor of the subordinate entryman, to charge the latter with a trust in his favor, because a patent from the United States is involved.—*Daniels v. 129. — Quieting title.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 345.

The question of the bona fides of the settlement by a pre-emption claimant who has received a patent from the government cannot be raised in defense to his claim to have removed as a cloud on his title a patent from the state to the railroad; for, the pre-emption right having attached, the land did not pass under the grant to the state in aid of the railroad, and only the government can inquire into the bona fides of the transaction.—Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 32, 12 S. Ct. 362, 36 L. Ed. 64, affirming judgment 72 Iowa, 505, 34 N. W. 304.

Where a patent to public land was issued by inadvertence or by mistake while an appeal and contest of the right of the patentee was pending, the question of the rights of the parties becomes one of private right, which the courts have jurisdiction to settle in an action to quiet the title. Judgment, 72 N. W. 794, 69 Minn. 547, affirmed.—Duluth & I. R. R. Co. v. Roy, 19 S. Ct. 549, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. Ed. 820.

130. — Recovery of money paid.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 346.

Act June 16, 1880 (21 Stat. 287) § 2, authorizing repayment of the excess of $1.25 per acre paid by public land settlers for land within the place limits of a railroad land grant which is thereafter found not to be within such grant, applies only to cases of mistaken location, etc., and does not authorize repayment where the land was within a railroad grant when patented, but which grant was subsequently forfeited to the United States for failure of the grantee to build the road.—Medbury v. United States, 19 S. Ct. 503, 173 U. S. 492, 43 L. Ed. 779.

In a suit by the United States for the cancellation of a void patent to lands, the invalidity of which was not apparent on its face, but was proved by extrinsic evidence, where the holder did not abandon his claims thereunder, he is not entitled on such cancellation to recover his purchase money or costs.—Morris v. United States, 19 S. Ct. 649, 174 U. S. 196, 43 L. Ed. 946.

A voluntary payment by mistake of $2.50 per acre for public lands which, under the acts of congress, could be purchased for $1.25 per acre, gives the purchaser no lawful claim against the United States for repayment of the overcharge, where the mistake on his part was not induced by any attempt to deceive or misrepresentation by the government officials.—United States v. Edmonston, 21 S. Ct. 718, 181 U. S. 500, 45 L. Ed. 971.

One who seeks to take advantage of Act June 16, 1880, c. 244, § 2, 21 Stat. 287 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1416], providing for the repayment of purchase money where an entry of public lands has been erroneously allowed and cannot be confirmed, must show himself entitled, not only to the land itself, but to everything which the statute has annexed thereto as an incident. Judgment, 36 Ct. Cl. 26, affirmed.—Hoffeld v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 927, 186 U. S. 273, 46 L. Ed. 1160.

A surrender of the duplicate receipt required by Act Cong. June 16, 1880, c. 244, § 2, 21 Stat. 287 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1415], as a condition of the repayment of the purchase price, where an entry of public land has been canceled for conflict, will be presumed from a finding that the Secretary of the Interior ordered repayment "on the relinquishment by the claimants of all claim to the land so canceled," and a further finding that the relinquishment was made "as required by the rules and regulations of the Land Office." Judgment, Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 532, affirmed.—United States v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co., 24 S. Ct. 546, 193 U. S. 651, 48 L. Ed. 830.

(L) RELIEF OF BONA FIDE SETTLERS AND CLAIMANTS.

131. Persons protected as bona fide settlers or occupying claimants.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 347.

A person who, in March, 1888, settled on land granted to the Ontonagon R. Co., but which had not been earned by such company, with a view of making a homestead of it under the laws of the United States, expecting at the time that such grant would be removed, and that he could then enter the land, is a bona fide claimant of such homestead, within the meaning of Act March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. 1008), confirming title in such claimants though he knew of the grant to such railroad company.—Lake Superior Ship Canal, Railway & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 15 S. Ct. 103, 39 L. Ed. 183.

Complainant, claiming land by occupation as a homestead, sought to enjoin an ejectment suit against him, and to quiet his title, claiming that the certification of the land to the state, under which plaintiff in the ejectment suit claimed, was void. The certification was made 13 years before complainant's occupation began, and had never been questioned by the government; and on the ground of such certification complainant's application to enter the land as a homestead, and his subsequent application for a patent, were denied. The land had been sold by the state, and taxed to the various subsequent owners, the different transfers being of record. Held, that the injunction suit could not be maintained.—Deweese v. Reinhard, 17 S. Ct. 340, 165 U. S. 386, 41 L. Ed. 757, affirming decree 61 F. 777, 10 C. C. A. 55.

133. Right to purchase land.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 349.

A patentee of part of a quarter section of land, who had erected a house on such part, and lived in it, and cultivated the residue of the quarter section, does not reside on the residue so cultivated, within Acts Ark. 1871, c. 289, providing that "any settler who on or before the 8th day of March, 1870, was residing * * * on lands belonging to or claimed by" a certain railroad company, "shall have the right to purchase the same, not to exceed 160 acres."—Nix v. Allen, 112 U. S. 129, 5 S. Ct. 70, 28 L. Ed. 675.

The act of March 12, 1872, giving to innocent parties, who, in good faith, held claims to public lands by virtue of location under Chippewa half-breed scrip, the right to purchase the same at not less than $1.25 per acre, was intended for the relief of innocent persons claiming under invalid locations made not only upon the ceded lands themselves, but elsewhere, and in other states or territories.—Fee v. Brown, 162 U. S. 602, 16 S. Ct. 875, 40 L. Ed. 1086, affirming judgment 17 Colo. 510, 30 P. 340.

Homestead entries made prior to the time when notice of withdrawal of the lands was received at the local land office, although after the time when the map of the general route of a railroad was filed in the office of the secretary of the interior, and an order of withdrawal of the lands made, were made valid by the act of congress of April 21, 1876, if the entries were made in good faith by actual settlers upon tracts of not more than 160 acres each, and were therefore subject to the provisions of the act of June 15, 1880, authorizing the purchase of such lands by persons who have entered them, or their transferees by bona fide instruments in writing. Judgment, Amacker v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 58 F. 850, 7 C. C. A. 518, affirmed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amacker, 20 S. Ct. 236, 175 U. S. 564, 44 L. Ed. 274.

(M) CONVEYANCES, CONTRACTS, AND EXEMPTIONS.

135. Assignments and transfers of rights in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 351-362.

The filing in the land office in 1864, by one who had entered certain land as a homestead, of a writing, signed by him, stating that he relinquished all his right and title to the land in favor of another person, restored the land at once to the public domain, though the entry was not canceled until 1871.—Keane v. Brygger, 160 U. S. 276, 16 S. Ct. 278, 40 L. Ed. 426, affirming judgment 3 Wash. St. 338, 28 P. 653.

The right given by Rev. St. § 2306 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1415], to a soldier who had theretofore entered under the homestead laws less than 160 acres, to enter enough more to make up 160 acres, is assignable before entry.—Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 16 S. Ct. 963, 41 L. Ed. 179, affirming judgment 50 Minn. 77, 52 N. W. 271.

Rev. St. U. S. § 1946, provides that sections numbered 16 and 36 in certain territories named shall be reserved for school purposes. Section 2275 provides that where settlements with a view to pre-emption have been made before survey of the lands, and are found to have been made on school sections, the latter shall be subject to the pre-emption claim, and, if they have been or shall be pledged for the use of schools or colleges, other lands of like quantity shall be appropriated in lieu thereof. Held, that the mere possession of such lands by a claimant, without having filed a declaratory statement or made entry in the proper land office, would not prevent the claim of the territory from attaching thereto when the survey was made, and that a sale by such claimant of his possessions and improvements would convey to the purchaser no possessory rights as against the United States, especially as Rev. St. U. S. § 2263, forbids any assignment or transfer of the pre-emption right.—Gonzales v. French, 17 S. Ct. 102, 164 U. S. 338, 41 L. Ed. 458.

A purchaser of the original rights of an entryman at an execution sale against him or his grantee is not an assign within the meaning of Act June 16, 1880, c. 244, § 2, 21 Stat. 287 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1416], providing that when for any cause an entry of public lands has been erroneously allowed, and cannot be confirmed, repayment shall be made of the consideration to the entryman "or to his heirs or assigns," upon the surrender of the duplicate receipt and the execution of a relinquishment of all claims to the land, since voluntary assigns only are contemplated by this section. Judgment, 38 Ct. Cl. 28, affirmed.—Hoffeld v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 927, 186 U. S. 273, 46 L. Ed. 1160.

A claimant under the Oregon donation act of September 27, 1850 (9 Stat. 464, c. 76), who had not made final proof under that act, but had occupied the land for more than four years, could make a valid deed of his rights after the amendatory act (Act July 17, 1854 [10 Stat. 305, c. 84] § 2), by which the proviso in section 4 of the earlier act, making void contracts for the sale of land before patent, was repealed, "provided that no sale shall be deemed valid unless the vendor shall have resided four years upon the land." Judgment (1907) 91 P. 15, 46 Wash. 585, affirmed.—Sylvester v. State of Washington, 30 S. Ct. 25, 215 U. S. 80, 54 L. Ed. 101.

Assignee of soldier's additional homestead right cannot, when application under Rev. St. § 2306 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1415), has been disallowed, substitute in support thereof a valid right in place of the one rejected and take precedence over intervening adverse claim of a railroad.—Robinson v. Lundrigan, 33 S. Ct. 255, 227 U. S. 173, 57 L. Ed. 468, affirming judgment 178 F. 230, 101 C. C. A. 590.

Homesteaders without patents but lawfully in possession of irrigable lands in a reclamation area could grant a right of way over their settlements to a railway company under Rev. St. § 2288 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1385), which as amended by Act March 3, 1905, gives any bona fide settler the right to convey by warranty any part of his claim for a railroad right of way, which power was not affected by Reclamation Act June 17, 1902, giving the Secretary of Interior the power to define limits of irrigation projects and withdraw irrigation lands from settlement except under the homestead laws.—Minidoka & S. W. R. Co. v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 46, 235 U. S. 211, 59 L. Ed. 200, reversing decree United States v. Minidoka & S. W. R. Co., 190 F. 491, 111 C. C. A. 323.

136. Mortgages.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 364-366.

A mortgagee, who has foreclosed his mortgage and purchased the mortgaged property at sheriff's sale under a decree of the court, is an "assign" within the meaning of Act Cong. June 16, 1880, c. 244, § 2, 21 Stat. 287 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1415], providing for the repayment of the purchase price to a person making an entry of public land, or to his heirs or assigns, in case of the cancellation of such entry for conflict. Judgment, Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 532, affirmed.—United States v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co., 24 S. Ct. 548, 193 U. S. 651, 48 L. Ed. 830.

138. Bona fide purchasers.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 368.

The act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1098) § 7, confirming all entries made under pre-emption and other laws in which certificates have been issued after final proof and payment, to which there are no adverse claims prior to final entry, and which have been sold or incumbered for valuable consideration to bona fide purchasers or incumbrancers prior to March 1, 1888, does not apply to an entry which had been canceled for fraud before its enactment. Judgment 61 N. W. 1036, 4 N. D. 452, 50 Am. St. Rep. 669, affirmed.—Parsons v. Venzke, 17 S. Ct. 27, 164 U. S. 89, 41 L. Ed. 360.

The widow of a person who has made a homestead entry, and to whom the lands are devised by his duly-probated will, is a transferee thereof "by bona fide instrument," so as to be entitled to purchase them under Act June 15, 1880, even if she would have no such right simply as widow. Judgment, Amacker v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 58 F. 850, 7 C. C. A. 518, affirmed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amacker, 20 S. Ct. 236, 175 U. S. 564, 44 L. Ed. 274.

The right of a bona fide incumbrancer of land to the issue of a patent under Act Cong. March 3, 1891, § 7, does not extend to an incumbrancer of the interest of an entryman whose entry had been canceled before the passage of the act. Judgment, 69 N. W. 41, 6 N. D. 108, affirmed and modified.—Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 20 S. Ct. 425, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. Ed. 540.

Purchasers from an entryman before the issue of a patent are not bona fide purchasers, who are protected against the cancellation, for fraud of the entryman, of an entry made under Timber and Stone Act June 3, 1878, c. 151 (20 Stat. 89). Decree, Diller v. Hawley, 81 F. 651, 26 C. C. A. 514, affirmed.—Hawley v. Diller, 20 S. Ct. 986, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. Ed. 1157.

The doctrine of relation operates to protect the bona fide purchaser of timber lands from the patentees against the consequences of the wrongful conduct of the entrymen. Decree, 131 F. 608, 67 C. C. A. 1, affirmed.—United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 26 S. Ct. 282, 200 U. S. 321, 50 L. Ed. 499.

A purchaser from the patentees for value, and without notice of any fraud on the part of the entrymen, is a bona fide purchaser within the meaning of Timber Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], and as such is entitled to protection, although such purchaser may have acquired an interest in the lands under a contract for the standing timber before the patents issued; since, by the doctrine of relation, the patents, when issued, became operative as of the date of the entries.—Id.

A bona fide purchaser of standing timber from the holders of receivers' final receipts for the purchase price of lands entered under Timber Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], cannot, upon avoidance for the fraud of the entrymen of the patents afterwards issued, be required to account to the federal government for the timber which it has paid for and cut and removed in reliance upon its purchase.—Id.

A purchaser of the property of a lumber company is not charged with the knowledge of the wrongful character, as against the federal government, of certain conveyances of standing timber, which might have been gained by a searching investigation of the books and papers turned over by the lumber company as evidence of its titles, where there were no circumstances disclosed which cast suspicion upon those titles.—Id.

A purchaser of timber lands after receivers' final receipts have issued is entitled to protection, under Act June 3, 1878, c. 151, § 2, 20 Stat. 89 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1545], as a bona fide purchaser, against the cancellation, for the original frauds of the entrymen, of the patents afterwards issued, unless he is shown to have had actual notice of such fraud. Decree, 138 F. 294, 70 C. C. A. 584, affirmed.—United States v. Clark, 26 S. Ct. 340, 200 U. S. 601, 50 L. Ed. 613.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company and its successor, or their respective vendees of lands which were patented in the mistaken belief that they were public lands granted to the railroad company by Act July 2, 1864, while in fact they formed a part of the Yakima Indian reservation, under the treaty of June 9, 1855, with the Yakimas, are not entitled to the protection accorded by Act March 2, 1896, § 1, or Act Dec. 21, 1904, to bona fide purchasers or settlers.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 368, 227 U. S. 355, 57 L. Ed. 544, affirming decree 191 F. 947, 112 O. C. A. 359.

◀139. Validity of contracts.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 369-376.

Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2290, 2291 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1389, 1390], provide that a person applying for the entry of a homestead claim shall make affidavit that the application is made for his exclusive use and benefit, and not directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person, and that no part of the land has been alienated except for church and other specified purposes. Held, that a contract, in consideration of money due for improvements, to convey land, the title to which is at the time in the United States, by a person who contemplates and afterwards does take it as a homestead, is against public policy, and cannot be enforced in a court of equity.—Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 10 S. Ct. 906, 34 L. Ed. 272, reversing Carkins v. Anderson, 21 Neb. 364, 32 N. W. 155.

The policy of Timber Culture Act June 14, 1878, c. 190 (20 Stat. 113), cannot be deemed to have been violated by an agreement by one who had made an entry thereunder to convey his claim to a proposed partnership as soon as he should acquire title from the government, in view of the failure of that act to require, as in the case of homestead entries, that the entryman shall make affidavit before final certificate that no interest in the land has been alienated.—Adams v. Church, 24 S. Ct. 512, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. Ed. 769.

A contract by which one proceeding under the pre-emption law agreed, in consideration of an advance of a portion of his expenses to be incurred in perfecting the entry, to pay a specified sum for locating him on the land, and a further amount, to be determined by the proceeds of any sale which he might make after acquiring title, is not invalid, under Rev. St. U. S. § 2262, requiring every pre-emptor to make affidavit before entry that "he has not settled upon and improved such land to sell the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use; and that he has not, directly or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself." Judgment, Gross v. Hafemann, 100 N. W. 1, 92 Minn. 367, affirmed.—Hafemann v. Gross, 26 S. Ct. 80, 199 U. S. 342, 50 L. Ed. 220.

Agreement to sell land made by a homestead entryman in advance of commuting his entry is forbidden by Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2289, 2290, as amended by Act March 3, 1891, § 5, which makes it impossible for the entryman to perfect his claim after alienation without committing perjury, though section 2301 as amended by section 6, under which the entry was commuted, says nothing about alienation.—Bailey v. Sanders, 33 S. Ct. 602, 228 U. S. 603, 57 L. Ed. 985, affirming decree 177 F. 667, 101 C. C. A. 293.

An entryman's agreement that title shall inure to the benefit of another disqualifies him from securing title under the commutation provision by substituting the minimum price of the land for the required residence and cultivation.—Causey v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 365, 240 U. S. 389, 60 L. Ed. 711, affirming decree 203 F. 1022, 121 C. C. A. 663.

◀141. Persons entitled to question validity.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 363.

One claiming under a trust deed from the patentee, with knowledge of a prior conveyance of the timber and a right of way, cannot challenge the validity of such conveyance because it was made pursuant to an agreement entered into prior to the patent, in consideration of an advance of money to enable the entryman to perfect his entry and obtain the patent. Judgment, Butterfield Lumber Co. v. Hartman, 34 So. 328, 82 Miss. 494, 100 Am. St. Rep. 644, affirmed.—Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co., 26 S. Ct. 63, 199 U. S. 335, 50 L. Ed. 217.

III. DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE STATES.

Computation of time relating to sale of school lands, see Time, ▶10.

Impairment of obligation of contract, see Constitutional Law, ▶123.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 383-388.

The boundary between Georgia and Florida was long in dispute; Georgia claiming to a line called "Watson's Line," and exercising political jurisdiction, and making grants of land to that line, while Florida claimed to a line called "McNeill's Line," further north than Watson's. Upon running the true line, as finally agreed upon by the two states, it was found to be further north than McNeill's line. Held, that the grant made by Georgia of the land in dispute, which was south of McNeill's line, though made while Georgia exercised the powers of government de facto over the territory there, was nevertheless void; and that the confirmation by Florida of the grants made by Georgia did not invalidate or disturb the grant of the land in dispute previously made by itself.—Coffee v. Groover, 123 U. S. 1, 8 S. Ct. 1, 31 L. Ed. 51, reversing judgment Coffee v. Groover, 20 Fla. 64.

Grants of land made by a state in territory over which it exercises political jurisdiction de facto, but which does not rightfully belong to it, are invalid as against the state to which the territory rightfully belongs.—Id.

◀152. Louisiana.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 423.

Where lands were patented by the state of Louisiana "according to the official plat" in the state land office, which plat designates them as tidal overflow, it cannot be objected that the lands were not conveyed as overflowed lands, as the plat becomes a part of the grant.—Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 9 S. Ct. 203, 32 L. Ed. 566.

Patents from a state for its public lands, signed by the proper officers, and in due form to convey the title of the state to the patentees, are not subjects of individual attack as improperly issued, because the land scrip accepted by the state in lieu of the purchase price was not legally receivable for the land in question, but such patents can be set aside only in judicial proceedings instituted on behalf of the state. Decree (1908) 45 So. 558, 120 La. 712, affirmed.—J. W. Frellsen & Co. v. Crandell, 30 S. Ct. 490, 217 U. S. 71, 54 L. Ed. 670.

◀154. Maryland.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 443-451.

In 1780 the state of Maryland confiscated all the proprietor's interests in the province, and the reserved rent of one-fifth of the ores passed to the state by the Revolution. The proprietary grant of 1772 was to two grantees, as tenants in common, the estate of one of whom was confiscated as property of a British subject, and was thereafter, in 1792, conveyed by the state without any reservation of mines. Held, that such conveyance did not purport to transfer anything else than the property confiscated, and that all precious metals therein remained the property of the state.—Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 13 S. Ct. 361, 37 L. Ed. 170.

The grant by the English crown to the lord proprietor of Maryland conveyed all precious metals in the province, subject to a rent of one-fifth of all the gold and silver ore there found. A grant by the lord proprietor in 1760 did not reserve the right to precious metals, but a new grant in 1772 of the same property did reserve such right. In 1791 Maryland ceded to the United States territory for the District of Columbia, and in 1803 the holder under the patent of 1772 and the grant of 1792 took a resurvey patent from the state of Maryland, wherein there was no reservation of mines; such patent being upon a warrant of resurvey issued May 12, 1800,—nine months before congress assumed jurisdiction over the District of Columbia. Held that, under the law of Maryland, no equitable title to the land could be created until the return of the certificate of survey to the land office, and that as the patent did not show that this certificate was so returned, and as the party obtaining the warrant had, under the law, two years in which to make such return, the presumption would be that such return was not made until after congress assumed jurisdiction, in 1801, and therefore that the grantee could take no title whatever from Maryland under the patent of 1803, and that the right to all mines in such property was vested in the United States.—Id.

Act N. Y. May 10, 1888, ceding "all the right, title, and interest" of the state in lands under the waters of Huntington bay to the town of Huntington "for the purpose of oyster cultivation," is exclusive in its scope.—*Lowndes v. 167. Pennsylvania.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 479-500.

Plaintiff, claiming title to land by virtue of payment to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by R., though the application, warrant, and survey were in the name of a third person, introduced, as evidence of payment by R., an original application in the name of the person to whom the warrant was issued, for the purchase of several different tracts, including that in controversy; a purchase voucher relating to the same tracts in the same name, containing a marginal entry. "A gen'l rec't wrote;" and a receipt contained in an old purchase blotter, corresponding in number with the application and voucher, running to R. Held that this, in connection with the fact that a warrant was actually issued, was sufficient evidence that the land had been paid for, and that the payment was made by R., and it did not matter that the date of the warrant was prior to the date of the receipt, as the established custom was to date the warrant back to the date of the application.—Herron v. Dater, 120 U. S. 464, 7 S. Ct. 620, 30 L. Ed. 748.

Plaintiff, claiming title to land by virtue of payment to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by R., though the application, warrant, and survey were in the name of a third person, having shown payment of taxes by R., by the return of a deputy surveyor, who made the original survey, defendant could not introduce other parts of the return, showing taxes paid by R. into the same office and during the same time on lands of which his ownership was undisputed, in order to show that the taxes alleged to have been paid on the land in controversy might have been intended as a payment on the other tracts.—Id.

In Pennsylvania, where title to lands is derived from the commonwealth, evidence of payment of the purchase price by a person, other than the one whose name appears in the application, warrant, and survey, establishes a prima facie legal title in such person; and a title resting upon such payment, made in 1793, and supported by possession taken by the claimant's successor in title in 1864, and payment of taxes meanwhile, is superior to a title derived through a patent issued in 1797 to a third person, which recites a conveyance by the warrantee to the patentee, but which is not connected with the warrant or survey by any independent evidence and under which no entry was made until 1875.—Id.

In Pennsylvania, after the lapse of 21 years from the return of a survey, the presumption is that the warrant was located as returned by the surveyor to the land office; but this presumption is not conclusive, and is rebutted by evidence of the existence of marked lines and monuments, and other facts tending to show that the actual location was different from the official courses and distances; and the fact that younger surveys of fixed lines call for the older is admissible to aid the jury in discovering the actual location of the survey.—Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 309, 8 S. Ct. 907, 31 L. Ed. 721.

In Pennsylvania, where a survey has been returned more than 21 years, the presumption that it has been actually and legally made is conclusive, and cannot be controverted by a party claiming under a junior survey.—Schraeder Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Packer, 129 U. S. 688, 9 S. Ct. 385, 32 L. Ed. 760.

Payment of the purchase money under a Pennsylvania land warrant by one not named therein vests in him the ownership of the warrant and a right to maintain ejectment for the land embraced in the survey under it, which cannot be affected by a patent subsequently issued by the state to another, although such patent recites a conveyance to the patentee by the person named in the warrant, dated before the warrant issued or was paid for, where there is no other evidence of such conveyance.—Murphy v. Packer, 152 U. S. 398, 14 S. Ct. 636, 38 L. Ed. 489, following Herron v. Dater, 120 U. S. 464, 7 S. Ct. 620, 30 L. Ed. 748.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 523-524.

172. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 523-543.

On the hearing of a mandamus against a district surveyor of Texas for survey of certain lands which petitioner had applied to purchase from the state, it appeared that the application was made under Laws Tex. 1879, c. 52, as amended by Laws 1881, c. 33, providing that the applicant must have the land surveyed by the surveyor of the district; the survey to be completed in 8 months, and returned to the land office in 60 days thereafter, when the applicant upon payment of the price should receive his patent. Petitioner applied for survey of a tract, and, on depositing the fees, his application was filed and recorded. Within three months, and before survey, the legislature withdrew the land from public sale, and the surveyor then refused to make the survey. Held that, as petitioner had not completed the acts necessary to give him a title, he had acquired no vested rights.—Campbell v. Wade, 132 U. S. 34, 10 S. Ct. 9, 33 L. Ed. 240.

The right to purchase public lands, under the statute of July 14, 1879, accrued only after the certified map and field notes of the surveyor who made the surveys upon the application of the intending purchaser had been returned and filed in the general land office of the state. By merely filing an application with the proper surveyor to have the lands surveyed, the applicant acquired no right, title, or interest in the lands, such as could be lawfully assigned to another.—Telfener v. Russ, 162 U. S. 170, 16 S. Ct. 695, 40 L. Ed. 930.

173. — School, university, and asylum lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 544-551.

Under the statutes relating to the sale of school lands (Acts July 8, 1879, and April 6, 1881), the surveyor of the county, after receiving and recording in due form an application to purchase lands, cannot entertain another application to purchase the same lands until the expiration of 90 days; and the failure of the applicant during that period to make his first payment, and to present to the surveyor the certificate of the commissioner of the general land office, works a forfeiture of the application, and in that event the surveyor may thereafter entertain a new application.—Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 13 S. Ct. 217, 37 L. Ed. 72.

Under the statutes relating to the sale of school lands (Act July 8, 1879, and Act April 6, 1881), an applicant who makes an application in the name of a third person cannot, after the application has been filed and recorded by the surveyor, abandon the same, and make a new application in the names of other parties before the expiration of the 90 days.—Id.

The legal title to the Texas lands patented to Greer county under the mistaken supposition that this county was Texas territory, and was, therefore, entitled to share in the grant of lands for school purposes to each county in the state, made by Tex. Gen. Laws 1883, c. 55, did not pass to the corporation subsequently organized out of the same territory as Greer county, Oklahoma, by Act Cong. May 4, 1896, c. 155, 29 Stat. 113, but, upon the disappearance of the de facto Texas county, such title vested in the state of Texas. Judgment, 72 S. W. 104, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 223, affirmed.—Greer County v. State of Texas, 25 S. Ct. 437, 197 U. S. 235, 49 L. Ed. 736.

175. — Location and survey.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 555-570.

The location of a headright certificate on certain land does not render a subsequent location of a new certificate, issued to the same person, on other land, void, in Texas, in the absence of evidence that the owner had sold or otherwise disposed of the first land, as he had a right to abandon it.—Miller v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 132 U. S. 662, 10 S. Ct. 206, 33 L. Ed. 487.

Title to and possession of land acquired under a location of a certificate thereon by one authorized, either as purchaser of the certificate or agent, to locate it, are good, as against all persons claiming under a title inferior to the certificate.—Id.

When the location of a land certificate is absolutely void by reason of a previous certificate's having been validly located on the same land, which is in notorious possession of persons claiming thereunder, the fact that the location under such previous certificate is subsequently invalidated by failure of those claiming under it to comply with the law does not revive the void location.—Id.

The surveys of land in Texas, to be purchased under Act Tex. July 14, 1879, required by the statute, must be made on the ground in order to have any validity, and no right of purchase from the state is acquired by merely making up pretended maps and field notes from office documents, without going on the land.—Telfener v. Russ, 162 U. S. 170, 16 S. Ct. 695, 40 L. Ed. 930.

180. — Land officers and proceedings thereof.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 584.

A headright certificate was indorsed as filed in the land office October 4, 1852, and across its face was written, "Registered and approved Dec. 11, 1857," which was signed by one as "Comm'r of Claims." On its wrapper was a partly obliterated memorandum in pencil, "Withdrawn * * * Dec. 14, '57, for relocation," and also an indorsement of "Forfeited for nonreturn of unconditional certificate by 1st Aug. 1857," as was required by law. A witness testified that he made the latter indorsement when he was chief clerk, which was from 1865 or 1866 to 1870, and that he did not then notice the former memorandum, which, he testified, was in the writing of one who was chief clerk in 1857, and for several years thereafter. The certificate could not be found in the land office in 1868, and the second indorsement on the wrapper was probably made then. Held, that the prima facie proof was that the certificate was in the office from 1852 to December, 1857, and the indorsement of forfeiture on the wrapper was an error.—Miller v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 132 U. S. 662, 10 S. Ct. 206, 33 L. Ed. 487.

184. Washington.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 598.

185. — Tide and shore lands.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 598.

The title to tide lands is in the state, and the act of congress (17 Stat. 649) providing for the issuance of "Valentine Scrip," and for its location upon "unoccupied and unappropriated public lands," cannot therefore be so construed as to authorize the entry with such scrip upon tide land situated in the state of Washington.—Mann v. Tacoma Land Co., 153 U. S. 273, 14 S. Ct. 820, 38 L. Ed. 714; Baer v. Moran Bros. Co., 153 U. S. 287, 14 S. Ct. 823, 38 L. Ed. 718.

IV. COLONIAL AND PROPRIETARY GRANTS.

188. Colonial charters and grants from the crown.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 601-611.

The grant, by charters from colonial governors of New York, to the town of Huntington, Long Island, of lands bounded north by "the Sound," included Huntington Bay, though the statement of the appurtenances contained no words applicable to such exterior waters except the word "harbors," and the bay was not landlocked nor a place of absolute safety for shipping; it having been always known as a distinct body of water, not part of Long Island Sound, and called indiscriminately "bay" or "harbor" at the time of the original grant.—Lowndes v. Board of Trustees of Town of Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 14 S. Ct. 758, 38 L. Ed. 615, affirming judgment (C. C.) Board of Trustees of Town of Huntington v. Lowndes, 40 F. 625.

189. Grants, concessions, and patents from colonial governments or proprietors.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 612-623.

192. — Construction and operation in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 615, 617, 618.

A warrant authorizing the survey of certain lands in Pennsylvania was issued in 1751 to C., by the proprietaries, but no return of the survey was ever made to the land office. Held, that it must be presumed, from the lapse of time, the right to a grant under the warrant had been abandoned, and one claiming title to the land in 1832, through C., and his grantees, could not sustain his title by showing that a private survey had been made, that it was recognized by the proprietaries, and that a warrant had been issued thereon to C., and payment for the land made to them by him, but that the absence of a return of the survey was fatal to his claim.—Paxton v. Griswold, 122 U. S. 441, 7 S. Ct. 1216, 30 L. Ed. 1143.

¶197. Recognition and enforcement by United States in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 624, 633.

Under the Spanish laws the king retained unlimited authority of control and disposition over lands assigned to a town or pueblo which were undisposed of, and not the subject of private grant; and this authority (in respect to lands subsequently acquired by the United States) passed successively to the government of Mexico and to congress.—United States v. City of Santa Fé, 17 S. Ct. 472, 165 U. S. 675, 41 L. Ed. 874.

By rejecting the tenth article of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, as agreed upon between the commissioners of the two governments, and which, in effect, bound the United States to recognize the validity of grants as to which the grantees had been prevented from fulfilling the conditions on which they were made, this government, in effect, declared that it would not recognize any grants which were not, at the time of the treaty, recognized by the Mexican government as valid, or any grants the conditions of which, either precedent or subsequent, had not been fully performed.—Cessna v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 314, 169 U. S. 165, 42 L. Ed. 702.

Under the Spanish and Mexican law, the "ordinary prescription" (being 10 years) for immovable property required for its operation (1) good faith, (2) just title, and (3) continued and uninterrupted possession; and the "just title" did not include a claim which was void because it depended on a grant made by an official or body which had no authority to dispose of the public domain.—Hayes v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 735, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. Ed. 1174.

¶199. Power to make in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 625-633, 633.

The authority and jurisdiction of Mexican officials in California terminated on the 7th of July, 1848. No alcalde appointed or elected after that date was empowered to give juridical possession of land granted by the previous government.—More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 8 S. Ct. 1067, 32 L. Ed. 51.

The power given to prefects by the Mexican law of March 20, 1837, to "regulate administratively and in conformity with the laws, the distribution of the common lands in the towns of the district," did not authorize them to make grants of public lands generally; the latter authority having been conferred upon the departmental governors by the regulations of November 1, 1828. Hence a grant made by such a prefect, which is not shown to have been approved by the governor or other superior Mexican authority, was void. The fact that similar grants may have been confirmed by congress, or have received the approval of the Mexican authorities, is not sufficient ground for recognizing such a grant as valid.—Crespin v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 53, 168 U. S. 208, 42 L. Ed. 438.

Under the Mexican colonization law of January 4, 1823, the ayuntamiento or general council of a town had no authority to make grants of lands outside of the four square leagues to which the town may have been entitled, and especially not when the grant was disapproved by the provincial deputation to which it was referred.—Cessna v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 314, 169 U. S. 165, 42 L. Ed. 702.

Lands appurtenant to towns were, nevertheless, a part of the public domain, subject to the authority and disposition of the Mexican national government, and the officers of a territory in which they were located had no authority to grant them to private individuals.—Hayes v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 735, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. Ed. 1174.

The officials of New Mexico had no authority in 1825 to make grants of the public domain. Even if they had previously exercised it, they were deprived of such power by the decree of October 24, 1824, declaring New Mexico a territory of the federation, taken in connection with the colonization law of 1824 and the constitution of October 24, 1824.—Id.

An intendant in a Spanish province in Mexico retained his office and authority under the Mexican government until 1824; and where he sold land before that time, and paid the money into the treasury of Mexico, and it was retained by the government, which did not challenge the legality of the sale, the grant was good as against the Mexican government.—Ely's Adm'r v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 840, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. Ed. 142.

While, to sustain a Mexican grant, the regularity of the proceedings, and the power of the officers assuming to act in making it, must both be established, and the authority cannot be inferred from its exercise alone, yet when the statutes and ordinances defining the duties and powers of an officer are indefinite in their terms, and it is shown that he exercised the same powers in other cases without question by the government, and the grants purporting to have been made by him were not challenged, such facts support a construction of the statutes and ordinances conferring the power exercised.—Id.

Under the Mexican general decree of February 10, 1842 (4 Mex. Laws, 114), directing the sale of temporalities by the boards of sale of the several departments, which at that time were composed of four members, one of whom was the departmental treasurer, such treasurer had no authority to act alone in selling lands as temporalities, whatever their value, even though the decree of April 17, 1837, providing that all sales exceeding $500 should necessarily be made by the board, be construed to permit sales of lands generally of less value to be made by him alone, as the authority to sell temporalities was specific.—Faxon v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 849, 171 U. S. 244, 43 L. Ed. 151.

The Mexican decree of April 17, 1837 (article 73), requiring all sales of public lands exceeding $500 to be made by a board of sales composed of officials therein named, left in force as governing sales of land of less value the unrepealed regulations of July 20, 1831, which also required all sales to be made by a board of sales, though somewhat differently constituted. Neither authorized sales to be made by any single officer.—Id.

While the Mexican constitution of 1824 was in force, and prior to the adoption of that of 1836, under the decree of August 4, 1824 (article 11), which granted to the states the revenues not therein reserved to the federal government, the revenue from the sale of public lands within the several states belonged to such states, and they were authorized to make sales of such lands within their limits through their own officers.—Camou v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 855, 171 U. S. 277, 43 L. Ed. 163.

Neither a prefect nor an alcalde had power to make a grant of lands on behalf of the Mexican government.—United States v. Pena, 20 S. Ct. 165, 175 U. S. 500, 44 L. Ed. 251.

The department assembly or territorial deputation of New Mexico in 1831 had no power or authority to make a grant of lands.—Chavez v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 201, 175 U. S. 552, 44 L. Ed. 269.

Authority of a Spanish officer to make a conveyance of the public domain cannot be presumed from the mere fact of the conveyance, in the absence of other evidence, where he had no authority ex officio to do so.—Mitchell v. Furman, 21 S. Ct. 430, 180 U. S. 402, 45 L. Ed. 596.

A mere recitation in papers alleged to constitute a Spanish grant, that a document was executed by a certain person in consequence of the illness of the governor, without anything to show that such person had been appointed governor pro tempore, is insufficient proof of his right to exercise such authority.—Id.

No presumption that the supreme executive of the Mexican nation had delegated his power to the governor or political chief of a province or state can be indulged for the purpose of upholding a grant of land made by the governor in violation of the constitution or laws which had theretofore been adopted or passed, where there is nothing in the laws of the nation providing in terms or by inference for the general delegation of power by the supreme executive to make such grants, even if he himself had such power.—Whitney v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 565, 181 U. S. 104, 45 L. Ed. 771.

The transference of national sovereignty, and not the disposal of public land as property, was what was comprehended by the declaration of the Spanish Constitution that "to alienate, cede, or exchange any part of Spanish territory," the King required "the authority of a special law."—Jover y Costas v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, 31 S. Ct. 664, 221 U. S. 623, 55 L. Ed. 884.

A grant of tide lands by the King of Spain for purposes of reclamation and improvement was not forbidden by Partida 3, tit. 28, laws 3 and 4, which affirm that the sea and its shore are among the things which belong in common to all men.—Id.

The government general of the Philippines must be deemed to have had the authority to make a grant of tide lands for purposes of reclamation and improvement, in view of the uniform construction given by the successive governors general to the provisions of the Laws of the Indies, book 2, tit. 15, law 11, defining the powers of that official, and acquiesced in by the King of Spain, as empowering him to do whatever the King could do were he present, except where otherwise specially provided, and of the failure of the Spanish authorities for thirty-nine years to call the grant into question, meanwhile imposing taxes upon the land as private property.—Id.

202. Settlements and contracts under colonization laws.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 637.

By the Spanish law in force in 1788 lands were distributed to those intending to settle, and, after the settlers had lived and labored in their settlements for the space of four years, they were empowered to sell the lands, or dispose of them by will; but confirmation by the audiencia, or the governor, if recourse to the audiencia was impracticable, after the four years had elapsed, was required to complete the legal title.—Chaves v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 72, 168 U. S. 177, 42 L. Ed. 426.

In the absence of any proof to the contrary, a legal presumption arises that the colonization law of 1824 had been promulgated in the territory of New Mexico prior to the making of an alleged grant by the territorial authorities in 1825.—Hayes v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 735, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. Ed. 1174.

To vest an applicant under the colonization regulations of 1828 with title in fee, either absolute and perfect or conditional and imperfect, to public lands in New Mexico under a Mexican grant, substantial compliance with the preliminary requisites to a grant was essential; and it was necessary that the grant should be evidenced by an act of the governor clearly and unequivocally conveying the land intended to be granted, and that a public record in some form should be made of the grant.—United States v. Elder, 20 S. Ct. 537, 177 U. S. 104, 44 L. Ed. 690.

A title under a Mexican grant of land in New Mexico, made in 1845 by the governor is incomplete, and does not make a case for confirmation under the Mexican colonization law of August, 1824, and the regulations of 1828, where there is no evidence of the approval of the grant by the assembly, and no record of further proceedings to obtain the approval of the supreme government, and there is no record of its existence in the archives of New Mexico.—Whitney v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 565, 181 U. S. 104, 45 L. Ed. 771.

203. Mode of making, requisites, and validity.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 633-643.

No petition or order is necessary for an extension of title under a Mexican grant, nor is it necessary that the grant should be attached to the testimonio, nor that the testimonio should be written on stamped paper. The commissioner's designation of the colony by a name popularly used, although not the legal name, is sufficient; and the extension will not be held void, long afterwards, the government having meanwhile acquiesced in the commissioner's acts, because it was executed two days after the expiration of the time limited by the law for taking possession.—Gonzales v. Ross, 120 U. S. 605, 7 S. Ct. 705, 30 L. Ed. 801.

As the act of congress of Coahuila and Texas of March 26, 1834, creating a new system of disposing of the public lands, and repealing the act of 1832, did not abrogate the grants and sales which had been made under the latter act, nor abolish the office and functions of commissioners, an extension of title by a commissioner, after the act of 1834 took effect, in pursuance of a concession previously made under the act of 1832, is valid.—Id.

An application under which a concession for Mexican lands was made, showed that the applicant desired lands in the neighborhood of territory formerly ceded to a certain colony, and the concession authorized the land to be located "by the commissioner for the division of lands in the enterprise to which corresponds the one which petitioner solicits," and the colony had, since its first grant, extended its territory. Held, that a location outside of the limits of the original colony, by the commissioner for the colony, was valid, especially as the government subsequently acquiesced in his act by receiving his protocol.—Id.

Land grants in question were surveyed in the spring of 1818. The treaty by which Florida was ceded fixed January 22, 1818, as the date by which to test the acts of surveying necessary to the validity of grants from the king of Spain. But the United States act of June 22, 1860, fixed the date of cession, February 22, 1819, as the proper date. Held, that these grants were not void because not surveyed before January 22, 1818.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

An instruction in ejectment that if, from the descriptions and words in the petition and act of juridical possession, the jury could not definitely locate the boundaries of the Mexican grant under which plaintiff claimed, they must find for defendant, was correct.—Pinkerton v. Ledoux, 129 U. S. 346, 9 S. Ct. 399, 32 L. Ed. 706.

Juridical possession of a Mexican grant could not be delivered by the treasurer general of the department, when not on the land, the coterminous proprietors not being called to give assent to the final act investing the grantees with title and possession, and there being no physical act on the part of the grantees accepting or taking possession of the grant.—Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 16 S. Ct. 544, 40 L. Ed. 673.

When the expediente of proceedings on petition for a grant shows that what was directed to be appraised, what was appraised, what was directed to be sold, what was sold, what was paid for, and what purported to be granted, was $7\frac{1}{2}$ sitios, while the alleged preliminary survey indicated general boundaries containing over 18 sitios, the grant was of $7\frac{1}{2}$ sitios within exterior boundaries, and hence a subsequent location was necessary thereunder in order to give any right against the United States based on the Gadsden treaty of December 30, 1853.—Id.

On a petition for a grant of land with specified boundaries, the governor indorsed a recital beginning, "As he asks it according to law, and I understand that no injury results to any third party," etc., together with a direction to the alcalde to "proceed to give the possession, designating the limits, and doing what is proper," etc. Held, that this was a direction to designate the limits described in the petition, and gave the alcalde no authority to designate limits giving a much larger tract than that petitioned for.—Bergere v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 4, 168 U. S. 60, 42 L. Ed. 383.

Where the governor, in referring a petition for a grant to the alcalde, with directions to give possession, "designating the limits, and doing what is proper," further directs that he then transmit the expediente to the governor's office, "so that, if approved, the proper testimonio may be given to the petitioner," the action of the alcalde in delivering possession is of no effect until approved by the governor; and the burden of showing such approval rests upon the claimant.—Id.

On the return of the alcalde certifying to the juridical delivery by him of certain lands, the paper below his signature and that of his witnesses was mutilated so that there appeared only the words "the boundaries by," and below this what was apparently the governor's signature with the first letter torn off. Held, that there was nothing on the face of the paper justifying a presumption of an approval by the governor of the alcalde's action.—Id.

An opinion expressed by a Spanish governor, in answer to a letter of the alcalde referring to him a matter of conflicting claims under grants of previous governors, held to be a mere ex parte opinion, not constituting a decision in a judicial proceeding, it appearing that the parties in interest had no notice thereof, and that the governor expressly disclaimed any authority to adjudicate or review the acts of his predecessors.—Chaves v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 72, 168 U. S. 177, 42 L. Ed. 426.

The Spanish law of January 4, 1813, looking to the disposition of crown lands and municipal domains, was not in force in the territory of New Mexico after the enactment of the colonization law of 1824.—Hayes v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 735, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. Ed. 1174.

A grant made "in the name of the free and independent sovereign state of Sonora, as well as that of the august Mexican nation," in 1838, when the state of Sonora was in rebellion against the national authority, through the instrumentality of the "junta de almoneda," which was a national agency, and without complying with the procedure prescribed by the national laws for that body, was invalid, and, having never been ratified by the national government, could not be confirmed by the board of private land claims.—United States v. Coe, 18 S. Ct. 745, 170 U. S. 681, 42 L. Ed. 1195.

Some interruption of possession under a Mexican grant during the war between the United States and Mexico is not fatal to the validity of the grant.—United States v. Pena, 20 S. Ct. 165, 175 U. S. 500, 44 L. Ed. 251.

Ratification by the governor of a grant of lands which the departmental assembly had attempted to make is not shown by a letter, signed by him, in which he simply acknowledges the receipt of an official communication from an alcalde, reporting the execution of a decree of the deputation making the grant, and asking how much his fee should be, as to which the governor says he is ignorant, but advises him to ask the assessor, although the governor does not make any protest against the validity of the grant.—Chavez v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 201, 175 U. S. 552, 44 L. Ed. 269.

The governor of New Mexico cannot be held to have made a grant of lands by reason of his being ex officio president of the territorial deputation at the time when that body attempted to make a grant of lands, although he was present and attested the action of the deputation.—Id.

No title was granted by the Mexican government to claimants of land whose petition asked for the grant of possession of the land in order to plant grain thereon for harvesting, where the order based thereon directed them to be placed in possession "in order that they may not lose time in their labor until the necessary formalities can be had," while the act of possession made by the alcalde states that they were not "authorized to exchange, sell, or alienate the same until they shall have acquired title, or have sufficient time to do so."—Peabody v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 219, 175 U. S. 546, 44 L. Ed. 267.

A grant of the title to land by the governor of New Mexico was not made by an indorsement on a petition directing the prefect of the district to ascertain whether the land applied for had an owner, and to cause delivery of the land referred to, as this is reasonably interpreted to be a mere license to occupy the land for cultivation, or to give temporary possession pending further action in the matter.—United States v. Elder, 20 S. Ct. 537, 177 U. S. 104, 44 L. Ed. 690.

An alleged Spanish grant of lands in East Florida, which was not in itself a royal title, and was neither made nor confirmed by the lawful authorities of the king, was insufficient to constitute a perfect title, at the time of the cession of Florida to the United States, without further action of the Spanish government to perfect it.—Mitchell v. Furman, 21 S. Ct. 430, 180 U. S. 402, 45 L. Ed. 596.

The rights of Mission Indians under a grant from the Mexican government were not recognized by that government at the time of the cession of California to the United States by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, where, though one later grant was subject to the condition that the grantee should not molest the Indians thereon, a still later grant was made on a report of the justice of the peace to the effect that the land had been for two years vacant and abandoned, and that there were some property rights vested in the mission, the officials of which had consented to the grant, which it could no longer cultivate and did not need, though it provides that the grantee shall be "allowed to fence it in without interference with the roads and other usages (servidumbres)." Judgment, Harvey v. Barker, 58 P. 692, 126 Cal. 262, affirmed.—Barker v. Harvey, 21 S. Ct. 690, 181 U. S. 481, 45 L. Ed. 963.

A claimant under a Mexican land grant, for whose predecessor in interest the Mexican authorities, on formal denouncement of the excess therein over the area which the grantee could take under the Mexican law, have laid off in Mexico this lawful area, cannot have such lawful area confirmed by the court of private land claims out of territory ceded by Mexico to the United States, which was included within the original survey of the grant.—Reloj Cattle Co. v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 499, 184 U. S. 624, 46 L. Ed. 721.

A definite location and possession of a Mexican land grant of 4 sitios is shown with reasonable certainty by evidence that the grantee took and continued in possession of a segregated tract of that area laid off by the original survey in the proceedings to obtain the grant, and that the subsequent surveys, though, like the original, not made with the care and precision that characterize surveys made in the long settled portions of the country, were made to verify and renew the original survey, and not with a purpose to locate a floating grant of uncertain boundaries and extent.—United States v. Camou, 22 S. Ct. 505, 184 U. S. 572, 46 L. Ed. 694.

A Mexican grant of land whose measurement was made with great care, and the quantity repeatedly recited in the proceedings to secure the grant, is a grant by quantity, notwithstanding a general description by natural objects was given in the original petition; and when the quantity covered by the grant has been laid off in Mexico by the Mexican authorities, on denouncement of the overplus within such grant, no legal or equitable title therefor exists against the United States.—Ainsa v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 507, 184 U. S. 639, 46 L. Ed. 727.

A Mexican grant of "2 sitios of land for raising cattle and horses, which comprise the place called 'Aribac,'" made in proceedings to perfect a title acquired under a prior sale, the record of which had been lost, is not so located as to admit of confirmation under the provision of the Gadsden treaty that grants are not to "be respected or be considered as obligatory which have not been located and duly recorded in the archives of Mexico," where the landmarks described in the depositions taken in the proceedings to secure the grant cannot be identified with adequate certainty, and the location of the 2 sitios within the larger area claimed cannot be satisfactorily determined, because the record contains no original survey or field notes, and there is no certainty as to an initial point or center.—Arivaca Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 525, 184 U. S. 649, 46 L. Ed. 731.

A grant initiated by proceedings approved by the intendant ad interim of Sonora and Sinaloa, in which a sale was made in 1822, and the purchase price thereupon paid into the public treasury, and completed by title issued by the commissary general of Sonora in 1825, should be recognized as valid by the court of private land claims.—United States v. Green, 22 S. Ct. 640, 185 U. S. 256, 46 L. Ed. 898.

A grant of public land in the Philippine Islands, made by subordinate Spanish officials, receives no support from the decree of the Spanish Cortes of January 4, 1813, where the conditions of the decree were not fulfilled.—Tiglaio v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, 30 S. Ct. 129, 215 U. S. 410, 54 L. Ed. 257.

206. Lands included.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 633, 651-653.

It does not satisfactorily appear that the grant of Gov. Armijo of 1841 to Beaubien and Miranda, known afterwards as the "Maxwell Land Grant," since ascertained to amount to 1,714,764.94 acres, was of that character which, by the decree of the Mexican congress of 1824, was limited to 11 square leagues of land for each grantee.—United States v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325, 7 S. C. 1015, 30 L. Ed. 949; Id., 122 U. S. 365, 7 S. Ct. 1271, 30 L. Ed. 1211.

The Mexican grant of land in California called the "Moquelamos Grant," described as "bounded on the east by the adjacent sierra," has its eastern limit at the point where the foothills of the sierra begin to rise above the plain, near the range line between ranges 7 and 8.—United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 8 S. Ct. 1177, 32 L. Ed. 213, affirming decree (C. C.) 30 F. 147.

Where the description contained in a petition and grant differs from that contained in the act of juridical possession, the former must prevail, as the latter is based upon them.—Pinkerton v. Ledoux, 129 U. S. 346, 9 S. Ct. 399, 32 L. Ed. 706.

The court of private land claims is not empowered to pass to the settlers of a pueblo the title to lands lying within its outboundaries which had not been allotted in severalty prior to the cession of the territory to the United States.—United States v. Sandoval, 17 S. Ct. 868, 167 U. S. 278, 42 L. Ed. 168.

Where, under an assignment of land, within certain boundaries, by the Spanish governor of a province, to a number of petitioners for the establishment of a town or colony, a subordinate officer, by direction of the governor, allotted to each petitioner and to each other settler appearing with them a portion of the land in severalty, and placed him in possession, the title passed to only such tracts as were so allotted; the unallotted portion within the exterior boundaries named in the assignment remaining the property of the sovereign.—Rio Arriba Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 875, 167 U. S. 298, 42 L. Ed. 175.

Where a grant was not valid, against the Mexican government, to the boundaries given in the survey, but only for the quantity of land therein named, it will not be confirmed to such boundaries by the United States, though no steps had been taken by the government of Mexico to assert its ownership of the excess at the time the territory was ceded to the United States.—Ely's Adm'r v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 840, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. Ed. 142.

Where, in a Mexican grant, there is a large discrepancy between the amount of land stated in the proceedings for its sale, and for which payment was made, and the quantity included within the outer boundaries of the survey, the quantity named, and which was intended to be sold, will govern in establishing title under the grant, and the court of private land claims should determine its location.—Id.

207. Performance of conditions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 638, 654-656.

Act Tex. March 24, 1825, authorized tracts of land to be set apart for colonization, and provided that a certain amount thereof should be given to each settler, and a certain amount to the empresarios, or colonizing contractors, for every hundred families of settlers. On the petition of certain persons, a Mexican grant issued to them assigning for colonization a large tract of land, but declaring that the state retained the right of property in all the surplus land after laying off that to which the colonizers and settlers were entitled, and providing that the colonizers should introduce a stipulated number of settlers within a given time, or be debarred of all privilege and advantages of the law. The colonizers failed to perform this obligation. Held, that they never acquired any title, the grant not being a present conveyance subject to a defeasance, but a contract to convey on performance of a condition precedent which was never fulfilled.—Interstate Land Co. v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 139 U. S. 569, 11 S. Ct. 656, 35 L. Ed. 278, affirming decree (C. C.) 41 F. 275.

The thirteenth section of the act establishing the court of private land claims, having forbidden the confirmation by it of any grant made on condition, either antecedent or subsequent, unless it appears that such condition has been performed in the time and manner stated, that court has no authority to confirm a claim when the conditions of the grant were not complied with, even if the grantee was prevented from performing them by the wrongful act of the Mexican government itself.—Cessna v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 314, 169 U. S. 165, 42 L. Ed. 702.

Title to overplus within a Mexican land grant, for which the government has a right to compel payment from the owner of the lawful area, or to resell such surplus to a third party, could not be confirmed by the court of private land claims on payment of such amount as might be found due, in view of the provision of the act creating that court that no authority to acquire land on condition should be admitted or confirmed unless such condition had been performed, especially where such claim was not filed within the time given by that act for filing imperfect claims.—Ainsa v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 507, 184 U. S. 639, 46 L. Ed. 727.

No confirmation of title to overplus within a Mexican land grant, for which the Mexican government had a right to compel payment, or to resell such surplus to a third party, can be had in the court of private land claims upon payment of the asserted value of such excess.—United States v. Green, 22 S. Ct. 640, 185 U. S. 256, 46 L. Ed. 898.

208. Confirmation by government making grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 657.

Where a sale of public land was made by an intendant in 1821, and approved by the promotor fiscal, the proceeds being paid into the public treasury, and after the creation of the office of commissary general, in 1824, such officer executed title papers based on the sale, which remained unchallenged at the time the territory was acquired by the United States, the sale must be considered as having been recognized as valid by the Mexican government, and is entitled to recognition by the United States.—Ely's Adm'r v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 840, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. Ed. 142.

A grant of the "possession and ownership" of tide lands in contemplation of reclamation cannot be deemed to have been made upon condition, so as to defeat the title thereunder because part of the land has not been reclaimed, where the grant fixes no time for beginning or completing the work, and recites that it is made in consideration, inter alia, of the official and industrial merits of the grantee, and his offer of protection stated in a prior decree, and where, during many years, the representatives of Spain and those claiming under the grant practically interpreted the same as leaving the grantee free to effect the reclamation at such time as to him might seem practical and advantageous.—Jover y Costas v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, 31 S. Ct. 664, 221 U. S. 623, 55 L. Ed. 884.

209. Forfeiture, revocation, or abandonment of grant or claim to confirmation.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 658.

A forfeiture for the nonpayment of installments for the purchase of lands required by act of congress of Coahuila and Texas of April 28, 1832, as a condition subsequent, cannot be claimed by one without at least connecting himself with a government title.—Gonzales v. Ross, 120 U. S. 605, 7 S. Ct. 705, 30 L. Ed. 801.

All favorable presumptions will be made against the forfeiture of a grant.—Id.

In 1788 a grant was made of the Cañon of San Diego, in New Mexico, to two brothers, and juridical possession was delivered to them. In 1798 the brothers joined with 18 others in petitioning for a larger grant, which included in its boundaries the grant of 1788. It did not appear that the brothers had ever settled upon or cultivated any lands within the earlier grant, but the evidence tended to show that they cultivated certain lands south of that grant, and within the boundaries of the grant of 1798. On the day that juridical possession was given under the grant of 1798, the brothers, as shown by a certificate of the alcalde, made an oral declaration in the presence of all the other grantees, notifying them of their right and intention to continue in the possession of the land "which we first and in our first grant, we have been possessing," and the other grantees expressed themselves as satisfied therewith. Held, that the participation of the brothers in the new grant showed an abandonment of the old one, and that their declaration was to be construed as a claim to have allotted to them out of the new grant the lands which they had actually occupied and settled; for which reasons a petition for confirmation of the grant of 1788 was properly rejected by the court of private land claims.—Chaves v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 72, 168 U. S. 177, 42 L. Ed. 428.

Even if the ayuntamiento of a town had authority to grant lands outside of its jurisdiction under the Mexican colonization law of 1823, the courts will not confirm a grant so made in that year, which was immediately afterwards repudiated by the higher officials, who prevented the grantee from settling thereon and drove him from the country; it appearing that he never thereafter made any claim against the Mexican government or took any proceedings to prosecute his claim of title until 1893.—Cessna v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 314, 169 U. S. 165, 42 L. Ed. 702.

While the United States by the Gadsden treaty of December 30, 1853, recognized Santa Anna, who was at the time practically dictator as representing the government of Mexico, the courts are not thereby bound to treat his decree of November 25, 1853, declaring certain classes of land grants theretofore made to be void, as in itself determining the rights of the grantees, since Mexico had, since 1821, been assuming to act as a republic, with constitutional limitations, and the acts of a dictator during a temporary departure from that form of government cannot be permitted to overthrow vested rights which had theretofore been, and were again shortly thereafter, recognized by the constitutional government.—Camou v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 855, 171 U. S. 277, 43 L. Ed. 163.

A sale of public lands by a Mexican state between 1824 and 1836, regularly made by the proper officers, and recognized as valid by the national government until 1853, gave the grantee vested rights, which were not extinguished by the decree of Santa Anna of November 25, 1853, declaring such sales unauthorized and void, though the decree was promulgated before the cession of territory to the United States by the treaty of December 30, 1853, and was not repealed until afterwards. Grants so made within the territory ceded are to be recognized by the United States.—Id.

Confirmation of a Spanish land grant cannot be had in the court of private land claims, where possession of the land had been abandoned by the descendants of the grantee for at least nine years before the treaty of 1848 with Mexico, under which the land passed into the possession of the United States, and there has been no possession by representatives of such grantee since the treaty, and no attempt to assert their title thereto for more than fifty years thereafter.—Sena v. United States, 23 S. Ct. 596, 189 U. S. 233, 47 L. Ed. 787, decree modified 23 S. Ct. 857, 189 U. S. 504, 47 L. Ed. 787.

The title to land selected under Act June 21, 1860, once having passed by an approved location of the land in accordance with the act, cannot be divested by attempted revocation by the successor in office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office of his predecessor's action in approving the location.—Lane v. Watts, 34 S. Ct. 965, 234 U. S. 525, 58 L. Ed. 1440, affirming decree 41 App. D. C. 139. Rehearing denied 35 S. Ct. 3, 235 U. S. 17, 59 L. Ed. 104.

◀210. Record and evidence of grant.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 659-665, 704.

The laws of the Mexican states did not take effect, in any part of the country, until they were promulgated in such part; and in case of an act of the congress of Coahuila and Texas passed at the city of Monclova, March 26, 1834, it should not be presumed, as invalidating a testimonio, extending a title under a concession, executed by a commissioner at Dolores, 200 miles distant from Monclova, April 18, 1834, that the act was promulgated at Dolores prior to April 18th.—Gonzales v. Ross, 120 U. S. 605, 7 S. Ct. 705, 30 L. Ed. 801.

All favorable presumptions will be made against the forfeiture of a grant, and it will be presumed that a public officer acted in accordance with the law and his instructions.—Id.

The payment required by act of congress of Coahuila and Texas of April 28, 1832, art. 13, to be made at the time of the sale of public lands, will be presumed to have been made from the fact of the delivery of the concession.—Id.

Under the laws of Texas, prior to the constitution of 1876, a Mexican land title not recorded in the county, or not deposited among the archives of the land office, was void only against third persons acquiring title from the sovereignty of the soil without notice; and the various provisions of that constitution (article 13) as to recording, archiving, possession, payment of taxes, and performance and waiver of conditions, do not require a plaintiff to show any of these things as a condition to the admission in evidence of his title papers as against a defendant not yet showing any title whatever.—Id.

In an action to confirm the titles to certain land grants from the king of Spain, the original testimonios were given in evidence, the signatures were identified, the translations were certified, and the genuineness of the titles was not disputed before the commissioners of 1824, appointed to try the titles to lands in West Florida, nor in the court below. Held, that this was sufficient evidence of their genuineness.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

The protocol, or first original, of the application and concession of land by the government of Coahuila and Texas produced from the public archives, is admissible, under instructions, for all legitimate purposes, when properly authenticated—as by the certificate of the state secretary of Coahuila, and by actual identification—though the testimonio given to the party interested is admissible as an original.—Williams v. Conger, 125 U. S. 397, 8 S. Ct. 933, 31 L. Ed. 778.

Where proceedings to obtain granted Mexican land were commenced in August, 1845, and the prior grantee having failed, in the respite allowed him, to stock the land as required by the colonization laws, the land was denounced to the applicants in May, 1846, and the whole expediente except said grant of May, 1846, is produced from the public archives, it is enough without proof of possession or occupation directly after the grant, in view of the state of war then existing.—United States v. Olvera, 154 U. S. 538, 14 S. Ct. 1158, 17 L. Ed. 637.

A claim under a Mexican grant cannot be sustained where it does not appear that a grant from the Mexican government had been "deposited and recorded in the proper public office, among the public archives of the republic."—Berreyesa v. United States, 154 U. S. 623, 14 S. Ct. 1179, 23 L. Ed. 913, following Peralta v. United States, 70 U. S. (3 Wall.) 434, 18 L. Ed. 221.

On an issue as to whether the Mexican governor of New Mexico made, in 1833, a certain grant to a number of persons for the establishment of the town of Cubero, five witnesses, two of whom claimed to be among the original grantees, and the others of whom were alive at the time of the alleged grant, and claimed under the original grantees, testified to the making of the grant and the giving of possession thereunder, and two of them testified to a current report that the official copy of the grant was stolen. Documents dated in 1835, 1840, and 1841 were produced, showing a settlement of disputes between the town of Cubero and a certain pueblo as to boundaries; and there was also in evidence a petition by the people of Cubero, dated in 1856, stating that they were in possession under a Mexican grant dated about 1834, and that the original papers were lost. To explain the absence of the original grant from the Mexican archives, evidence was given that about 1870 a large number of the archives were lost, and only a part thereof recovered, and it was shown that the registry of Mexican grants in the office of the territorial surveyor general was fragmentary and defective. It also appeared that the claimants under the grant had been in undisturbed possession of the land for 60 years. Held, that the evidence sustained a finding that the grant was made.—United States v. Chaves, 159 U. S. 452, 16 S. Ct. 57, 40 L. Ed. 215.

The fact that in the final execution of a Mexican grant the purchasers were cautioned "to restrict and limit themselves to the land, holdings, metes and bounds particularly described in the hereinbefore inserted proceedings of survey," and to comply with the law as to monuments at their boundary termini, does not show that the act of juridical possession had already taken place.—Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 16 S. Ct. 544, 40 L. Ed. 673.

Where a will clearly shows upon its face that the testator was marshaling his assets, and mentioning all his property, and making specific disposition thereof, the fact that he omits therefrom any mention of a large tract of land subsequently claimed by his descendants under an alleged Mexican grant is entitled to weight, as showing that he did not himself suppose that he owned the land.—Bergere v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 4, 168 U. S. 68, 42 L. Ed. 383.

The action of an alcalde in delivering possession of a much larger tract than that described in the petition is sufficient to prevent a presumption of an approval by the governor of such delivery, where the papers themselves bear no evidence of such approval, and there is no other proof thereof.—Id.

The mere fact that papers properly constituting part of the expediente (which should be found in the government archives) are found among papers once belonging to the alleged grantee, is not sufficient to justify a presumption that the papers were delivered to him by the governor, and a further presumption that the governor approved the delivery of juridical possession made by the alcalde of a tract of land much larger than that petitioned for.—Id.

Mere proof of pasturing cattle upon land is entitled to little weight as evidence of adverse possession upon which to base a claim of title under an alleged Mexican grant.—Id.

On the question of the existence of any valid Mexican grant, the fact that after the date of the alleged grant the Mexican government made grants to third parties of portions of the same land, as vacant and unoccupied, is of some weight against the existence of the alleged grant.—Id.

A document purporting to be a grant of land in New Mexico by a justice of the peace, or alcalde, in 1842, making no reference to any grant or order of the governor, but certifying that the petitioner appeared before the magistrate, and that he found the petition to be just, etc., and made the donation in the name of God and the Mexican nation, but without making any mention of the delivery of juridical possession, or of any of the formalities which, under the Spanish and Mexican custom, were observed by the officer delivering possession, is insufficient, together with oral testimony of witnesses stating their recollection of what took place 30 years before, though they state that a grant was made by the governor, to show that any valid grant was made, especially when there is no evidence that any such grant was ever recorded, or that any testimonio was ever delivered to the grantee.—Hays v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 80, 175 U. S. 248, 44 L. Ed. 150.

Possession under an alleged grant, made in 1831 by the territorial deputation of New Mexico, up to the time of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, in 1848, is not sufficient to raise the presumption of a grant.—Chavez v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 201, 175 U. S. 552, 44 L. Ed. 269.

A Mexican grant is not presumed to have been made from the fact of continued possession of the land, where possession was originally taken under a permission or license to use the land, and there is nothing to show that the character of possession was subsequently changed.—Peabody v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 219, 175 U. S. 546, 44 L. Ed. 267.

Reference in a land grant to another grant as a boundary is inadequate as proof of the legal existence of the latter grant, or of any change of the character of the possession of the land referred to, when that was originally taken, not under a grant of title, but under a mere permission or license.—Id.

Sufficient support in the evidence for a finding of the court of private land claims that a Spanish grant of land was made to the original grantees, from whom the petitioners derived their title, is afforded by a correct copy of the original and uncontroverted record in ex parte proceedings taken before a civil judge of the canton, under the act of the republic of Mexico of May 23, 1837, to perpetuate evidence of the title, in which, upon evidence of a grant and continuous possession under it, and of the destruction by the military forces of the United States of the original documents of title, with the official registry where they were recorded, judgment was entered recognizing the possession of the heir of the original grantee, and reaffirming the title of his ancestor, and such heir was placed in formal and legal possession of the land.—United States v. Pendell, 22 S. Ct. 624, 185 U. S. 189, 193, 46 L. Ed. 866.

The existence of a proper and valid Spanish grant, and its proper record in the archives of Mexico, within the provisions of article 6 of the treaty of December 30, 1853, with that country, that no grant should be respected which had not been so recorded, may be presumed from satisfactory proof of exclusive and uninterrupted possession under a claim of title continuing from 1790 until the filing of the petition for confirmation of the grant in the court of private land claims, together with evidence of the existence of a grant covering the land so possessed, and of the destruction by the military forces of the United States of the original documents of title, and of the record of the grant in the place where records of grants of land in the neighborhood were customarily made.—Id.

Due location of a Mexican grant to the extent of the four sitios, which, by the laws in force at the time of the sale in the proceedings to obtain such grant, it could not exceed, is sufficiently established by evidence from which the court of private land claims is able to determine the true boundaries of the tract as so limited.—United States v. Green, 22 S. Ct. 640, 185 U. S. 256, 46 L. Ed. 898.

A Mexican grant will be deemed to have been duly recorded in the archives of Mexico prior to September 25, 1853, as required by the Gadsden treaty, where the final title, which states that entry thereof is made in a specified book in the commissariat general, was admitted in evidence without objection, as was also a letter dated in 1831, from the provincial secretary of Sonora on behalf of the commissariat general, alluding to the existence of the title to such grant, and the expediente on file in the Mexican archives contains thereon a memorandum of the issue of a grant, since under such circumstances it may properly be presumed that any ministerial duty imposed on the Mexican officials, of registering the making of the grant, was duly performed, and that such record was in fact made.—Id.

A supposition of a claimant under an alleged Spanish land grant, that such grant once existed and has been lost by time or accident, is no evidence of an actual grant. Judgment, 30 So. 645, 128 Ala. 335, 64 L. R. A. 333, 86 Am. St. Rep. 143, affirmed.—Mobile Transp. Co. v. City of Mobile, 23 S. Ct. 170, 187 U. S. 479, 47 L. Ed. 266.

Every presumption should be indulged against the United States claiming title to land in the province of Benguet in the Philippine Islands, which, for more than 50 years prior to the treaty of peace with Spain (Treaty April 11, 1899, 30 Stat. 1754), has been held by the present native Igorot holder and his ancestors under claim of private ownership.—Carino v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, 29 S. Ct. 334, 212 U. S. 449, 53 L. Ed. 594.

A native title to land in the province of Benguet in the Philippine Islands, which for more than 50 years prior to the treaty with Spain (Treaty April 11, 1899, 30 Stat. 1754), a native Igorot and his ancestors have held in accordance with Igorot custom, as private property, should be recognized by the insular government, though no document of title issued from the Spanish crown, where, even if tried by law of Spain, without reference to effect of change of sovereignty and of the declaration of purpose and safeguards embodied in Organic Act July 1, 1902, c. 1369, § 32 Stat. 691, it is not clear that he is not the owner.—Id.

◀ 211. Confirmation by act of Congress or state.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 666-671.

A confirmation by act of congress of the decision of commissioners appointed to hear and decide on claims under grants of lands, in favor of claims for land of which no quantity is given, no boundary stated, and for the ascertainment of which no rule is stated, is void for uncertainty, and cannot operate to vest title to any particular land in the claimants.—Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 4 S. Ct. 475, 28 L. Ed. 321.

Under Act Cong. March 2, 1805, for ascertaining and adjusting titles to lands within the territory acquired by the purchase of Louisiana, which authorized the appointment of commissioners for that purpose, who were "to hear and decide, in a summary manner, all matters respecting the claims presented to them," etc., but provided that "their decisions should be laid before congress, and be subject to its determination," decisions by the commissioners in favor of claims had no effect on the title of the claimants until approved by congress.—Id.

Though Act March 2, 1805, for ascertaining and adjusting titles to lands within the Louisiana Purchase, authorized a majority of the commissioners "to hear and decide" all matters respecting such claims, the act of June 2, 1858, confirming "the decisions in favor of land claimants made by" three commissioners named, did not operate to confirm decisions by two of them, from which the third dissented. The limitation of the act to favorable decisions made by the three commissioners was intentional, and they were named, ex industria, to exclude from confirmation the claims under the Houmas grant.—Id.

Congress intended by the act of February 14, 1874 (18 Stat. 16), entitled "An act to confirm certain titles in the state of Missouri," and releasing any title of the government to certain lands to the "heirs, representatives, or assigns of Moses Austin," to recognize the claim of Austin arising from the Spanish concession, survey, and grant, recited in its preamble, and to assure those who were in possession, by contract or by operation of law and, therefore, assignees of Austin, that they would not be disturbed by any assertion of claim upon the part of the United States.—Bryan v. Kennett, 113 U. S. 179, 5 S. Ct. 407, 28 L. Ed. 908.

Where a Mexican grant has been confirmed and its extent defined by congress, the courts have no jurisdiction to limit the grant, as the constitution, by article 4, section 3, vests the control of the public lands in congress.—United States v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325, 7 S. Ct. 1015, 30 L. Ed. 949; Id., 122 U. S. 365, 7 S. Ct. 1271, 30 L. Ed. 1211.

Though the attention of congress was turned to the question as to the amount of land legally included in the grant of Gov. Armijo of 1841, known since as the "Maxwell Land Grant," it confirmed the grant in the act of June 21, 1860, to the full extent of the boundaries as described in the petition of claimants.—Id.

Petitioners' ancestor owned a quarter interest in lands granted by the king of Spain. They petitioned to have their title confirmed, not only for themselves, but also for and on behalf of the other part owners. Held, that under the act of June 22, 1860, for the relief of parties claiming under such grants in Florida, Louisiana, and Mississippi, a part owner and the heirs of a part owner could have relief.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

The acts required to perfect the titles to two land grants from the king of Spain were performed prior to May, 1818. The treaty by which Florida was ceded to the United States was signed February 22, 1819, and the United States act of June 22, 1860, made the date of cession the point from which to test the validity of titles to land grants in Florida. Held, that the titles in question were completed within the time required by the act of 1860.—Id.

By act Cong. March 2, 1867, it was enacted that there be "confirmed to * * * widow and children of John E. Bouigny, deceased, the one-sixth part of the land claim, * * * amounting to 75,840 acres; and that, inasmuch as said land embraced in said claim has been already appropriated by the United States, * * * certificates of new location, in 80-acre lots, be issued * * * in lieu of said lands. * * * The commissioner of the general land office is hereby directed to issue certificates of new location in accordance with existing regulations." Held, that the act did not recognize the validity of the claim of the widow and heirs to specific land, so as to operate as a grant; and the operation of said act was effectually suspended by joint resolution of March 30, 1867, directing the secretary of the interior to suspend the same.—United States v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 9 S. Ct. 382, 32 L. Ed. 785.

The act did not give to the widow and children a vested right in the certificates of new location which were to be issued.—Id.

As nothing had been done by the officers of the land department under the act, and no certificates had been made out, no vested right had attached at the time of the joint resolution, and it did not deprive the widow and children of any right, without due process of law, under the constitution.—United States v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 9 S. Ct. 382, 32 L. Ed. 785.

The joint resolution was passed by the fortieth congress, and suspended the execution of the act "until the further order of congress." Held, that the intention was not only to suspend the execution during the existence of the fortieth congress, and until the fortieth congress should further order, but until the further order of the legislative body called in Const. art. 1, § 1, "a congress of the United States."—Id.

The power of the court of private land claims, created by the act of March 3, 1891, to confirm claims to which the title is imperfect, is limited by section 13 to claims of such a character that at the date of the acquisition of the country the claimant could have demanded of the former government, as matter of right, that his title should be made complete and perfect. That court therefore has no power to confirm the inchoate claim or right which a town or pueblo had in lands set apart for its use, but which were subject to unlimited control and disposition by the government.—United States v. City of Santa Fé, 17 S. Ct. 472, 165 U. S. 675, 41 L. Ed. 874.

Under the act of March 3, 1891, creating the court of private land claims (section 13), such court is authorized to confirm a grant from the governments of Spain or Mexico, which is not complete and perfect, only when the claimant could of right have demanded that it be made complete by the former government had the territory not been acquired by the United States.—United States v. Sandoval, 17 S. Ct. 868, 167 U. S. 278, 42 L. Ed. 168.

Under the act creating the court of private land claims, which, in section 13, requires that the claimant should have had at the date of cession by Mexico such a title as he would have had "a lawful right to make perfect had the territory not been acquired by the United States," no possession since the date of the treaty, however notorious or exclusive, can be regarded as an element going to make up a perfect title.—Crespin v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 53, 168 U. S. 208, 42 L. Ed. 438.

The provision in the thirteenth section of the act of 1891, creating the court of private land claims, prohibiting it from allowing any claim "that shall not appear to be upon a title lawfully and regularly derived from the government of Spain or Mexico, or from any of the states of the republic of Mexico having lawful authority to make grants of land," precludes the court from confirming a grant unless satisfied of the authority of the granting officer or body to convey the public domain.—Hayes v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 735, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. Ed. 1174.

To authorize the confirmation of a Mexican grant by the court of private land claims or by the supreme court on appeal, it must satisfactorily appear, not only that the proceedings were regular, but also that officers assuming to make the grant were vested with authority, or that their acts, if unauthorized, were subsequently lawfully ratified.—Faxon v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 849, 171 U. S. 244, 43 L. Ed. 151.

Possession for six or seven years before the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, in 1848, of land by an alleged grantee, is not sufficient to constitute a title which can be confirmed under the court of private land claims act, where a valid grant is not proved to have been made.—Hays v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 80, 175 U. S. 248, 44 L. Ed. 150.

Possession of land since the date of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, in 1848, cannot be considered as dispensing with the requirement that a title to lands, if not perfect at that time, must be one that the claimant would have had a lawful right to make perfect, had the territory not been acquired by the United States.—Id.

The limitations of Act Cong. May 23, 1828, confirming Spanish land claims recommended for confirmation to the extent of a league square on condition that a full and final release of all claims to the residue be filed, were applicable to all claims, whether perfect or imperfect; and a failure to comply with the conditions of the statute barred a claim.—Mitchell v. Furman, 21 S. Ct. 430, 180 U. S. 402, 45 L. Ed. 596.

The conditions of ascertaining Spanish land claims in Florida imposed by Act Cong. March 23, 1828, confirming every claim that had been recommended for confirmation to the extent of a league square, and requiring a release of the residue to be filed within a certain period, were within the constitutional power of congress.—Id.

A Mexican grant can be confirmed only to the extent of the four sitios, which, under the laws in force at the time of the sale in the proceedings to obtain the grant, it could not exceed, and which was the quantity denounced, appraised, paid for, and purported to have been granted.—United States v. Green, 22 S. Ct. 640, 185 U. S. 256, 46 L. Ed. 898.

The California Legislature could enact Act April 2, 1866, ratifying conveyances made by the corporate authorities of the city of Monterey of pueblo lands confirmed to that city by the United States and afterwards patented to it, its successors and assigns. Judgment (1903) 73 P. 436, 139 Cal. 542, affirmed.—City of Monterey v. Jacks, 27 S. Ct. 67, 203 U. S. 360, 51 L. Ed. 220.

212. Powers of and proceedings in land office.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 72.

Cornelio Vigil and Ceran St. Vrain claimed title to about 922 square leagues of land in Colorado. By act to confirm private land claims (12 Stat. 71), congress confirmed the claim of Vigil and St. Vrain, but only to the extent of 11 square leagues to each. By the act it was provided survey should first be made of all tracts occupied by actual settlers under title or promises to settle previously given by Vigil and St. Vrain, and these deducted from the 22 square leagues. These claims more than exhausted the 22 leagues. This statute was amended (15 Stat. 275, 440) for the adjustment of such claims as should be made out to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of the proper land district. The register and receiver at Pueblo, Colorado, had presented to them claims on behalf of 39 such claimants, among them the claim of William Craig and that of Thomas Leitensdorfer. The register and receiver acting on the claims rejected those of Leitensdorfer and 22 others, and decided favorably in whole or in part on 13 claims. To Craig they awarded a little more than one-half of what he claimed. Leitensdorfer and others appealed to the commissioner of the general land office, who entertained the appeal so far as to decide that in such cases an appeal would lie, and Craig appealed from the commissioner to the secretary of the interior, who sustained the authority of the commissioner to entertain and determine appeals from the register and receiver. Craig afterwards applied to the president, who, advised by the attorney general that the decisions of the register and receiver were final, directed the commissioner to instruct the surveyor general of Colorado to deliver to Craig an approved plat of the land adjudged to him. Leitensdorfer filed a bill in equity against Craig and the surveyor general. Held, that he was not entitled to remedy by a bill in equity.—Downs v. Hubbard, 123 U. S. 189, 8 S. Ct. 85, 31 L. Ed. 114.

An instruction that, "when a claim to a Spanish or Mexican grant has been favorably reported by the surveyor general of New Mexico, * * * the grantees, or their heirs or assigns, are entitled to the absolute and exclusive possession of the land embraced within the limits of such grant," is properly refused. Under act Cong. July 22, 1854, directing the surveyor general to make inquiries in regard to such grants, and report to congress for its action, his report is no evidence of title or right to possession, unless congress shall have confirmed the title reported favorably by him.—Pinkerton v. Ledoux, 129 U. S. 346, 9 S. Ct. 399, 32 L. Ed. 706.

The function of the surveyor general, under Act Cong. July 22, 1854 (10 Stat. 308), was merely advisory, and until action by congress had supervened on a recommendation for the confirmation of a private land claim made by his predecessor in office it was not only the right, but the duty, of that official, on proper suggestion being made to him, to hear additional evidence, and transmit it for the consideration of congress.—United States v. Ortiz, 20 S. Ct. 466, 176 U. S. 422, 44 L. Ed. 529.

An applicant for confirmation of a private land claim is charged, by Act Cong. March 3, 1891, § 13, with the duty of tendering proof as to the existence, regularity, and archive record of the grant, as well as his connection with it,—such as possession, ownership, and other related incidents,—of sufficient probative force to create a just inference as to the reality and validity of the grant, before the burden of proof, if at all, can be shifted from him to the United States.—Id.

The supplementary proceeding before a surveyor general to whom additional testimony is presented in respect to a petition for the confirmation of a land claim which was recommended by his predecessor, but has not yet been acted upon by congress, is within the provisions of the act of 1891, § 5, permitting the use in evidence of proceedings before such officer.—Id.

Determinations of the land department against the claim that certain land is included within a Mexican grant which has been surveyed and patented to the claimant, and also that he is not a bona fide purchaser from the original grantee, are conclusive against him in a subsequent private action against him to recover the land by one who has entered the tract as public land and received a patent therefor. Judgment, Wormouth v. Gardner, 125 Cal. 316, 58 P. 20, affirmed.—Gardner v. Bonestell, 21 S. Ct. 399, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. Ed. 574.

A confirmation to a town of a claim reported by the surveyor general as a claim by the town under a Mexican grant cannot be contested by a bill in equity against the land department on the ground that the grant, properly interpreted, was to private persons instead of to the town, even if the so-called town has no legal or corporate existence, since the capacity of the town to take the patent is settled by the confirmation to it by congress. Decree, Maese v. Hermann, 17 App. D. C. 52, affirmed.—Maese v. Hermann, 22 S. Ct. 91, 183 U. S. 572, 46 L. Ed. 335.

The courts will not, on the theory of an attempted direct appeal from a decision of the Interior Department, decline jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud on a title vested by the grant made in Act June 21, 1860, by proceedings in a matter of attempted entry of the land under the public land laws.—Lane v. Watts, 34 S. Ct. 965, 234 U. S. 525, 58 L. Ed. 1440, affirming decree 41 App. D. C. 139. Rehearing denied 35 S. Ct. 3, 235 U. S. 17, 59 L. Ed. 104.

The approval by the General Land Office of a location of land under Act June 21, 1860, in lieu of land common to two Mexican land grants in the territory of New Mexico, to be surveyed and located by the Surveyor General of New Mexico, is no less effectual to pass title because based on the latter's approval rather than the approval of the Surveyor General of the territory of Arizona, which embraced the land when the land office acted.—Id.

◀213. Determination of claims by courts in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 673, 674.

Plaintiffs petitioned for the confirmation of their titles to two Spanish land grants in Florida, and put in evidence, without objection, a plat of the two grants, laid down in connection with the sections and subsections of the government surveys, certified as correct by a civil engineer and surveyor. Held, that it was unnecessary to annex a sworn copy of the government surveys to the petition.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

Acts July 22, 1854, c. 103, § 8 (10 Stat. 309), and July 15, 1870, c. 292 (16 Stat. 304), reserving to congress final action in the adjustment and confirmation of claims under grants from the Mexican government of land in New Mexico and Arizona upon the report and recommendation of the surveyor general, preclude the ordinary courts of justice from entertaining suits to determine the validity of such grants pending the final action of congress upon such a report.—Astiazaran v. Santa Rita Land & Min. Co., 148 U. S. 80, 13 S. Ct. 457, 37 L. Ed. 376, affirming judgment 20 P. 189.

A local court has no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a title to land claimed under a Spanish or Mexican grant, when proceedings for the confirmation of such title under the treaty with Mexico, instituted under the act of congress of July 22, 1854, are pending before the surveyor general and congress.—Rio Arriba Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 875, 167 U. S. 298, 42 L. Ed. 175.

A judge of the superior court of West Florida, acting under Act May 23, 1828, c. 70, § 6, 4 Stat. 284, 285, had jurisdiction to reject a Florida land claim because of an unwarranted alteration in the date of the registro which would save the grant from invalidity under the treaty of February 22, 1819 (8 Stat. 258), with Spain, although a proviso to that section excluded him from taking cognizance of any claims annulled by the treaty.—United States v. Dalcour, 27 S. Ct. 58, 203 U. S. 408, 51 L. Ed. 248.

Exception of the province of Benguet from operation of the Philippine Commission's Act 1903, No. 928, relating to registration of land titles, does not apply to one claiming present ownership of land therein; but he is entitled to registration, if his claim can be maintained, under the Commission's Act 1902, No. 406, establishing a court for registration, with jurisdiction "throughout the Philippine Archipelago," and authorizing, in general terms, applications by claimants of the legal estate in fee simple.—Carino v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, 29 S. Ct. 334, 212 U. S. 449, 53 L. Ed. 594.

The relative superiority of a claim under a confirmed Mexican land grant and a claim of title based on an approved location under Act June 21, 1860, of the grant in lieu of land common to two Mexican grants, is not reviewable in a suit in the District of Columbia to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of the General Land Office from casting a cloud on the title under such approved location, where claimants under confirmed grants are not parties.—Lane v. Watts, 35 S. Ct. 3, 235 U. S. 17, 59 L. Ed. 104, denying rehearing 34 S. Ct. 965, 234 U. S. 525, 58 L. Ed. 1440.

◀214. Commissioners to determine and settle claims.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 675-684.

◀216. — Jurisdiction, powers, and functions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 676.

The commissioners appointed to determine the validity of titles to two land grants in West Florida rejected the titles of plaintiffs' grantor on the grounds that there was no evidence of the required cultivation, nor that the lands had been surveyed prior to January 24, 1818, nor that they had emanated from the king of Spain prior to that date. Held, that such grounds were not included in Act June 22, 1860, § 3, which provides that the commissioners shall not recommend any claim previously rejected as being fraudulent, or any claim which had been twice rejected.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

Judges of the superior court of West Florida were "Public officers acting under authority of Congress" within the meaning of the proviso in Act June 22, 1860, c. 188, § 3, 12 Stat. 85, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the Florida land claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."—United States v. Dalcour, 27 S. Ct. 58, 203 U. S. 408, 51 L. Ed. 248.

Florida land claims which previously had been rejected as fraudulent or maintained by improper means, when the fraud addressed itself to avoiding the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, as well as when the fraud related to some other fact material to the validity of the claims at the time when they were created, were covered by the proviso in Act June 22, 1860, c. 188, § 3, 12 Stat. 85, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."—Id.

The rejection of a Florida land claim by a judge of the superior court of West Florida, acting under Act May 23, 1828, c. 70, § 6, 4 Stat. 284, § 6, because of an unwarranted alteration of the date in the registro which would save the grant from invalidity under the treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain, brings the case within the proviso of Act June 22, 1860, c. 188, § 3, 12 Stat. 85, prohibiting commissioners from embracing among the claims which ought to be confirmed "any claim which has been heretofore presented for confirmation before any board of commissioners or other public officers acting under authority of Congress, and rejected as being fraudulent, or procured or maintained by fraudulent or improper means."—Id.

217. — Presentation of claims.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 677.

Act Cong. March 3, 1851, "to ascertain and settle the private land claims in the state of California" (9 Stat. 631), created a board of commissioners to which all persons, claiming land under any right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican government, were required to present their claims for examination and determination within two years from its date, with such documentary evidence and testimony of witnesses as they relied on to support their claims, and provided that if on examination they were found by the board, and by the courts of the United States, to which an appeal could be taken, to be valid, the claims should be confirmed and surveyed, and patents therefor issued to the claimants; but that all lands, the claims to which were not presented to the board within that period, should be considered as a part of the public domain. Held, that the provision requiring the presentation of their claims was obligatory on claimants, and they were bound by the judgment of the board, if confirmed by the courts on appeal, and by the survey and location of the claim by the officers of the land department following the final decree of confirmation.—More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 8 S. Ct. 1067, 32 L. Ed. 51.

No title, whether perfect or inchoate, to land in California, dependent on Spanish or Mexican grants, can be of any validity which has not been submitted to and confirmed by the board of commissioners, provided for that purpose by Act Cong. March 3, 1851, or if rejected by that board, confirmed by the district or supreme court of the United States on appeal.—Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 238, 9 S. Ct. 525, 32 L. Ed. 926.

Mission Indians claiming a right of permanent occupancy of land in California under a Mexican grant are within the provisions of the act of Congress of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat. 631, c. 41, § 8), requiring every person claiming lands in California by virtue of any right or title derived from a Spanish or Mexican government to present the same to commissioners, and their failure to do so within the two years limited for that purpose by section 13 constitutes an abandonment of their rights. Judgment, Harvey v. Barker, 58 P. 692, 126 Cal. 262, affirmed.—Barker v. Harvey, 21 S. Ct. 690, 181 U. S. 481, 45 L. Ed. 963.

218. — Proceedings and determination.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 679-681.

A report of the commissioner of public lands in favor of a claim under an alleged Spanish land grant is insufficient to render applicable the provisions of the treaty with Spain of February 22, 1819 (8 Stat. 252), for the confirmation of such grants, where it contains no other description of the land granted than its area in arpents and the statement that it is situated on the Mobile river, but that no survey of the land existed. Judgment, 30 So. 645, 128 Ala. 335, 64 L. R. A. 333, 86 Am. St. Rep. 143, affirmed.—Mobile Transp. Co. v. City of Mobile, 23 S. Ct. 170, 187 U. S. 479, 47 L. Ed. 266.

219. — Review by courts.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 682-684.

Where the United States supreme court, on appeal, affirms a decree of the district court confirming a land grant, it will, on motion, instruct the district court to amend its decree by inserting therein a description of the lands confirmed, ascertaining by reference whether any of such lands have been sold, and, if so, declaring the mover entitled to scrip for other equivalent lands.—United States v. De Morant, 124 U. S. 647, 8 S. Ct. 675, 31 L. Ed. 565.

220. Court of Private Land Claims.

The fact that Congress has confirmed similar grants does not authorize the court of private land claims to confirm a claimed grant not coming within the terms of the law creating such tribunal.—Rio Arriba Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 17 S. Ct. 875, 167 U. S. 298, 42 L. Ed. 175.

Where the papers and other evidence fail to show the existence of any Mexican grant, perfect or imperfect, on the acquisition of the country by the United States, the court of private land claims is not entitled to confirm to the petitioner any land whatever.—Bergere v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 4, 168 U. S. 66, 42 L. Ed. 383.

A grant of land in New Mexico, which was complete and perfect before the cession of New Mexico to the United States, may be asserted, as against any adverse private claimant, in the ordinary local courts of justice, without having been confirmed or rejected by Congress, when no proceedings for its confirmation are pending before Congress or before the surveyor general; and it is not necessary for the owner to present it to the court of private land claims for confirmation under the act of Congress of 1891, although that act gives him the right to do so. Judgment, 36 P. 213, 4 Ariz. 236, reversed.—Ainsa v. New Mexico & A. R. Co., 20 S. Ct. 28, 175 U. S. 76, 44 L. Ed. 78.

Confirmation of a grant to persons claiming to derive title by conveyances and legal succession from the grantee may be made under Act Cong. 1891, § 8, to the claimants alone, without making it more generally to the "assigns and legal representatives of the original grantees," since the confirmation excepts lands disposed of by the United States, and is made subject to any conflicting private interests, rights, or claims.—United States v. Chavez, 20 S. Ct. 159, 175 U. S. 509, 44 L. Ed. 255.

A claim for the remainder of the land included in an alleged Mexican land grant, and which has been allowed in part only by act of congress, is not within the jurisdiction of the court of private land claims, under the act of March 3, 1891, c. 539, § 13, subd. 4, 26 Stat. 860 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 772], excluding claims for lands the right to which has hitherto been lawfully acted upon and decided by congress or under its authority.—Las Animas Land-Grant Co. v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 92, 179 U. S. 201, 45 L. Ed. 153.

An unexplained delay of over six years after a land grant has been confirmed by the court of private land claims will defeat the right to recover a money judgment against the United States, under Act March 3, 1891, c. 539, § 14, 26 Stat. 861 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 774], of the court of private land claims act, for the value of lands within the grant, disposed of and patented by the United States to third parties before the filing of the original petition.—United States v. Martinez, 22 S. Ct. 422, 184 U. S. 441, 46 L. Ed. 632.

Failure to make patentees from the United States of land within the limits of a Spanish land grant parties to a suit for the confirmation of such grant, as required by section 6 of the court of private land claims act, does not affect the validity of the decree of confirmation, where the patents and the boundaries of the land patented are undisputed, as the only consequence of such omission in such a case is an acknowledgment of the title of such patentees to the land, and of its boundaries.—Id.

A preferential right of purchase of overplus land within a Mexican land grant, to which the owner of the lawful area was entitled under the Mexican law at the date of the treaty with Mexico, is an imperfect claim, and is therefore barred by the act of March 3, 1891, § 12, unless filed within two years from that date.—Reloj Cattle Co. v. United States, 22 S. Ct. 499, 184 U. S. 624, 46 L. Ed. 721.

Any decision upon the merits of a claim under a Spanish grant of land which has been included in grants confirmed by congress and duly patented by the proper authorities is expressly forbidden the court of private land claims by Act March 3, 1891, c. 539, § 13, 26 Stat. 860 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 773], declaring that all proceedings and rights shall be conducted and decided subject to the provision that "no claim shall be allowed for any land, the right to which has hitherto been lawfully acted upon and decided by congress or under its authority," since, where the court has no jurisdiction to confirm or reject, it has no authority to inquire into or pass upon the case beyond the decision of the question of jurisdiction.—United States v. Baca, 22 S. Ct. 541, 184 U. S. 653, 46 L. Ed. 733.

The decision of the court of private land claims as to the sufficiency of the evidence of possession under a Spanish land grant will not be reviewed by the United States supreme court merely because the evidence is such that different inferences might be drawn therefrom.—United States v. Pendell, 22 S. Ct. 624, 185 U. S. 189, 193, 46 L. Ed. 866.

Claims asserted by defendants during the pendency of a proceeding instituted in due time in the court of private land claims to confirm an imperfect title are not barred because such defendants were made parties or filed their claims for affirmative relief after the expiration of the period prescribed by the act establishing that court within which petitions in respect to imperfect claims must be filed in order to preserve such claims.—United States v. Green, 22 S. Ct. 640, 185 U. S. 256, 46 L. Ed. 898.

Nothing decided in a suit for an unlawful inclosure of public lands, in which the supreme court of the United States on appeal reversed the judgment of the court below in favor of the government, and remanded the case, with instructions to dismiss the petition on the ground that there was color of title in the defendant sufficient to take the case outside of the operation of the statute, is res judicata in a suit to confirm title under a Mexican grant, in which defendant in the prior suit claims a valid title to such land as being within the exterior boundaries of the grant.—Id.

The claim of one whose title under a Mexican land grant is perfect and complete, and who is, therefore not bound under Act March 3, 1891, c. 539, 26 Stat. 854 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 765), to apply to the court of private land claims for confirmation, is not cut down to the extent that the land has been patented by the United States to third parties, because he appeared and prayed confirmation in a suit brought against him by the United States under the authority of section 8 of that act, to remove the government's doubt as to title or boundaries, on the theory that the language of section 14, giving that effect to such patents "if in any case" it shall appear that the lands or any part thereof, decreed to any claimant under the act, shall have been sold by the United States, applies not only to the proceeding brought by the claimant himself for confirmation, but also to the proceeding on behalf of the government, in which the court is to determine the matter, subject to all lawful rights adverse to the claimant or possessor, and as between such claimant and possessor and any other claimant or possessor, and subject in this respect to all the applicable statutory provisions.—(1910) Richardson v. Ainsa, 31 S. Ct. 23, 218 U. S. 289, 54 L. Ed. 1044, affirming decree (1908) 95 P. 103, 11 Ariz. 359.

221. Location and survey on confirmation or precedent thereto.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 686-697.

In the case of a floating Mexican grant, the government retained the right of locating the quantity granted in such part of the larger tract described as it saw fit, and the United States succeeded to the same right.—United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 8 S. Ct. 1177, 32 L. Ed. 213, affirming decree (C. C.) 30 F. 147.

The decree of the United States circuit court confirming to the city of San Francisco, Cal., as successor of a Mexican pueblo, its claim, made under Act Cong. March 3, 1851, to the pueblo lands, described the tract so confirmed as "embracing so much of the extreme upper portion of the peninsula, above ordinary high-water mark, * * * on which the city of San Francisco is situated, as will contain an area of four square leagues; said tract being bounded on the north and east by the Bay of San Francisco, on the west by the Pacific ocean, and on the south by a due east and west line drawn so as to include the area aforesaid." Held, that in a survey under the decree the shore line of the bay should be run on the line of ordinary high-water mark, crossing the mouths of all streams running into the bay, and not following the line of high water of any tidal stream or estuary forming an arm of the bay.—Knight v. United Land Ass'n, 142 U. S. 161, 12 S. Ct. 258, 36 L. Ed. 974.

A surveyor acting under special instructions, based upon an opinion of the secretary of the interior, surveyed an old French grant, and reported the same to the surveyor general. Protests were filed against the survey; but the surveyor general approved the same, and forwarded it, together with the protests and evidence, to the commissioner of the general land office. The latter accepted the survey in part, but reserved the remainder for further consideration, meantime directing the surveyor general to withhold the filing of the triplicate plats from the local land office. The matter was then referred to the secretary of the interior, who held that the survey did not comply with the decision of his predecessor, and directed a new survey. Held, that the action of the surveyor general and the commissioner did not exhaust the authority of the land department, but that the matter was still lawfully pending therein, and the courts, therefore, had no authority to enjoin the obliteration of the old survey, or the making of the new one.—City of New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 261, 13 S. Ct. 303, 37 L. Ed. 162, affirming decree 51 F. 833, 2 C. C. A. 516, 2 U. S. App. 330.

The heirs of D. selected a half league of land, "if they could get no more," out of a diseno containing one league, all of which they claimed, and the court decreed them a half league. Their selection included the portion occupied by D., but did not include an abandoned improvement and building made by the original grantees, from whom D. purchased; but it conformed to all the other calls of such decree as to the length and breadth of such half league. Held, that it was error to set aside the decree and change the location of the land, simply because the land selected by such heirs did not include such abandoned improvement.—United States v. De Haro, 154 U. S. 544, 14 S. Ct. 1161, 18 L. Ed. 61.

The surveyor general of New Mexico, pursuant to the duties imposed upon him by the eighth section of the act of 1854 (10 Stat. 308), investigated the claim of one Preston Beck to an alleged grant to one Pifio in 1823, found that the same was valid, and in his report to congress recommended that the grant be surveyed, and a patent issued. The grant was confirmed by congress by Act June 21, 1860, but without any express directions in respect to a survey. Held that, in view of the uniform practice of the government in causing all governmental grants of land to be surveyed, it was to be presumed that a survey of this grant was contemplated by the confirmatory act, and that a survey thereafter made under the direction of the surveyor general must be regarded as an official survey, determining the boundaries of the grant.—Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 15 S. Ct. 822, 39 L. Ed. 966, reversing judgment 4 N. M. 181, 12 P. 736.

The survey of a Mexican land grant by a surveyor general, pursuant to the duties imposed on him by the act of 1854 (10 Stat. 308), is not subject to revision by the courts; and hence one claiming under the grant cannot maintain ejectment against a third person to recover lands outside the survey, though the survey was incorrect, and the lands in controversy were within the boundaries of the original grant as set out in the title papers.—Id.

The owners of a Mexican grant, which was confirmed by congress prior to any survey thereof, are bound by an official survey, subsequently made, under the direction of the surveyor general of the territory, though they had no notice thereof, and though some of them were minors, and some were under coverture, at the time.—Id.

The official survey made of a Mexican land grant, after the grant has been confirmed by congress, is conclusive as against any collateral attack in the courts; and in ejectment by one claiming under the grant to recover lands lying within the survey from a person claiming the same under a subsequent homestead entry, evidence that the survey was incorrect, and that a correct survey would have excluded the lands in controversy, is not admissible.—Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 158 U. S. 253, 15 S. Ct. 827, 39 L. Ed. 971.

A survey was necessary to segregate from the public domain land selected under Act June 21, 1860, in lieu of the land common to two Mexican land grants, of an equal quantity of vacant land not mineral in New Mexico to be surveyed by the surveyor general.—Lane v. Watts, 34 S. Ct. 965, 234 U. S. 525, 58 L. Ed. 1440, affirming decree 41 App. D. C. 139. Rehearing denied 35 S. Ct. 3, 235 U. S. 17, 59 L. Ed. 104.

The expense of the survey called for by Act June 21, 1860, authorizing selection of lieu lands to be surveyed and located by the Surveyor General, should be borne by the government, notwithstanding provisions of Act June 2, 1862, requiring all grants to be surveyed at the expense of the claimant.—Id.

The reservation from sale until final action of Congress under Act July 22, 1854, § 8, in favor of Mexican or Spanish land claims presented to the surveyor general of New Mexico, did not prevent the location of the grant under Act June 21, 1860, of vacant lands in lieu of lands common to two Mexican land grants in Mexican land claims not disclosed until after location by the land department.—Lane v. Watts, 35 S. Ct. 3, 235 U. S. 17, 59 L. Ed. 104, denying rehearing 34 S. Ct. 965, 234 U. S. 525, 58 L. Ed. 1440.

222. Patent in confirmation of grant. See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 698-703.

Equity will not cancel a patent issued on confirmation of a Mexican grant, except on specific averments of mistake or fraud, supported by clear and satisfactory proof.—United States v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325, 7 S. Ct. 1015, 30 L. Ed. 949.

In a suit to set aside and cancel a patent for a confirmed Mexican grant, it was alleged that, at the time the survey was made, the commissioner of the general land office, the surveyor general for California, the chief clerk of the latter's office, and the deputy who made the survey were interested in the ownership of the grant, and by fraud made a false location of the land to make it contain valuable ores of tin not within its limits if fairly surveyed; but it appeared that none of the officers named had any interest whatever in the grant at the time of the survey except C., the chief clerk in the surveyor general's office, and that he had not in any way influenced the location of the survey, as shown by the testimony of all those who took part in making it; and that the survey was contested at every step by interested parties, and was twice before the surveyor general, and twice before the commission in Washington, and finally decided after six months' consideration by the secretary of the interior, confirming the decision of the land office. Held, that the fact of fraud was not established, though it further appeared that some of these officers, after the patent was issued, took shares in a joint-stock corporation organized to work the mine, but there was no proof that the shares were a voluntary gift, or were for services rendered in locating the survey; and the fairness of the purchase of these shares after the patent issued was sustained by affirmative testimony.—United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co., 125 U. S. 273, 8 S. Ct. 850, 31 L. Ed. 747, affirming decree (C. C.) 23 F. 279, 10 Sawy. 639.

Act Cong. March 3, 1851, "to ascertain and settle the private land claims in the state of California" (9 Stat. 631), created a board of commissioners, to which all persons claiming land under any right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican government were required to present their claims for examination and determination within two years from its date, with such documentary evidence and testimony of witnesses as they relied on to support their claims, and provided that if, on examination, they were found by the board, and by the courts of the United States to which an appeal could be taken, to be valid, the claims should be confirmed and surveyed, and patents therefor issued to the claimants, but that all lands, the claims to which were not presented to the board within that period, should be considered as a part of the public domain. Held, that a patent issued after a claim was surveyed and located was conclusive, both as to the validity of the title of the claimant and the extent and boundaries of his claim, as against all persons not claiming by superior title, such as would enable them to contest the action of the government respecting the property.—More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 8 S. Ct. 1067, 32 L. Ed. 51.

A survey of a tract of land confirmed to the city of San Francisco as successor of a Mexican pueblo, which, in running the shore line of the bay of San Francisco, followed the line of ordinary high tide of Mission creek, a navigable arm of the bay, was approved by the commissioner of the general land office, but his approval was set aside by the secretary of the interior, and a new survey was ordered by the latter, and, under his directions, was made, in which the shore line of the bay was run across the mouth of Mission creek; and the latter survey was approved by the commissioner of the general land office, and a patent was issued thereon to the city, following the lines of such latter survey. In ejectment for land lying on Mission creek above the shore line of the bay, and embraced in the patent, but not in the first survey, brought against a defendant claiming title derived from the city under the patent, plaintiffs claimed under a grant of the land from the state tide-land commissioners, as land which had passed to the state, on its admission to the Union, by virtue of its sovereignty over all tide-lands below the high-water line. Held, that parol evidence that the land was below high-water mark of the creek was not admissible; that the patent, following the decree of confirmation and the final and correct survey of the confirmed claim, was evidence of the title of the city under Mexican laws, and was conclusive, not only as against the government and against all parties claiming under it by title subsequently acquired, but also as against all parties except those having a full and complete title acquired from Mexico anterior to that confirmed by the decree of confirmation.—Knight v. United Land Ass'n, 142 U. S. 161, 12 S. Ct. 258, 35 L. Ed. 974.

On appeal in a suit brought by the United States to annul for fraud a patent issued pursuant to an old Mexican grant, the record contained a letter written by the attorney general to one who was formerly clerk of the district court in which the cause was pending, stating, in answer to inquiry, that the United States would not pay the costs, because it had no beneficial interest in the litigation, and that the same was instituted at the request of parties claiming a beneficial interest in the land, with the understanding that they were to pay costs. Held, that this letter does not deny that the United States is under obligation to third parties in respect to the relief invoked, which obligation is sufficient ground for maintaining a suit to set aside the patent.—San Pedro & Cañon del Agua Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 120, 13 S. Ct. 94, 36 L. Ed. 911, affirming decree United States v. San Pedro & Cañon del Agua Co., 4 N. M. (Gild.) 405, 17 P. 337.

Where a patent issued pursuant to an old Mexican grant is made according to a survey which is fraudulently extended so as to include a town where the inhabitants hold possession by the indefinite and unrecorded titles of dwellers in Mexican villages, the United States, in view of the stipulation to respect existing rights contained in the treaty of cession, is under obligation to set aside the patent, even though the same expressly recites that it is not to affect the claims of third persons; for the government owes at least a moral obligation not to burden the equitable rights of the villagers by an apparently adverse legal title.—Id.

Where one claiming under an old Mexican grant has obtained a patent, which by a fraudulent extension of the survey is made to include valuable mineral lands, the United States has a direct pecuniary interest, which will enable it to maintain a suit to set aside the patent.—Id.

A patent from the United States, based upon the confirmation of a grant from the Mexican government by the board of land commissioners, under the act of congress of 1851 (9 Stat. 631, c. 41), giving the board jurisdiction over claims "by virtue of any right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican government," cannot be attacked collaterally on the ground that the grant was invalid, and that the board had no jurisdiction to confirm an invalid claim, since the board is given jurisdiction to consider whatever is necessary to the validity of the claim, including the question of the fact of a grant or the power to grant. Judgment, Los Angeles Farming & Milling Co. v. Thompson, 49 P. 714, 117 Cal. 504, affirmed.—Thompson v. Los Angeles Farming & Milling Co., 21 S. Ct. 289, 180 U. S. 72, 45 L. Ed. 432.

◀223. Title and rights acquired.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, §§ 705-719, 721-725.

In 1798 Moses Austin took possession of and improved lands in the present state of Missouri, under an order of the Spanish governor general of the territory of Louisiana that he be placed in possession. In 1799 an order of the lieutenant governor of the territory, that the lands be surveyed, and Austin be put legally in possession, was executed and the certificate of survey recorded. Held, that such acts, taking place before the treaty of St. Ildefonso, gave Austin a property interest in the land, which, at least as between private parties, could be transferred by mortgage, or reached by judicial process.—Bryan v. Kennett, 113 U. S. 179, 5 S. Ct. 407, 28 L. Ed. 908.

Petitioners were entitled to certain lands in Florida, owned by them under a Spanish land grant. Held, that if the United States government had sold the lands, in whole or in part, petitioners would be entitled to scrip for other public lands of equal extent to those sold.—United States v. De Morant, 123 U. S. 335, 8 S. Ct. 189, 31 L. Ed. 171.

The city council passed an ordinance relinquishing to plaintiff and other persons in possession of public land within the corporate limits the city's claim to such land, and then, by a later ordinance, took part of the land in plaintiff's possession for a public square. Congress afterwards granted the land within the corporate limits to the city for the uses and purposes specified in these two ordinances. Held, that plaintiff's title being based on the grant, which referred to both ordinances, he acquired through the first ordinance no vested right to the land taken by the second.—Clark v. City and County of San Francisco, 124 U. S. 639, 8 S. Ct. 659, 31 L. Ed. 553.

A patent from the United States may be collaterally attacked by showing that the land covered by it was a portion of a Mexican grant which had previously been conveyed by the Mexican authorities to a private person, and that said conveyance had been confirmed by the United States land commissioners, and, on appeal, by the district and supreme courts; and that, therefore, the officers of the government had no authority to issue the patent.—Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 8 S. Ct. 1223, 31 L. Ed. 844.

Act Cong. June 13, 1812, providing that the rights, claims, and titles to village lots, or common field lots, belonging to St. Louis, and other enumerated villages of Missouri (formerly Louisiana) Territory, inhabited, cultivated, or possessed before December 20, 1803 (the date the French cession became operative), should be confirmed to the inhabitants of the villages according to their respective rights in common thereto, establishing a board of commissioners to examine and confirm the titles of claimants, and requiring the territorial surveyor to survey and mark out the village boundaries inclusive of the lots, operated as a grant in present of the land, passing the title thereto out of the United States at once, and a later act giving land so possessed by and confirmed to individuals under the statute, but not yet surveyed, to the state for school purposes, is void.—Glasgow v. Baker, 128 U. S. 560, 9 S. Ct. 154, 32 L. Ed. 513.

To locate a Mexican grant there must be evidence that the place of location agrees with the description in the grant; and the effect of such evidence is for the jury.—Pinkerton v. Ledoux, 129 U. S. 346, 9 S. Ct. 399, 32 L. Ed. 706.

Act Cong. Sept. 28, 1850, granting to the states all swamp and overflowed land within their limits, could not apply to or affect land owned under the Mexican law by the pueblo at San Francisco, and afterwards by the city of San Francisco, as its successor.—City and County of San Francisco v. Le Roy, 138 U. S. 656, 11 S. Ct. 364, 34 L. Ed. 1096.

A Mexican grant, after giving the boundaries of the land, described it as containing, in all, two square leagues,—a little more or less; and the confirmation was of that quantity, if contained within the boundaries named; and, if a less quantity were found to be within the boundaries, then the confirmation was for the less quantity, and for all the tract described. By actual survey the boundaries were found to contain nearly 10 square leagues. Held, that this was a grant of quantity, constituting a float, to be located at the pleasure of the government within the boundaries described, and hence did not operate to withdraw the whole tract from sale, pre-emption, or grant pending the location of the two square leagues.—Carr v. Quigley, 149 U. S. 652, 13 S. Ct. 961, 37 L. Ed. 885.

Under the Spanish government, on the organization of a town, four square leagues of land did not vest in it by mere operation of law; but it was necessary that the proper authorities should particularly designate the land to be acquired.—United States v. City of Santa Fe, 17 S. Ct. 472, 165 U. S. 675, 41 L. Ed. 874.

Under the Spanish law the assignment of a tract of land within given boundaries by the governor of a province to individuals associating themselves together for the establishment of a town or pueblo did not vest the title in the municipality, but the fee remained in the king, by whose representatives grants to individuals in severalty were thereafter made; hence, on the cession of the territory embracing such town to the United States, the title to all lands within the boundaries named in such assignment, not previously allotted to individuals, passed, through the government of Mexico, to the United States.—United States v. Sandoval, 17 S. Ct. 868, 167 U. S. 278, 42 L. Ed. 168.

Three pueblos joined in a petition to the captain general, in which they stated that certain land in their vicinity had been considered their pasture ground, and that in some urgent cases the tract was also used as pasturage for the horses of the royal garrison; and they prayed that his excellency would "be pleased to declare said valley to be the legitimate pasture grounds and pastures of the pueblos." The captain general thereafter made a decree granting the aforesaid lands "for pasturing the stock and horses of the aforesaid three pueblos"; designating the boundaries, and reserving the right, in case of necessity, of pasturing the horses of the royal garrison thereon. The decree then declared that the pueblos "will hold the same, with legitimate title, under this royal grant, so that they be not molested by any Spanish citizen or citizens taking their stock thereupon, deeming the pasture to be common." Held, that this grant did not vest the title to the lands in the petitioners, but was a mere license to use the lands for pasturage, and that, if such license was not revoked by certain subsequent grants, it was revoked by the treaty ceding the territory to the United States.—Pueblo of Zia v. United States, 18 S. Ct. 42, 168 U. S. 198, 42 L. Ed. 434.

Lands previously confirmed by act of congress to Indian pueblos should be excepted from a decree of confirmation of a Spanish grant even if the previous grant by Congress to the pueblos may be void, as the effect of the confirmation is only to release all claim of title by the United States, and it is not incumbent upon the court of private land claims to determine the priority of right as between the claimant and another grantee.—United States v. De la Paz Valdez de Conway, 20 S. Ct. 13, 175 U. S. 60, 44 L. Ed. 72.

An indemnity under the private land claim act, § 14, cannot be adjudged when no such claim is made by the petition.—Town of Real De Dolores Del Oro v. United States, 20 S. Ct. 17, 175 U. S. 71, 44 L. Ed. 76.

A personal judgment against the United States for the indemnity provided by the private land claim act, § 14, in case the lands decreed to a claimant have been sold or granted by the United States to any other person, is authorized only when such lands have been sold or granted as public lands for a consideration which equitably belongs to the owner of the land, and not where the government has merely released its interest to one apparently holding a good title under a Spanish or Mexican grant, which subsequently turns out to be invalid by reason of an older or better title.—Id.

A claim for lands within the limits of a grant which has been confirmed by congress, and for which a patent has been issued to another party, is properly rejected by the court of private land claims.—Id.

A grant in severalty was made by a Mexican grant to an applicant and his associates, when it directed the alcalde to place them in possession, "setting forth a general donation, in which shall necessarily be stated the boundaries of said possession," also requiring the alcalde to "take charge of the general document of distribution, which shall be for the archives," and to "give testimonies therefrom as may be requested," especially when it appears that the alcalde distributed the lands to them severally, giving juridical possession accordingly.—United States v. Pena, 20 S. Ct. 165, 175 U. S. 500, 44 L. Ed. 251.

A recital in a patent from the United States, confirming a Mexican land grant to the original grantees, "their heirs, successors in interest, and assigns," that two persons named therein had acquired an undivided interest in the land, which patent was based on a decree to that effect of the Court of Private Land Claims, established by Act March 3, 1891, c. 539, 26 Stat. 854 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 765], is sufficient to establish a record title in the persons so named as against others holding merely by adverse possession, although, under sections 8 and 13, of that act, the confirmation of the grant by that court only quitclaims the title of the United States, and saves the rights of third parties. Judgments, Curtis v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co., 71 P. 924, 8 Ariz. 258, and 76 P. 612, 9 Ariz. 62, affirmed.—Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co., 26 S. Ct. 192, 200 U. S. 96, 50 L. Ed. 388.

Title to, and power to dispose of, unallotted land within the exterior boundaries of a Spanish land grant passed to the United States on acquisition of the territory, and where juridical possession and allotment were made to persons not petitioning therefor, while no land was allotted to some of the petitioners, such grant was therefore communal, in which settlers and no others could by allotment obtain an individual interest.—Bond v. Unknown Heirs of Barela, 33 S. Ct. 809, 229 U. S. 488, 57 L. Ed. 1292, affirming judgment 120 P. 707, 16 N. M. 660.

A patent issued to the town of Tome, N. M., following congressional confirmation by Act Dec. 22, 1858, of a Spanish communal grant, passed title to all the unallotted lands from the United States to the town, without any trust for the heirs of the persons named in the original grant.—Id.

Land common to two overlapping Mexican grants, one of which preceded the other in all the steps prior to the confirmation of both by Congress in Act June 21, 1860, which in section 4 saved to each grant its rights against the other, belongs to the earlier grant.—Jones v. St. Louis Land & Cattle Co., 34 S. Ct. 419, 232 U. S. 355, 58 L. Ed. 636, reversing judgment Stoneroad v. Beck, 120 P. 898, 16 N. M. 754.

⌚224. Claimant preferred as purchaser on rejection of claim.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Pub. Lands, § 720.

Section 7, Act July 23, 1866, which gives to bona fide purchasers of lands "of Mexican grantees," whose grants have been subsequently rejected, a right to purchase the same at the minimum price, is not limited to lands of which there was an actual grant by the Mexican authorities, but includes lands supposed to have been granted, though it turns out that no formal grant was ever made. Judgment, 73 F. 120, 19 C. C. A. 392, affirmed.—Beley v. Naphtaly, 18 S. Ct. 354, 169 U. S. 353, 42 L. Ed. 775.

That a purchase was made from the Mexican grantees after the claim had been rejected by the board of land commissioners and by the district court, and while it was pending on appeal in the supreme court, did not, as matter of law, prevent the purchaser from being a bona fide purchaser, in the meaning of the act. Whether he was a bona fide purchaser in fact was a question to be determined by the land department on his application for a patent, and, after issuance of a patent, is not open to re-examination by the courts.—Id.

The preferred right of purchase given by the statute is assignable so as to transfer all the purchaser's rights, though the assignee took with notice of the final rejection of the claim by the supreme court.—Id.

L. RIGHT OF ACTION AND DEFENSES.¶3. Grounds for relief in equity in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 3.

A court of equity will interfere to remove difficulties in the way of owners of property when, from causes beyond their control, their use and enjoyment of it are obstructed.—Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 12 S. Ct. 720, 36 L. Ed. 532; Stellwagen v. Same, 144 U. S. 548, 12 S. Ct. 724, 36 L. Ed. 537.

The right to equitable relief against an invalid ordinance reducing the rates of a water company in violation of a contract, on the ground that it is a cloud upon title, is not precluded by the fact that the ordinance is void, where its invalidity appears only when it is considered in connection with the contract and evidence showing what the rates were when the contract was made. Judgment, Los Angeles City Water Co. v. City of Los Angeles, 88 F. 720, affirmed.—City of Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co., 20 S. Ct. 736, 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. Ed. 886.

¶7. Cloud on title.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. §§ 14-23.

Verbal assertions of ownership do not constitute a cloud upon title, to remove which the aid of a court of equity can be invoked.—Devine v. City of Los Angeles, 26 S. Ct. 652, 202 U. S. 313, 50 L. Ed. 1046.

A cloud on the title of the owner of land in Greer county, Okla., under patent from the United States, created by the record of a deed previously executed by him while he was claiming ownership under a Texas patent, in pursuance of an arrangement whereby the grantees were to sell the land and to collect certain notes for the purchase price of property which the grantor had already sold, and to turn over two-thirds of the proceeds to the grantor, retaining one-third for their commissions, will be removed and the deed canceled, where the project was abandoned and the deed was returned to the grantor, together with the notes. Judgment (1906) 87 P. 669, 17 Okl. 40, affirmed.—Bogard v. Sweet, 23 S. Ct. 595, 209 U. S. 464, 52 L. Ed. 892.

The inability of the grantee in a fraudulent deed to recover if he should sue does not defeat the right to have a deed canceled as a cloud on title, where the invalidity does not appear upon the face of the deed, but rests partly on matter in pais, and where possession under it for seven years might, under Civ. Code Ga. 1895, § 3589, give title. Decree, Ashburn v. Graves (1907) 149 F. 968, 79 C. C. A. 478, reversed.—Graves v. Ashburn, 30 S. Ct. 108, 215 U. S. 331, 54 L. Ed. 217.

¶9. Title of plaintiff.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. §§ 36-43.

¶10. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. §§ 36-42.

An attachment and long-continued possession thereunder is a sufficient basis on which to maintain a bill to quiet title against a fraudulent grantee of the debtor, without regard to the validity of a prior like suit against the same defendant, the proceedings in which have been lost.—Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 15 S. Ct. 129, 39 L. Ed. 167.

¶12. Possession of plaintiff.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. §§ 44, 45.

Where a debt originally due to the United States by virtue of an assessment of an internal revenue tax has been merged in the tax sale and purchase in pursuance thereof by the United States, the United States holds the legal title to the land, and has an adequate remedy at law in the action of ejectment against the original owners in possession, or against any grantee in possession who becomes such subsequent to the assessment of the tax, and a bill in equity to remove the cloud will not lie.—United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 86, 6 S. Ct. 991, 30 L. Ed. 110.

Actual possession is not necessary in a suit in equity to establish, as matter of record, a title gained by prescription, and to determine its validity as against any one claiming under the former owner.—Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 12 S. Ct. 720, 36 L. Ed. 532; Stellwagen v. Same, 144 U. S. 548, 12 S. Ct. 724, 36 L. Ed. 537.

Where a railroad company, which has purchased large tracts of land, constructs its road and appurtenances over certain parcels thereof, the possession thus held of a part may be regarded as sufficient constructive possession of the remainder, which are in fact vacant and unoccupied, to support a bill to quiet title to the whole.—Roberts v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 158 U. S. 1, 15 S. Ct. 756, 39 L. Ed. 873, affirming judgment (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Roberts, 42 F. 734.

Bona fide purchasers of forfeited lands from a railroad company, who are not in possession and have not attempted to exercise their right under Act Cong. March 3, 1887, c. 376, § 5, 24 Stat. 556 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1595], to purchase the lands from the United States, are not, by reason of such right to purchase, entitled to maintain an action to quiet title against persons claiming an adverse interest therein. Decree 62 P. 269, 129 Cal. 673, affirmed.—San Jose Land & Water Co. v. San Jose Ranch Co., 23 S. Ct. 487, 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. Ed. 765.

Rule that suit to quiet title can only be brought by one in possession has no application where legal remedy in ejectment is not available.—Lancaster v. Kathleen Oil Co., 36 S. Ct. 711, 241 U. S. 551, 60 L. Ed. 1161.

¶14. Conditions precedent.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 46.

The purchaser of mortgaged property, under an agreement to pay the lien of the mortgages and the judgments of foreclosure thereon, is not entitled to have his title quieted as against the mortgagee, without paying the mortgage debt, although the mortgagee in bad faith evaded the purchaser's effort to make such payment, and with full knowledge of the facts, and with intent to defraud, procured from the mortgagor a conveyance of a part of the premises, and a new mortgage on the residue, and satisfied of record the former mortgages and judgment liens.—Stoffela v. Nugent, 30 S. Ct.

600, 217 U. S. 499, 54 L. Ed. 856, reversing decree, Nugent v. Stofella (1906) 84 P. 910, 10 Ariz. 151.

18. Statutory remedies for determination of adverse claims.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 48-53.

22. — Title of plaintiff.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 54.

Under the Nebraska statute, providing for the bringing of an action against an adverse claimant, it is not necessary for plaintiff to obtain a previous judgment in favor of the validity of his title in order to maintain his action. —Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 3 S. Ct. 495, 28 L. Ed. 52.

A statute enabling a person to sue to remove a cloud on title, notwithstanding he is not in possession, does not dispense with necessity of showing that he is vested with the legal title, and is entitled to possession. —Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 552, 7 S. Ct. 1129, 30 L. Ed. 1010.

23. — Possession of plaintiff in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 55, 56.

Under the Nebraska statute providing that any one, whether in actual possession or not, claiming title to real estate, may bring an action against any adverse claimant for the purpose of quieting his title, it is not necessary, as was the case at common law in bills to quiet title, that plaintiff, to maintain his action, should be in possession. —Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 3 S. Ct. 495, 28 L. Ed. 52.

In California, one asserting title to lands, though out of possession, may bring suit to determine an adverse claim, estate, or interest. —More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 8 S. Ct. 1037, 32 L. Ed. 51.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 69, 71, 72, 76, 77.

In a suit to quiet title, an allegation that defendant claims an adverse estate or interest in the land is sufficient, without showing the nature of such claim or its invalidity. —Ely v. New Mexico & A. R. Co., 129 U. S. 291, 9 S. Ct. 293, 32 L. Ed. 688.

35. — Allegations as to title and possession.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 73, 74.

In an action under Laws Ariz. 1881, No. 59, providing that an action may be brought by a person, whether in possession or not, to determine an adverse claim to real property, an allegation, in ordinary and concise terms, of the ultimate fact that plaintiff owns the fee, without setting out evidence in support of that conclusion, is sufficient. —Ely v. New Mexico & A. R. Co., 129 U. S. 291, 9 S. Ct. 293, 32 L. Ed. 688.

In a bill to remove clouds from title, an allegation that plaintiff is seised in fee simple is a sufficient allegation that he has possession of the land. —Gage v. Kaufman, 133 U. S. 471, 10 S. Ct. 406, 33 L. Ed. 725.

A bill to quiet title against a single adverse claimant must aver that complainant's title has been successfully tried at law at least once. —Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co., 23 S. Ct. 434, 188 U. S. 632, 47 L. Ed. 626; Id., 23 S. Ct. 440, 188 U. S. 645, 47 L. Ed. 634; Same v. Chile Gold Min. Co., Id.

In an action to determine adverse claims, it was unnecessary to allege in detail plaintiff's chain of title, or to refer to the issuance of a patent to one of the defendants; and the fact that this was done, and that the complaint alleged that the patent was issued through mistake and fraud, did not alter the nature of the action, or add anything to the force of the pleadings. Judgment, Buffalo Land & Exploration Co. v. Strong (1903) 97 N. W. 575, 91 Minn. 84, affirmed. —Strong v. Buffalo Land & Exploration Co., 27 S. Ct. 780, 203 U. S. 582, 51 L. Ed. 327.

The cancellation for fraud of a deed to land containing pine woods valuable for timber and turpentine should not be denied because the complainants do not allege that they are in possession of the land. Decree, Ashburn v. Graves (1907) 149 F. 968, 79 C. C. A. 478, reversed. —Graves v. Ashburn, 30 S. Ct. 108, 215 U. S. 331, 54 L. Ed. 217.

37. — Plea or answer.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 78.

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 437, providing that the answer of defendant shall contain a general or specific denial of the allegations of the complaint, an answer in a suit to quiet title need not allege defendant's title, but only deny the plaintiff's allegation, though, to entitle defendant to avail himself of an equitable title as against plaintiff's legal title, it should be specifically pleaded. Judgment, United Land Ass'n v. Pacific Imp. Co. (1902) 69 P. 1064, 139 Cal. 370, affirmed. —United Land Ass'n v. Abrahams, 28 S. Ct. 569, 208 U. S. 614, 52 L. Ed. 645.

47. Trial or hearing.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 95-97; 46 Cent. Dig. Trial, § 920.

In an action to quiet title, there is no occasion for a finding as to any alleged title of plaintiff not set up in the complaint. Judgment, United Land Ass'n v. Pacific Imp. Co. (1902) 69 P. 1064, 139 Cal. 370, affirmed. —United Land Ass'n v. Abrahams, 28 S. Ct. 569, 208 U. S. 614, 52 L. Ed. 645.

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 437, providing that the answer of defendant shall contain a general or specific denial of the allegations of the complaint, a finding in a suit to quiet title on the issues raised by denial of the allegations of the complaint, if adverse to plaintiff, is sufficient, without finding defendant's title. —Id.

See 41 Cent. Dig. Quiet. T. § 98, 99.

Where equity interferes to remove difficulties in the way of owners of property using and enjoying the same, the form of relief will be adapted to the circumstances of the case. —Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 12 S. Ct. 720, 36 L. Ed. 532.

 Establishment or acquisition by public authorities.

All rights of a railroad under a city ordinance to use the tracks of a belt line railroad which another company had been authorized by the city to construct were terminated by the latter's legally excusable failure to build, where the rights granted were on condition that the grantee company should make a cash payment after operating over such tracks, and, if the other company failed without legal excuse to build the line, it should do so itself in lieu of the cash payment.—Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Behrman, 35 S. Ct. 62, 235 U. S. 164, 59 L. Ed. 175, affirming decree Behrman v. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co., 54 So. 25, 127 La. 775.

The conditions subject to which the New Orleans dock board approved the dedication for belt line railway purposes of a portion of the proposed route under its jurisdiction held violated by an ordinance under which the belt line tracks were to be constructed by a railway company and on completion turned over to the ownership of the city under the control of a public belt authority, and which further provided for arbitration as to controversies relating to the handling of trains and traffic.—Id.

A railway company under contract with a city to build a belt line was not obliged to construct any portion of it, if by reason of the successful opposition of a public board it was precluded from building the part of the line within the jurisdiction of said board, where the city agreed to furnish a clear legal right of way for the entire construction, and a later ordinance provided, if the company should default without legal excuse, for the construction of such line by another railroad, on compliance with certain conditions.—Id.

⌚5. Power to control and regulate.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 5, 6.

An amendment to the charter of a railroad company, authorizing it to make by-laws, rules, and regulations for the conduct of its business, not in conflict with the constitution and laws of the United States, "or repugnant to this act," and by its by-laws to establish rates of toll for the conveyance of persons and property, will not be construed to be a grant of immunity from legislative control as to rates of fare and freight.—Ruggles v. People of State of Illinois, 108 U. S. 526, 2 S. Ct. 832, 27 L. Ed. 812; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Same, 108 U. S. 541, 2 S. Ct. 839, 27 L. Ed. 818.

The charter of a railroad company (Act Ga. Dec. 18, 1835), giving it the exclusive right of transportation, "provided that the charge of transportation or conveyance shall not exceed" certain specified rates, is not a contract between the state and the company that the latter may charge whatever rates it chose, within the prescribed limits, but is, in effect, a provision that, if the company should exceed those limits, the "exclusive right" might be forfeited. The company is therefore subject to the provisions of subsequent legislation, establishing a commission to regulate railroad tariffs.—Georgia Railroad & Banking Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 9 S. Ct. 47, 32 L. Ed. 377.

A provision in a railroad charter that the directors of the corporation shall have power to make all needful rules, regulations, and by-laws touching "the rates of toll, and the manner of collecting the same," does not constitute an irrevocable contract with the corporation, exempting it from all future legislative control in the matter of regulating and collecting tolls.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 10 S. Ct. 462, 702, 33 L. Ed. 970, reversing State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 38 Minn. 281, 37 N. W. 782.

A railroad company organized in 1848 in Virginia, and exempted by its charter from legislative control, as to tolls, until able to divide more than 15 per cent. on its capital stock, was succeeded by another company, organized in such state in 1870, under a charter giving it all the rights and franchises of the former, but providing that it should be subject to such laws as apply to railroad companies generally. Held, that the latter company and its successors were subject to the general law of Virginia of January 14, 1853, regulating tolls on railroads.—Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pendleton, 156 U. S. 667, 15 S. Ct. 413, 39 L. Ed. 574, affirming judgment 86 Va. 1004, 11 S. E. 1062.

Nothing in the federal Constitution or statutes prevents a state from creating a board of railroad commissioners and prescribing their powers, or from regulating or forbidding the consolidation of railroad corporations, or from prescribing the routes of railroads, and providing that parallel and competing lines shall so remain. Judgment (1906) 41 So. 259, 89 Miss. 724, affirmed.—Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. State of Mississippi, 28 S. Ct. 650, 210 U. S. 187, 52 L. Ed. 1016.

The provision in the Union Pacific charter for government directors did not take the corporation out of the general rule that, except in cases where the charter imposes a limitation, the stockholders are the proper parties to take final action in the management of the corporate affairs.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 16 S. Ct. 1173, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

A company having power to lease an hotel may, in consideration of the lessor's obligation to rebuild in case the hotel should be burned, covenant to keep the premises insured.—Id.

Congress cannot be deemed to have exercised its right to alter or repeal, reserved in Acts July 1, 1862, and July 2, 1864, incorporating the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and making land grants in aid of its construction by Act June 24, 1912, legalizing conveyances of a part of the right of way theretofore made by the railway company.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Laramie Stockyards Co., 34 S. Ct. 101, 231 U. S. 190, 58 L. Ed. 179.

¶20. Actions by or against companies.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. ¶ 45-61.

¶23. — Parties.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. ¶ 51.

A corporation, in consideration of municipal aid, agreed to and did construct a railroad to a certain city. Afterwards it leased its road to another corporation, which changed the location of the line. Held, in a suit for mandamus to compel the reconstruction of the old line, that the Iowa corporation was a necessary party, notwithstanding Code Iowa 1873, § 1300, providing that a corporation operating the railway of another under lease shall, in all respects, be liable as though such railway belonged to it; such statute not discharging the lessor company from its corporate liabilities.—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Crane, 113 U. S. 424, 5 S. Ct. 578, 28 L. Ed. 1064.

¶30. Reorganization.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. ¶ 32.

Reservation by old stockholders in an agreement for reorganization of an insolvent railroad company of a stock interest in the new company which purchased the railroad property at foreclosure under a consent decree held to leave the property subject to the claims of nonassenting unsecured creditors of the railroad company.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Boyd, 33 S. Ct. 554, 228 U. S. 482, 57 L. Ed. 931.

Unsecured creditors of a solvent corporation, whose property was sold on foreclosure to a reorganized corporation, which was to issue stocks and bonds in exchange for the bonds of the old company, are entitled to charge the new company with their debts.—Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Guardian Trust Co., 36 S. Ct. 334, 240

U. S. 166, 60 L. Ed. 579, affirming decrees Central Imp. v. Cambria Street Co., 201 F. 811, 120 C. C. A. 121, and 210 F. 696, 127 C. C. A. 184.

A creditor and stockholder of a solvent corporation, by assenting to a reorganization by which the old stock was exchanged for stock in the new company, did not lose its right to charge the new corporation with its debts; it not appearing from the reorganization plan that stockholders were to be preferred over creditors.—Id.

An unsecured creditor of a solvent corporation, who was also a stockholder, held entitled to assert his claim against a reorganized company which purchased the property of the old company at foreclosure sale, though the reorganization agreement provided that no obligation was created in respect to property acquired at the foreclosure sale.—Id.

The fact that a reorganization scheme contemplates exchange of stock of the old corporation for stock in the new, and that the new corporation acquires all of the property of the old, justifies the conclusion that the new company is answerable to the unsecured creditors of the old corporation.—Id.

An unsecured creditor of a corporation, whose entire property was sold at a foreclosure sale to a reorganized company, held not barred by laches from maintaining an action to compel payment of his claim by the reorganized company.—Id.

Ⓒ—33. Foreign companies.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 70, 71; 12 Cent. Dig. Corp. § 2487-2677.

The fact that a foreign railroad company has a business office in a certain county in Missouri does not make it a resident of that county, or of the state, and hence does not remove it from the operation of Rev. St. Mo. 1879, § 3481, subd. 4, which provides that a suit against a nonresident defendant, instituted by summons under section 3480, subd. 4, may be brought in any county of the state.—New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 591, 13 S. Ct. 444, 37 L. Ed. 292, modifying judgment Estill v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (C. C.) 41 F. 849.

A railroad corporation organized under the laws of one state, when authorized so to do by the consent of the state which created it, may accept authority from another state to extend its railroad into such state, and receive a grant of powers to own and control, by lease or purchase, railroads therein, and may be treated by each of the states whose legislative grants they accept as domestic corporations.—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 16 S. Ct. 621, 40 L. Ed. 802.

Foreign electric railway company held doing business in the Eastern district of Pennsylvania, so far as the question of its amenability to service there is concerned.—Washington-Virginia R. Co. v. Real Estate Trust Co. of Philadelphia, 35 S. Ct. 818, 238 U. S. 185, 59 L. Ed. 1262, affirming judgment (D. C.) Real Estate Trust Co. of Philadelphia v. Washington-Virginia Ry. Co., 204 F. 678.

Where a railroad company has fully complied with all the conditions imposed by an act authorizing the issue of township bonds in aid of construction, it is entitled to the bonds, and the legislature cannot by a subsequent act forbid their issue.—Town of Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596, 1 S. Ct. 434, 27 L. Ed. 251.

Ⓒ—35. Acceptance and performance of conditions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 75, 77, 78, 88-93.

Equity may, at the suit of a judgment creditor of a railroad, compel the latter to assign its rights against a county which has subscribed to its stock, but has no jurisdiction to compel the county to issue its subscription bonds to complainant, though the company had contracted to turn over such bonds to him; such duty being only enforceable by mandamus against the county officers, and the obligation to issue the bonds being merely statutory, and not capable of being pleaded as a pure money indebtedness.—Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105, 8 S. Ct. 1043, 32 L. Ed. 73.

Ⓒ—39. Effect of sale, lease, or consolidation of railroad.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 96-98.

Bonds voted in aid of one railroad company, which is subsequently consolidated with another company, may be delivered to the consolidated company.—Chickaming Tp. v. Carpenter, 106 U. S. 663, 1 S. Ct. 620, 27 L. Ed. 307.

Act Ark. July 21, 1868, pledges the state to issue bonds to every company for each mile of road built, on application to the board of railroad commissioners "for the loan of credit"; and provides (section 7) that the legislature shall, from time to time, impose on each company to which bonds have been issued, a tax equal to the amount of the annual interest on such bonds, the taxation to continue until the amount of the bonds, with interest, has been paid, in which case the road shall be discharged from all claims or liens on the part of the state; and, in case of failure to pay said taxes (section 8), it shall be the duty of the state treasurer, by writ of sequestration, to seize the income and revenues of said company until the amount of said defaults shall be fully paid and satisfied. Held, that this statute creates no charge on the roads of the company, such as those dealing with it are bound to take notice of, and neither the state nor its bondholders are entitled to a sequestration of the income and revenue in the hands of purchasers at mortgagee's sale.—Tompkins v. Little Rock & Ft. S. Ry., 125 U. S. 109, 8 S. Ct. 762, 31 L. Ed. 615, affirming (C. C.) 18 F. 344, 5 McCrary, 597.

The township of C., in L. county, Mo., voted bonds in aid of the C. & O. Ry. Co., whose road was not then built, and whose articles of association declared that its object was to construct and operate a railroad from C. to such point on the line between Missouri and Iowa as should be deemed the best route for operating a road between C. and Omaha, Neb. Before the bonds were issued by the county court, the C. & O. consolidated with an Iowa company, and the consolidated company proceeded to construct and operate a road from St. Louis, by way of C., to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha. The bonds were issued to the consolidated company. Held that, as the purpose for which the C. & O. Co. was organized could not have been carried out except by the consolidation, the existing statutory provision therefor became a part of the contract with the township, and the issuance of bonds to the consolidated company was valid.—Livingston County v. First Nat. Bank, 128 U. S. 102, 9 S. Ct. 18, 32 L. Ed. 359.

42. Payment or redemption of securities by railroad company.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 100.

The United States aided the Central Pacific Railroad Company in the construction of its road, receiving bonds of the company in payment. A clause in a statute by which the government was to be paid for the bonds (Act May 7, 1878, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3569]) reads as follows: "The whole amount of compensation which may, from time to time, be due to said several railroad companies [among which was the Central Pacific], respectively, for services rendered for the government, shall be retained by the United States," etc. The railroad company demanded pay for services rendered the government over a portion of the road which the United States did not aid in constructing the government claiming that said act covered the whole road. Held, that the government was entitled to retain payment only for services rendered over that portion of the road in the construction of which it had aided.—United States v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235, 6 S. Ct. 1038, 30 L. Ed. 173.

In pursuance of an act providing for the redemption by a railroad of state bonds issued in aid thereof, and in immediate expectation of payment, another act was passed directing that all moneys in the state treasury, not otherwise required, should be used to redeem state bonds, as soon as due, and meanwhile be invested in state or United States bonds. Held, that an acceptance of money under the former act after the latter's passage, bound the state to comply with its terms, and the amount payable, in order to save the state from loss, must be computed accordingly.—Rolston v. Crittenden, 120 U. S. 390, 7 S. Ct. 599, 30 L. Ed. 721.

A state issued its bonds in aid of a railroad, requiring the company to provide for their redemption and payment of interest, so as to exonerate the state from all liability, and reserved a mortgage lien on the road as security. By a later act, the company was authorized to issue bonds for a like amount, secured by trust deed, the state to convey its prior lien to the trustees on payment of its indebtedness incurred, with all interest accrued at the time of payment. Held, that the payment must be in amount equal to the face value of the bonds, with accrued interest, and such further amount, as would enable the state to cancel that amount of its outstanding indebtedness bearing the same rate of interest.—Id.

IV. LOCATION OF ROAD, TERMINI, AND STATIONS.

Conditions as to location in vote authorizing issue of county bonds, see Counties, 180. Due process of law, see Constitutional Law, 297.

Mandamus to compel location of station, see Mandamus, 16, 146.

47. Determination as to location.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 106-108.

The condition that the power of a railroad company to locate its track within a city should be exercised only with the consent of the common council must be construed as attaching to the location of railroad structures after the original construction of the road, if the power itself continues as to them. Decree 50 N. E. 1104, 173 Ill. 471, 53 L. R. A. 408, affirmed.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. City of Chicago, 20 S. Ct. 509, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. Ed. 622.

The consent of the common council of the city, required by the charter of the Illinois Central Railroad Company to "authorize said corporation to make a location of their track within any city," is required for the location of depots, engine houses, and the necessary track approaches to the same.—Id.

51. Connections with other roads.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 116-118, 120.

The use of the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company as accessory only to the use of that company's bridge over the Missouri river at Omaha, and not for purposes which, like local switching, are wholly independent of any use of the bridge, was what was authorized by a decree based upon the bridge acts (Act July 25, 1866, c. 246, 14 Stat. 244; Act Feb. 24, 1871, c. 67, 16 Stat. 430), adjudging to the Mason City & Fort Dodge Railroad Company and its lessee the right to the equal and joint use of the main and passing tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company from their eastern terminus at Council Bluffs to a connection with the Union Stockyards Railroad and the other railroads connecting with the Union Pacific Railroad at South Omaha, including the bridge across the Missouri river at that point, and of the connections with the Union Stockyards tracks and with the tracks of all other railway companies connecting at or near South Omaha with the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, to the same extent and upon the same terms as defined in certain existing contracts between the Union Pacific Railroad Company and other railways; the common object of both statutes being the more perfect connection of the roads running to the bridge on either side of the river.—(1911) Union Pac. R. Co. v. Mason City & F. D. R. Co., 32 S. Ct. 86, 222 U. S. 237, 56 L. Ed. 180, reversing decree (1908) 165 F. 844, 91 C. C. A. 530.

The words "lateral branch line," in act to regulate commerce Feb. 4, 1887, § 1, as amended by Act June 18, 1910, § 7, requiring carriers to establish switch connections with such lines on certain conditions, do not refer to what the applicant line may become by the order of the commission, but to what it is when it applies.—United States v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co., 33 S. Ct. 5, 226 U. S. 14, 57 L. Ed. 104, affirming decree (Com.-C.) Baltimore & O. S. W. R. R. v. United States, 195 F. 962.

An interurban electric railway for passengers and some freight, running under a state charter through an area inclosed by two steam railways, more or less competing with them, is not a "lateral branch line of railroad," within act regulating commerce, Feb. 4, 1887, § 1, as amended by Act June 18, 1910, § 7, requiring carriers subject to the act to establish switch connections with such lines.—Id.

A state acting through an administrative body may require crossing or intersecting railroads entering the same town or city to make track connections for interchange of traffic at that point, where public necessity is shown.—Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. Railroad Commission of Georgia, 36 S. Ct. 260, 240 U. S. 324, 60 L. Ed. 669, affirming decree 213 F. 27, 129 C. C. A. 613.

V. RIGHT OF WAY AND OTHER INTERESTS IN LAND.

Acquisition of rights under power of eminent domain, see Eminent Domain.

Adverse possession, see Adverse Possession, 3, 7, 8.

Determination of title, jurisdiction of federal supreme court, see Courts, 394(16).

Impairment of obligation of contract, see Constitutional Law, 134.

Municipal powers, see Municipal Corporations, 680, 681.

Right of telegraph or telephone company to use right of way, see Telegraphs and Telephones, 11.

←62. Purposes for which land may be acquired.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 129.

As no general statute of Wisconsin authorizes corporations to hold lands without regard to their uses, a railroad company incorporated by Laws Wis. April 12, 1866, c. 540, authorizing it to acquire lands for railroad purposes, and 100 feet in width for right of way, and the land necessary for depots and other railroad buildings, and for purposes connected with the use of the road, cannot sue to recover lands conveyed to one in trust for it, to be used for purposes not specified in the act of incorporation.—Case v. Kelly, 133 U. S. 21, 10 S. Ct. 216, 33 L. Ed. 513.

←64. Agreements as to right of way or use of land.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 144, 147-153; 11 Cent. Dig. Contracts, § 894.

A county, which has made a gift or donation of lands to a railroad company, and which for years has stood by and permitted the company to construct its road and appurtenances, and has accepted from it large sums as taxes upon such lands, would seem to be estopped from interfering with the possession of the company as to those parts of the land actually needed and used for railroad purposes, even if its original grant was made without authority. A fortiori, it follows that one afterwards buying the lands from the county, with notice, could neither maintain trespass nor ejectment against the company, nor obtain affirmative relief against it in equity.—Roberts v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 158 U. S. 1, 15 S. Ct. 756, 39 L. Ed. 873, affirming judgment (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Roberts, 42 F. 734.

←74. Rights in and use of highways and public places.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 183-203.

←75. — Grant in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 183-191.

No power to lay railroad tracks in or across any of the streets of the city of Washington, except as expressly authorized, was conferred on the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Company by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1867, authorizing it to extend its railroad into the District of Columbia, nor by the subsequent acts relating to the company; nor did Act June 21, 1870, which authorized it to extend its road by way of Maryland avenue to the long bridge, give any authority to depart from that avenue, and lay its tracks on another street, to connect with a new freight depot to be established there.—Edmonds v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 114 U. S. 453, 5 S. Ct. 1098, 29 L. Ed. 216.

A municipal corporation under B. & C. Comp. Or. §§ 5077, 5078, giving it power to designate the streets on which railroad tracks could be located, was not limited to naming the thoroughfare, but could fix conditions and reservations not inconsistent with the grant from the state, and such conditions and reservations became contractual when accepted by the railroad.—Southern Pac. Co. v. City of Portland, 33 S. Ct. 308, 227 U. S. 559, 57 L. Ed. 642, affirming decree (C. C.) 177 F. 958.

Power reserved in a municipal ordinance designating, under B. & C. Comp. Or. §§ 5077, 5078, the streets on which railroad tracks could be located, to alter regulations and regulate the running of locomotives, authorized the city to prohibit the use of steam locomotives.—Id.

←80. Rights in and use of road or land of other railroad.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 204-208.

A covenant on the part of a railroad company in a grant of a right of way through a park by the park commissioners to permit other railroads to use the right of way is binding on another company, which by the same instrument acquired the right of way in common with the grantee, "under the same terms and conditions" as those imposed on such grantee.—Joy v. City of St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 29 F. 546.

The right of railway companies to use the "right of way" of another company includes the right to use the tracks, switches, turnouts, turntables, and other terminal facilities constructed on the right of way.—Id.

The Union Pacific Railroad Company was required to permit the trains of all roads terminating at the Missouri river at Omaha to use its bridge at that point up to the fair limits of capacity, and upon payment of reasonable compensation, by Act Feb. 24, 1871, c. 67, 16 Stat. 430, authorizing the construction of the bridge and providing that for its use and protection the company should be empowered, governed, and limited by the provisions of Act July 25, 1866, c. 246, 14 Stat. 244, to authorize the construction of certain bridges, and to establish them as post roads, since it must have been intended by that provision to incorporate, not only those provisions of the earlier act in terms applied to all the bridges therein authorized, but also the provision for joint use, applied to substantially all the bridges, although in reference to a single bridge, other and special directions were made. Decree 128 F. 230, 64 C. C. A. 348, affirmed.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 26 S. Ct. 19, 199 U. S. 160, 50 L. Ed. 134.

The lack of any congressional authority in the successive grantees of a railway roadbed lying in the District of Columbia to extend their lines into that district could not affect their title if the original grantor had such authority. Judgment 23 App. D. C. 587, affirmed.—Chesapeake Beach Ry. Co. v. Washington, P. & C. R. Co., 26 S. Ct. 25, 199 U. S. 247, 50 L. Ed. 175.

The equal use and benefit of the entire ground owned by the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, and used by it for its terminal facilities in St. Louis, and not merely a right of way over its tracks running to the Union station, were granted to the St. Louis, Kansas City & Colorado Railroad Company by a decree awarding to the latter road the equal use, on certain prescribed terms, of the right of way and tracks, side tracks, switches, turn-outs, turn-tables, and other terminal facilities of the former road at and between the north line of Forest Park and Eighteenth street in the city of St. Louis. Decree (1907) 152 F. 849, 81 C. C. A. 643, modified.—St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 30 S. Ct. 510, 217 U. S. 247, 54 L. Ed. 752.

The right of the St. Louis, Kansas City & Colorado Railroad Company to use terminal facilities in connection with industrial establishments now existing near the right of way of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company is included in a decree by which the former road was given the right, upon certain prescribed terms, which contemplated modification upon change in conditions, to use the right of way and tracks, side tracks, switches, turn-outs, turn-tables, and other terminal facilities of the latter road at and between the north line of Forest Park and Eighteenth street in the city of St. Louis.—Id.

←82. Abandonment and forfeiture of land or rights.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 213-219.

Where an ordinance granting rights to a railroad company required it to fix its terminus at a certain place in the city, with a further right to make certain "extensions" therefrom, and declared that these grants were on condition that the terminus should be established "within the city limits," held, that it was a condition precedent that the terminus should be fixed at the place previously prescribed, and that, having established it at a different place, the ordinance was subject to repeal, though the company had laid its tracks in the streets over which the extensions were authorized.—City of New Orleans v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 18 S. Ct. 875, 171 U. S. 312, 43 L. Ed. 178.

88. Crossing other railroads.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 234-259.

91. — Determination as to necessity, place, mode, and expenses of crossing.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 249-259.

Delay in building railroad line is no defense to suit against another railway company which has threatened to occupy the former company's location at many points, making it impracticable for it to proceed, where the former company acted in good faith and had expended large sums in location and securing right of way before suit.—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Arizona & C. R. Co. of New Mexico, 34 S. Ct. 691, 233 U. S. 601, 58 L. Ed. 1111, affirming decree Arizona & C. R. Co. of New Mexico v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 117 P. 730, 16 N. M. 281.

A railroad which has located the best line between its terminals is entitled to restrain another railroad, which, with full knowledge, has intended to occupy and has recrossed the location of the first road at many points, making it impracticable for the former railroad to proceed with the construction of its line.—Id.

92. Crossing highways.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 260-304; 25 Cent. Dig. High. § 145.

93. — Right to cross.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 260-265.

As no power to cross the streets of a city, incident to the right to run to or from the city of Washington, was conferred on the company by the act of the state of Maryland incorporating the Baltimore & P. R. Co., no such power was conferred by the adoption of the act of incorporation by congress in the act authorizing the company to extend its road into the district.—Edmonds v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 114 U. S. 453, 5 S. Ct. 1098, 29 L. Ed. 216.

99. — Abolition and removal of grade crossings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 293-295, 297-304.

The entire cost of constructing a viaduct over tracks of a railroad at a street crossing may be imposed on the railroad by a municipality acting under state authority, though the structure is designed to carry the tracks of a street railroad, whereby it will cost considerably more than a viaduct carrying ordinary street traffic.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. City of Omaha, 35 S. Ct. 82, 235 U. S. 121, 59 L. Ed. 157, affirming decree 197 F. 516, 117 C. C. A. 12.

103. Fences and cattle guards.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 315-319, 762, 763, 767, 769, 772.

Where an ordinance required such sufficient walls and fences to be maintained along a railroad right of way as would secure persons and property from danger, "said structure to be of such height as the city council may direct," the obligation to build sufficient fences was absolute, even though no directions were given by the city council.—Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 4 S. Ct. 369, 28 L. Ed. 410.

A clause in the charter of a city conferring power upon the council to provide protection against injury to persons and property in the use of railroads is sufficient warrant for an ordinance requiring a railroad company to maintain a guard between the line of its road and a public park.—Id.

106. Waters and water courses.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 333-336.

108. — Ditches, culverts, and bridges.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 333-336.

Laws Mo. 1907, p. 169, amending Rev. St. 1899, § 1110, requiring openings in rights of way to take care of surface water, held constitutional.—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Tranbarger, 35 S. Ct. 678, 238 U. S. 67, 59 L. Ed. 1204, affirming judgment Tranbarger v. Chicago & A. R. Co., 156 S. W. 694, 250 Mo. 46.

Requirement of Laws Mo. 1907, p. 169, amending Rev. St. 1899, § 1110, compelling railroads within three months after completion to construct openings in rights of way to take care of surface water, allows railroads already existing a reasonable time within which to construct the openings.—Id.

116. Power to transfer franchises or property in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 375.

A lease or sale of the corporate franchises of a railroad company to another corporation, by which it ceases to operate its lines, is an abandonment of its duty to the public, is ultra vires, and is absolutely null and void.—Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 11 S. Ct. 478, 35 L. Ed. 55.

119. Constitutional and statutory provisions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 376.

Const. Ky. 1891, § 201, prohibiting consolidation of a railroad with a parallel or competing road, is a valid exercise of the police power, and prevents any such consolidation, after its enactment, by a road given general power by its charter to acquire other roads; no vested right being given by the power except so far as it had been exercised prior to the constitutional enactment.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 16 S. Ct. 714, 40 L. Ed. 849, affirming decree 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476.

⇒120. Powers of continuous or connecting lines.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 377-380.

Under Act Ky. Jan. 22, 1858, authorizing the leasing of one railroad to another when, together, they form a "continuous line," it is not essential to the validity of a lease that the leased road shall be an extension from either terminus of the main line, but it may be merely a collateral branch, forming a continuous road, via the junction, to either terminus of such main line, in as direct a route as the average railroad.—Hancock v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 145 U. S. 409, 12 S. Ct. 969, 36 L. Ed. 755.

Act Ky. March 7, 1854, giving a railroad company power to "unite" its road with any other road connecting therewith, on such conditions as the two companies might agree on, did not authorize a consolidation of roads, but merely a mechanical union of roads running into the same town.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 16 S. Ct. 714, 40 L. Ed. 849, affirming decree 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476.

⇒121. Powers of parallel or competing lines.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 381-385.

A contract by which one railroad agrees to guaranty the bonds of a parallel, competing road, in consideration of which half the stock of the latter road is to be transferred to the stockholders of the former road, or to a trustee for their use, is within Laws Minn. 1874, c. 29, providing that no railroad shall consolidate with, lease, purchase, or in any way control, any parallel or competing line.—Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 161 U. S. 646, 16 S. Ct. 705, 40 L. Ed. 838, reversing decree (C. C.) 73 F. 933.

Act Ky. Jan. 17, 1856, § 3, declaring that the L. & N. R. Co. may "from time to time extend any branch road, and may purchase and hold any road constructed by another company, or may agree on terms to receive the cars of other roads on their said road," authorizes the purchase, not of a parallel or continuing line, but only of branch roads.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 16 S. Ct. 714, 40 L. Ed. 849, affirming decree 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476.

A railroad having general authority to consolidate with other roads cannot purchase a parallel competing road which is subject to the provisions of Const. Ky. 1891, par. 201, declaring that no railroad shall consolidate with any parallel or competing road.—Id.

Acquiescence by the state in several purchases by a railroad of local lines which ran parallel to some of its own branches cannot be treated as a contemporaneous construction of its charter as authorizing consolidation with a parallel and competing road connecting its principal termini.—Id.

⇒122. Transfers to and contracts with foreign companies.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 386-388.

Act Ind. Feb. 23, 1853, § 3, provides that "any railroad company * * * which may have constructed its road so as to meet and connect with any other railroad in an adjoining state * * * shall have power to make such contracts with any such railroad * * * for the use of its road as to the board of directors may seem proper." Held, that this does not confer power on a railroad company to contract for the lease of all the franchises and appurtenances of such a railroad of another state, and for its operation under such lease.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R.

Co., 118 U. S. 290, 6 S. Ct. 1094, 30 L. Ed. 83; Id., 118 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 24, 30 L. Ed. 284.

Act Mo. March 2, 1869, provides that any railroad company organized under the laws of that state, "whose track shall at the line of the state connect with the track of the railroad of any company organized under the laws of any adjoining state," may consolidate with such company. Held, that this statute authorized a consolidation of an existing domestic company with a foreign one, although the former had not then constructed its road.—Livingston County v. First Nat. Bank, 128 U. S. 102, 9 S. Ct. 18, 32 L. Ed. 359.

Rev. St. Ind. §§ 3971-3973, authorize any railroad company of Indiana "to intersect, join, and unite" with any railroad of an adjoining state constructed to the state line, and "to make such contracts and agreements with any such road * * * for the transportation of freight and passengers, or for the use of its road, as to the board of directors may seem proper." Held not to authorize one railroad corporation to lease the road of another.—St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 12 S. Ct. 953, 36 L. Ed. 748, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 440.

The Indiana statute of March 8, 1883 (Laws 1883, p. 182, c. 127; Horner's Rev. St. §§ 3951a-3951c), authorizing railroad companies organized under the laws of that state to guaranty the bonds of a company of another state, under certain circumstances, and in a prescribed manner, superseded and repealed, as to matters within its scope and terms, the provisions of all former statutes of the state on the subject.—Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 19 S. Ct. 817, 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. Ed. 1081, modifying decree Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co., 75 Fed. 433, 22 C. C. A. 378.

A railroad company of Indiana being empowered by the statutes of the state, on a petition by the holders of a majority of its stock, to guaranty the bonds of a company of an adjoining state, the construction of whose road would be beneficial to its own business, such a guaranty, though made without the petition or assent of its stockholders, and therefore illegal and voidable, is not ultra vires, and when made on negotiable bonds, by its proper officers, under the seal of the corporation, authorized thereto by its directors, may be enforced by a bona fide purchaser of such bonds in the market, having no notice of the irregularity.—Id.

⇒123. Consent of stockholders.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 389.

So far as a lessor corporation can be regarded as representing its nonconsenting stockholders in their efforts to set aside the lease, it and they are barred by laches in failing to bring an action to set it aside for 17 years, and by accepting the rentals during that time.—St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 12 S. Ct. 953, 36 L. Ed. 748, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 440.

Act Ill. Feb. 16, 1865, provides that a lease of a railroad to a corporation out of the state "shall be null and void," unless written consent of all the stockholders of the lessor road, residing in the state, be first obtained. Held not to limit the scope of the powers conferred upon such corporations by law, but only to prescribe the manner of exercising corporate powers, compliance with which the stockholders might waive, or the corporation might be estopped, by lapse of time, to deny.—Id.

⇒125. Sales.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 391-403.

126. — Power to buy or sell.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 391, 394-396.

The S. G. & F. R. Co., having power, by its charter, to construct a railroad from Albany to Thomasville, Georgia, and from Thomasville to the Florida line, and also power to purchase and sell all kinds of property of every nature and quality, and to incorporate its stock with that of any other company, contracted with the A. & G. R. Co. to construct its road from Thomasville to Albany, and to sell and deliver it to the latter company in sections as completed, together with the franchise of using the same, and to incorporate its stock created for building said road with that of the A. & G. R. Co. Held, that this contract was not ultra vires.—Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 488, 1 S. Ct. 495, 27 L. Ed. 279.

The right of way and the franchises granted by the city of New Orleans to the first Canal Street, City Park & Lake Railroad Company, being assignable under the laws of Louisiana, passed with the other property of that corporation by the sale thereof made in pursuance of the decree of the United States court in bankruptcy.—New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 5 S. Ct. 1009, 29 L. Ed. 244.

A railroad having general authority to consolidate with other roads cannot purchase a parallel competing road, which is subject to the provision of Const. Ky. 1891, § 201, declaring that no railroad shall consolidate with any parallel or competing road; and it is immaterial that the sale of the road is not voluntary, but is a judicial sale.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 16 S. Ct. 714, 40 L. Ed. 849, affirming decree 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476.

128. — Conveyances.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 397.

A creditor of a railroad company, having proceeded against the successor to its property and franchises, and obtained a judgment against it based on the assumed validity of the transfer of the property and franchises of the old corporation, cannot afterwards object that the transfer was illegal and ultra vires.—Fogg v. Blair, 133 U. S. 534, 10 S. Ct. 338, 33 L. Ed. 721.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 392, 393, 399-406.

V., a judgment creditor of a railroad corporation, in 1867 levied an execution on the right of way, and it was sold to V., and the sheriff deeded it to him, and he took possession of the roadbed. In 1870 he contracted with another railroad corporation to complete the grading of the line of road for a certain sum per mile, and, on being paid, to transfer to it all his title to the franchise, right of way, and property of the old corporation. He completed the work, and was not paid in full, but gave possession of the road, in 1871, to the corporation, and its franchises and road and property passed, in 1880, to another corporation, the defendant. Held, that there was nothing in the contract to estop the defendant from disputing the right of V. to recover the roadbed in ejectment on the strength of his title.—East Alabama Ry. Co. v. Doe, 114 U. S. 340, 5 S. Ct. 869, 29 L. Ed. 136.

A contract between two railroad companies in relation to the carriage of freights and division of earnings, which provides that this "contract, and any damages for the breach of the same, shall be a continuing lien upon the roads of the two contracting companies, their equipment and income, in whosoever hands they may come," does not constitute a lien or obligation running with the land, so as to render it liable in the hands of a purchaser of one of the roads for supposed earnings that would have accrued during the term provided in the lease.—Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 135 U. S. 576, 10 S. Ct. 753, 34 L. Ed. 248.

The right given a railroad by the law under which it is incorporated to have its passenger rates, within certain limits, unaffected by future legislation, does not inure to the benefit of the purchaser of its property, in the absence of express direction to that effect in the law.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 15 S. Ct. 484, 39 L. Ed. 567, affirming judgment 15 S. W. 18, 54 Ark. 101, 11 L. R. A. 452.

Act Ind. Dec. 18, 1865, § 8, relating to taxation, which provides that where a railroad has been leased to another company the latter shall pay all taxes thereon, and be subject to the same liabilities in that regard as if such road were its own property, does not by implication confer on railroad companies authority to contract for the lease of all franchises and appurtenances of other companies and for the operation of their roads under such lease.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co., 118 U. S. 290, 6 S. Ct. 1094, 30 L. Ed. 83; Id., 118 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 24, 30 L. Ed. 284.

Plaintiff, a judgment creditor of a railroad company, garnished another company to whom its road was leased, and two trustees under a mortgage of the latter. The lessor company had, with notice to the lessee, assigned the lease to its president and another, trustees under a mortgage given by it, as additional security for its bonds, and with no intention of changing the relations of the parties. Said president, as surviving trustee, commenced proceedings to foreclose the lessor's mortgage, joining the lessee as defendant. Meantime the lessee had operated the leased line until, on default in payment of interest, the trustees under its mortgage took possession of the same, the lease not being assigned to them. Said trustees notified all parties that they refused to assume or affirm said lease, and proceeded to operate the leased line without objection, becoming thereby indebted for rent. Held, that they had not been in possession under the lease, and were in no way bound to account to the estate of the lessor's president as assignee thereof; that the obligation to pay for the use and occupation was to the lessor; and that plaintiff therefore should have judgment.—Milwaukee & N. Ry. Co. v. Brooks Locomotive Works, 121 U. S. 430, 7 S. Ct. 1094, 30 L. Ed. 995.

None of the various statutes of the state of Oregon, either expressly or by implication, authorize a railroad corporation to lease its road and franchises, or to take similar leases from other railroad corporations; and such a lease is ultra vires and void.—Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1, 9 S. Ct. 409, 32 L. Ed. 837, reversing Oregonian R. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. (C. C.) 23 F. 232, 10 Sawy. 464; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 145 U. S. 52, 12 S. Ct. 814, 36 L. Ed. 620.

Where a railroad company, in debt, leases its road and properties for 999 years to another corporation, which agrees to pay all judgment liens against the lessor, and to complete its road, and the two companies execute a deed of trust to secure bonds of the lessor, the proceeds of which are received by the lessee, and partly used for its own benefit, the lessee is in equity held liable for debts which existed against the lessor before the lease, though they were not reduced to judgment.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Third Nat. Bank, 134 U. S. 276, 10 S. Ct. 550, 33 L. Ed. 900.

This liability is not affected by the subsequent expenditure by the lessee, on the lessor's road, of an amount greater than the amount so misappropriated.—Id.

A corporation chartered "for the transportation of passengers in railroad cars, constructed and to be owned by the said company," under certain patents, and empowered to enter into contracts with other corporations "for the leasing or hiring and transfer to them" of their railway cars and other personal property leased for a certain rental, for 99 years, to another corporation in the same business, all its property, including its cars and patents and all contracts with railroad companies for the hire of its cars, and agreed that, while the lease was in force, it would not engage in the business of manufacturing and using or hiring cars. Held, that the corporation was quasi public, and the lease was void as ultra vires, and because it was an abandonment by the lessor of its duty to the public.—Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 11 S. Ct. 478, 35 L. Ed. 55.

Rev. St. Ill. 1874, c. 114, § 34, authorizing railroad companies to make "contracts and arrangements with each other, and with railroad corporations of other states, for leasing and running their roads, or any part thereof," includes making as well as taking leases of such roads.—St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 12 S. Ct. 953, 36 L. Ed. 748, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 440.

A lease of one railroad to another for the term of 999 years is unlawful and wholly void, and cannot be subsequently ratified, unless expressly authorized by the charters of both corporations, or by the laws of the states creating them.—Id.

—132. — Requisites and validity.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 410-416.

Where a void lease is made by a railroad company for a term of 96 years, at a certain yearly rental, the use of the road by the lessee, and payment of the rental for three years, does not make the contract so far an executed one as to estop the lessee to deny its validity.—Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1, 9 S. Ct. 409, 32 L. Ed. 837, reversing (C. C.) Oregonian R. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co., 23 F. 232, 10 Sawy. 464; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 145 U. S. 52, 12 S. Ct. 814, 36 L. Ed. 620.

A railroad company leased its tracks to another company, with a stipulation that the lease should bind the lessees, assigns, grantees, and successors of each party thereto. Subsequently the roads and franchises of the lessee, by various consolidations, leases, and contracts, came into the possession of a third company. The lessor recognized this company as the successor of the lessee, and for more than a year granted it the privileges secured by the lease, without questioning its interest therein. Held that, on the filing of a bill by the latter to determine a question depending on the construction of the lease, the lessor could not for the first time question the legality of plaintiff's successorship to the lessee.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 143 U. S. 596, 12 S. Ct. 479, 36 L. Ed. 277.

—133. — Construction and operation.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 407-409, 417-422.

The preamble to the contract of lease between two railroad companies recited that "the Denver Company owns and operates a railway * * * which extends from Denver, through Colorado Springs, to South Pueblo, and the Chicago Company owns a railway from" the state line to the city of Colorado Springs; and, further, that "the interest of both parties and of the public will be promoted by the establishment and operation of a through line of railway between all the points on the line of the Denver Company between Denver and South Pueblo, and all points on the line operated by the Chicago Company." Accordingly the Denver Company leased to the Chicago Company the use and possession of the former's railway and its appurtenances between and including Denver and South Pueblo. The consideration for the lease was the payment by the Chicago Company of a certain percentage of the cost of construction of the property, and also a proportion of the operating expenses and repairs, to be fixed by the number of wheels per mile run by the Chicago Company. The Chicago Company afterwards arranged with the Union Pacific to run its trains into Denver over the latter's tracks. Held, that the Chicago Company was not entitled to use the Denver Company's terminals for cars run over the Union Pacific track.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 143 U. S. 596, 12 S. Ct. 479, 36 L. Ed. 277.

The grant by the lessor was of the "possession and use of all its tracks, buildings, stations, sidings, and switches on and along its line of railway between and including Denver and South Pueblo, excluding its shops at Burnham, intending hereby to include in the description aforesaid all and every portion of its railway and appurtenant property between and at the points aforesaid." Held, that the exception of the "Burnham shops" extended to a tract of about 60 acres of land adjoining the shops, and used in connection with them, but that the lessee could not be excluded from the use of a "wye" track traversing a portion thereof, and used for the turning of trains.—Id.

Although a contract of lease of a railroad made no express provision for car cleaning facilities, the lessee was entitled to use the tracks provided by the lessor for that purpose; and, if it were excluded therefrom, it was entitled to call upon the lessor to construct new tracks for it, under a provision of the contract requiring the lessor, on reasonable notice, to construct additional side tracks, spurs, etc., and providing that the lessee should pay a given percentage on the cost thereof, and that if the lessor failed to comply with the request the lessee might itself construct the needed tracks, and become the sole owner thereof.—Id.

—134. — Rights and liabilities of lessors and lessees.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 423-433.

A railroad corporation of one state that leases and operates a road in another state subjects itself to such local legislation as would have been applicable to the corporation owning the road if no lease had been made, and has no other privileges than such as belonged to the lessor.—Stone v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 116 U. S. 347, 6 S. Ct. 348, 388, 1191, 29 L. Ed. 650.

Where the lease of its road by one railroad company to another is void, no action will lie in favor of the lessor against other railroad companies that were guarantors of the payment of the stipulated rent.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co., 118 U. S. 290, 6 S. Ct. 1094, 30 L. Ed. 83; Id., 118 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 24, 30 L. Ed. 284.

Where one railroad leases its line to another, which is owned and operated by a third, but the lease has been adjudged void, and the lessee road issues bonds of which the third road becomes the holder, and the bonds are foreclosed and the proceeds held for distribution, the lessor road has not an equity entitling it to be paid its rental out of such proceeds in precedence over the third road as a bondholder, on the ground that the third road, as the owner of the lessor road, is really the debtor for arrearages of rent.—St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co., 125 U. S. 658, 8 S. Ct. 1011, 31 L. Ed. 832.

By the terms of the lease the lessor agreed to let the lessee into the full, equal, joint, and perpetual possession and use of its property, and the lessee was to pay a proportionate share "of the expenses actually incurred in paying proper salaries to the general superintendent and subordinate employes, including switchmen," etc. Held, that the lessee was entitled to use its own switching engines and crews for the handling of its freight in the lessor's terminals, but they must be under the orders and superintendence of the proper officer of the lessor.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 143 U. S. 596, 12 S. Ct. 479, 36 L. Ed. 277.

An Illinois railroad corporation is bound to take notice that its lease to an Indiana corporation is ultra vires of the latter, so that, where the lease becomes an executed contract by the delivery of the leased property, the lessor is in pari delicto with the lessee, and cannot maintain a suit to recover possession.—St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co., 145 U. S. 393, 12 S. Ct. 953, 36 L. Ed. 748, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 440.

An agreement between one railroad company and the president of another by which the latter was to deliver to the former a majority of the capital stock of his company and procure a lease to be executed for 999 years for a rental payable from the net profits, and have his company issue bonds guaranteed by the lessee for twice the value of the road, held to provide for a wrongful diversion of the proceeds of the bonds, rendering the lessee liable in equity to a judgment creditor of the lessor.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Boyd, 33 S. Ct. 554, 228 U. S. 482, 57 L. Ed. 931, affirming decree 177 F. 804, 101 C. C. A. 18.

135. Contracts for control, operation, or use of railroads or incidental facilities.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 434-442.

136. Power to make contracts.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 434.

A railroad company, whose road extends across Wisconsin from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi, was empowered by its charter (Priv. Laws Wis. 1866, c. 540, § 7) to make such contracts as the convenience and interest of the company may require; by Gen. Laws Wis. 1872, c. 109, § 51, to exercise its rights and franchises in any state and territory, and accept therefrom any other powers and privileges; and by Gen. Laws Wis. 1853, c. 76, to make through traffic contracts with any railroad having its terminus on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, and to build, construct, and run as part of its property such steamboats and vessels as may be necessary to facilitate its operations. Held, that a contract with the proprietors of steamboats running on the Great Lakes between its eastern terminus and Buffalo, guarantying that the gross earnings of each boat for two years should amount to a certain sum, is not ultra vires.—Green Bay & M. R. Co. v. Union Steamboat Co., 107 U. S. 98, 2 S. Ct. 221, 27 L. Ed. 413.

Unless specially authorized by its charter, or aided by some other legislative action, a railroad company cannot, by lease or other contract, turn over to another company, for a long period of time, its road and all its appurtenances, the use of its franchises, and the exercise of its powers, nor can any other railroad company, without similar authority, make a contract to run and operate such road, property, and franchises of the first corporation; for such a contract is not among the ordinary powers of a railroad company, and is not to be inferred from the usual grant of powers in a railroad charter.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co., 118 U. S. 290, 6 S. Ct. 1094, 30 L. Ed. 83; Id., 118 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 24, 30 L. Ed. 284.

The I. Co. was an Illinois corporation. By the statute of that state of February 23, 1854, all railroad companies having their termini fixed by law, and their roads intersected by continuous lines, were authorized to consolidate their properties with connecting lines out of the state and, when necessary by reason of such consolidation, they were authorized to bridge streams. By the act of February 12, 1855, all railroad corporations were authorized to make all necessary and convenient contracts with each other and with outside railroad companies, for leasing and running their lines. Similar powers were conferred by the act of February 16, 1865; and by the act of February 25, 1867, railroads terminating at a point on a continuous railroad thoroughfare, where a bridge was or was to be constructed, were authorized to connect with the bridge. Held, that the I. Co. had authority to enter into a contract with a bridge company for the use of a bridge with other railroad companies, each company to pay tolls, any deficiency in the gross amount of tolls to be contributed by the companies proportionately.—Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371, 9 S. Ct. 770, 33 L. Ed. 157.

A contract by the U. P. Co., letting another company into "the free, equal, and joint possession of its main and passing tracks" between Council Bluffs and Omaha, across its Missouri River bridge, a distance of about seven miles, with the use of its tracks and terminal facilities at Omaha, was not ultra vires, as disabling the company from the performance of its duties to the public; it in effect giving to the other company merely trackage rights, with compensation on a mileage or wheelage basis, and it appearing that the control of the tracks was to remain in the U. P. Co., that all trains were to be moved under the direction of its superintendent, and that the capacity of the bridge and tracks was sufficient for the purpose.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 16 S. Ct. 1173, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

The mere fact that, at some time in the future, the business of the U. P. Co. might so increase as to require all of its bridge and track facilities, did not invalidate the contract, since, in such a case, relief could be obtained from the courts.—Id.

The charter of the U. P. Co. not prohibiting, unless by implication, an arrangement by which it obtains the use of the trackage of another company between two points, such arrangement will not be treated as invalid, it appearing that thereby the public interest is subserved through the shortening of the route.—Id.

137. Requisites and validity.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 435.

Each of the incorporators of the V. Co. was an officer or employé of the U. P. Co. Its road was built with the funds of that company. Every share of its stock ever issued was taken, held, or voted by some officer or employé of that company, in trust for it; and the officers of the two companies had always been the same. They had always been operated together, and their earnings had gone into, and their expenditures been paid from, a common treasury. Held, that a contract by which a right to use a part of the V. Co. was granted to another with the consent of its stockholders was not invalid, as being without consideration, because the payment for such use was to be made to the U. P. Co.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 16 S. Ct. 1173, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

The charter of the Union Pacific Railway Company (12 Stat. 489) declares (section 1) that "the stockholders shall constitute the body politic and corporate," and provides that, "at any regular meeting called for that purpose," they shall have power to make by-laws touching "all matters whatsoever which may appertain to the concerns of said company." In pursuance of this authority, the stockholders passed a by-law giving the board of directors the "whole charge and management of the property," and authorized it to delegate to the executive committee power to do any acts which the board itself might do. The board thereafter authorized the executive committee to exercise all the powers of the board when the board was not in session. Held, that the executive committee had full authority to execute a contract letting another railroad into the joint use of the company's bridge across the Missouri and its terminals at Omaha; and such contract, having been approved by the stockholders at a regular meeting, was binding on the company, though never ratified by a formal resolution of the board of directors.—Id.

The possible invalidity of a provision in the contract for referees in case of difference between the two companies in relation to the operation of trains did not invalidate the contract as a whole.—Id.

The fact that the charter of the company to which the rights were granted would by its terms expire before the expiration of the contract did not invalidate the latter, the charter being capable of renewal, and the contract being expressly binding on the assigns and successors of the parties.—Id.

§138. — Construction and operation.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 436-439.

Where the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, which had contracted with the Pullman Palace Car Company to use its sleepers exclusively on all roads owned or controlled by it, subsequently acquired a majority of the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company, and by voting it elected the board of directors of the latter company, and certain members of that board and the vice president of that company were members of the board of directors and vice president of the Missouri Pacific Company, and the two roads are operated in the same interest, such facts do not amount to ownership and control within the terms of the contract.—Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 115 U. S. 587, 6 S. Ct. 194, 29 L. Ed. 499, affirming (C. C.) 11 F. 634, 3 McCrary, 645.

§139. — Rights and liabilities of parties.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 440-442.

In an action by a railroad to recover for the use of its tracks, where there was no definite agreement as to the amount to be paid, the amount paid it by other roads, which in fact owned it, does not furnish the measure of damages, and, in the absence of proof that the use was worth more than had been paid, plaintiff cannot recover.—Peoria & P. U. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. W. R. Co., 127 U. S. 200, 8 S. Ct. 1125, 32 L. Ed. 110.

Plaintiff, a New Hampshire corporation operating a railroad from N. to L., and defendant, a Massachusetts corporation operating a railroad from L. to B., in the latter state, entered into a joint traffic agreement providing that the two roads were to be operated as a single road, under a joint management; that the property of each party should be kept in the same relative condition as at the time of the making of the agreement, at their joint expense; that plaintiff should erect, at its own expense, a freight depot in L., and defendant, at its own expense, a passenger depot in B.; that buildings destroyed by fire should be restored by the owner at its own cost; and that the interest upon the debts contracted by either party should be paid out of its own share of the net income. Held, that a passenger depot at B., in addition to the one provided for in the agreement, having become necessary to retain the increased business of the joint management, the directors of plaintiff had power to agree that the interest on expenditures made by defendant in the erection of such additional depot should be charged as a part of the operating expenses of the joint management.—Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp., 136 U. S. 356, 10 S. Ct. 1004, 34 L. Ed. 363, reversing (C. C.) 8 F. 458.

But defendant, without authority from the stockholders or directors of plaintiff, could not charge, as a part of such operating expenses, interest on expenditures made by defendant in purchasing a controlling interest in the stock of branch roads which it had leased, and which were being operated by the joint management.—Id.

§140. Consolidation.

§142. — Agreements and proceedings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 444-447.

If railroad companies, which have consolidated under Act Mo. March 24, 1870 (Laws 25th Gen. Assem., Adj. Sess. p. 89) § 1, providing for the consolidation of railroads which will, when connected, form a continuous line of road, have complied with all the other provisions of the act, the consolidation is valid, though they may have failed to comply with that provision requiring each company to file with the secretary of state a resolution accepting the provisions of the act. Such provision is merely directory.—Leavenworth County v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 134 U. S. 688, 10 S. Ct. 708, 33 L. Ed. 1064.

§143. — Operation and effect.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 392, 448-450.

Under Act Mo. March 11, 1867, authorizing the K. C. & C. R. Co. to "consolidate" with any other company upon such terms as may be deemed just and proper, the privileges and franchises of each road will pass to the consolidated company.—Green County v. Connors, 109 U. S. 104, 3 S. Ct. 69, 27 L. Ed. 872.

Where, under Act Mo. March 11, 1867, authorizing a railroad company "to make such arrangement with any other railroad company to furnish equipments and to run and manage its railroad as it may deem expedient and find necessary, or to lease the same, or to consolidate it with any other company," a consolidation is effected, the purchasing company does not take and hold the property under its own charter only, but the franchises and privileges of the vendor company also pass to and vest in the consolidated company.—Id.

Act Mo. March 2, 1869, authorizing consolidation of certain railway corporations, provided that the companies should become one, that a new corporate name might be adopted, that new certificates of stock should be issued in exchange for the stock of the constituent companies, and that the consolidation agreement should be recorded as the charter of the new company. Held, that such a consolidation extinguished the prior corporations, and formed a new one.—Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. State of Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 14 S. Ct. 592, 38 L. Ed. 450.

A new corporation was formed by the consolidation of railroad companies under Sp. Laws Minn. 1881, c. 113, providing for the manner of consolidation, the name of the new company, which might be "the name of either corporation party thereto or any other name," the transfer of the property of the old corporations, the retirement of their stock and the issue of new stock, and for compensating the stockholders of the old corporations who decline to convert their stock into the stock of the new company. Judgment, Gardner v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 76 N. W. 282, 73 Minn. 517, affirmed.—Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. v. Gardner, 20 S. Ct. 656, 177 U. S. 332, 44 L. Ed. 793.

144. — Rights and liabilities of parties.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 392, 393, 451-455.

Four railroad corporations, whose roads formed a connecting line in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, were consolidated, according to the statutes of those states, under an agreement in which the capital on the basis of which each entered into the consolidation was described as composed of the amount of its stock and of its mortgage bonds, and other bonds, and it was agreed that all those bonds should, "as to the principal and interest thereof, as the same shall respectively fall due, be protected by the consolidated company, according to the true effect and meaning of the bonds." Two years afterwards the consolidated company, to secure its own bonds payable at a later date than the old ones, executed a mortgage of all its property to trustees, which recited that it had been deemed for the interest of the corporation, as well as for the interest of all the various classes of existing bonds (which were specifically described), that the whole of them should be consolidated into one mortgage debt upon equitable principles; and provided that a sufficient amount of the new bonds should be retained "to retire, in such manner and upon such terms as the directors may from time to time prescribe," an equal amount of the old bonds. Six years later the consolidated company made another mortgage to secure other bonds, for nonpayment of which it was afterwards foreclosed by sale of the whole property. Held, that the property was not subject to any lien in favor of bonds of one of the old companies, issued after the passage of the statutes authorizing the consolidation, unsecured by any mortgage or lien before the consolidation, and the holders of which had not exchanged or offered to exchange them for bonds of the consolidated company before the proceedings for foreclosure.—Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. v. Ham, 114 U. S. 587, 5 S. Ct. 1081, 29 L. Ed. 235.

The Missouri Pacific Railway Company contracted with the Pullman Palace Car Company to use its sleeping cars on all roads owned or controlled by it, or of which it should acquire the ownership or control, during a specified period. Before the expiration of that time the railroad company consolidated with several other companies under Rev. St. Mo. 1879, § 789, the consolidated company retaining the name of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and becoming responsible for all its contracts and obligations. Held, that the consolidated company was a new corporation, and, though it was bound by the contract of the old company to use Pullman cars only on the roads then owned or controlled by it, that obligation did not extend to roads subsequently acquired by the consolidated company.—Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 115 U. S.

587, 6 S. Ct. 194, 29 L. Ed. 499, affirming (C. C.) 11 Fed. 634, 3 McCrary, 645.

A company having consolidated with another company under an agreement that the transfer of all its property to the consolidated company was made subject "to all liens, charges, and equities pertaining thereto," the obligations of a contract for exchange of land, which had been made by unauthorized officers, and ratified by the company, devolved upon the consolidated company, and can be enforced against it.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 305, 9 S. Ct. 286, 32 L. Ed. 673, affirming decree (C. C.) McAlpine v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 23 F. 168.

A construction company, having acquired title to an uncompleted railroad under a deed thereof by trustees subject to conditions that the railroad should be completed within a certain time, contracted with complainants for rails for that purpose, but soon afterwards notified them that it was unable to carry out the contract. Thereafter the trustees made a contract with a railway company, reciting their deed and its conditions, the passing to the railway company of the title to the property subject to the conditions, and its inability to perform them, declaring them annulled, and entering into new stipulations with the railway company, under which it was in possession of the property when the time fixed by the deed for performance of the conditions expired. Held, that the trustees having elected to treat the property as reverted to them, and their action being equivalent, without judicial proceedings, to a re-entry, the interest of the construction company in the property was divested at the expiration of the time limited for performance of the conditions, and the property could not be subjected, by a suit brought after that time, to a judgment against the construction company recovered by complainants on the contract for the rails.—Schlesinger v. Kansas City & S. R. Co., 152 U. S. 444, 14 S. Ct. 647, 38 L. Ed. 507, affirming decree (C. C.) 39 F. 741.

VIII. INDEBTEDNESS, SECURITIES, LIENS, AND MORTGAGES.

(A) NATURE AND EXTENT OF LIABILITIES.

149. Making and issue of bonds.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 461-471.

153. — Rights of bondholders in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 467-471.

When, in a case where several roads were merged into a comprehensive line of road under a new name, the surrender of the bonds of the first-mentioned roads, or any of them, for cancellation, was not dependent upon any contingency, and was without reservation, each person who so surrendered gave up his lien under the old mortgage, and took one under the mortgage of the new line as it was, and took the risk of its value.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

A railroad company issued negotiable bonds secured by mortgage, to be used in constructing and extending the road. They were delivered to A., who then owned a majority of the stock, and afterwards practically all of it, and who both before and after advanced large sums for the use of the road. A. pledged the bonds to B., to secure the price of a connecting road bought by him for the company. Afterwards he negotiated a large loan from C., to be secured by the bonds and stock of the company. Part of this loan was paid by C. directly to B. in satisfaction of B.'s claim, and B. thereupon transferred the bonds to C. The balance of the money raised was used in the construction of the road. Afterwards D., representing a syndicate formed for the purpose of buying up the road, and reorganizing it, bought the interest of C. in the bonds, paying him the full amount of his claim. In a contest between D. and persons holding certain unsecured construction claims against the company which accrued after the issue of the bonds, and the pledging of them to B., held, that the evidence showed no fraud on the part of A. in relation to the issue of the bonds or otherwise; that D. was a bona fide holder for value; and that the bonds in his hands were a first lien upon the road for the amount of C.'s loan.—Porter v. Pittsburg Bessemer Steel Co., 120 U. S. 649, 7 S. Ct. 741, 30 L. Ed. 830, decree affirmed 122 U. S. 267, 7 S. Ct. 1206, 30 L. Ed. 1210.

Certain railroad bonds were pledged to secure a note made by the pledgor and indorsed by one R., who was given power to purchase in case the bonds were sold to pay the note. They were so sold, and were bought by R. for less than their face value. Held that, on foreclosure of the railroad mortgage, R. was entitled to recover the face value of the bonds, and not merely the amount he paid for them.—Wade v. Chicago, S. & St. L. R. Co., 149 U. S. 327, 13 S. Ct. 892, 37 L. Ed. 755.

◀154. Guaranty and suretyship.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 472, 473.

A railroad corporation, unless authorized by its charter or by other statutes to do so, has no power to guarantee the bonds of another corporation; and such a guaranty, or any contract to give one, if not authorized by statute, is strictly ultra vires, unlawful, and void, and incapable of being made good by ratification or estoppel.—Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 19 S. Ct. 817, 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. Ed. 1081, modifying decree Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co., 75 F. 433, 22 C. C. A. 378.

A purchaser of bonds of a railroad company bearing the guaranty of another company, empowered by statute to make it, executed by its proper officers under its seal, is not bound to examine the records of the guarantor company, which are private records, to ascertain whether its power has been regularly exercised.—Id.

◀156. Liens for public aid granted.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 478, 483-485.

Act Tenn. Feb. 11, 1852, "to establish a system of internal improvements," provided that the state should issue to certain railroad companies therein named its negotiable coupon bonds, and that when the respective roads should be completed the state should be invested with a lien upon each road and the other property of the company, "for the payment of all of said bonds issued to the company as provided in this act, and for the interest accruing on said bonds," but did not in express terms state to whom payment was to be made. The bonds issued under the act were in the ordinary form of state coupon bonds, payable to bearer, not naming or containing any obligation, by indorsement or otherwise, of the companies to which they were issued. Held, on these facts, and in view of other provisions of the act and of subsequent amendatory acts also tending to show that the state, and not the borrowing company, was the debtor to the holders of the bonds, that the statutory lien of the state was created to secure repayment to the state of the indebtedness incurred by it, not payment of the bonds to the holders thereof; and that the state could release the property from such lien, either by act of the legislature or by foreclosure as provided by the statute, although the bonds issued for the road so released or foreclosed were still unpaid.—Tennessee Bond Cases, 114 U. S. 663, 5 S. Ct. 974, 1098, 29 L. Ed. 281.

The acts of 1865 and 1881, authorizing the Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. to issue bonds secured by mortgage superior to the lien of the state for aid granted, provided that the proceeds of the bonds be paid to the state, are not in conflict with Const. Mo. 1875, art. 4, §§ 50, 51, prohibiting the legislature "to release or alienate the lien held by the state on any railroad, or in anywise change the tenor or meaning, or pass any act explanatory thereof; but the same shall be enforced in accordance with the original terms upon which it was acquired;" or to release the liability of any person or corporation to the state; since payment under the acts as construed is the legal equivalent to payment under the original terms of the contract.—Rollston v. Crittenden, 120 U. S. 390, 7 S. Ct. 599, 30 L. Ed. 721.

The indorsement by a railway company, on bonds issued by the state in aid of the construction of its road, of a guaranty of payment by the state, gives no lien to holders of the bonds, and does not prevent the company from giving a mortgage of its property to secure bonds it may issue.—McKittrick v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., 152 U. S. 473, 14 S. Ct. 661, 38 L. Ed. 518.

Act Ark. July 21, 1868, authorized the issue of bonds of the state to railroad companies on application to the railroad commissioners for the loan of the credit of the state, and provided that there should be imposed, on each company to which bonds should be issued, a tax equal to the annual interest, and an additional special tax, to continue until the amount of such bonds, with interest, should be paid by the company, and that, in case a company should fail to pay such taxes, the state treasurer, by writ of sequestration, should seize its income and revenues until its default should be paid; and Act April 10, 1869, further provided that, in case a company should fail to pay the tax imposed to pay the interest, the state treasurer should obtain a writ of sequestration and the appointment of a receiver to take the income and revenues of the defaulting company, and all moneys arising from the operation of its road, until the amounts in default should be paid. Held, that these acts did not create a lien on the property of a railroad company for whose benefit state bonds were issued, and neither the state nor its bondholders were entitled to sequestration of the income and revenue arising from the property in the hands of purchasers thereof under foreclosure of mortgage.—Id.

◀159. Liens for labor or supplies.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 477, 486-504.

The terms of Act N. C. March 28, 1870 (Pub. Laws, c. 206, p. 253; Battle's Revisal, c. 65, pp. 563, 564), providing that "every building built, rebuilt, repaired, or improved, together with the necessary lots," etc., and "every lot, farm, or vessel, or any kind of property not herein enumerated, shall be subject to a lien * * * for work done on the same or material furnished," and for the enforcement thereof by actions in justices' courts and in the superior courts, do not extend to the structure and property of a railroad, and laborers and materialmen thereon acquire no lien entitling them to a priority over mortgage bondholders.—Buncombe County Com'rs v. Tommey, 115 U. S. 122, 5 S. Ct. 626, 29 L. Ed. 308.

◀162. Mortgages and trust deeds.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 506-548.

◀163. — Power to mortgage.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 506-509.

A provision in a deed of trust to secure bonds of a railroad company, which prohibits foreclosure and judicial sale, by providing that the mode of sale by the trustee set forth in the deed shall be exclusive of all others, is of no effect.—Guaranty Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v.

Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co., 139 U. S. 137, 11 S. Ct. 512, 35 L. Ed. 116.

167. — Property, and funds included.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 519-533.

Prior to the purchase of the railroad the A. & G. R. Co. had executed a trust deed by way of mortgage upon all its railroad and property acquired or to be acquired. Held that, inasmuch as the road purchased was within its chartered limits, and might have been constructed if it had not been purchased, the mortgage extended to and covered the said road when purchased, the same as it would have done had the company itself constructed it.—Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 468, 1 S. Ct. 495, 27 L. Ed. 279.

A mortgage, made by a railroad company to secure the state of Alabama for a loan of its credit, followed the words of the statute authorizing the loan, and conveyed "the lands granted by the United States to said railroad company, and any interest which said company now has or may hereafter lawfully acquire in or to said lands;" and also "the telegraph line and telegraph offices along the line of said road belonging to said company; also the machine-shops and all other property in the state and in Georgia, Tennessee, and Mississippi, belonging to said company; also all coal mines, now opened or hereafter to be opened and worked, belonging to said company; also all iron or other mineral lands, and all iron manufacturing establishments now in operation or hereafter to be constructed." Held, that the words "all other property" could not operate a conveyance of town lots in Tennessee, not granted by the United States, and not coming within either of the specified classes.—State of Alabama v. Montague, 117 U. S. 602, 6 S. Ct. 911, 29 L. Ed. 1000; Id., 117 U. S. 611, 6 S. Ct. 914, 29 L. Ed. 1003.

Articles, including bridges, which become affixed to and part of a railroad covered by a prior mortgage given by the railroad company, covering future additions, will be held by the lien of such mortgage, in favor of bona fide creditors, notwithstanding an agreement between the furnisher of the property and the railroad company that the bridge or other thing shall remain the property of the former until paid for.—Porter v. Pittsburg Bessemer Steel Co., 122 U. S. 267, 7 S. Ct. 1206, 30 L. Ed. 1210.

The trustees having obtained a decree entitling them to possession of the road, under the provisions of the mortgage, are also entitled, there being no debts for current expenses, to receive all profits earned since the commencement of the suit, the effect of the decree being to establish their right of possession at the time the suit was begun, and to make the company's possession after that date wrongful.—Dow v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co., 124 U. S. 652, 8 S. Ct. 673, 31 L. Ed. 565.

Where a company is incorporated to construct a railroad between two cities named as its termini, a mortgage given by it which expressly covers its line of railroad constructed or to be constructed between the named termini, together with all the stations, depot grounds, engine houses, machine shops, buildings, and erections now or hereafter appertaining unto said described line of railroad, creates a lien on its terminal facilities in those cities, and is not limited to so much of the road as is found between the city limits of those places.—Central Trust Co. v. Kneeland, 138 U. S. 414, 11 S. Ct. 357, 34 L. Ed. 1014.

A railroad company executed a mortgage, covering, in terms, all its subsequently acquired terminal facilities, and invited purchasers of the bonds secured thereby to invest, by representations that such facilities were covered by the mortgage. Subsequently the holders of the naked legal title to a portion of the terminal facilities, the equitable title to which was in the railroad company, executed a second mortgage thereon to secure a debt of the company, and then conveyed to it their legal title. Held, that the rule that subsequently acquired property is subject to all liens existing thereon when it is acquired will not postpone the first mortgage to the second mortgage, as the railroad company was the equitable owner of the property when the second mortgage was executed, and it was given to secure its own indebtedness.—Id.

The stock that a railroad company owns in an elevator company which owns and operates an elevator near the terminus of the railroad company, which uses the elevator for the storage of grain, is not an "appurtenance" of the railroad, and does not pass under a mortgage of such railroad "and its appurtenances."—Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 304, 11 S. Ct. 779, 35 L. Ed. 473.

The T., C. & St. L. R. Co. was formed by the consolidation of several local railroad companies engaged in constructing roads from Kokomo, Ind., to East St. Louis, Ill.; but one company—the F. & S. Line—which formed a link in the continuous line between those points, was allowed to maintain its separate organization until completed, in order to avoid the forfeiture of local aid subscribed for its construction. This road was built by the W. C. Co., under a contract by which it received all the railroad company's stock. The C. Co. also made a contract with the St. L. Co. to build the same road, for which it was to receive stock and bonds of the St. L. Co. After the Frankfort road was completed, and its stock delivered to the C. Co., in whose hands it was about to be attached by subcontractors, the St. L. Co., to prevent such stock passing to hostile parties, resulting in that company's loss of control over an integral portion of its line, gave its own notes to such subcontractors for their claims, upon payment of which the Frankfort stock was to be delivered to it. Held that, though the St. L. Co. had not the legal title to the Frankfort road, there was an equitable lien thereon in favor of bondholders secured by mortgage on the whole of the St. L. Co.'s line, including that road.—Kneeland v. Luce, 141 U. S. 491, 12 S. Ct. 32, 35 L. Ed. 830.

Real property only temporarily used for railroad purposes, having been acquired by a railroad company with the intention of subdividing such portions as should not be needed for railroad purposes into lots to be sold to its employes, is not covered by a mortgage of all the property of such company "used for and pertaining to the operation of said railroad." Judgment, Aldridge v. Pardee, 60 S. W. 789, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 254, affirmed.—Pardee v. Aldridge, 23 S. Ct. 514, 189 U. S. 429, 47 L. Ed. 883.

169. — Rights, duties, and liabilities of mortgagees and trustees.

The trustees of a railroad mortgage of a leased line, who are parties to a bill under which a receiver is appointed for the lessee company, are bound to take notice of all orders to the receivers affecting their interests, and, if they deem such orders injurious, they should at once ask the court to cancel or modify the same.—United States Trust Co. v. Wabash W. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 287, 14 S. Ct. 83, 37 L. Ed. 1085; Seney v. Wabash W. R. Co., 150 U. S. 310, 14 S. Ct. 94, 37 L. Ed. 1092, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. 38 F. 63.

Where mortgagees demand immediate possession, but the court, without their assent, makes an order for surrendering to them after 30 days, they are equitably entitled to rentals for that period; but if, on the other hand, an order is entered by consent giving them possession at the end of 80 days, they are not entitled to rental for the intervening time.—United States Trust Co. v. Wabash W. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 287, 14 S. Ct. 86, 37 L. Ed. 1085.

©=171. Priorities of liens and mortgages.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 554-576.

The lien for the value of necessary materials furnished to a railroad, secured by Rev. St. Ill. c. 82, § 51, provided suit is commenced therefor within six months after delivery, is superior to a trust created after delivery, and before the suit was brought, and is not waived, either by a provision of the contract reserving a lien to the contractor, or by a credit given the purchaser beyond the statutory time for enforcing the lien.—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Union Rolling-Mill Co., 109 U. S. 702, 3 S. Ct. 594, 27 L. Ed. 1081.

Act N. C. March 1, 1873 (Pub. Laws 1872, c. 131; Battle's Revisal, pp. 269, 270, c. 26, §§ 46, 48), regulating the foreclosure of corporate mortgages, and providing that "all debts and contracts of any corporation," created prior to the mortgage, shall have a first lien on the property rights and franchises of the company, and be paid off prior to the mortgage debt, applies only to private corporations, and will not give a priority of lien to the claims of materialmen and laborers upon the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage.—Buncombe County Com'rs v. Tommey, 115 U. S. 122, 5 S. Ct. 626, 29 L. Ed. 308.

Where an uncompleted roadbed was transferred to a railroad company by a contract providing that the title should not vest until the performance of certain conditions, a construction company having notice of the contract and the conditions can acquire no lien for work done on the property, superior to vendor's right to re-take same for breach of condition.—Wright v. Kentucky & G. E. Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 72, 6 S. Ct. 697, 29 L. Ed. 821.

A construction company has no lien upon the roadbed and other property of a railroad as against a purchaser under a contract existing before work had been bona fide begun by such construction company, and when it had actual notice of the contract before that time, but its construction contract is subject to the terms and conditions of the contract of such purchaser.—Id.

A mortgage of railroad property not having been executed until after the performance of a conditional sale, the mortgagee takes no right other than that which remained in the mortgagor at the time of the execution of the mortgage.—Id.

While current earnings of a railroad are first applicable to operating expenses, and mortgage bondholders are chargeable with such earnings misapplied by payment to them, where no such diversion of the earnings is shown, the operating expenses are not entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of the foreclosure sale in preference to the claims of the bondholders.—St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C., C. & I. Ry. Co., 125 U. S. 658, 8 S. Ct. 1011, 31 L. Ed. 832.

Rent due for a leased line as a part of the operating expenses is not entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of a foreclosure sale in preference to the claims of the mortgage bondholders, in the absence of a showing that the bondholders have been benefited by the default in the payment of the rent.—Id.

A mortgage given by a railroad company on all property, materials, rights, and privileges then or thereafter appertaining to the road, to secure bonds given for funds wherewith to construct it, has priority over a subsequent mortgage on the earnings of a certain section of the road, given to secure money used in constructing that section by a lessee who had stipulated to construct it as one of the considerations of the lease, the priority of which subsequent mortgage the mortgagor company has agreed to recognize, as the original bondholders were under no obligation to such lessee.—Thompson v. White Water Val. R. Co., 132 U. S. 68, 10 S. Ct. 29, 33 L. Ed. 256.

A mortgage on the property of an old railroad corporation, given by the successor to its property and franchises, is entitled to priority over the claim of a creditor for services and advances to the old corporation, who did not obtain a judgment against either corporation until some years after the mortgage was given, and the nature of whose services and advances does not entitle him to a statutory lien on the property of the old corporation.—Fogg v. Blair, 133 U. S. 534, 10 S. Ct. 338, 33 L. Ed. 721.

A railway company which is interested in maintaining as a "going concern" a mortgaged connecting line, and which, for that purpose, advances from time to time during a period of several years the funds necessary to make up the deficit created by the payment of operating expenses, fixed charges, and interest on the bonds, does not thereby acquire an equitable priority of the mortgage bondholders who, upon foreclosure of their mortgage, are entitled to have the proceeds of the sale applied to the payment of their claims in preference to the repayment of the advances.—Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas Cent. Ry. Co., 137 U. S. 171, 11 S. Ct. 61, 34 L. Ed. 625.

A railroad company issued 200 bonds under a mortgage, and, after it was consolidated with another road, the consolidated company issued its bonds, 200 of which were set apart to trustees, to be exchanged for the first bonds, but the holders of only 130 of them agreed to exchange. By a decree of foreclosure of the mortgage last made the outstanding 70 of the first bonds were declared a first lien on the road or the proceeds of its sale. Six of the first mortgage bonds purchased by the owner from the financial agents of the consolidated company were presented for payment, but it was refused by the purchaser of the road on the ground that they were part of the 130 bonds exchanged. Held, that the burden was on the purchaser to show such fact, and, there being nothing to show that the bonds were not part of the 70 outstanding, or that the owner was not a bona fide purchaser, they are entitled to priority of lien under the foreclosure decree.—Kneeland v. Lawrence, 140 U. S. 209, 11 S. Ct. 786, 35 L. Ed. 492.

Capitalists who had advanced money to purchase railroads for the purpose of organizing a railroad company, and had received in return a much larger amount in stock and bonds of the company, proceeded to raise money for the equipment of the road by the issue of certificates to subscribers to a car trust, the trustee of which made leases to the company of rolling stock, not then in existence, for a term of years, at specified rentals, on prompt payment of which the property was to belong to the railroad company. The subscribers to most, if not all, of the certificates were directors of the company, who had complete control of the purchase of the rolling stock. A large part of it was contracted for in the name of the road before the leases were made, and was paid for out of money of the railroad company, with which the money realized from the car trust certificates was mixed. The amount of the certificates was much greater than the estimated cost of the equipment, and part of their proceeds was applied to other purposes by the company. Held that, as against a mortgage upon the railroad and its equipment, executed by the company before such leases, and including its after-acquired property, the transaction amounted to a purchase by the company of the rolling stock, and the lien of the mortgage attached to such rolling stock; that the lien of such car-trust certificates, if any, was postponed to the lien of the mortgage; and that the leases were, at best, to be treated as subsequent mortgages.—McGourkey v. Toledo & O. C. R. Co., 146 U. S. 536, 13 S. Ct. 170, 36 L. Ed. 1079.

A railroad company chartered to build a road from Springfield to East St. Louis, via Litchfield, contracted with a construction company to deliver certain bonds secured by mortgage in consideration of the construction and equipment of the road. Part of the road was built, and a proportionate part of the bonds delivered, and a mortgage executed and recorded, covering all the property of the railroad company then in possession, or afterwards acquired. The contract was then canceled, and W., the chief promoter of the railroad company, and the president and only stockholder of the construction company, conveyed all the property of the construction company north of Litchfield, including all rights of way acquired or contracted for on behalf of the railroad company, by deed duly recorded, to a firm which immediately conveyed to a new railroad company chartered to build a road from Springfield to Litchfield. The same thing was done with the property of the construction company south of Litchfield, which thus passed into the hands of a third railway company, chartered to build the road south from that point; and the two new companies completed the road on the line originally projected. Held, that they took with full knowledge of the interest of the original company, and the mortgage executed by it secures to its bondholders a lien on the whole of the road, as completed, which is prior to that created by any mortgage executed by the new companies.—Wade v. Chicago, S. & St. L. R. Co., 149 U. S. 327, 13 S. Ct. 892, 37 L. Ed. 755.

Rev. St. Ark. § 5488, providing that any railroad company requiring, in the opinion of the directors, an increased amount of capital stock, may, upon vote of holders of a majority of the stock, increase it to a certain limited extent, and borrow money to a certain amount, at a rate of interest not exceeding a certain rate, has no application to a case where a company is reorganized by the holders of mortgage bonds, after they have bought it in at foreclosure sale, upon substantially the same basis as before as to capital stock and bonded indebtedness; and the bonds of the new company issued in pursuance of such arrangement, to the old bondholders, need not conform, in respect to the rate of interest, to the requirements of that section.—Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Dow, 120 U. S. 287, 7 S. Ct. 482, 30 L. Ed. 595.

173. Application of earnings, income, and sinking funds.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 581-587.

A deed of trust, given by a land grant railroad corporation to secure an issue of bonds, provided that the trustee should apply the proceeds arising from sales of the lands—First, to the payment of interest coupons attached to the bonds, when the earnings of the road were insufficient; second, to the purchase of outstanding bonds at their market value, not exceeding 10 per cent. premium; and, third, to the payment of bonds coming due—and also provided for the investment of proceeds not so used. There being at one time an insufficiency of funds to pay coupons, their holders accepted scrip, payable in 10 years, with the right, on the part of the corporation, to pay the scrip at any time, and surrendered the coupons to the trustees, to hold as collateral. Held, that it was the duty of the trustees, at a subsequent time, when the earnings of the road were sufficient to pay the current coupons, and promised to continue so, when bonds could not be bought up within the limit of premium specified, and when investments could only be made at a lower rate of interest than the scrip bore, to apply funds in their hands to the payment of the coupons for which the scrip was given.—Little Rock & Ft. S. Ry. v. Huntington, 120 U. S. 160, 7 S. Ct. 517, 30 L. Ed. 591.

Diversion of the earnings of a railroad from the operating expenses to the interest on bonds is not shown by the fact that through an extended period the gross receipts would have been sufficient to meet all operating expenses if no interest had been paid, since, at the times when there was no default in the payment of operating expenses, the earnings were rightfully appropriated to pay the interest.—St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Cleveland, C., C. & I. Ry. Co., 125 U. S. 658, 8 S. Ct. 1011, 31 L. Ed. 832.

The equitable right of one claiming payment for operating expenses to hold the bondholders for current earnings misapplied by payment to them, does not exist against holders of second mortgage bonds for earnings misapplied by payment of interest on first mortgage bonds.—Id.

Thurman Act (20 Stat. 58 [U. S. Comp. St. 1801, p. 3569]) provides that 25 per cent. of the net earnings of certain railroad companies shall be paid into the treasury of the United States towards the liquidation of the bonds loaned to the company by the government, and that the net earnings "shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of their earnings, respectively, the necessary expenses actually paid within the year in operating the same and keeping the same in a state of repair, and also the sums paid by them respectively within the year in discharge of interest on their first mortgage bonds, whose lien has priority over the lien of the United States, and excluding from consideration all sums owing or paid by said companies, respectively, for interest upon any other portion of their indebtedness." Held, that expenses for improvement of the road, buildings, and equipments, whereby the capital stock was increased in value, were not to be deducted from the gross earnings.—United States v. Central Pac. R. Co., 138 U. S. 84, 11 S. Ct. 285, 34 L. Ed. 895.

174. Payment and satisfaction.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 588-592.

Defendant issued certain bonds, interest payable annually July 1st, with the provision that if the net earnings of a portion of the road were not sufficient to pay the interest, then scrip might, at the option of the company, be issued for it. The interest due July 1, 1882, and July 1, 1883, was not paid, but in October, 1883, the directors voted to pay in scrip. After notification, plaintiff, holding some bonds, sued for the interest, refusing the scrip. Held that, in the absence of an exercise of its option, on the day the interest was due to pay in scrip, plaintiff had an immediate right of action.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Marlor, 123 U. S. 687, 8 S. Ct. 311, 31 L. Ed. 303, affirming judgment Marlor v. Texas & P. R. Co. (C. C.) 19 F. 867.

Shortly after July 1, 1882, and July 1, 1883, defendant's treasurer notified the bondholders that it could not pay the interest; but no action was taken as to the scrip. Held, that plaintiff immediately acquired a right of action to recover the interest without any demand on his part.—Id.

Defendant did not pay the interest in 1877, 1878, and 1879, but issued scrip in 1880 for it. In July, 1880, and July, 1881, it issued scrip. Plaintiff sued for interest due in 1882 and 1883. Held, that the acceptance of scrip for those years by the bondholders did not amount to a waiver so as to prejudice plaintiff's rights.—Id.

◀175. Release or discharge.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 533.

By a lease from one railroad corporation of its railroad to another railroad corporation, subject to a previous mortgage, the lessee covenanted to pay as rent a certain proportion of the gross earnings, and to state accounts semiannually, and further covenanted, if the rent for any six months should be insufficient to pay the interest due at the end of the six months on the mortgage bonds, then to advance a sufficient sum to take up the balance of the coupons for such interest; and it was agreed that for all sums so advanced the lessee should have a lien before all other liens, except the mortgage. Eighteen months later, after the lessee had accordingly paid and taken up some coupons, and had declined to take up others, on account of the refusal of the lessor to accept in payment of rent coupons so taken up, the two corporations executed a supplemental agreement, by which, in lieu of the rent reserved in the lease, and of all advances of money to take up coupons, the lessee covenanted to pay, and the lessor to accept, as rent, a larger proportion of the gross earnings, "all accounts being settled exactly, and all liabilities and obligations between the two companies being adjusted and discharged, by and upon the semiannual statements provided in said lease;" the lessor released the lessee from any obligation to make future advances of money to take up coupons, and from liability for any previous neglect to make such advances, and from any obligation to pay money in the nature of rent and advances, except the proportion of the gross earnings stipulated in the supplemental agreement; and all the provisions of the lease, except as so modified, were ratified and confirmed, and "all causes of action for breach of any agreement therein contained," which had arisen since its execution, were mutually waived and released. The lessee afterwards paid rent computed according to the supplemental agreement. Held, that any claim of the lessee against the lessor, or against the mortgaged property, for money paid to take up coupons, was released and discharged.—Stewart v. Hoyt's Ex'rs, 111 U. S. 373, 4 S. Ct. 519, 28 L. Ed. 461.

◀180. Right to foreclose.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 605-609.

A railroad mortgage by the L. Company was foreclosed, and the property bought in by the trustee. The bondholders organized themselves under the name of the M. Company, for the purpose of operating the railroad. In a second suit to foreclose the mortgage, held that, it being shown that all the bondholders had become members of the M. Company, or, by their silence, or waiver of their claim, assented to the purchase, the first foreclosure was valid, and divested the trustee of title, and of his right to bring the second suit on behalf of the bondholders, notwithstanding that he had himself purchased at the sale under the previous foreclosure proceedings.—Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 122 U. S. 1, 7 S. Ct. 1043, 30 L. Ed. 1128.

The S. R. Co., a railway company, issued its bonds, and executed a deed of trust to secure them. Defendant, another and distinct company, indorsed the bonds under a contract with the S. R. Co., and disposed of them, using the proceeds for the S. R. Co.'s benefit. Afterwards defendant, having paid out of its own funds, by reason of such indorsement, $1,000,000 of interest on the bonds, and $1,000,000 for repairs and construction of the S. R. Co.'s road, had the trust deed foreclosed. Held, that the foreclosure was not invalid because, of the trustees in the deed, one was a director and the others stockholders in defendant company; because one person was president of both companies; because a majority of the S. R. Co.'s directors were directors of defendant; because defendant's president owned most of the S. R. Co.'s stock; or because the attorneys who instituted the foreclosure suit in the name of the trustees were in other matters attorneys for or directors of defendant.—Leavenworth County v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 134 U. S. 688, 10 S. Ct. 708, 33 L. Ed. 1064.

A railroad mortgage given to secure the payment of its bonds, provided that, on default continuing for 60 days in the payment of interest, the principal of all the bonds should become immediately due, and that, upon request of 75 per cent. of the holders of the bonds, the trustee should take possession of the property, and operate it for the benefit of the bondholders, and that, upon like request, he should proceed to foreclose the mortgage, and sell the property to the highest bidder for cash. It was also provided that nothing contained in the instrument should be construed to prevent or interfere with a foreclosure by any court of competent jurisdiction. Held, that the trustee could maintain a bill to foreclose the mortgage upon the occurrence of a default, without averring or proving a request by 75 per cent. of the bondholders, as such request was necessary only in case the trustee wished to proceed to foreclose, or take possession ex mero motu, without the intervention of any court.—Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas Cent. Ry. Co., 137 U. S. 171, 11 S. Ct. 61, 34 L. Ed. 625.

A trust deed to secure bonds of a railroad company provided that the trustee should, upon the written request of 60 per cent. of the bondholders, "enter upon and take possession" of the property, and operate the same, "or the said trustee shall and will, after or without entering upon or taking such possession, upon the written request of the holders of bonds of a like amount, proceed * * * to sell the railroad property" at public sale. Held, that the deed did not require request of 60 per cent. of the bondholders to enable the trustee to bring suit to foreclose.—Guaranty Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co., 139 U. S. 137, 11 S. Ct. 512, 35 L. Ed. 116.

◀181. Foreclosure without action in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 610.

The trustees of the internal improvement fund of the state of Florida having sold certain railroads for the purpose of taking up a state indebtedness with the purchase money, and such purchase money not being thereafter paid, any of the bonds of the state sought to be canceled remaining in the hands of the purchasers are under the control of the trustees rather than the holders.—Littlefield v. Bloxham, 117 U. S. 419, 6 S. Ct. 793, 29 L. Ed. 930.

The F. R. Co. was incorporated by the state of Florida by Act Jan. 8, 1853, to construct a road from some arm of the Atlantic Ocean in East Florida, in the most eligible direction, to some arm of the Gulf of Mexico in South Florida, south of the Suwanee river. The route selected under this provision began on Amelia Island, and terminated at Cedar Keys. Afterwards, January 6, 1855, the general improvement act of the state was passed, which designated (section 4) certain lines of railroad as proper to be aided under its provisions, among them being a line described as running from Amelia Island to Tampa Bay, "with an extension to Cedar Key." In December of the same year, the legislature authorized the F. R. Co. to build, under the provisions of the improvement law, a line described in the same language. Shortly after the passage of the general improvement act, the company notified the trustees designated thereby of its acceptance of the act, describing the route of its road as from Amelia Island to Cedar Keys. It thereafter caused this line to be built, paid the contractors with first mortgage bonds issued in accordance with the improvement act, and afterwards for a time made payments to the trustees, as required by that act, and the trustees applied the same to payment of interest on the bonds. The road was completed in 1861, but, the company having then failed to pay interest, the trustees took possession, and sold the road to the highest bidder. Held, that although the language of the general improvement law and of the law of December, 1855, designated the main line as running from Amelia Island to Tampa Bay, yet the acts of the trustees were a recognition of the road as actually constructed; and there was consequently no ground for the contention that they had no authority to sell the road under the provisions of the improvement act.—Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co., 156 U. S. 618, 15 S. Ct. 520, 39 L. Ed. 556.

183. Rights of action and defenses.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 612.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage given to secure railroad bonds, the mortgagor admits that it has made default in the payment of the bonds, a new party, which was admitted on condition that it would adopt the mortgagor's answer as its own, cannot object that the suit was prematurely brought because there was, as yet, no default in the payment of the principal.—Wade v. Chicago, S. & St. L. R. Co., 149 U. S. 327, 13 S. Ct. 892, 37 L. Ed. 755.

185. Limitations and laches.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 614.

An unsecured creditor of a railroad company is not dilatory merely because of the filing of a bill against the company for a receiver, in behalf of a judgment creditor and all other creditors of the alleged insolvent corporation, to enforce their equities and priorities, and to decree the rights, liens, and equities of all the creditors as the same might be ascertained, where no action was taken to notify any creditors, or to bring them into court to present their claims, and where it is not shown that the unsecured creditor, who delayed five months before intervening in foreclosure proceedings, had any notice of the suit. Decree 84 F. 539, 28 C. C. A. 202, reversed.—Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co., 19 S. Ct. 827, 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. Ed. 1130.

The failure of an unsecured creditor of a railroad company to at once intervene in foreclosure suits against the company for the benefit of the parties, and to shut out unsecured creditors, is not fatal to his rights, since he was not bound to presume any such purpose in the minds of the two parties to the foreclosure.—Id.

186. Parties.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 615, 616.

The holders of state bonds, issued in aid of a railroad company and guaranteed by such company, cannot subject the property of the road to the payment of their claims, as against purchasers of the road at foreclosure sale, though neither such bondholders nor the state were made parties in the foreclosure action; the bonds being no lien on the road.—McKittrick v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., 152 U. S. 473, 14 S. Ct. 661, 38 L. Ed. 518.

187. Process and appearance.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 617.

Gen. Laws Tex. 1879, c. 12, providing that laborers on railroads shall have a lien prior to all others upon such railroads, and that the same may be enforced by action, having made no provision for notice, either personal or constructive, to adverse claimants, the proceedings thereunder cannot be sustained as proceedings in rem.—Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 493, 9 S. Ct. 590, 32 L. Ed. 1001.

188. Pleading.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 615-621.

A bill to foreclose a mortgage given by a railroad company to secure its bonds will not be dismissed on the ground that there are no bonds legally outstanding, when there are the affidavits of the holders of some of the bonds that they are bona fide holders, and the testimony of other witnesses to corroborate them. In such case, proof of the amount and validity of the bonds will be determined on the hearing.—Guaranty Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Green Cove Springs & M. R. Co., 139 U. S. 137, 11 S. Ct. 512, 35 L. Ed. 116.

191. Judgment or decree and execution.

Gen. Laws Tex. 1879, c. 12, provides that laborers on railroads shall have a lien prior to all others upon such railroad and its equipments for such wages as are unpaid. Section 2 provides for the enforcement of such lien, and declares that in all suits of this kind it shall not be necessary for the plaintiff to make other lienholders defendants thereto, but such lienholders may intervene, and have their respective rights determined and adjusted. Held, that a judgment in such action declaring the plaintiffs' claim to be a lien, and ordering the road sold therefor, is not binding upon mortgage bondholders or their trustee, who were not parties to the suit; and where the plaintiff intervenes in a subsequent action by the bondholders for the appointment of a receiver, and the preservation of the road for the creditors, plaintiff's claim being subsequent in point of time to the mortgage, he may be compelled to show affirmatively the existence and priority of his lien under the statute.—Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 493, 9 S. Ct. 590, 32 L. Ed. 1001.

Where, in an action to foreclose a railroad mortgage, an order was entered on petition of interveners for the payment for their interest in certain rolling stock of the road from the earnings in the hands of the receiver, and any balance from the sale under foreclosure, it was final, and the court could not of its own motion vacate it at a subsequent term.—Central Trust Co. v. Grant Locomotive Works, 135 U. S. 207, 10 S. Ct. 736, 34 L. Ed. 97.

The decree for the sale of a railroad in foreclosure proceedings provided that all claims, debts, and demands accruing during an existing receivership should be paid by the purchaser, but that the claims should be barred unless presented within six months from the confirmation of the sale. The decree confirming the sale omitted any provision as to the time in which the claims must be presented, and the purchasers made no objection to it as varying from the terms of the decree of sale. Held, that persons having such claims were entitled to present them after the expiration of six months from the confirmation of the sale.—Olcott v. Headrick, 141 U. S. 543, 12 S. Ct. 81, 35 L. Ed. 851.

Since the proceeds of the sale were substantially a fund in court, it was within the discretion of the court to abrogate the six-months limitation, and, there being nothing in the record to show on what grounds it acted, it will be presumed that its discretion was properly exercised.—Id.

A decree in an action by a railroad bondholder to foreclose a mortgage securing such bonds, which directs a sale of the mortgaged property, free of all liens and incumbrances, to satisfy plaintiff's claims, without making provision for other bondholders, subsequent mortgagees, or other creditors of the road, is fatally defective.—New Orleans Pac. Ry. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 12 S. Ct. 364, 36 L. Ed. 66, affirming decree Parker v. New Orleans, B. R. & V. R. Co. (C. C.) 33 F. 693.

A decree of sale on the foreclosure of a senior railroad mortgage contained language apparently reserving the rights of a junior mortgagee, who was a party to the suit, for future disposition before the sale was had. He failed to take any action in pursuance thereof, and the sale was made "without redemption or appraisal," and for seven years thereafter he took no steps to assert his claim. Held, that he and those whom he represented were thereafter debarred from invoking the assistance of a court of equity as against the purchasers at the sale.—Simmons v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 159 U. S. 278, 16 S. Ct. 1, 40 L. Ed. 150.

—192. Sale.

The holders of unsurrendered bonds of a road that has been merged into another railroad system cannot, after the assumption of control of the affairs of the latter system by the court, question the legality of the purchase and sale of the road, since those who were parties to the arrangement, those who acquiesced in it, and those who failed in due time by some proper proceeding to question its validity, should be estopped to raise such a question at such a time. Neither are they entitled to a separate sale.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 968.

In proceedings to foreclose two mortgages on a railroad, the court, on the motion and with the consent of the trustees of the mortgages and of the railroad, ordered a sale of the road, it appearing that the road was becoming constantly more incumbered with receiver's certificates pending the litigation. The sale was objected to by the holders of a minority of the bonds secured by the second mortgage, on the ground that there were conflicting rights under the two mortgages which should be settled before sale, the nonsettlement of which at the time of the sale would seriously depreciate the property. Held, no error, since the trustees represented the bondholders, there appeared to be no fraud or unfairness on their part, the railroad was depreciating while in the hands of the court, and the adjustment of conflicting rights could take place as well after as before sale.—First Nat. Bank v. Shedd, 121 U. S. 74, 7 S. Ct. 807, 30 L. Ed. 877.

The L. Co. partially constructed a road from Lexington to Butler, Mo., and to secure debts for work and materials, on January 16, 1872, conveyed the road, franchises, etc., to C. in trust, with power of sale. February 7, 1872, the company leased its road and property, with the right to mortgage the same, to the B. Co., for and in behalf of the latter's L. branch. April 1, 1872, the B. Co. placed a deed of trust on its entire L. branch, including the leased premises, to secure its bonds for $1,600,000. Afterwards the trustee in the last-named deed brought suit in the United States circuit court for foreclosure and sale, and obtained a decree May 19, 1876. Before this decree was executed, on February 20, 1877, C. sold the premises covered by the deed of January 16, 1872, to N., who then owned the claims secured by it. January 10, 1880, S., receiver in the foreclosure suit, filed a petition for leave to complete the construction of the leased road, and for that purpose to raise money by sale of first lien certificates. March 3, 1880, the court authorized the receiver to raise the money, and also to settle, by payment or otherwise, any outstanding prior claims or liens against that road. March 12, 1880, the receiver made a contract with N. by which N. agreed to convey his interest in the leased road upon payment by the receiver of $17,750 within a specified time, either party having the right to specifically enforce the contract by proceeding in the circuit court. November 30, 1880, the L. branch, including the leased premises, was sold in gross by a special master in the foreclosure suit, S. purchasing as trustee for the bondholders, the price being paid entirely in mortgage bonds held by those whom he represented. March 7, 1881, N. intervened, praying that his agreement with the receiver be enforced, and that, before confirmation of the foreclosure sale, the receiver be required to pay out of the proceeds the $17,750 and interest. July 5, 1881, the court confirmed the sale, with the reservation that it should not affect any claims to the property then pending, and that the court reserved the power to make further orders in reference to said property. December 9, 1881, the court made a final decree, adjudging that there was due N. the sum of $17,750 and interest, which ought to have been paid by the receiver out of the proceeds of sale, and that, as it had not been paid, the sale should be set aside, and the receiver resume possession, unless N.'s claim should be paid within 90 days. Held, that the sale of the mortgaged property, as an entirety, was an election by the bondholders not to have it sold in parts, or subject to N.'s prior lien, and consequently not to restrict his lien to that portion of the road embraced in his purchase under the trust deed; and that, therefore, he was entitled to be first paid out of the aggregate proceeds of the sale of the entire property. Nor could this right be defeated by the fact that the bondholders had exercised the privilege given by the decree of sale to pay in bonds instead of cash. If N.'s claim was not paid within a reasonable time, the property, or so much as was necessary, should be sold again to pay him. Nevertheless the court erred in setting aside the confirmation of sale. The order should have been that the property be resold in satisfaction of N.'s claim, without annulling the former sale and confirmation, or withdrawing or canceling the master's deed.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Newman, 127 U. S. 649, 8 S. Ct. 1364, 32 L. Ed. 303.

Since in Georgia a purchase of the trust property by the trustee at a mortgage sale is not void, but voidable only, at the option of the beneficiary, where the state purchased at its own sale as trustee under the mortgage given by a railroad company to secure the state against loss on its indorsement of railroad bonds, pursuant to Acts Ga. 1866, p. 127, the junior mortgage creditors could only avoid the sale by tendering reimbursement of the amount of the first mortgage.—Cunningham v. Macon &

B. R. Co., 156 U. S. 400, 15 S. Ct. 361, 39 L. Ed. 471.

A foreclosure sale was not invalid as to junior creditors because it was announced before the sale that only bonds of the issue of a certain year would be received in payment, and at the sale it was declared such bonds would be received only at their market value, in the absence of any complaint by the first mortgage creditors, or any bid at the sale, or show of willingness to free the property from the first lien, by the junior creditors.—Id.

Where, in order that there might be an early sale in a foreclosure proceeding, the sale of a railroad was ordered without determining the validity of a lien asserted by C., with a provision that if his lien should be sustained he should be entitled to a resale of the property in the event the purchasers should, within 10 days, fail to pay him the amount of his lien, mortgagees who acquiesced in the decree, and shared the benefits of the early sale, though not parties thereto, are bound thereby, and cannot object to a resale.—Compton v. Jesup, 17 S. Ct. 795, 167 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 55, determined on certificate, 68 F. 263, 15 C. C. A. 397.

At the instance of parties who were anxious to have an early sale, the sale of a railroad was ordered in a foreclosure proceeding without determining the validity of a lien asserted by C. on a part of the property involved, but reserving his rights for future determination, and providing that if his lien should be sustained the purchasers at the sale, and their successors in title, should, within 10 days, pay him the amount of his lien, with interest, in default whereof the court should resume possession of the property affected by his lien, and enforce the same "by a resale of said property or otherwise, as the court may direct." This decree was assented to by all parties, and no appeals therefrom were taken. Held, that the decree was a final determination of C.'s rights in the event his lien should be sustained, and the court had no power, upon sustaining his lien at a subsequent term, to refuse him a resale of the property, and limit his remedy to a right to redeem the prior mortgages.—Id.

The St. Paul & Duluth Railroad Company, upon succeeding, through a foreclosure of mortgage, to the Lake Superior & Mississippi River Railroad Company, did not thereby acquire any claim the latter might have had as to such reduction of compensation for carrying the United States mail as was made by the postal department either before or after the succession of title; the contract with the United States government having been made by the Lake Superior & Mississippi River Railroad Company, and there being no descriptive words in the instrument of mortgage transferring the rights of the latter company under that contract to the mortgagees.—St. Paul & D. R. Co. v. United States, 112 U. S. 733, 5 S. Ct. 366, 28 L. Ed. 861; Flint & P. M. Ry. Co. v. United States, 112 U. S. 737, 5 S. Ct. 368, 28 L. Ed. 862.

A construction company has no lien upon the roadbed and other property of a railroad as against a purchaser under a contract existing before work had been bona fide begun by such construction company, and when it had actual notice of the contract before that time, but its construction contract is subject to the terms and conditions of the contract of such purchaser.—Wright v. Kentucky & G. E. R. Co., 117 U. S. 72, 6 S. Ct. 697, 29 L. Ed. 821.

The C. Ry. Co. and the K. Ry. Co. obtained a right of way through Forest park, near St. Louis, Mo., from the park commissioners. Three instruments were executed on the same date. The first was a contract between the C. Co. and the K. Co. by which the C. Co. agreed to convey to the K. Co. an undivided one-half of all the right of way it then owned, or might acquire, through Forest park. It provided that, if the C. Co. should fail to pay its proportion of the cost of constructing the line, the entire right of way should go to the K. Co. It referred to the tripartite agreement entered into on that date by the C. Co., the K. Co., and the park commissioners. This contract was never recorded. The next instrument was a deed from the C. Co. to the K. Co. of an undivided one-half of its right of way through the park. It recited that it was made in pursuance of the contract of that date, and that the right of way was conveyed subject to the same terms and conditions upon which it had been granted to the C. Co. This conveyance was recorded. The last instrument was the tripartite agreement between the park commissioners, the C. Co., and the K. Co., whereby a right of way through the park was granted to the C. Co., which covenanted to permit other railroads to use such right of way upon such terms and compensation "as may be agreed upon by such companies." By a subsequent clause the right to enjoy the right of way in common with the C. Co. was granted to the K. Co., "under the same terms and conditions as are hereby and hereinbefore imposed upon" the C. Co., "and which are hereby assumed" by the K. Co. This agreement was recorded. The C. Co. forfeited its interest to the K. Co., and the latter was afterwards consolidated with another road, which was mortgaged, and sold under foreclosure. Held, that both the mortgagees and the purchasers at the foreclosure sale were charged with notice of the contents of the tripartite agreement, since the deed to the K. Co., under which they claimed, referred to the contract, and that in turn recited the tripartite agreement.—Joy v. City of St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 29 F. 546.

The covenant as to the use of the right of way by other companies is binding also on subsequent purchasers from the K. Co., with notice.—Id.

Holders of state bonds issued in aid of the construction of a railroad, and guaranteed by the railway company, are not entitled, as against purchasers of the railroad under foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, to subject the property to their claims, because the president of the company, who is alleged to have "brought about" the foreclosure, and to have been interested in the purchase thereunder, was the holder of receiver's certificates which became a charge on the property superior to the mortgage, where it does not appear that anything would have been left for general creditors if there had been no such certificates; nor because neither the state nor the holders of its bonds were made parties to the foreclosure suit, they having no lien; nor because the issue of the bonds by the state was procured by fraud by the president of the company and another, such fraud having no connection in law with the mortgage foreclosed.—McKittrick v. Arkansas Cent. Ry. Co., 152 U. S. 473, 14 S. Ct. 661, 38 L. Ed. 518.

Where, in a foreclosure proceeding, the sale of a railroad was ordered without determining the validity of a lien asserted by C., but with a provision that, in the event his lien should be sustained, he should be entitled to a resale of the road on the purchaser's failure to pay him the amount of his lien, C.'s lien having been sustained he is entitled to have the prior mortgages reduced by the net earnings received by the purchasers, or their successors in title, as they should be regarded as parties in possession under the express terms of the order of sale, and therefore as sustaining a trust relation to C., which involves an accounting until he is disposed of.—Compton v. Jesup, 17 S. Ct. 795, 167 U. S. 1, 42 L. Ed. 55, determined on certificate 68 F. 263, 15 C. C. A. 397.

Property purchased at a sale under a decree foreclosing a mortgage of all a railway company's franchises and property is not rendered liable to sale for the satisfaction of a judgment recovered on a tort alleged to have been committed by the mortgagor after the sale, because of Code N. C. § 1255, making liens for judgments for torts superior to mortgages of incorporated companies. Judgment 115 F. 956, 53 C. C. A. 438, affirmed.—Julian v. Central Trust Co., 24 S. Ct. 399, 193 U. S. 93, 48 L. Ed. 629.

The successor to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by purchase under a foreclosure sale of a first mortgage of the railway property did not take the property free from the obligation, under Act Feb. 24, 1871, c. 67, 16 Stat. 430, enacted subsequent to the execution of the mortgage, in the exercise by Congress of its reserved right to alter, amend, or repeal the act incorporating the railroad company, to permit the joint use by the trains of all railroads terminating at Omaha of the bridge whose construction at that point by the Union Pacific Railroad Company was authorized by that statute. Decree 128 F. 230, 64 C. C. A. 348, affirmed.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co., 28 S. Ct. 19, 199 U. S. 160, 50 L. Ed. 134.

←195. — Purchasing bondholders or other creditors.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 654-658, 660.

Railroad foreclosure proceedings for the sole benefit of the bondholders and the stockholders of the company, under an agreement between them for a sale and purchase for both, and with the intention of excluding from any interest in the property all unsecured creditors, are not permissible. Decree 84 F. 539, 28 C. C. A. 202, reversed.—Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co., 19 S. Ct. 827, 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. Ed. 1130.

←197. Disposition of proceeds and surplus.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 662.

In a suit in equity to foreclose a mortgage of all the lands, franchises, and property of a railroad company, which have since been put in the possession of a receiver, an intervening prior mortgagee of part of the lands is not entitled to have the amount of his mortgage paid out of the funds in the hands of the receiver, or out of the proceeds of a sale made, pursuant to the decree of foreclosure, subject to his mortgage.—Woodworth v. Blair, 112 U. S. 8, 5 S. Ct. 6, 28 L. Ed. 615.

←198. Review of proceedings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 663.

The decree, in foreclosure proceedings of a railroad mortgage, where it appeared that the corpus of the property was in possession of two railroad companies under claim of purchase from a former owner, reserved to them the right to remove their improvements from the right of way, or to condemn it under their right of eminent domain. The bondholders and trustees acquiesced. Held, that the decree would not be disturbed for that reason on the appeal of the mortgagor.—Indiana Southern R. Co. v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 168, 3 S. Ct. 108, 27 L. Ed. 895.

The refusal of the court on the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage to allow a mortgagee to amend and supplement its petition for a rehearing of an order making certain expenses a prior lien on the property of the company, and to file it as an original bill of review as of that date, after the time limited by statute for taking an appeal therefrom, was a matter of discretion.—Central Trust Co. v. Grant Locomotive Works, 135 U. S. 207, 10 S. Ct. 736, 34 L. Ed. 97.

A decree rendered on an intervention filed after the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, and directing the payment of interveners' claim for a vendor's lien, in the absence of the evidence on which it was based, must be affirmed, when the decree shows that the company purchased certain lands from interveners, and held them as part of its right of way, though no deeds were ever executed; that the vendor's lien was superior to the lien of the mortgage; and it further appears that the decree of foreclosure ordered the sale of all the company's right of way.—Kneeland v. Luce, 141 U. S. 437, 12 S. Ct. 39, 35 L. Ed. 808.

A railroad company had $16,000,000 of stock, $7,000,000 of which was preferred. It appeared, and confessed judgment for some $500,000 on an unsecured liability on the same day the bill was filed, and consented to the appointment of a receiver. During the receivership it made no effort to prevent default in its interest obligations, and tacitly consented to an order made on the application of the receiver for the issue of $200,000 worth of receiver's certificates in aid of betterments on the road, though such sum might have paid interest and delayed foreclosure. A few months later, and a few days after a decree adjudging the company liable on its guaranty for a large amount of unsecured indebtedness, several foreclosure suits, representing nearly $14,000,000, were brought, and no defense made, which resulted in a decree of sale utterly ignoring the rights of the judgment creditor who procured the appointment of a receiver. A holder of a part of such unsecured indebtedness intervened by a verified petition in the consolidated foreclosure suits, charging that the foreclosures were for the benefit of the bondholders and stockholders, and for the purpose of shutting out unsecured creditors, and praying that the decree of foreclosure and sale be set aside, so as to allow the rights of the unsecured creditors to be established. The intervening petition was denied, and a sale made and confirmed on the same day. Held, that it was error for the court not to make inquiry and ascertain if the claims made by the intervening petition were true. Decree 84 F. 539, 28 C. C. A. 202, reversed.—Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co., 19 S. Ct. 827, 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. Ed. 1130.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 642½.

Corporate property of a North Carolina railway company, covered by a legally authorized mortgage of all its franchises and property, does not continue liable for the debts of such company accruing after the sale on foreclosure proceedings to a nonresident railway company authorized by its charter to make the purchase, because of the failure of the latter to exercise the privilege conferred by Code N. C. §§ 697, 698, 1936, 2005, of organizing a domestic corporation to operate the purchased property. Judgment 115 F. 956, 53 C. C. A. 438, affirmed.—Julian v. Central Trust Co., 24 S. Ct. 399, 193 U. S. 93, 48 L. Ed. 629.

←202. Actions to set aside foreclosure.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 669, 670.

A railroad mortgage by the L. Company was foreclosed, and the railroad bought in by the trustee. Thereafter the bondholders organized themselves into a company for the purpose of operating the railroad, under the name of the M. Company. In a suit at the instance of the judgment creditors, the mortgage was adjudged to be valid only "as a security for the bonds issued under it in the hands of bona fide holders for value, without notice," which it was found did not exceed $200,000; that the foreclosure sale be "set aside, vacated and annulled," and the M. Company perpetually "enjoined from setting up any right or title under it," because made in pursuance of a notice that $2,000,000 of bonds had been issued, and that there was a default in the payment of $70,000 of interest. Held that, the suit being by and for creditors of the L. Company, to set aside the mortgage, and the foreclosure thereunder, because made to hinder and delay them in the collection of their debts, the decree must be limited to the pleadings, and must be held to mean no more than that the foreclosure was void as to these creditors, whose claims were inferior in right to that of the mortgage; and that the M. Company was restrained from asserting title only as against them; and also that, if they undertook to sell the property to pay their judgments, the mortgage should stand only as security for such bonds as had been actually negotiated by the L. Company to bona fide holders.—Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 122 U. S. 1, 7 S. Ct. 1043, 30 L. Ed. 1128.

Plaintiff's bill alleged that the I. R. Co. executed to defendant trust company a first mortgage on its railroad and other property to secure certain bonds, and a second mortgage, expressly made subject to the first, to secure certain income bonds held by plaintiff and others, the interest on the first mortgage bonds to be paid absolutely at stated times, and the interest on the income bonds to be paid only out of the net earnings of the road; that the earnings of the road were sufficient to pay the interest on both classes of bonds; that the I. R. Co. was fraudulently, collusively, and without the knowledge and consent of the income bondholders, consolidated with the L. C. & St. L. R. Co., and its earnings diverted to pay expenses of the latter road; that afterwards the trust company filed a bill to foreclose the mortgages; that five of the first mortgage bondholders, under a written contract with the other holders of such bonds, were appointed a committee to purchase the road at the foreclosure sale for the benefit of all the first mortgage bondholders; that a committee of the income bondholders was appointed and met, and agreed with the other committee for participation in the reorganization of the company after the sale; that defendant C., acting for the first committee, purchased the road, as plaintiff believed, for the benefit of the holders of both classes of bonds, but after the purchase of the holders of the income bonds were not allowed to take part in the management of the company; that a new company was organized, and C. transferred all the property to it, and the stock of the new company was issued to the first mortgage bondholders; that the new company was earning enough to pay the interest on both classes of bonds. The bill prays for a rescission of the foreclosure sale, or that the purchase be declared to be for the benefit of both classes of bondholders; that an account be taken of the earnings of the road, and the net earnings be applied to payment of the interest on the income bonds. Held, that the bill was demurrable, since there was no allegation of actual fraud in the foreclosure sale, no offer to redeem from it, and no averment of consideration or mutuality in the alleged agreement between the two committees, or that the property was sold for less than its actual value.—Robinson v. Iron Ry. Co., 135 U. S. 522, 10 S. Ct. 907, 34 L. Ed. 276.

In such suit the validity and sufficiency of the proceedings in the foreclosure suit prior to the sale cannot be questioned, since they were matters proper for adjudication in the foreclosure suit.—Id.

The alleged agreement between the committee of the income bondholders and the committee of first mortgage bondholders, by which the former were to participate in the reorganization of the company, cannot be considered in such suit, since it was an agreement with the members of the latter committee as individuals, and they are not made parties.—Id.

In a bill by holders of state bonds guaranteed by a railway company, brought against such company and another claiming under a purchase of its property on foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, allegations that the president of the company "brought about" the foreclosure, and that the purchaser at the sale "pretended" to have purchased as trustee for him, are not sufficient to impeach the validity of the sale or the integrity of the purchase.—McKittrick v. Arkansas Cent. Ry. Co., 152 U. S. 473, 14 S. Ct. 661, 38 L. Ed. 518.

IX. RECEIVERS.

205. Grounds of appointment.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 673-675.

A court of equity can appoint receivers for an insolvent railroad company, on the application of the company itself, by a petition showing that its property is likely to be seized by different courts, its assets dissipated, and the system disrupted; but cannot displace vested liens, and must require that the property shall be held and preserved by the receivers for the benefit of all concerned therein, as their interests may appear.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 34 F. 259.

206. Appointment, qualification, and tenure.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 676-682.

A bill alleging, in effect, that one of the plaintiffs was the largest stockholder of several of the roads which had been combined into the company is afterwards established, and that his co-plaintiffs were judgment creditors of one of such roads, with judgments unsatisfied; which bill sets out the precarious condition of all the property of the present company, and the necessity for a receiver in the interest of all the creditors of all the combined companies, to prevent a levy upon the property, with prayer for judicial ascertainment and marshaling of the debts of all the corporations, and for proper payments and adjustments to and with creditors—is sufficient to enable a court of equity to administer the property and marshal the debts, including those due the mortgage bondholders, making proper parties, and giving all an opportunity of being heard before adjudging the merits.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

Where a judgment creditor of a railroad, in a suit in behalf of himself alone to have a receiver appointed to protect his interests, sets forth the precarious condition of the road, and the necessity for a receiver, but does not sue out execution, deeming it useless, and no objection is made for such failure, the appointment of a receiver is within the power of the court.—Sage v. Memphis & L. R. Co., 125 U. S. 361, 8 S. Ct. 887, 31 L. Ed. 694.

208. Powers and duties of receiver as affected by leases and traffic contracts before appointment.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 685-691.

The owners of rolling stock, who have leased it to a railroad which goes into the hands of a receiver, are entitled to a reasonable rental value for the rolling stock, irrespective of the actual use made of it by the receiver.—Kneeland v. American Loan & Trust Co., 136 U. S. 89, 10 S. Ct. 950, 34 L. Ed. 379.

A cotton seed oil company agreed to purchase certain railway rolling stock, and lease the same to a railway company at a rent equal to 8 per cent. on the cost thereof, the railway company agreeing to purchase the property on or before a specified date, for cash, with a proviso that, in case of inability to purchase, it should turn the property over to the oil company, in good order and condition, at the expiration of the contract. The oil company was also to retain freights due the road for carriage of cotton seed, and credit them—First, upon the rent; and, second, upon the purchase price. Under this contract the rolling stock was used by the road, and a large sum over and above the specified rent accrued to the credit of the road for carriage of freights, but the railway company never exercised its privilege of purchasing the rolling stock. The railway company passed into the hands of a receiver on mortgage foreclosure, and the oil company sought to compel the receiver to carry freights for it until the amount paid by it for the rolling stock should be discharged. Held, that the appointment of the receiver was conclusive evidence of the inability of the railway company to purchase the property; that the receiver did not become liable upon the agreement of the railway company, simply by virtue of his appointment; that on taking possession of the property he was entitled to a reasonable time to elect whether he would adopt the contract, or would insist upon the inability of the company to pay, and return the property as stipulated; and that he should not be required to carry out the contract.—Sunflower Oil Co. v. Wilson, 142 U. S. 313, 12 S. Ct. 235, 35 L. Ed. 1025.

There being no provision in the contract of a railroad company for the lease of rolling stock from an oil company forfeiting payments already made, the court, on cross-petition of the receiver, could require the return of money already paid on the rolling stock, less the amount of any damage to, and reasonable compensation for the use of, the same.—Id.

The court, having jurisdiction of the entire proceeding, might properly render judgment against the oil company for the amount received by it, less compensation for use and wear of the engine.—Id.

The receiver of an insolvent railroad corporation, originally formed by the consolidation of two separate companies, does not by virtue of his appointment become the assignee of a branch line lease executed to one of the companies before the consolidation; and where the income of the leased line is insufficient to pay its operating expense, and it is also unprofitable as a feeder or connection, the property of the consolidated corporation should not be taken, without the consent of its creditors, for the purpose of paying the rental of the leased line.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 F. 259; St. Joseph & St. L. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 105, 12 S. Ct. 795, 36 L. Ed. 690.

Where a receiver of a railroad takes possession of a leased line and operates it for a reasonable time, keeping separate accounts, diverting none of its earnings to the benefit of the general system or its creditors, and with an express recognition by the court of the right of the lessor to resume possession, he does not become the assignee of the lease, or adopt it.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 34 F. 259.

Where the accounts of an insolvent railroad corporation had been so kept as to render it impossible to ascertain the net profit or loss incident to the operation of a leased line, and from the nature of the case the receiver could not begin to ascertain its unprofitable character inside of three months from his appointment, he cannot be held to have adopted the lease merely because he failed for nine months after his appointment to formally notify the lessor that the rent would not be paid, especially when the order of court appointing the receiver directed the payment of rental on leased lines "out of the income" of such lines.—St. Joseph & St. L. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 105, 12 S. Ct. 795, 36 L. Ed. 690.

An order directing railroad receivers to keep divisional accounts, and to pay rentals on leased lines only to the extent of any surplus earned by such lines respectively over their operating expenses, is notice to such lines and their mortgagees, that they must not expect payment of rentals unless there is such a surplus; and, if they do not then intervene to regain possession of the property, they have no claim on the receivers in the event that there is no surplus.—United States Trust Co. v. Wabash W. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 287, 14 S. Ct. 86, 37 L. Ed. 1085; Seney v. Wabash W. Ry. Co., 150 U. S. 310, 14 S. Ct. 94, 37 L. Ed. 1092, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 38 F. 63.

A railroad receiver, even though appointed on the petition of the railroad company itself, and for the express purpose of preventing the disintegration of the system, does not become liable for rentals upon leased lines, eo instante, by the mere act of taking possession, but he is entitled to a reasonable time to ascertain the situation of affairs.—Id.

An order directing that railroad receivers shall "from the incoming rents and profits of said property, after meeting such other obligations as they have been directed to discharge by the former order of this court, pay, from whatever balance may remain in their hands," the rentals on leased lines, is an order to pay from the balance, if any, after payment of preferred claims, not including the rentals as preferred; and consequently the trustees under a mortgage on a leased line had no right to rely on payment at all events, even though the leased line had theretofore earned sufficient to cover its own rental.—Id.

—209. Duties of receiver as to bondholders, mortgagees, and other creditors.

Nonaction on the part of bondholders and their trustee, which allowed the court and receiver to go on during the entire litigation contracting debts in respect to the whole line operated as a unit, and administering the property as one, under circumstances where, as shown, it was impossible to separate the interests as to expenditures and benefits in respect to the matters now questioned, and when important rights have accrued on the faith of the unity of the interests, amounts to such acquiescence as should operate as an estoppel.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

The holders of overdue bonds are not entitled to the net earnings in the hands of a receiver, appointed in a suit by a judgment creditor for the protection of his interests, when they have made no demand therefor under the provisions of their mortgages, even though in his bill such creditor seeks relief subject to their rights.—Sage v. Memphis & L. R. Co., 125 U. S. 361, 8 S. Ct. 887, 31 L. Ed. 694.

Where a railroad mortgage does not purport to convey any of the income or earnings of the road, but merely gives a right, in case of default, to take possession, operate the road, and receive the tolls and income, the mortgagees can have no claim to such revenues when the road is in possession of receivers as part of a system to which it is leased, until they have either taken or demanded possession of the property.—United States Trust Co. v. Wabash W. R. Co., 150 U. S. 287, 14 S. Ct. 88, 37 L. Ed. 1085; Seney v. Wabash W. R. Co., 150 U. S. 310, 14 S. Ct. 94, 37 L. Ed. 1092, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 38 F. 63.

210. Authority to control and manage road, and exercise thereof in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 686-701.

A receiver appointed by a federal court to take charge of a railroad must operate the road according to the laws of the state in which it is situated. Judgment 56 P. 133, 60 Kan. 251, affirmed.—Erh v. Morasch, 20 S. Ct. 819, 177 U. S. 584, 44 L. Ed. 897.

The making of a special agreement to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day is within the authority of the receivers appointed, in a suit to foreclose a railway mortgage, to continue to carry on the railway business. Decree, Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 120 F. 873, 57 C. C. A. 533, affirmed.—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. American Trading Co., 25 S. Ct. 84, 195 U. S. 439, 49 L. Ed. 269.

The "general eastern agent" of the receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, who were ordered to continue its business, has the general powers of such an officer when acting for the railroad company itself, which includes the authority to make a special agreement to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day.—Id.

212. Rights and liabilities of railroad company after discharge of receiver.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 702-706.

Where earnings of a railroad while in the hands of a receiver, more than sufficient to pay claims for damages from negligence in the operation of the road by him, are diverted into betterments, of which the railroad company has the benefit on the return of the property to it, an action on such a claim may be maintained against the company, and a personal judgment may be rendered against it thereon. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Johnson, 13 S. W. 463, 76 Tex. 421, 18 Am. St. Rep. 60, followed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Manton, 17 S. Ct. 216, 164 U. S. 636, 41 L. Ed. 580; Same v. Bloom, 60 F. 979, 9 C. C. A. 300.

A state statute requiring every regular passenger train running wholly within the limits of the state to stop at all stations at county seats directly in its course, to take on and discharge passengers, is a reasonable exercise of the police power, and not a taking of the property of the company without due process of law, nor an unconstitutional interference with the transportation of mails. Judgment 59 N. W. 487, 57 Minn. 385, 24 L. R. A. 502, affirmed.—Gladson v. State of Minnesota, 17 S. Ct. 627, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. Ed. 1064.

A state may direct a railway company operating a branch line which, so far as it lies within the state, was built under the authority of a charter from that state, to afford passenger train service between the terminus of such line within the state and the state line, provided that such requirement does not amount to such an arbitrary and unreasonable exercise of power as to cause it to be, in fact, not a regulation, but an infringement upon the right of ownership, or, considering the surrounding circumstances, operate as a direct burden upon interstate commerce. Judgment, State v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. (1907) 92 P. 606, 76 Kan. 467, affirmed.—Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. State, 30 S. Ct. 330, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. Ed. 472.

228. Connections and facilities for transfers.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 742.

Const. Colo. art. 15, § 4, providing that every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad, gives the right to a mechanical connection between the tracks, and does not include the right to a business connection.—Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co., 110 U. S. 667, 4 S. Ct. 185, 28 L. Ed. 291, reversing judgments (C. C.) 13 F. 546, and (C. C.) 15 F. 650.

229. Equipment of trains.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 743.

Locomotives are embraced by the words "any car" in Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, § 2, 27 Stat. 531 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174], prohibiting common carriers from using any car in moving interstate commerce not equipped with automatic couplers, although locomotives were elsewhere in the statute in terms required to be equipped with power driving-wheel brakes. Judgment 117 F. 462, 54 C. C. A. 508, reversed.—Johnson v. Southern Pac. Co., 25 S. Ct. 158, 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. Ed. 363.

The doctrine that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly does not demand that Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, 27 Stat. 531 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174], compelling interstate carriers to adopt automatic couplers, in which there is an undoubted intention to make some change in the existing law, should be so construed as to defeat the obvious object of Congress.—Id.

The statutory duty imposed upon carriers in absolute terms by Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, § 5, 27 Stat. 531 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174), of using in interstate commerce only such freight cars as comply with the standard fixed as the height for drawbars, is not discharged by furnishing cars constructed with drawbars of the standard height, and by furnishing to competent inspectors and train men a sufficient number of metallic wedges or "shims," to use as occasion demands to raise to the legal standard drawbars lowered by the natural effect of proper use. Judgment, St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Neal (1906) 98 S. W. 958, 83 Ark. 591, reversed.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Taylor, 28 S. Ct. 616, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. Ed. 1061.

Drawbars of unloaded freight cars are required by Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, § 5, 27 Stat. 531 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174), to be of uniform and standard height; but those of loaded cars need not be of uniform height, provided that they do not vary more than the three inches prescribed as the maximum permitted variation from the standard.—Id.

An automatic coupler between engine and tender is not required by the Safety Appliance Act of March 2, 1893, nor by the amendatory act of March 2, 1903, making the earlier act applicable "to all cases" and "to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars," etc.—Pennell v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 220, 231 U. S. 675, 58 L. Ed. 430, affirming judgment 203 F. 681, 122 C. C. A. 77.

Yards of interstate railway carrier held not a single yard, so that movements of trains between them are exempt from provisions of Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893, and its amendments, where they lie from 2 to 3¼ miles apart.—United States v. Erie R. Co., 35 S. Ct. 621, 237 U. S. 402, 59 L. Ed. 1019, reversing judgment 212 F. 853, 129 C. C. A. 307.

Transfer trains of freight moving over main tracks and switches and across passenger tracks by an interstate railway between yards from two to three and a half miles apart are "trains" within Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893, and its amendments.—Id.

Where defects in cars can be repaired where they are found, they are excluded by Safety Appliance Act, April 14, 1910, § 4, from permission to haul defective cars to the nearest available point for making repairs.—Id.

Hauling of defective cars by chains from the place where defects are discovered to the nearest place for repairs is prohibited by Safety Appliance Act April 14, 1910, § 4, unless they contain live stock or perishable freight.—Id.

The term "trains," as used in Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893, and its amendments, includes the transfer trains of freight cars operated by switching crews between two freight-yards of an interstate railway on opposite sides of the Missouri river.—United States v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 35 S. Ct. 634, 237 U. S. 410, 59 L. Ed. 1023, reversing judgment Chica- go, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 211 F. 12, 127 C. C. A. 438.

Passenger cars operated in trains on inter-urban interstate electric railway are not within exception in favor of cars used on street railway, made by amendment of March 2, 1903, to federal Safety Appliance Act March 2, 1893.—Spokane & I. E. R. Co. v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 668, 241 U. S. 344, 60 L. Ed. 1037, affirming judgment 210 F. 243, 127 C. C. A. 61.

230. Employés.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 744.

Acts Tex. 81st Leg. c. 46, making it a misdemeanor to act as a conductor on a railway train without having served two years as a freight conductor or brakeman, held unconstitutional.—Smith v. State of Texas, 34 S. Ct. 681, 233 U. S. 630, 58 L. Ed. 1129, L. R. A. 1915D, 677, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 420, reversing judgment (Tex. Cr. App.) Same v. State, 146 S. W. 900.

231. Movement of trains in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 745.

A state statute prohibiting switching of cars over public crossings in cities of the first and second class with less than a specified number of employés is not unconstitutional.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. State of Arkansas, 36 S. Ct. 443, 240 U. S. 518, 60 L. Ed. 776, affirming judgment 170 S. W. 580, 114 Ark. 486.

233. Signals and lookouts.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 747.

Requiring locomotives on the main line to be equipped with electric headlights of a certain capacity, as is done by Pub. Laws Ga. 1908, pp. 50, 51, is a valid exercise of the police power.—Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State of Georgia, 34 S. Ct. 829, 234 U. S. 280, 58 L. Ed. 1312, affirming judgment 69 S. E. 725, 135 Ga. 545, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 20.

249. Fire.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 730.

Act Mo. March 31, 1887, making railroad companies liable for property destroyed by fire communicated by their locomotives, and giving them an insurable interest in the property along their roads, is not in excess of the powers of the legislature.—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Mathews, 17 S. Ct. 243, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. Ed. 611.

254. Penalties for violations of regulations.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 764-773.

A carrier using in moving interstate traffic cars whose condition does not satisfy the requirements of the safety appliance acts (Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, 27 Stat. 531 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174], Act April 1, 1896, c. 87, 29 Stat. 85 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3175], and Act March 2, 1903, c. 976, 32 Stat. 943 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1143]), cannot escape the penalty therein prescribed by showing that it exercised reasonable care in equipping its cars with the required safety appliances, and used due diligence to keep them in repair by the usual inspection, but the statutes impose an absolute duty upon the carrier which is not discharged by the exercise of reasonable care or diligence.—(1911) Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. United States, 31 S. Ct. 612, 220 U. S. 559, 55 L. Ed. 582, affirming judgment (1909) 170 F. 556, 95 C. C. A. 642.

An action by the United States to recover from a carrier the penalty prescribed for violations of safety appliance acts (Act March 2, 1893, c. 196, 27 Stat. 531 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3174]; Act April 1, 1896, c. 87, 29 Stat. 85 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3175]; and Act March 2, 1903, c. 976, 32 Stat. 943 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1143]), is a civil, and not a criminal, action.—Id.

The exaction of a double liability from a railway company failing to pay within 60 days damages caused by fire, under Laws S. D. 1907, c. 215, unless the owner recovers a less sum as damages, than the tender by the railway company violates the Constitution.—Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Polt, 34 S. Ct. 301, 232 U. S. 165, 58 L. Ed. 554, reversing judgment Polt v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 128 N. W. 472, 26 S. D. 378.

Difficulty of equipping passenger cars on interurban electric railway with couplers and grabirons required by federal Safety Appliance Act does not relieve railroad from liability for violation of the acts.—Spokane & I. E. R. Co. v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 668, 241 U. S. 344, 60 L. Ed. 1037, affirming judgment 210 F. 243, 127 C. C. A. 61.

(C) COMPANIES AND PERSONS LIABLE FOR INJURIES.

Injuries to passengers, see Carriers, 2306.
Liability for assault and battery, see Assault and Battery, 29.

Separable controversy, grounds for removal to federal court, see Removal of Causes, 49.

262. Connecting roads.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 831, 832.

The P. Railroad cannot be held liable for injury to a person on a train of the V. Railroad in a collision with a train of the A. & F. Railroad, on the tracks of the A. & W. Railroad, on the ground that said companies were jointly interested in the running and management of said railroads, merely on evidence that the P. owned stock and bonds of the other roads, that some of the officers of the P. road held official positions in the other companies, that officers of the P. road were consulted about an arrangement made by the other roads for the use by the V. road of the A. & F. and A. & W. roads, that reference was made in the reports of the P. road to the roads as connecting with its system, that the P. road advertised a continuous line embracing the other roads, and that it paid consignees for goods destroyed in the collision, for which, however, it demanded reimbursement from the A. & W. road.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 333, 15 S. Ct. 136, 39 L. Ed. 176.

264. Mortgagees and trustees in possession.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 835-837.

A railroad company may be liable as a carrier, notwithstanding the appointment of trustees for it, where the road is not in their exclusive possession and control, to the exclusion of the officers and employees of the company.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 333, 15 S. Ct. 136, 39 L. Ed. 176.

265. Effect of operation of road by receiver.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 838-853; 34 Cent. Dig. Mast. & S. 152, 164.

A railroad company may be liable as a carrier, though a receiver has been appointed for it, where he merely received a portion of the net earnings of that and other roads which are managed together, and permits it to be managed by its officers and employees in connection with those of the other roads.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 333, 15 S. Ct. 136, 39 L. Ed. 176.

Where betterments made from earnings greatly exceed a claim for injuries inflicted while the road was being operated by the receiver, such claim may be enforced against the company after discharge of the receiver. The order discharging the receiver, restoring the property to the company without foreclosure, and requiring all claims against the receiver to be presented by intervention within a certain time, or be barred, means that claimants shall have an opportunity to present their claims before the discharge, or be precluded from resorting to the court in that suit, and remitted to other remedies. Such order does not preclude recovery in a subsequent suit at law against the company on a claim for personal injuries. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bloom, 9 C. C. A. 300, 60 F. 979, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Manton, 17 S. Ct. 216, 164 U. S. 636, 41 L. Ed. 580.

266. Joint liabilities.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 854-858.

Where a railroad is managed and controlled for the common use of three companies, owning different portions of the route, and the gross earnings of the companies therefrom, including that received for allowing the V. Railroad to run its trains over their road, go into the hands of a common treasurer, and are by him, after paying operating expenses, divided among the three companies, whose operating and accounting officers are the same, a finding is warranted of joint liability of the three companies for an injury to railway postal clerks on a train of the V. Railroad, received in a collision, on the route of the three railroads, between that train, in charge of a pilot employed and paid by the three companies, and a train manned with employees of two of the three companies, the third being the owner of the portion of the road on which the accident occurred.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 333, 15 S. Ct. 136, 39 L. Ed. 176.

(D) INJURIES TO LICENSEES OR TRIPASSERS IN GENERAL.

Ejection from passenger trains, see Carriers, 354-384.

276. Injuries to persons on trains.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 878-886.

Plaintiff's intestate, without permission, and without paying fare, climbed upon a coal train to ride through a tunnel, placing himself upon the end of a car, with his feet hanging between that and the adjoining car. From this position he was thrown between the cars by a sudden jerk, and received injuries from which he died. Held, that the railroad company was not liable in damages.—Mitchell v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., 146 U. S. 513, 13 S. Ct. 259, 36 L. Ed. 1064.

281. Acts or omissions of employees or others.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 902-906.

An act is to be considered as performed with the authority of a railroad company if, being aware of the custom of its employees to perform such acts, it or its agents permit the continuance thereof, and make no effort and issue no orders to prevent them. Judgment 6 App. D. C. 385, reversed.—Fletcher v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 35, 163 U. S. 135, 42 L. Ed. 411.

282. Actions for injuries to licensees or trespassers.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. 910-923.

Plaintiff, while coming out of defendant's depot, where he had been on business, was struck by a train running at a high rate of speed on the track lying between the depot and the passenger platform. Plaintiff testified that he could not see the approaching train because of a car on a side track, which ran through the depot, and that he had no warning of it, though he listened as he went out. There was also other evidence that the noise was so great that the sound of the approaching train could not be distinguished. There was some evidence that plaintiff ran carelessly through the depot; that he knew of the approach of the train, and might have escaped it had he stopped long enough at the exit to have looked about him. Held error in taking the question of contributory negligence from the jury, and directing a verdict for defendant.—Jones v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co., 128 U. S. 443, 9 S. Ct. 118, 32 L. Ed. 478.

(E) ACCIDENTS TO TRAINS.

[No paragraphs or references in this Digest. But see 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 924-953.]

(F) ACCIDENTS AT CROSSINGS.

Allegations of fact or conclusions, see Pleading, 8.

Instruction giving undue prominence to particular facts, see Trial, 244.

Regulation of speed as regulation of commerce, see Commerce, 10.

301. Mutual rights and duties at public crossings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 956.

The rights and duties of railroad companies and of travelers on highways crossing their tracks are mutual and reciprocal, and no greater degree of care is required of the one than of the other: the care to be exercised by each being such as an ordinarily prudent man would exercise under similar circumstances.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cody, 17 S. Ct. 703, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. Ed. 1132, affirming judgment 67 F. 71, 14 C. C. A. 310.

If a railroad crossing on a street in a city is not lit up on a dark night, then, to the extent the danger is thereby increased, greater care is required both of the company and of one crossing the track.—Id.

306. Signboards, signals, flagmen, and gates at crossings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 972-980.

307. — In general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 972-977, 979, 980.

A railroad company must use reasonable care in regard to stationing flagmen or erecting gates at crossings, and the fact that the statute of Michigan (3 How. Ann. St. § 3301) charges the railroad commissioner with the duty of determining the necessity of a flagman at any and all crossings in the state, does not relieve the company from taking such other precautions as public safety and common prudence dictate.—Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 12 S. Ct. 679, 36 L. Ed. 485, affirming judgment Ives v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (C. C.) 35 F. 176.

To warrant a jury in saying that a railroad company should station a flagman or erect gates at a crossing when not required by the commissioner, it must be shown that such crossing is more than ordinarily hazardous.—Id.

310. Mode of running at crossings.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 982-987.

The severing of a train of cars in the night-time, leaving the rear portion of them, uncontrolled otherwise than by ordinary brakes, to make a running switch across a public highway at grade, without any warning that they are approaching, is in such obvious disregard of the rights of a traveler on the highway, who attempts to drive across after the passage of the first section of the train, that the court is warranted in instructing the jury, as matter of law, not simply that such facts are evidence of negligence, but that they constitute negligence.—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 11 S. Ct. 569, 35 L. Ed. 213.

315. Rate of speed.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1008-1012.

317. — Violations of statutes or ordinances.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1009.

The running of railroad trains within the limits of a city at a street crossing at a greater rate of speed than that allowed by the city's ordinances is a circumstance from which negligence may be inferred by the jury.—Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada, v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 12 S. Ct. 679, 36 L. Ed. 485, affirming judgment Ives v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (C. C.) 35 F. 176.

323. Contributory negligence of person injured.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1020-1039.

327. — Duty to stop, look, and listen.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1043-1056.

Plaintiff, on approaching a crossing of a railroad track, with which he was familiar, could have seen a coming train, during its progress through a distance of 70 rods from the crossing, if he had looked from a point at any distance within 600 feet from the crossing, and was struck by the train at the crossing and injured. Held, that he was guilty of contributory negligence, even though the train was not a regular one, and was running at a high rate of speed, and did not stop at a depot 70 rods from the crossing in the direction from which the train came, and did not blow a whistle or ring a bell between the depot and the crossing.—Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 114 U. S. 615, 5 S. Ct. 1125, 29 L. Ed. 224, affirming (C. C.) 8 F. 488.

Plaintiff's intestate, while driving along a highway in a farm wagon, in the daytime, was struck by a train at a railroad crossing, and killed. He was a young man, having full use of his senses, was familiar with the crossing, and his team was gentle. For some distance before reaching the crossing the view of the railroad was obstructed by embankments, but from a point 40 feet from the crossing there was an unobstructed view along the track in the direction from which the train approached for 300 feet. The testimony of the only witnesses to the accident tended to show that deceased neither looked nor stopped before driving on the track. If he had looked along the track he could not have failed to see the train. Held, that he was guilty of contributory negligence, as a matter of law. Judgment, 83 F. 82, 27 C. C. A. 457, reversed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Freeman, 19 S. Ct. 763, 174 U. S. 379, 43 L. Ed. 1014.

335. — Effect in general.

The omission to ring the bell or sound the whistle at a public crossing is not of itself sufficient ground to authorize a recovery, if the party, notwithstanding such omission, by the exercise of ordinary care, might have avoided the accident.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cody, 17 S. Ct. 703, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. Ed. 1132, affirming judgment, 67 F. 71, 14 C. C. A. 310.

341. Actions for injuries.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1105-1219.

345. — Issues, proof, and variance.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1113-1116.

An averment that there was no light on the rear part of an engine is satisfied by proof that there was no such light as the law required. Judgment 12 App. D. C. 598, affirmed.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Cumberland, 20 S. Ct. 380, 176 U. S. 232, 44 L. Ed. 447.

—346. — Presumptions and burden of proof.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1117-1123.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, there is a presumption that a pedestrian, before attempting to cross railroad tracks, stopped, looked, and listened. Judgment 20 App. D. C. 135, affirmed.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Landrigan, 24 S. Ct. 137, 191 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 262.

—347. — Admissibility of evidence.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1124-1137.

Evidence that plaintiff had negligently driven over the crossing two hours before the accident is not admissible to show negligence on his part at the time of the accident.—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 11 S. Ct. 569, 35 L. Ed. 213.

Evidence that a highway had existed for over 30 years is admissible to show that the railroad company could not have been ignorant of the fact that at the crossing in question there was a public highway.—Id.

—350. — Questions for jury.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1152-1192.

In an action against a railroad company for injuries received at a crossing, there was evidence that plaintiff, who was driving slowly and with a safe horse, stopped at a point more than 600 feet from the crossing, from which a train could be seen, to look or listen, but, neither seeing nor hearing anything, drove slowly up a hill between her and the crossing, to a point at the top between 40 and 50 yards from the track, where she again stopped and listened, but, hearing nothing, she then drove slowly down the hill, towards the crossing, both she and her companion listening all the time without talking; that they heard nothing; and that, as they got to the cut in which the track ran, and when the horse had his feet on the nearest rail, the train, which was several minutes behind time, came round a curve, and struck them. It appeared that, between the point at which plaintiff first stopped and the crossing, there was no point from which the track could be seen, and that the train did not whistle, as required by law. Held, that the conduct of plaintiff was not, as matter of law, such as to defeat a recovery.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Griffith, 159 U. S. 603, 16 S. Ct. 105, 40 L. Ed. 274.

The care which a person who crosses a railroad track in a city is required to use, as well as that which the company is required to use, varies with the surrounding circumstances, and is a question of fact for the jury.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cody, 17 S. Ct. 703, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. Ed. 1132, affirming judgment 67 F. 71, 14 C. C. A. 310.

Plaintiff was, with a team of oxen, delivering ties on defendant's railroad. From a point 180 feet from the crossing where he was injured he had a view up the track for 400 yards, and, looking and listening at this point, he did not see or hear any train. Between this point and the crossing, the view of the track was obstructed until within 12 or 16 feet of the crossing. He was familiar with the locality and with the signals given by trains, and he rode towards the crossing, seated on the reach of the wagon, which rattled some, and did not stop to listen again, but relied on the usual signal being given by any train that might approach the crossing. The evidence as to whether the engine whistled for the crossing at the usual point, 500 yards away, which would have given plaintiff time to stop, was conflicting. Held, that plaintiff's failure to stop, and listen for a train, between his starting point and the crossing, was not conclusive evidence of contributory negligence, but the question was for the jury. Judgment, 77 F. 810, 23 C. C. A. 475, affirmed.—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Barker, 19 S. Ct. 879, 172 U. S. 643, 43 L. Ed. 1181.

The issue whether a person attempting to cross railway tracks was struck by a runaway car or an express train is properly submitted to the jury, where there was evidence on the issue from which reasonable men might draw different conclusions. Judgment 20 App. D. C. 135, affirmed.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Landrigan, 24 S. Ct. 137, 191 U. S. 461, 48 L. Ed. 262.

Plaintiff, injured at a railroad crossing by a passenger train not giving the usual warning signals, held not guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law.—(1912) Flannely v. Delaware & H. Co., 32 S. Ct. 783, 225 U. S. 597, 56 L. Ed. 1221, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 154, reversing judgment (1909) Delaware & H. Co. v. Flannely, 172 F. 323, 97 C. C. A. 112.

—351. — Instructions.

Where the jury are told that they must look at all the circumstances in determining whether plaintiff acted with due care; that if he attempted to cross the railroad, or approached so near to it that injury might have resulted, he was under a duty to use such care as was proportionate to the danger; and, generally, that all persons acting under dangerous circumstances and conditions must have due regard to the dangers that surround them, and use a greater degree of care where there is much danger than where danger is but little,—defendant cannot complain that the court did not charge further as to plaintiff's negligence in driving so close to the railroad as to be injured by passing cars.—Rio Grande W. Ry. Co. v. Leak, 163 U. S. 280, 16 S. Ct. 1020, 41 L. Ed. 160.

An instruction that defendant is not liable for injuries to plaintiff caused by a collision of a train with his wagon at a crossing if plaintiff saw the cars coming and knew there was danger of collision, or should have seen and known it in time to escape by leaving his wagon, and if notwithstanding such danger he remained in his wagon in order to save his wagon or horses, was erroneous, as leaving out of view any element of personal danger to the plaintiff by attempting to leave his wagon.—Id.

When the jury are told that, taking into consideration all the circumstances, all that plaintiff did or failed to do, including such observation as he made, so far as the evidence showed it, they must determine whether "he looked out, as he should have done, for the danger of coming trains, or whether he listened," and they are also told that he must have used such care as was proportionate to the danger of injury arising from the crossing of a railroad track, defendant cannot complain of a refusal to charge further as to plaintiff's duty to look out for trains.—Id.

Where no one personally witnessed the crossing of the track by deceased, nor his death while crossing, the presumption is that he stopped, and looked and listened for approaching trains; and hence it is proper to refuse to charge that there could be no recovery if deceased, by looking and listening, could have known of the approach of the car in time to have kept off the track and prevented the accident.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gentry, 163 U. S. 353, 16 S. Ct. 1104, 41 L. Ed. 186.

—353. — Appeal and error.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1217-1219.

A finding by the jury, on conflicting evidence, that plaintiff was not guilty of contributory negligence, will not be disturbed where the court has charged that it was plaintiff's duty to stop a safe distance from the track and look and listen for trains; that if, after crossing the first or second tracks, the plaintiff, by the exercise of great care, could have discovered the approach of the cars on the third track, he was guilty of carelessness in not stopping short of that track; and that, if plaintiff's view was obstructed by standing cars, he was guilty of negligence in not standing up in his carriage, if by so doing he could have seen over them.—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 11 S. Ct. 569, 35 L. Ed. 213.

(G) INJURIES TO PERSONS ON OR NEAR TRACKS.

Injuries to persons on or near street railroad tracks, see Street Railroads, ¶106-117.

¶354. Right to go on or near track.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1220-1234.

¶355. — In general.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1220-1237, 1235.

A person is not ipso facto a trespasser in crossing railroad tracks laid through the streets of a city upon, or substantially upon, the level of the street, although he crosses at any point where it is convenient for him to do so, instead of going to a regular street crossing. Judgment 12 App. D. C. 598, affirmed.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Cumberland, 20 S. Ct. 380, 176 U. S. 232, 44 L. Ed. 447.

¶361. Failure to fence railroad.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1246.

Where an ordinance, in granting a railroad the right of way through the city, requires it to maintain suitable fences, and provides that upon the acceptance by the company of the benefit of the ordinance covenants shall be executed by both parties, embodying its terms, any citizen is entitled to recover damages suffered by him through the neglect of the company to discharge the duties thus imposed.—Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 4 S. Ct. 369, 28 L. Ed. 410.

¶364. Articles projecting, falling or thrown from trains.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1252, 1253.

A railroad company is bound to use reasonable diligence to see that no dangerous acts which may result in injury to persons lawfully on the highways shall be committed by persons who are on its trains whether as passengers or employés.—Fletcher v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 35, 168 U. S. 135, 42 L. Ed. 411.

¶393. Actions for injuries.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1331-1392.

¶400. — Questions for jury.
See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1365-1381.

Where a child playing in a public park strayed upon the railway and was injured, it was a question for the jury whether the absence of a fence, required under a city ordinance, was the cause of the mishap.—Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 4 S. Ct. 369, 28 L. Ed. 410.

The fact of knowledge, by the officers or agents of a railroad company, of the existence of a custom of its employés on returning at night from their work to throw off into the highway pieces of wood or timbers, to be carried to their homes, while not of itself sufficient to charge the company with negligence as matter of law, is yet such proof of negligence as to make it a question for the jury.—Fletcher v. Baltimore & P. R. Co., 18 S. Ct. 35, 168 U. S. 135, 42 L. Ed. 411.

The question whether a steam-railroad track is "approximately even with the adjacent surface" of a street in which it is laid, within the meaning of the act of congress of January 26, 1887, and joint resolution of February 26, 1892, requiring fences on both sides of a track approximately even with the surface, must be submitted to the jury, where the track was not more than 2 feet 2 inches higher than the level of the street. Judgment 12 App. D. C. 598, affirmed.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Cumberland, 20 S. Ct. 380, 176 U. S. 232, 44 L. Ed. 447.

¶401. — Instructions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1382-1390.

The refusal to instruct, as requested by defendant, that, though defendant licensed plaintiff to go with his team in that portion of its yard where he was injured, yet defendant would not be liable for any injury resulting from any condition of the premises known to plaintiff from the ordinary nature of the business carried on there, is not ground for complaint by defendant, if the court charged that defendant was not liable for any defect in the location or in the construction of its tracks or switches, that such location or construction was not alleged as a cause of action, and that it was the jury's duty to consider the location of the tracks, and the whole situation, to determine whether plaintiff or defendant acted prudently and with good care, or whether they acted with negligence.—Rio Grande W. Ry. Co. v. Leak, 163 U. S. 280, 18 S. Ct. 1020, 41 L. Ed. 160.

Co. v. Wynne*, 32 S. Ct. 493, 224 U. S. 354, 56 L. Ed. 799, 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 102, reversing judgment (1909) 119 S. W. 1127, 90 Ark. 538.

(I) FIRES.

Due process of law, see Constitutional Law, ¶302, 303.

Equal protection of laws, see Constitutional Law, ¶246, 248.

¶453. Care required and liability as to fires in general.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. §§ 1657-1660, 1667.

A compress company was in the habit of receiving cotton at its sheds in L., and had a contract with defendant railroad company to transport it to its compress, which was across the river. By reason of defendant's delay to furnish transportation, cotton accumulated in the sheds, and the street adjacent thereto, and was destroyed by fire. Held, that the mere fact of such delay did not make defendant responsible to the owners or insurers of the cotton for its loss.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 139 U. S. 223, 11 S. Ct. 554, 35 L. Ed. 154.

Nor will it be rendered so liable by the mere fact that it was in the habit of issuing through bills of lading in exchange for the receipts of the compress company while the cotton was stored in such sheds, or in the street, where there is no evidence that it assumed possession or control of the cotton before it was put on the cars by the compress company.—Id.

456. Combustibles on railroad property.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1673-1676.

It is negligence for a railroad company to suffer inflammable material to remain on its right of way, whereby fire from sparks can be communicated to the property of adjoining landowners.—Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 16 S. Ct. 1082, 41 L. Ed. 225, affirming judgment 49 F. 807, 1 C. C. A. 441.

458. Contributory negligence of owner of property.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1677-1685.

461. — Precautions against communication of fire.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1682.

An owner who lawfully stores his property on his own premises adjacent to a railway right of way is not held to the exercise of reasonable care to protect it from fire set by negligence of the railway company.—Leroy Fibre Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 415, 232 U. S. 340, 58 L. Ed. 631.

The owner discharges his full duty if he exercises the care of a reasonably prudent man to protect it from the dangers incident to the operation of a railway reasonably conducted.—Id.

467. Property injured or destroyed.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1663.

The mere presence of cotton on right of way without the company's affirmative permission does not relieve it from liability for destruction by a fire caused by its negligence.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rosborough, 35 S. Ct. 117, 235 U. S. 429, 59 L. Ed. 299, affirming judgment 209 F. 205, 126 C. C. A. 299.

469. Contracts for exemption from liability.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1665.

A stipulation in a lease of a strip of land on a railroad right of way for a storage warehouse, by which the railroad company is exempted from any liability for damage by fire from its locomotive engines, even though caused by the negligence of the company or its servants, is not void, as against public policy, where the lease contains no provisions which in any way involve any relation of the railroad company as a common carrier to the lessee or to the public. Judgment 70 F. 201, 17 C. C. A. 62, 30 L. R. A. 193, affirmed.—Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 20 S. Ct. 33, 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. Ed. 84.

Stipulations and exemptions from liability for loss caused by fire, contained in a lease under which the lessee holds possession and occupancy of a storage platform near a railroad, are not binding on one not in privity with such lessee, who, without knowledge of such stipulations, stores his cotton on such platform. Judgment 112 F. 402, 50 C. C. A. 230, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Watson, 23 S. Ct. 681, 190 U. S. 287, 47 L. Ed. 1057.

471. Actions for injuries by fire.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1694-1761.

481. — Admissibility of evidence.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1717-1729.

Evidence that, at or about the time of a fire and of the passing of a locomotive which is claimed to have caused it, other fires were observed at various nearby points along the railroad track, is admissible on the issue of the liability of the railroad company for the value of the property destroyed by such fire, as tending to establish that such fire was caused by the locomotive in question, and as tending to show negligence in its construction or operation. Judgment 112 F. 402, 50 C. C. A. 230, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Watson, 23 S. Ct. 681, 190 U. S. 287, 47 L. Ed. 1057.

Testimony that, a few days after a fire alleged to have been set by a locomotive, witness saw engines emit cinders while passing, held admissible.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rosborough, 35 S. Ct. 117, 235 U. S. 429, 59 L. Ed. 299, affirming judgment 209 F. 205, 126 C. C. A. 299.

484. — Questions for jury.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1740-1746.

No question for the jury as to whether the owner of flax straw stored on his own premises and destroyed by fire set by a locomotive was himself negligent is presented by evidence that the property was inflammable in character and was stored near the railway right of way.—Leroy Fibre Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 415, 232 U. S. 340, 58 L. Ed. 631.

485. — Instructions.

See 41 Cent. Dig. R. R. § 1747-1756.

An instruction that a railroad company was not liable for a loss from a fire set by a passing locomotive, if it used "the most approved spark arrester, at the time in good condition," and the engine was then and there operated with ordinary care and prudence, but that it was so liable if it failed "to use the most approved spark arrester and apparatus connected with the engine as in ordinary use by properly conducted railways to prevent the escape of fire," so far as it could consistently be done in its business, is not open to the objection that it left the jury to consider the original construction of the spark arrester irrespective of its condition at the time of the fire. Judgment 112 F. 402, 50 C. C. A. 230, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Watson, 23 S. Ct. 681, 190 U. S. 287, 47 L. Ed. 1057.

Where a woman is in possession of her natural mental and physical powers, and not terri-

I. NATURE AND GROUNDS OF RECEIVERSHIP.

(A) NATURE AND SUBJECTS OF REMEDY.

- 8. Discretion of court.
 See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 14.

The appointment of a receiver is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the court.—

Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter, 154 U. S. 540, 14 S. Ct. 1158, 17 L. Ed. 604.

- 9. Persons entitled to appointment of receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 15.

A court of equity can appoint receivers for an insolvent corporation, on the application of the company itself, by a petition showing that its property is likely to be seized by different courts, its assets dissipated, and the system disrupted.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 F. 259.

(B) GROUNDS OF APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER.

15. Preservation of property pending litigation.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 24-23.

16. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 24, 23.

A bill alleging, in effect, that one of the plaintiffs was the largest stockholder of several of the corporations which had been combined into the company as afterwards established, and that his coplaintiffs were judgment creditors of one of such roads, with judgments unsatisfied, which bill sets out the precarious condition of all the property of the present company, and the necessity for a receiver in the interest of all the creditors of all the combined companies, to prevent a levy upon the property, with prayer for judicial ascertainment and marshaling of the debts of all the corporations, and for proper payments and adjustments to and with creditors, is sufficient to enable a court of equity to administer the property and marshal the debts, including those due the mortgage bondholders, making proper parties, and giving all an opportunity of being heard before adjudging the merits.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

II. APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE.

Conflicting jurisdiction of state and federal courts, see Courts, 492, 500.

Effect of supersedeas or stay, see Appeal and Error, 489.

Federal jurisdiction to review proceedings for appointment, see Courts, 394(10).

In proceedings to wind up corporation, see Corporations, 621.

Mandamus to review appointment, see Mandamus, 38.

Review of decisions, see Appeal and Error, 87.

32. Form and requisites of application for appointment in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 45-50, 64.

Where a judgment creditor of a corporation, in a suit in behalf of himself alone to have a receiver appointed to protect his interests, sets forth the precarious condition of the concern and the necessity for a receiver, but does not sue out execution, deeming it useless, and no objection is made for such failure, the appointment of a receiver is within the power of the court.—Sage v. Memphis & L. R. Co., 125 U. S. 361, 8 S. Ct. 887, 31 L. Ed. 604.

41. Conditions on granting application.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 63, 69.

42. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 63.

On foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, where the bill was not filed for four years after default in payment of interest, it was competent for the court, as a condition to the appointment of a receiver, to order that, after payment of the operating expenses, the receiver should discharge the debts for labor and supplies incurred within the six months preceding the appointment.—Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S.

591, 2 S. Ct. 295, 27 L. Ed. 488; Same v. Fitzgerald, 107 U. S. 595, 2 S. Ct. 298, 27 L. Ed. 490.

When a court appoints a receiver of railroad property, it has no right to make the receivership conditional on the payment of unsecured claims against the company, which have no equitable priority, in preference to the mortgage debt.—Kneeland v. American Loan & Trust Co., 136 U. S. 89, 10 S. Ct. 950, 34 L. Ed. 379.

55. Effect of irregular or invalid appointment.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 24, 400.

A judgment for the sale of property by a receiver appointed in an earlier action is not invalid for want of jurisdiction over the property because there was no formal order extending the receivership to the suit in which such judgment was rendered, where all the parties to the first suit were likewise parties to the second one, and both the court and the parties treated the causes as in fact consolidated, and the receivership as extended. Decree 76 P. 990, 9 Ariz. 57, affirmed.—Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrigation Co. v. Gila Water Co., 26 S. Ct. 615, 202 U. S. 270, 50 L. Ed. 1023, rehearing denied 27 S. Ct. 495, 205 U. S. 279, 51 L. Ed. 801.

57. Estoppel and waiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 96.

Where defendant corporation, in a bill filed by creditors alleging its insolvency and praying the appointment of a receiver, suffers the bill to be taken pro confesso, it is too late, nine months after the receiver has taken possession of the property, and undertaken to carry on the business for the benefit of creditors, to object that plaintiffs had an adequate remedy at law.—Brown, Bonnell & Co. v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 184 U. S. 530, 10 S. Ct. 604, 33 L. Ed. 1021.

59. Collateral attack on appointment.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 103, 104.

Even if a bill which seeks, as one of its objects, the appointment of a receiver, is imperfect, so as to require amendments to make it a complete bill in all respects, when the court adjudges the bill sufficient, and makes the appointment, that appointment cannot be questioned, nor the possession of the receiver disturbed, by another court.—Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 15 S. Ct. 570, 39 L. Ed. 660.

62. Removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 109-111.

The removal of a receiver is discretionary.—Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter, 154 U. S. 540, 14 S. Ct. 1158, 17 L. Ed. 604.

III. TITLE TO AND POSSESSION OF PROPERTY.

69. Title or right acquired by receiver in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 124, 125.

A court of equity, in appointing a receiver, cannot displace vested liens, and must require the property to be held for the benefit of all persons concerned as their interest may appear.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 Fed. 259.

71. Nature and right of possession of receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 127, 128.

A receiver appointed by a state court, who, after taking possession, has been dispossessed by a receiver subsequently appointed by a federal court, has sufficient interest in the property to give him a standing in the federal court to petition for the restoration of the property to him, and also to maintain an appeal from an order denying his petition.—Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 15 S. Ct. 570, 39 L. Ed. 660.

Where the court, after appointing a receiver at the instance of a lien claimant, accepts a bond as security, in lieu of the property itself, and thereupon discharges the receiver, and orders him to return the property to its owners, the property thus surrendered becomes free for the action of any other court of competent jurisdiction; and if such a court then appoints a receiver, who takes possession, he cannot be displaced by the subsequent action of the former court in setting aside its order for acceptance of security in lieu of the property, and making a new order for taking possession by a receiver.—Id.

673. Protection of possession of receiver in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 131.

On bill by a receiver to enjoin the enforcement of a tax alleged to be invalid, the power of the federal court to issue a temporary injunction is not affected by the fact that the state law denies any relief against an illegal tax, except payment under protest and suit to recover the amount.—Ex parte Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 13 S. Ct. 785, 37 L. Ed. 689; Ex parte Riser, 149 U. S. 191, 13 S. Ct. 793, 37 L. Ed. 698.

Act March 3, 1887, § 3 (24 Stat. 554, c. 373 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582]), permits a receiver to be sued without leave of the court that appointed him, but provides that "such suit shall be subject to the general equity jurisdiction of the court, so far as the same shall be necessary to the ends of justice." Section 2 provides that the receiver shall manage the property "according to the valid laws of the state in which such property shall be situated." Held, that neither section restricts the power of the circuit court to preserve property in the custody of the law from external attack.—Ex parte Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 13 S. Ct. 785, 37 L. Ed. 689.

674. Interference with possession of receiver, and punishment thereof.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 132-135; 10 Cent. Dig. Contempt, § 55.

The rule that property in the hands of a receiver is in custodia legis, and that interference with such possession without leave of the court is a contempt, is as applicable in the case of seizure thereof to enforce payment of taxes due the state as in any other case.—Ex parte Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 13 S. Ct. 785, 37 L. Ed. 689.

675. Set-offs and counterclaims against receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 136.

Where a receiver collected rent from an occupant, who was by the final decree adjudged to be the owner of one half the property, the rent so collected did not become a part of the estate, but remained the property of the real owner; and he may set off the same against a claim for rent due from him upon the other half of the property.—Grant v. Buckner, 19 S. Ct. 163, 172 U. S. 232, 43 L. Ed. 430.

IV. MANAGEMENT AND DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY.

By receivers in proceedings to foreclose mortgage, see Mortgages, 673. Conflicting jurisdiction of state court and bankruptcy court, see Bankruptcy, 620.

(A) ADMINISTRATION IN GENERAL.

690. Assumption and performance of obligations.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 164-166.

A cotton seed oil company agreed to purchase certain railway rolling stock, and lease the same to a railway company at a rent equal to 8 per cent. on the cost thereof, the railway company agreeing to purchase the property on or before a specified date, for cash, with a proviso that, in case of inability to purchase, it should turn the property over to the oil company, in good order and condition, at the expiration of the contract. The oil company was also to retain freights due the road for carriage of cotton seed, and credit them, first, upon the rent, and, second, upon the purchase price. Under this contract the rolling stock was used by the road, and a large sum over and above the specified rent accrued to the credit of the road for carriage of freight; but the railway company never exercised its privilege of purchasing the rolling stock. The railway company passed into the hands of a receiver on mortgage foreclosure, and the oil company sought to compel the receiver to carry freight for it until the amount paid by it for the rolling stock should be discharged. Held, that the appointment of the receiver was conclusive evidence of the inability of the railway company to purchase the property; that the receiver did not become liable upon the agreement of the railway company, simply by virtue of his appointment; that on taking possession of the property he was entitled to a reasonable time to elect whether he would adopt the contract, or would insist upon the inability of the company to pay, and return the property as stipulated; and that he should not be required to carry out the contract.—Sunflower Oil Co. v. Wilson, 142 U. S. 313, 12 S. Ct. 235, 35 L. Ed. 1025.

691. Acceptance of lease.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 167, 168.

The owners of property, who have leased it to a corporation which goes into the hands of a receiver, are entitled to a reasonable rental, irrespective of the actual use made of it by the receiver.—Kneeland v. American Loan & Trust Co., 136 U. S. 89, 10 S. Ct. 950, 34 L. Ed. 379.

Where a receiver appointed to take charge of railroad property takes possession of a leased line, and operates it for a reasonable time, keeping separate accounts, diverting none of its earnings to the benefit of the general system or its creditors, and with an express recognition on the part of the court appointing him of the right of the lessor to resume possession on making proper application therefor, he does not become the assignee of the lease, or adopt it, so as to render the agreed rentals a lien on the earnings of the general system, superior to that of the mortgages thereof.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 F. 259.

695. Contracts of receiver in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 173-175.

Authority to a receiver to make contracts subject to the supervision of the court, and to pay designated expenses and charges, does not make a lease by him, involving large expenditure and extending beyond the receivership, a charge against the trust property after termination of the receivership, without approval or confirmation of the court.—Chicago Deposit Vault Co. v. McNulta, 153 U. S. 554, 14 S. Ct. 915, 38 L. Ed. 819.

Two receivers were appointed for a railroad while a certain building was in course of construction for the company. Some time after their appointment, the receivers, by a joint letter, notified the contractors to stop work, stating that they would later furnish designs and directions for completing the building. New plans and specifications, approved by the court, were furnished by the receivers' architect to the contractors, with a notice that the court had ordered certain parts of the work completed; but no formal order for the completion of the work was ever entered by the court. The contractors then made a bid, which was verbally accepted by the receiver in active charge of that part of the road, and they then signed the plans and specifications, with the architect, and proceeded with the work in reliance thereon, though the same were never signed by the receivers. Afterwards the court, with full knowledge of the facts, and upon evidence adduced before it, declared the validity of the claim made by the contractors for the work so done, and referred it to a master to ascertain the amount "justly and equitably due as the true value of the work done and the materials furnished." Held, that the master was justified, notwithstanding the wording of this order, in finding that the work done under the new specifications was performed under a binding contract for the sum specified, and that he therefore properly excluded evidence as to the actual value of the labor and materials.—Girard Life Insurance, Annuity & Trust Co. v. Cooper, 162 U. S. 529, 16 S. Ct. 879, 40 L. Ed. 1062, affirming decree 51 F. 332, 2 C. C. A. 245.

◀99. Expenditures.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 133-136.

A counsel fee of $500, for services rendered the receiver during a term of seven months, where the facts of the case show that the need of legal advice was frequent and important, is not excessive.—Cake v. Mohun, 17 S. Ct. 100, 164 U. S. 311, 41 L. Ed. 447.

◀106. Reimbursement and indemnity to receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 137.

If money used was that of the receiver individually, yet if such receiver was authorized to make the expenditures for the protection, reparation, or safety of the trust estate, and if he advanced his own money for that purpose, he may have a lien on the trust estate for the money so advanced.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

(B) SUPERVISION AND INSTRUCTIONS OF COURT.

[No paragraphs or references in this Digest. But see 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 196-203.]

(C) RECEIVER'S CERTIFICATES.

◀125. Validity in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 212-214.

Defendant contracted to sell three lots to a railroad company, over which the company built its road. Complainant held a subsequent mortgage on the entire road and all its property. Defendant brought suit in the state court to enforce his lien for the unpaid purchase price, making complainant a party defendant. That court ordered the lots sold to satisfy defendant's claim, and, if the proceeds should be insufficient, then that the entire road be sold. From that decree complainant did not appeal, but afterwards brought this suit in the United States court, to foreclose its mortgage, and a receiver of the road was appointed. An order was made reciting the proceedings in the state court, and that a sale of the entire road under those proceedings would not be for the best interests of all concerned, and directing the receiver to issue to defendant a preferred certificate of indebtedness for the amount of his judgment and interest. This was done, and defendant, in compliance with the conditions of the order, entered satisfaction of his judgment in the state court. Thereafter, the railroad having in the meantime been sold by the receiver to a party represented by complainant, the court directed the clerk to pay to defendant, out of the proceeds, the full amount of his certificate. Held, that complainant was not in a condition to complain of this order. The previous order, under which the receiver's certificate was issued to defendant, and his rights under the decree of the state court were abandoned, was clearly the result of an agreement or arrangement to which complainant was a party; and, as defendant cannot be restored to his rights under the decree of the state court, it would be inequitable to permit complainant to question the validity of the certificate.—Central Trust Co. v. Seasongood, 130 U. S. 482, 9 S. Ct. 575, 32 L. Ed. 985.

◀127. Rights and remedies of holders in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 216-218.

The purchaser of receiver's certificates, lawfully issued for a necessary and authorized purpose in the administration of the property, is under no obligation to see to the application of the money by the receiver as directed by the court.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

◀128. Lien and priorities.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 205, 210, 219-222.

Where, in proceedings by the second mortgagee of a railroad to foreclose its mortgage, to which the first mortgagee is made a party, a receiver is appointed, who from time to time is authorized to borrow money, on receiver's certificates for the purchase of needed rolling stock, make needed repairs, and build an addition of six miles of railroad, first mortgage bondholders, who, more than a year after the appointment of the receiver, file a cross-bill claiming that the rolling stock so purchased and the additional six miles of road shall be subject to the lien of the first mortgage, under a provision therein covering after-acquired property, and who, pending the proceedings, make no specific objections to such repeated expenditures and obligations incurred by the receiver under orders of the court, will not be heard upon final decree to insist that the lien of the receiver's certificates issued for expenditures shall be subordinate to the first mortgage.—Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co., 106 U. S. 286, 1 S. Ct. 140, 27 L. Ed. 117.

Three railroad companies were consolidated, and bonds of the new company secured by mortgage on all its property issued to redeem the bonds and mortgages of the sectional roads. Upon default in payment of these bonds a bill was filed in the state court to foreclose the mortgage. The suit was subsequently removed to the federal court, and consolidated with other suits to foreclose mortgages of the sectional roads. Held, upon final adjustments of liens, that certificates issued by the receiver for necessary repairs were entitled to priority, notwithstanding the suit in the state court in which the receiver was appointed was not brought by the bondholders or their trustee.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

A receiver's certificate, issued to borrow money to discharge tax liens on the property of the insolvent, is entitled to priority or preference among claims against the insolvent.—Id.

The F. & S. line, forming an integral portion of the line of a railroad company, was constructed under a contract by which the stock of the company, representing the F. & S. line, was delivered to the contractors in payment for their work. This stock was about to be attached by subcontractors, and, in order to prevent it from passing to hostile parties, the railroad company gave its own notes to the subcontractors in payment of their claims. This stock was pledged for the payment of the notes, and on default of payment, when the stock was about to be sold, the court, on petition of its receiver theretofore appointed for the railroad company directed the issue of receiver's certificates for the subcontractor's claims, on condition of the release of the pledged stock, which certificates were to be a first lien on the whole line. The first mortgage bondholders, by their trustees, were parties to this proceeding. Afterwards, on foreclosure of the mortgages, these certificates were directed to be first paid out of the proceeds of sale. Held, that the bondholders, who had merely an equitable lien on the F. & S. line, having failed to appeal from this decree, and having purchased the road under it, are estopped to deny the priority of the receiver's certificates. —Kneeland v. Luce, 141 U. S. 491, 12 S. Ct. 32, 35 L. Ed. 830.

129. Payment.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 222.

Where certificates were issued for debts contracted by the court, when it had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject-matter, to persons who, in good faith, invested their money for the benefit of the property in the possession of the court, the certificates should be paid according to their tenor, as authorized by order of court; and a discount, allowed the purchaser by such order, is to be presumed as having induced the purchasers to rely upon the promise of payment of the full face value, when they would not in the purchase have trusted the receiver or the fund.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 933.

(D) SALE AND CONVEYANCE OR REDELIVERY OF PROPERTY.

132. Authority and duty of receiver to sell in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 223.

A sale of real property, without special leave of court, by the trustee in a private deed of trust, while such property was in his possession as receiver in a case to which he was a party, and which had at the time been removed to the supreme court of the United States by appeal with supersedeas, conferred no title on the beneficiary in the deed of trust, for whose benefit the purchase was made, and who was also a party to the suit, as against a party who by cross-bill dismissed by the decree appealed from was seeking to have such deed set aside as void as to her. Decree, 16 App. D. C. 530, reversed.—Hitz v. Jenks, 22 S. Ct. 598, 185 U. S. 155, 46 L. Ed. 851.

No authority was conferred upon a trustee in a private deed of trust to sell the property while in his possession as receiver after an appeal from a decree dissolving an injunction restraining any sale by the trustee and dismissing a cross-bill to have such deed set aside had been perfected and a supersedeas bond executed and approved, by the provision of such decree appointing the trustee receiver with power, "until a sale shall be made under the said deed of trust," to take and hold possession of the property for certain designated purposes, where neither such receiver nor the beneficiary in the trust deed by the pleadings in the cause asked for any such direction or authority from the court.—Id.

143. Liabilities of purchasers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 252.

Where a purchaser of mortgaged property in the hands of a receiver, in order to obtain possession, and to avoid paying any part of the purchase money into court, has executed an undertaking to pay the receiver such sums as should be found due him for compensation and for indebtedness incurred by him as receiver, he cannot object to a finding of the court that he is personally liable for such indebtedness of the receiver.—Cake v. Mohun, 17 S. Ct. 100, 164 U. S. 311, 41 L. Ed. 447.

146. Reconveyance and redelivery of property on termination of receivership.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 253-254.

An order of a federal court discharging a railroad receiver and restoring the property to the company without foreclosure, and requiring that all claims against the receiver shall be presented by intervention to the court before a given date, in default whereof they shall be barred, does not, in view of the provision making receivers liable to suit in any competent court without leave of the appointing court (Judiciary Act 1887-88, § 3 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582]), prevent the subsequent recovery of a judgment in personam for personal injuries in a state court, or the enforcement thereof by the same court.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Johnson, 151 U. S. 81, 14 S. Ct. 250, 38 L. Ed. 81.

V. ALLOWANCE AND PAYMENT OF CLAIMS.

149. Presentation and filing of claims.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 261-266.

When, in a suit against a business corporation, a receiver is appointed, and due notice given to all creditors to appear and prove their claims, a creditor who fails to appear until after final decree and order of sale, and gives no excuse for such failure, is concluded, and there is no ground for contending that the decree as to him is merely interlocutory.—Leadville Coal Co. v. McCreery, 141 U. S. 475, 12 S. Ct. 28, 35 L. Ed. 824, affirming decree (C. C.) Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Brown, Bonnell & Co., 44 F. 539.

A claim of a lien for, and payment by the receiver of railroad property of, delinquent taxes on such property, sold under decree of foreclosure, is in time, where the intervening petition making such claim was filed, and the final adjudication establishing such lien made, within the time expressly named in the decree of foreclosure for the presentment of any claims for allowance, although such petition was filed after the confirmation of the sale, but while the property was still in the possession of the receiver, and the latter had been discharged before such final adjudication. Decree, 62 P. 987, 10 N. M. 416; affirmed.—United States Trust Co. v. Territory of New Mexico, 22 S. Ct. 172, 183 U. S. 535, 46 L. Ed. 315.

151. Allowance or disallowance.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 269-271.

The right of a receiver to appeal from the allowance of a claim against the property does not necessarily fail when the receivership is terminated to the extent of surrendering the property, as it is a common practice for courts to turn over the property before the final settlement of all claims against it, and to continue the powers of the receiver in relation thereto; and where the court, after turning over the property, allows an appeal by the receiver from an order allowing a claim against it, the presumption is that the receiver is still authorized to prosecute the appeal. Judgment, 80 F. 909, 26 C. C. A. 279, modified.—Bosworth v. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis, 19 S. Ct. 625, 174 U. S. 182, 43 L. Ed. 941.

§154. Expenses of receivership.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 279-282; 13 Cent. Dig. Costs, § 341.

Where there are no surplus earnings, an attorney is not entitled to compensation out of the corpus of the property for advice to parties interested in the road, who advance money to keep the road going, and to prevent foreclosure proceedings, as such advice does not benefit the security holders, but is a disadvantage to them, since by it these subsequent advances were given equally with the prior mortgages.—Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 11 S. Ct. 405, 34 L. Ed. 1023.

Where there are no surplus earnings, an attorney who recovers for a railroad, in the hands of a receiver, engines formerly leased by it to another road, and rent for their use, is entitled to a reasonable compensation, to be paid out of the corpus of the property, as the benefit of the recovery inured to the security holders.—Id.

Costs of receivership should not be assessed against complainant on reversal of order appointing the receiver, where the receivership has gone on pending the appeal, but such costs should be paid out of the fund realized in court. Judgment (C. C. A. 1907) State of Texas v. Palmer, 158 F. 705, 85 C. C. A. 603, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 316, modified.—Palmer v. State of Texas, 29 S. Ct. 230, 212 U. S. 118, 53 L. Ed. 435.

§155. Expenses of continuance of business by receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 283-292.

Where a mortgagor held a leased road under a lease providing for rent and payment for depreciation, and permitting the lessor to use part of such road on payment of a monthly rental to the lessee, and the receiver of the lessee ran it as part of the mortgaged road, and permitted the rent to fall into arrear, though the monthly rental was collected from the lessee, it was proper to allow, as a prior lien to the mortgage, claims for operating supplies and materials for the road while so run.—Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co., 106 U. S. 286, 1 S. Ct. 140, 27 L. Ed. 117.

Where the mortgagor held a leased road under a written lease providing for rent and payment for depreciation, and for the use of a part of the road by the lessor, and for the payment therefor of a monthly rental to the lessee, and the successive receivers took possession of the leased road, and ran it as a continuation of the mortgaged road, and paid the rent for part of the time, the rest being permitted to fall into arrears, though the monthly rental from the lessor to the lessee for the use of part of the road was collected, it was proper, on final decree, to allow the lessor, as a claim preferred to the first mortgage, a sum for the use of the road, based on the actual value of its use by the receivers.—Id.

A court of equity may authorize the receiver of a railroad to build additional pieces of road and a bridge, which will increase the value of the road, and to purchase rolling stock needed for the operation of the road, and may make the cost of such improvements a lien prior to that of the mortgages on the road.—Id.

The renewal at maturity of commercial paper given for a debt owing by a receiver of a railroad company for current expenses is not a waiver of a claim on the fund in his hands, on which it is a charge.—Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776, 4 S. Ct. 675, 28 L. Ed. 596.

Notes for money borrowed by the receiver without authority first procured from the court, although the money was intended to be used for the purposes of the receivership, cannot be allowed priority in payment over bonds, for the reason that the borrowing of the money for which the notes were given was not sanctioned in advance by the court.—Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., 117 U. S. 434, 6 S. Ct. 809, 29 L. Ed. 963.

When the current income of a railroad in the hands of a receiver is diverted to the improvement of the property by the receiver, and debts for operating expenses are not paid, provision should be made, in foreclosing a mortgage on the road, to pay such debts out of the proceeds of the sale of the property.—Id.

Where the mortgaged rolling stock of a railroad is in peril of seizure under a judgment, and the railroad, alleging the judgment to be wrongful, obtains an injunction against such seizure, one who becomes surety on the injunction bond, the injunction having been dissolved and judgment recovered against him, has an equity to be paid out of the property of the railroad which is sold to the mortgagees at the foreclosure sale, especially when they have purchased expressly subject to intervening claims that may be declared paramount, where the receiver has used earnings to increase the corpus of the estate, and where the surety has shown an intention to look to the company's property as well as its personal security by taking a chattel mortgage on certain locomotives.—Union Trust Co. v. Morrison, 125 U. S. 591, 8 S. Ct. 1004, 31 L. Ed. 825.

A railroad, after mortgaging its realty, purchased rolling stock on the installment plan; the contract being in the form of a lease. A receiver was appointed at the suit of a judgment creditor, and took possession of the rolling stock. Subsequently suit to foreclose the mortgage was begun, and another receiver was appointed, who surrendered the rolling stock to the vendor. Held, that the vendor was entitled to a prior lien for compensation for the use of the rolling stock by the receiver in the mortgage foreclosure, since the receiver took possession of the rolling stock at the instance of the trustee of the mortgage, and, until the surrender, used it for the benefit of the realty.—Kneeland v. American Loan & Trust Co., 136 U. S. 89, 10 S. Ct. 950, 34 L. Ed. 379.

Where the receiver of a railroad took possession of a leased line, and operated it for a short time, keeping separate accounts, diverting none of its earnings to the benefit of the main line or its creditors, and with an express recognition by the court of the lessor's right to possession on proper application, the rental was not an expense originating in the course of the receiver's administration, and entitled, as such, to priority over the mortgage lien.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 F. 259.

Certain cars were, by agreement between the receiver and the car company, stored on the side tracks of the railroad pending a replevin suit wherein title to them was involved, the receiver being granted the right to use them for local traffic. Thereafter the receiver made, on the contract by which other cars were leased to him, an indorsement showing an agreement to hold the replevied cars on the same terms, and pay the same rental therefor. He testified that this new agreement was never consummated, but that it was understood that it was not to take effect until the replevin suit was determined, and he had applied to the court for leave to make such a contract. Upon this point there was a conflict in the evidence, but it was shown that he used the cars before either of these events occurred. Held, that the claim for rent of these cars was properly allowed in priority to that of the mortgages.—Thomas v. Western Car Co., 149 U. S. 95, 13 S. Ct. 824, 37 L. Ed. 663.

affirming decree (C. C.) Same v. Peoria & R. I. R. Co., 36 F. 808.

The owner of cars which had been rented to the receiver of a railroad company is entitled to allowances of the amount expended by it in putting the cars in good running order after they were surrendered to it, the receiver having contracted to do so, and failed to do it; but it cannot claim the cost of practically rebuilding such cars, especially where they were shown not to have been in good running order when delivered to the receiver.—Id.

In foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, it is within the discretion of the court, however, to decree priority over the mortgage to a claim for rental of cars accruing during the receivership until the surrender of the cars.—Id.

The superior right of one who furnished necessary supplies for the operation of a railroad to be paid from surplus earnings in the hands of a receiver does not depend on whether income was diverted by the company prior to the receivership. Decree, Clark v. Central R. & Banking Co. of Georgia, 66 F. 803, 14 C. C. A. 112, affirmed.—Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central R. & Banking Co. of Georgia, 18 S. Ct. 657, 170 U. S. 355, 42 L. Ed. 1068.

One who furnishes supplies necessary to the operation of a railroad as a continuing business has the same right to payment from surplus earnings in the hands of a receiver subsequently appointed whether such supplies were sold to the company owning the property or to a lessee, and in the latter case it is immaterial whether the lease is valid or not. Decree Clark v. Central Railroad & Banking Co. of Georgia, 66 F. 803, 14 C. C. A. 112, affirmed.—Virginia & A. Coal Co. v. Central Railroad & Banking Co. of Georgia, 18 S. Ct. 657, 170 U. S. 355, 42 L. Ed. 1068.

156. Priority of unsecured debts, incurred before receivership, to pre-existing liens.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 293-311.

157. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 293-300.

A railroad company, after executing a mortgage on its realty, purchased from interveners rolling stock, to be paid for in installments, the contract being in the form of a lease, and the title to remain in the vendor until it was fully paid for. A receiver was appointed in a suit by a judgment creditor of the company, and took possession of all its property, including the rolling stock. The mortgagees were made parties to the suit, but neither objected nor consented to the appointment of the receiver. Afterwards suit was brought to foreclose the mortgage, and at the mortgagee's request another receiver was appointed. Before the decree of sale the rolling stock was delivered to the interveners. Held that, since the first receiver was not appointed at the instance of the mortgagees, the interveners were not entitled to have their claim for rental of the rolling stock during such receivership paid, in preference to the mortgage debt, out of the proceeds of the foreclosure sale of the realty.—Kneeland v. American Loan & Trust Co., 136 U. S. 89, 10 S. Ct. 950, 34 L. Ed. 379.

In railroad foreclosure proceedings, accompanied by a receivership, it is the duty of the court at times to give to certain unsecured claims a priority over the mortgage debt. Decree 84 F. 539, 28 C. C. A. 202, reversed.—Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co., 19 S. Ct. 827, 174 U. S. 674, 43 L. Ed. 1130.

The right to assert a claim against the property of a railroad company, or its income, in preference to mortgage debts, is not at all affected by the sale of the property held by receivers, or by the fact of its transfer to a purchaser, where the rights of such claimant are expressly reserved by the court in the decree of sale and the order confirming the sale. Decree 76 F. 492, 22 C. C. A. 289, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 20 S. Ct. 347, 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. Ed. 458.

158. — Purpose for which debt contracted.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 301-306.

Where a railroad in the hands of a receiver has no surplus earnings, an attorney is not entitled to compensation for services rendered the railroad company prior to its going into the hands of the receiver, which services in no way added to the security of the mortgagees nor enhanced the value of the property.—Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 11 S. Ct. 405, 34 L. Ed. 1023.

The term "wages of employes," decreed to be paid by the receiver in foreclosure proceedings out of the income of a railroad, does not include the services of counsel employed for special purposes.—Id.

A claim for supplies furnished for operating a railroad before the appointment of a receiver may be ordered paid out of the fund arising from the sale of the road, in preference to the mortgage bondholders.—Kneeland v. Bass Foundry & Machine Works, 140 U. S. 592, 11 S. Ct. 857, 35 L. Ed. 543.

In proceedings to foreclose a railroad mortgage, it is error to decree priority over the mortgage debt to a claim for rental of cars, accruing during the six months preceding the appointment of a receiver in the foreclosure proceedings, such cars not being supplies, so as to entitle the person furnishing them to priority of payment; and this is especially true where the car company had expressly reserved the right to terminate the lease upon the railroad's failure to pay promptly the interest on its bonds and other liabilities, and the officers of the car company were also officers of the railroad company, and were hence chargeable with notice of the financial condition of the latter.—Thomas v. Western Car Co., 149 U. S. 95, 13 S. Ct. 824, 37 L. Ed. 663, reversing decree (C. C.) Same v. Peoria & R. I. Ry. Co., 36 F. 808.

The equities, in respect to railroad income, of a creditor furnishing that which protects and preserves the mortgage security and materially increases its value, are none the less, because the original debt was evidenced by notes of the railroad company, taken for its convenience and renewed for its accommodation. Decree 76 F. 492, 22 C. C. A. 289, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 20 S. Ct. 347, 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. Ed. 458.

A debt for rails bought by a railroad company shortly before the appointment of receivers, and needed to operate the road properly and for the safety of persons and property transported, is as much a current debt in the ordinary course of the business of the railroad company, which has a preference over a mortgage debt in respect to the current income of the road, as if it were a debt incurred by the receivers under order of the court.—Id.

The use of a part of the rails, bought by a railroad company to keep its lines in safe condition, to repair other roads under its control and in its possession, whose preservation in proper condition is vital to its successful operation, will not preclude a right to a preference in payment of that claim over the mortgage debt out of the current income of the railroad.—Id.

Demanding and receiving collateral security to a large amount from a railroad company for a debt on account of rails to be used in repairing the road is a circumstance tending to show that the seller did not regard itself as entitled to an equitable claim upon net earnings in preference to mortgage creditors, who relied on the general credit of the railroad company. Decree 79 F. 202, 24 C. C. A. 487, affirmed.—Lackawanna Iron & Coal Co. v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 20 S. Ct. 363, 176 U. S. 298, 44 L. Ed. 475.

A claim for the purchase price of rails imperatively required to make a railroad safe for the transportation of persons and property will not be deemed a current debt, which may be paid out of the current receipts of a railroad company in preference to a mortgage debt, if the repairs to the road needed to put it in proper condition are so extensive as to amount to a reconstruction, or the construction of a new road.—Id.

A claim for the ties necessary to the preservation of a railroad, furnished within six months of the appointment of a receiver, is not, in the absence of any special circumstances other than the receiver's use of those ties on hand at the time of his appointment, in the maintenance of the railroad as a going concern, entitled to preference over a lien expressly created by a mortgage of the railroad property, recorded before the contract under which the ties were furnished was made. Decree 124 F. 721, 59 C. C. A. 637, affirmed.—Gregg v. Metropolitan Trust Co., 25 S. Ct. 415, 197 U. S. 183, 49 L. Ed. 717.

◀159. — Diversion of income.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 307, 308.

On foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, where, upon final settlement after sale, it appeared that, although the gross income, which before had been insufficient to pay operating expenses, had, under the receivership, yielded a considerable surplus, debts for labor and supplies, incurred within six months preceding the appointment of the receiver, and which had been ordered to be paid after discharge of the operating expenses, had not been paid from income, but that it had been expended in additional grounds, rolling stock, repairs, and improvements, it was proper for the court to order their payment from the proceeds of sale prior to the payment of the bonds.—Union Trust Co. v. Souther, 107 U. S. 591, 2 S. Ct. 295, 27 L. Ed. 488; Same v. Fitzgerald, 107 U. S. 595, 2 S. Ct. 298, 27 L. Ed. 490.

Where, on foreclosure of a mortgage on a railroad, the current earnings are applied, by order of the court, to the improvement of the property, being thus used for the benefit of the mortgage creditors, before current expenses are paid, the mortgage security is chargeable in equity with the restoration of the fund thus improperly diverted and applied to the use of the mortgage creditors.—Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776, 4 S. Ct. 675, 28 L. Ed. 596.

A receiver was appointed of a railroad formed of consolidated lines, some being leased. At the time of the appointment the preferred indebtedness of the consolidated road was so great that the net earnings of the system during the receivership were only a small fraction thereof. Held, that no equity could arise for the payment of the rental, on the theory of restoring diverted earnings.—Quincy, M. & P. R. Co. v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 82, 12 S. Ct. 787, 36 L. Ed. 632, affirming decree (C. C.) Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 34 F. 259.

A diversion of railroad income from the payment of a current debt, such as the price of rails needed to keep the road in proper repair, by using the money for the benefit of mortgage creditors in paying for permanent improvements, rentals, and interest on the mortgage debt, entitles those who have claims for such current debts to have their claim of priority over the mortgage creditors in the distribution or application of the net earnings of the company enforced against the mortgaged property or its proceeds. Decree 76 F. 492, 22 C. C. A. 289, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 20 S. Ct. 347, 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. Ed. 458.

◀160. — Time of incurring debt.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 309, 310.

A court of equity, in the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage, may properly direct the receiver to pay indebtedness, not exceeding $10,000, to connecting lines for materials and repairs, and for ticket and freight balances, even though part was incurred more than 90 days before the receiver's appointment.—Miltenberger v. Logansport, C. & S. W. R. Co., 106 U. S. 286, 1 S. Ct. 140, 27 L. Ed. 117.

Under the power of a court of equity, in proceedings to foreclose a railroad mortgage, to allow expenditures by the receiver for the preservation and management of the property, which shall be prior to the mortgage, he was properly permitted to pay the arrears of operating expenses for 90 days prior to his appointment.—Id.

A claim accruing back of the six months immediately preceding the appointment of a railroad receiver may, under the circumstances of particular cases, be accorded the same priority in the distribution of earnings that belongs to like claims arising within that period. In this case such priority was given to claims preceding the receiver's appointment by from 9 to 11 months. Decree 76 F. 492, 22 C. C. A. 289, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Carnegie Steel Co., 20 S. Ct. 347, 176 U. S. 257, 44 L. Ed. 458.

◀162. Priorities of liens and incumbrances.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 277.

The holders of overdue bonds are not entitled to the net earnings in the hands of a receiver, appointed in a suit by a judgment creditor for the protection of his interests, when they have made no demand therefor under the provisions of their mortgages, even though in his bill such creditor seeks relief subject to their rights.—Sage v. Memphis & L. R. Co., 125 U. S. 361, 8 S. Ct. 887, 31 L. Ed. 694.

◀163. Payment.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 312-316.

Where judgment is recovered against a receiver, interest should be allowed on a dividend previously declared by him from the date thereof.—Armstrong v. American Exch. Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 433, 10 S. Ct. 450, 33 L. Ed. 747.

Where the owner of cars, which had been rented to a railroad company and subsequently had been used by the receiver of the road, applied to the court for priority over the mortgage for its claim for rent of cars during the six months immediately prior to the receivership and during the receivership, for the cost of putting the cars in good running order after surrender by the receiver, and for the cost of practically rebuilding some of such cars, of which the first and last items were not allowed, the owner of the cars is not entitled to interest on the items which were allowed during the period that they were in litigation, as the mortgagees are not to be subjected to a penalty for resisting claims which the court finally reduces or disallows.—Thomas v. Western Car Co., 149 U. S. 95, 13 S. Ct. 824, 37 L. Ed. 663.

Interest during receivership should be allowed on a claim for supplies sold to a railway company in Virginia on 30 days' credit, which, under the local law, has priority over bonded indebtedness, where, before the credit period expired, the company on its own application was placed in the hands of a receiver, whose appointment continued under a bill for foreclosure; the property being returned to defendant on a readjustment plan.—American Iron & Steel Mfg. Co. v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 34 S. Ct. 502, 233 U. S. 261, 53 L. Ed. 949.

VI. ACTIONS.

Conflicting jurisdiction of state courts and federal courts, see Courts, §501.
Jurisdiction of federal courts, see Courts, §295.

§167. Rights of action by receivers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 320.

Receivers in possession of street railway property under a decree of a federal Circuit Court may, with the authority of that court, maintain an ancillary bill to remove a cloud cast upon the title to such property by the claim of the municipality that the rights and franchises of the street railway companies would expire on a specified date, and by its asserted purpose to resume possession of the streets on that date, and to resort to all legal means to protect its rights against what it deemed the unfounded claims of the railway companies as to the duration of their franchises. Decree Govin v. City of Chicago, 132 F. 848, reversed.—Blair v. City of Chicago, 26 S. Ct. 427, 201 U. S. 400, 50 L. Ed. 801.

§169. Defenses against receivers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 323.

Where an insurance company issues to a receiver a policy on his interest as receiver, with full knowledge of the capacity in which he acts, it is no defense to an action on the policy that the receiver had no special instructions to expend money in his hands for the payment of premiums.—Thompson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 287, 10 S. Ct. 1019, 34 L. Ed. 408.

§171. Set-off and counterclaim.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 325.

A counterclaim or set-off comes within the spirit of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. 436) c. 866, § 3, granting the right to sue a receiver of a federal court without leave of the court appointing him, and gives a defendant sued by such a receiver in a state court the right to plead a set-off against him in that court.—Grant v. Buckner, 19 S. Ct. 163, 172 U. S. 232, 43 L. Ed. 430.

§174. Leave of court to sue receiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 333-342.

Act Cong. March 3, 1887, § 3, 24 Stat. 552, c. 373 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582], providing that every receiver appointed by a federal court may be sued "in respect of any act or transaction of his in carrying on the business" without leave of the court appointing him, applies to such a receiver in respect of an act of his predecessor in the office.—McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. 327, 12 S. Ct. 11, 35 L. Ed. 796.

Act Cong. March 3, 1887, § 3, 24 Stat. 554, c. 373 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582], authorizing suits against receivers without leave of the appointing court, was applicable to causes of action then existing, and to pending receiverships; and the proviso in section 6 that "this act shall not affect the jurisdiction over or disposition of" any pending suit was merely intended to limit the effect of the repealing clause contained in that section.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 12 S. Ct. 905, 36 L. Ed. 829.

Act Cong. March 3, 1887, § 3, 24 Stat. 554, c. 373 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582], authorizing suits against receivers of railroads without special leave of court, was intended to place such receivers upon the same plane with the railroad companies, as respects their liability to be sued for acts done while operating railroads.—Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 16 S. Ct. 1082, 41 L. Ed. 225, affirming judgment 49 F. 807, 1 C. C. A. 441.

§180. Process and appearance.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 353.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. 554, c. 373 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 582], authorizing suits to be brought against receivers of railroads without special leave of court, receivers of a railroad are properly sued in Indian Territory, for injuries inflicted therein, on process served by delivery of a copy thereof to one of their station agents in charge of a railway station therein, since the Arkansas laws, made applicable to Indian Territory, make such service good on a railway company or a foreign corporation, and the act of congress was designed to place receivers on the same plane as railway companies as respects the manner of service of process.—Eddy v. Lafayette, 163 U. S. 456, 16 S. Ct. 1082, 41 L. Ed. 225, affirming judgment 49 F. 807, 1 C. C. A. 441.

§188. Appeal and error.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 373.

A receiver, while in a sense a representative of the court, is also a custodian of property, and as such has obligations to the parties owning it or interested in it, and certain rights and powers with reference thereto, to be exercised independently of the court. He may defend the estate in his possession, both in the court appointing him and by appeal, (1) against all claims antagonistic to the rights of both parties to the suit, and (2) against claims antagonistic to the rights of either party, subject to the limitation that he may not, in such defense, question any order or decree of the court as between the parties, or any order or decree resting in the discretion of the court; as for instance, a condition imposed on the receivership by the order under which he derives his powers, requiring him to pay a certain class of claims. He may also appeal from any order or decree which affects his personal rights, providing it is not one resting in the discretion of the court; as an order directing him in the administration of the estate, or for his removal. Judgment 80 F. 969, 26 C. C. A. 279, modified.—Bosworth v. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis, 19 S. Ct. 625, 174 U. S. 182, 43 L. Ed. 941.

VII. ACCOUNTING AND COMPENSATION.

§192. Charges.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 333.

A man and wife conveyed the wife's separate real estate to secure notes held by a bank for the husband's debt. By consent of the husband, the receiver of the bank, appointed by the comptroller of the currency, collected the rents and paid them into the United States treasury, subject to the order of the comptroller. Subsequently the same person was appointed receiver of the property, in an action by the wife for an accounting of the rents and profits. Held, that the rents and profits accruing prior to the last appointment could not be accounted for in that action.—Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 8 S. Ct. 143, 31 L. Ed. 156.

§195. Compensation for services.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 337-338.

◀196. — Right in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 387, 389-391.

On the question of the amount to be allowed as compensation to the receivers and trustees of a railroad on foreclosure of a mortgage thereon, for services and expenses in managing, the fact that one of them had a very liberal salary as manager and superintendent, with his expenses paid, may be considered.—Williams v. Morgan, 111 U. S. 684, 4 S. Ct. 638, 28 L. Ed. 559.

◀198. — Amount.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 392-396.

The compensation to be allowed a receiver for his own services and those of his counsel is largely discretionary with the court from which he derives his appointment, and its action will not be disturbed, unless the discretion is abused.—Stuart v. Boulware, 133 U. S. 78, 10 S. Ct. 242, 33 L. Ed. 568.

On the question of the compensation allowed the receiver of the furniture, etc., of an hotel, he being authorized by the court to continue the business pending the suit, it appeared that while the receiver employed a manager, and gave but little personal attention to the business, the position was attended with much anxiety, the hotel being kept open at a loss, and the receiver required to raise money each month to meet the deficiency, and that he retained the position against his will, at request of the parties in interest. Held, that an allowance of 10 per cent. on the receipts, and 5 per cent. on the disbursements, of the business, amounting to nearly $2,800 for the term of seven months, having been allowed by the auditor and approved by the trial and appellate courts, would not be disturbed as excessive, though, had the question been an original one, the compensation would have been fixed at a much smaller amount.—Cake v. Mohun, 17 S. Ct. 100, 164 U. S. 311, 41 L. Ed. 447.

◀200. Liabilities of parties, property, or funds for compensation and expenses.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 397-399, 401.

The trustee in a mortgage of the property of a canal and irrigation company, who brings a suit for foreclosure and sale, and obtains the appointment of a receiver to take charge of and manage the property pendente lite, does not, by reason of such action, become personally liable for money borrowed, expenses incurred, and certificates issued by the receiver under orders of the court, in keeping the corporation on its feet as a going concern, which the proceeds of the sale proved insufficient to pay. Decree (1906) 145 F. 820, 76 C. C. A. 396, reversed.—Atlantic Trust Co. v. Chapman, 28 S. Ct. 406, 208 U. S. 360, 52 L. Ed. 528, 13 Ann. Cas. 1155.

◀203. Settlement of account.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 404-406.

A receiver is a principal party to the collateral questions raised by exceptions to his account, and his motion to dismiss an appeal from the decree thereon, on the ground that he is not a party to the suit, must be overruled.—Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 150, 3 S. Ct. 136, 27 L. Ed. 888.

VIII. FOREIGN AND ANCILLARY RECEIVERSHIPS.

◀210. Actions by or against foreign receivers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, §§ 417-420.

A judgment against the ancillary receiver in New York of a New Jersey corporation will bind only such portion of the assets as have come into his hands as such, and cannot bind the assets in the hands of the receiver in another state, where the administration was originally commenced.—Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 11 S. Ct. 773, 35 L. Ed. 464, affirming decree 43 N. J. Eq. (16 Stew.) 211, 10 A. 385, 3 Am. St. Rep. 305.

The receiver of a corporation, with no other title to its assets and property than that derived from his appointment in a suit brought to adjudicate and enforce liens and subject the property to the payment of the claims of creditors, cannot be empowered by the court of his appointment to sue in a foreign jurisdiction, either in his own name or in that of the corporation, to realize its assets. Decree, 128 F. 321, 63 C. C. A. 51, affirmed, and judgment (C. C.) Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Harris' Estate, 111 F. 38, reversed.—Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Harris, 25 S. Ct. 770, 198 U. S. 561, 49 L. Ed. 1163.

A chancery receiver of a domestic corporation, upon whom, as a quasi assignee and representative of the creditors, is conferred by Gen. Laws Minn. 1899, p. 315, c. 272, the authority to maintain an action to enforce the liability of stockholders, may sue in a foreign jurisdiction.—Bernheimer v. Converse, 27 S. Ct. 755, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. Ed. 1163.

◀211. Accounting.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Receivers, § 421.

A judgment against an ancillary receiver after his discharge is not binding, though the court did not know of his discharge.—Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 11 S. Ct. 773, 35 L. Ed. 464, affirming decree 43 N. J. Eq. (16 Stew.) 211, 10 A. 385, 3 Am. St. Rep. 305.

United States*, 19 S. Ct. 574, 174 U. S. 47, 43 L. Ed. 890.

An indictment under Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 479, c. 144, § 2), for receiving stolen property of the United States, sufficiently alleges that the United States owned the property when it was received by defendant, where it charges that the property was owned by the United States when it was stolen, and that only two days thereafter defendant "the [property] aforesaid, so as aforesaid feloniously stolen, * * * feloniously did receive, * * * then and there knowing the said [property] to have been theretofore feloniously stolen," etc.—Id.

2. Statutory provisions.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Records, § 27.

A state possesses the power to remedy the confusion and uncertainty as to registered titles to land arising from the loss or destruction of public records by flood, fire, or earthquake.—American Land Co. v. Zeiss, 31 S. Ct. 200, 219 U. S. 47, 55 L. Ed. 82.

Entry of possessory title in the registry in Porto Rico is a judicial certificate that the person making the entry is entitled to possession without prejudice to third parties showing a better right, and confers only a prima facie legitimacy on his possession.—Ochoa v. Hernandez y Morales, 33 S. Ct. 1033, 230 U. S. 139, 57 L. Ed. 1427.

14. Access to records or files.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Records, § 13-15.

A corporation engaged in examining titles and certifying thereto may, so far as necessary to assist in the examination of a title for which it is employed, inspect and examine the indices and cross indices of the judgment records prepared by the clerks of United States courts, which, by Act Aug. 1, 1888, c. 729, § 2, 25 Stat.

Decree 110 F. 828, 49 C. C. A. 208, affirmed.—Bell v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co., 23 S. Ct. 569, 189 U. S. 131, 47 L. Ed. 741.

22. Mutilation or destruction.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Records, § 45-47.

The description of the accused in a criminal complaint charging falsification of a public document, as "disbursing officer of the Bureau of Coast Guard and Transportation of the United States Government of the Philippine Islands," is sufficient as against demurrer, although technically there may be no such body politic as "the United States government of the Philippine Islands," especially in view of the provisions of the Philippine Islands Criminal Code of Procedure, which require a public offense to be described in ordinary and concise language, so as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended, and the court to pronounce judgment according to the right, and declare that defects in matter of form are not material where they do not tend to prejudice substantial rights.—Weems v. United States, 30 S. Ct. 544, 217 U. S. 349, 54 L. Ed. 793, 19 Ann. Cas. 705.

A referee's finding that a statement of account showed a credit to a contractor of an item not included in the contract, for extra work, without any express finding that it was liquidated, except by such statement, cannot be construed to find that this item was liquidated, for the purpose of affecting the conclusiveness of a settlement of the account on a partial payment thereof, merely because one finding was that the statement of account was "a correct, truthful, and undisputed account" of all dealings between the parties, except as to two other items named, especially where the referee explicitly declares that no other account of the transactions was ever had or stated between the parties. Judgment, 92 F. 968, 35 C. C. A. 120, reversed.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Clark, 20 S. Ct. 924, 178 U. S. 353, 44 L. Ed. 1099.

A contract with the federal government for imprinting revenue stamps will not be reformed by incorporating clauses in a prior communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to contractors then engaged in that work, to the effect that, in awarding contracts, no application would be considered from those not then so engaged, and that applications would only be received up to a specified time, in answer to which an application for a renewal "in accordance with your official communication" was made by letter, especially where the contractor's letter, naturally interpreted, would confine the changes in the contract to the Commissioner's requirements concerning the salaries of the supervising government employees and the rate of compensation for the work, and there is no evidence that the contract was not drawn just as the government intended, although, when executing the contract, the contractor was assured that the only changes from the former contract were those contained in the Commissioner's letter. Decree, Milliken Imprinting Co. v. United States, 40 Ct. Cl. 81, reversed.—United States v. Milliken Imprinting Co., 26 S. Ct. 572, 202 U. S. 168, 50 L. Ed. 980.

22. Ratification.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Ref. of Inst. § 81.

By an agreement in writing for an exchange of real estate complainant was to take defendant's property "subject to" a mortgage, payment of which, however, he had positively refused to assume. Subsequently he accepted a deed, by which he was made to undertake the payment of it, at a time when he was too unwell to carefully examine it. Held, that he was justified in assuming that the deed would be drawn in accordance with the agreement, and that he was entitled to a reformation, notwithstanding he had paid two installments of interest.—Elliott v. Sackett, 108 U. S. 132, 2 S. Ct. 375, 27 L. Ed. 678.

24. Conditions precedent.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Ref. of Inst. § 82.

Decree, Adams v. Reed, 40 P. 720, 11 Utah, 480, affirmed.—Adams v. Henderson, 18 S. Ct. 179, 168 U. S. 573, 42 L. Ed. 584.

Held that, on the mere testimony of claimant, the court could not, against this evidence, reform the contract so as to introduce the board rates on the ground of mistake.—*Shipman v. The fact that one, when notified that a railroad company, with whom he had contracted for exchange of land, would not complete the contract, wrote, asking when they would remove their tracks from his land, and settle for its use, to which the company answered requesting time for decision, without ever replying further, does not show a release of the company from the contract.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 305, 9 S. Ct. 286, 32 L. Ed. 873, affirming decree (C. C.) McAlpine v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 23 F. 168.

The rule by which courts of equity will set aside a release because of inadequacy of consideration, where the party executing the same, by reason of youth or advanced age, was incapacitated to act judiciously, or where, by reason of the existence of fiduciary relations, he acted with unquestioning confidence, should not, it seems, be extended to dealings between two corporations the affairs of which are managed by a president and board of directors, and which consequently stand upon an equal footing in respect to their capacity to act.—*Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. - ⇒13. — Sufficiency in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Release, §§ 21-27, 29.

Certain drafts were paid by the financial agents of a railroad corporation, in consideration of the release of the balance of the contract in payment of which the drafts were drawn, the corporation being then insolvent, and the agents having no funds in their hands out of which they could have paid the drafts. Held, that the voluntary payment by the financial agents of the drafts out of their own means, and not out of the means of the defendant railroad corporation, was a sufficient consideration to support the release.—Indianapolis Rolling-Mill Co. v. St. Louis, Ft. S. & W. R. Co., 120 U. S. 256, 7 S. Ct. 542, 30 L. Ed. 639.

16. Mistake.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Release, § 21.

In an action for personal injuries, on an issue as to the validity of a release executed by plaintiff shortly after the accident, an instruction that plaintiff was not bound thereby if his mind was in such a condition that he could not comprehend what he was doing, or if defendant understood that they were making a settlement in full, while plaintiff understood that it included only medical expenses and loss of time, and plaintiff did not read the release because prostrated by the accident, is not erroneous.—Union Pac. 25. General rules of construction.

Judgment, 41 Ct. Cl. 164, reversed.—United States v. William Cramp

See 42 Cent. Dig. Release, § 22.

Impaired mental powers and partial loss of sight, resulting from injuries received by a railway employé in a collision, are not covered by a release which, after enumerating the injuries sustained as bruises of his body, right leg, and right arm, and a scalp wound, recites that "to maintain amicable and pleasant relations and avoid all controversy in respect to said matter," and for a monetary consideration, such employé releases the railway company from all claims of any kind and character whatsoever arising from the injuries and damages sustained in the manner or upon the occasion aforesaid, and the results of those injuries. Judgment, 128 F. 23, 62 C. C. A. 531, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Dashiell, 25 S. Ct. 737, 198 U. S. 521, 49 L. Ed. 1150.

The Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico must be regarded as a legal personality, with capacity to sue and to take and hold property, in view of the law and history of the Roman Empire, of Spain, and Porto Rico down to the time of the cession to the United States, and of the recognition accorded to it as an ecclesiastical body by the treaty of Paris December 10, 1898, art. 8, and by the law of nations.—Municipality of Ponce v. Roman Catholic Apostolic Church in Porto Rico, 28 S. Ct. 737, 210 U. S. 296, 52 L. Ed. 1068.

The various laws of Porto Rico relating to the formation and regulation of business corporations have no application to the Roman Catholic Church of Porto Rico.—Id.

§4. Incorporation and organization.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Relig. Soc. §§ 3, 5-14.

A properly recorded certificate of incorporation of a church in Washington, D. C., stated that the signers had been duly elected trustees, without giving the date of their election, or the term of office, or supporting the same by affidavit, as required by Act Cong. May 5, 1870, providing for the creation of corporations in the District of Columbia by general law; but the church had executed deeds and releases of land as a corporation, and under its corporate name had, sued and recovered judgment against defendant in a former action without objection being made to its capacity to sue. Held, that it was a corporation de facto if not de jure, and could sue to recover damages for a nuisance.—Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 137 U. S. 568, 11 S. Ct. 185, 34 L. Ed. 784.

§6. Public aid.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Relig. Soc. § 17.

The appropriation by congress of money to a hospital, as compensation for the treatment and cure of poor patients under a contract, does not constitute an appropriation to a religious society, in violation of the constitutional provision against laws respecting an establishment of religion, where the hospital is incorporated under an act of congress, and its property is acquired in its own name and for its own purposes, and its business managed in its own way, subject to no visitation, supervision, or control by any ecclesiastical authority whatever, although the members of the corporation may be also members of a church and of a monastic order or sisterhood of that church, conducting the hospital under its auspices.—Bradfield v. Roberts, 20 S. Ct. 121, 175 U. S. 291, 44 L. Ed. 163.

§7. Membership in general.

Under the general corporation law of Illinois (Act April 18, 1872), which provides, among other things, for the incorporation of "any church, congregation, or society formed for the purpose of religious worship," and restricts the amount of land that may be held by "any corporation that may be formed for religious purposes under this act, or any law of this state for the incorporation of religious societies," to 10 acres, only corporations formed for the purpose of religious worship, and not benevolent or missionary societies, are intended to be restricted in their ownership of real estate.—Gilmer v. Stone, 120 U. S. 586, 7 S. Ct. 689, 30 L. Ed. 734.

The title of the Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico to temples erected and dedicated to religious uses is not affected by the fact that some of the funds for building or repairing the churches were public funds, appropriated for that purpose by the municipality of Ponce, where such appropriations were made without reservation or restriction.—Municipality of Ponce v. Roman Catholic Apostolic Church in Porto Rico, 28 S. Ct. 737, 210 U. S. 296, 52 L. Ed. 1068.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Relig. Soc. §§ 111-129.

A special permit granted by the abbot of a monastic brotherhood to enable a member to retain for charitable purposes the proceeds of his literary labors did not release him from the agreement in the constitution of the brotherhood that the gains of the members shall belong to the order.—Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey v. Steinhauser, 34 S. Ct. 932, 234 U. S. 640, 58 L. Ed. 1512, 52 L. R. A. (N. S.) 459, affirming decree (C. C.) 179 F. 137, and reversing decree Steinhauser v. Order of St. Benedict of New Jersey, 194 F. 289, 114 C. C. A. 249.

The agreement in the constitution of a monastic brotherhood that gains of members shall belong to the order is not opposed to public policy, where the constitution expressly recognizes the privilege of withdrawal and the order is entitled to all the personalty left by a deceased member, including that derived from his literary labors.—Id.

Religious teaching and training in the doctrines represented by the mission are required to satisfy the condition on which such mission was transferred by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to the Hawaiian government, viz., that the government should continue the same as an institution for the cultivation of sound literature and solid science, and should teach no religious tenet or doctrine contrary to those theretofore inculcated by the mission, as set forth in a confession of faith, where the government knew, when accepting the transfer of the mission to its "fostering care and patronage," that the mission was founded to convert the Hawaiians to Christianity, and to educate young men to be Christian ministers, and for nearly 30 years recognized its obligation under the agreement to afford religious instruction in those doctrines.—Lowrey v. Territory of Hawaii, 30 S. Ct. 209, 215 U. S. 534, 54 L. Ed. 325.

The right to receive a reconveyance of the school, or of the stipulated sum in lieu of such reconveyance, in case of the breach of the condition on which a Protestant mission was transferred by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to the Hawaiian government, viz., that the government should continue the same as an institution for the cultivation of sound literature and solid science, and should teach no religious tenet or doctrine contrary to those theretofore inculcated by the mission, as set forth in a confession of faith, passed under a deed from such board to certain named trustees, which purports to convey, for the purposes of the trust, every interest in the property which the grantor had, reserving to the grantor the right to direct any change or alteration in the disposition of the income and proceeds of the trust estate, or to remove any trustee, or fill any vacancy.—Id.

United States, 136 U. S. 1, 10 S. Ct. 792, 34 L. Ed. 481, affirming United States v. Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 5 Utah, 361, 15 P. 473.

2. Constitutional and statutory provisions.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 2, 3.

The act of March 3, 1875, was a thorough revision of the statutes relating to removal of causes, and operated a repeal by implication of Rev. St. § 639, subd. 2, allowing an alien defendant to have a removal.—King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395, 1 S. Ct. 312, 27 L. Ed. 60.

Act March 3, 1875, to determine the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, and regulate the removal of causes from state courts, does not repeal or supersede all other statutes on those subjects, but only such as are in conflict therewith. Rev. St. § 639, providing for removals on the ground of local prejudice, is therefore not repealed by the act of 1875.—Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 5 S. Ct. 377, 28 L. Ed. 927; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Bates, 119 U. S. 464, 7 S. Ct. 285, 30 L. Ed. 436.

Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, providing for the removal of causes on the ground of local prejudice by either plaintiff or defendant, was repealed by the removal act of 1887 (Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507]), which declares that "all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed," since section 2 of the latter act, which covers practically the same ground as that subdivision, provides for removal by the defendant only, and contains other provisions inconsistent therewith.—Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 207, 35 L. Ed. 1080, reversing judgment (C. C.) 32 F. 417, and (C. C.) 35 F. 230.

3. Restrictions by federal or state statutes.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 4, 5.

A proceeding in a state court against an administrator, to obtain payment of a debt due by the decedent in his lifetime, is removable into a court of the United States when the creditor and the administrator are citizens of different states, notwithstanding the state statutes may enact that such claims can only be established in a probate court of the state, or by appeal from that court to some other state court.—Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 5 S. Ct. 377, 28 L. Ed. 927.

A state statute prohibiting foreign corporations from doing business in the state without a permit is rendered void by a provision requiring such corporations to surrender their right to remove certain suits into the federal courts as a condition precedent to the issue of such permit, when it is apparent that the entire purpose of the statute is to deprive such companies of that right.—Barron v. Burnside, 121 U. S. 186, 7 S. Ct. 931, 30 L. Ed. 915.

The statute of a state giving the state court exclusive jurisdiction of the settlement of claims against the estates of deceased persons cannot affect the right to remove to the federal court, on the ground of diverse citizenship, a suit commenced in the state court to establish a claim against an administrator.—Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S. 96, 11 S. Ct. 468, 35 L. Ed. 88, affirming judgment (C. C.) 31 F. 670.

Gen. Laws Tex. 1887, p. 116, requires a foreign corporation, as a condition precedent to doing business in the state, to file in the secretary of state's office a resolution of its directors authorizing service of process on its agents in the state, and requesting the issuance of a permit to do business therein, with a stipulation that such permit shall be subject to "each of the provisions of this act." One of these provisions is that the permit shall be void if the corporation removes any case from a state to a federal court on the ground of nonresidence or local prejudice. Held, that the act is void as requiring a surrender of rights secured by the constitution and laws of the United States, and the filing of such a request by a foreign corporation does not change its residence so as to give jurisdiction to a federal court in a district of the state where plaintiff does not reside.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 13 S. Ct. 44, 36 L. Ed. 942.

Right of foreign interstate railway company doing business in Oklahoma to remove to a federal court a suit against it in an Oklahoma court by a citizen and resident of that state is unconstitutionally abridged by Act Okl. May 26, 1908 (Laws 1908, c. 16, art. 4), providing for revocation of right to do business within the state of every corporation who shall assert in any court of that state a domicile within another state or foreign country.—Harrison v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 34 S. Ct. 333, 232 U. S. 318, 58 L. Ed. 621, L. R. A. 1915F, 1187, affirming decree (C. C.) St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Cross, 171 F. 480.

The removal from state court to federal court under federal Employers' Liability Act April 22, 1908, as amended by Act April 5, 1910, is prohibited by such amendatory act and Judicial Code, § 28.—Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Leslie, 35 S. Ct. 844, 238 U. S. 599, 59 L. Ed. 1478, reversing judgment 167 S. W. 83, 112 Ark. 305.

St. Wis. 1915, § 1770f, providing for revocation of license of any foreign corporation to do business in the state when it applies to remove to a federal court any suit brought against it, held unconstitutional.—Donald v. Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., 36 S. Ct. 563, 241

U. S. 329, 60 L. Ed. 1027, affirming decree (D. C.) Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Frear, 216 F. 199.

4. Suits at law or in equity.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 11-20.

Under the Kansas statutes abolishing the writ of quo warranto and the proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto, and substituting for them a remedy by action, the proceeding by action is a suit of a civil nature, within the statutes for removal of causes to the United States courts.—Ames v. State of Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 4 S. Ct. 437, 28 L. Ed. 482.

A proceeding under the Code of Civil Procedure of Colorado, to ascertain the compensation for land taken for public use, is a suit at law, removable to a United States court, notwithstanding such compensation may be ascertained by commissioners appointed by the court, unless at the hearing defendant demands a jury.—Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 8 S. Ct. 460, 31 L. Ed. 415.

A proceeding by a railroad company for the condemnation of land is an action at law, and removable to the federal court.—Id.

Const. W. Va. 1880, art. 8, § 24, after declaring that county courts shall have jurisdiction in certain matters, provides that they may exercise such other powers, and perform such other duties, "not of a judicial nature," as may be prescribed by law. Act W. Va. Feb. 23, 1883, provides that a person aggrieved by the assessment of his real estate may after notice to the prosecuting attorney who shall protect the state's interest, apply to the county court for redress; and if, on hearing the evidence, said court shall be of opinion that there is error in the assessment, it shall correct it. Held, that the power of the county courts under this act is ministerial, and the proceeding to correct assessments is not a suit, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 639, giving the right of removal to the federal courts of suits between citizens of different states.—Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 10 S. Ct. 651, 34 L. Ed. 196.

6. Actions to restrain proceedings in state court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 23.

Where the main object of a suit in a state court is to restrain the sale of land under execution issued on a judgment of the state court, such case is not removable to a circuit court of the United States on the ground of diversity of citizenship of the parties before the injunction has been granted, as Rev. St. § 720, prohibits the issuance of an injunction from the United States courts to stay proceedings in the state courts, except in cases where an injunction may be authorized by a law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy, and a case so removed should be remanded to the state court.—Lawrence v. Morgan's Louisiana & T. R. & S. S. Co., 121 U. S. 634, 7 S. Ct. 1013, 30 L. Ed. 1018.

7. Actions to review or set aside judgment of state court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 24.

When the proper jurisdictional amount is involved, and the citizenship of the parties is diverse, a federal circuit court has power to grant relief against judgments obtained in a state court by means of fraud; and, under such circumstances, a suit brought in a state court to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment obtained therein by fraud is removable to the federal circuit court.—Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 12 S. Ct. 62, 35 L. Ed. 870, reversing judgment Calhoun v. McKnight, 39 La. Ann. 325, 1 So. 612.

11. Original jurisdiction of United States court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 29-31; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

A suit brought by a state in one of its own courts against a corporation amenable to its process, to try the right of a corporation to exercise corporate powers within the territorial limits of the state, if presenting a case arising under the laws of the United States, may be removed to a United States circuit court, under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, as the statute makes no exception of suits to which a state is a party, notwithstanding the constitutional grant to the supreme court of original jurisdiction in cases in which a state shall be a party.—Ames v. State of Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 4 S. Ct. 437, 28 L. Ed. 482.

The jurisdiction of the circuit courts on removal, under Act 1887-88, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], is limited to such suits as might have been originally brought in those courts by the plaintiff, under the first section.—Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Davidson, 157 U. S. 201, 15 S. Ct. 563, 39 L. Ed. 672.

The party who has wrongfully procured a removal from the local Porto Rican court to the federal District Court of a case within the original jurisdiction conferred upon the latter court by Act March 2, 1901, c. 812, § 3, 31 Stat. 953, cannot be heard, after judgment against him, to assert that the federal court had no jurisdiction, because of the irregularity of the removal, although, by Act April 12, 1900, c. 191, § 34, 31 Stat. 84, it is provided that the laws of the United States relating to the removal of causes shall govern as between the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico and the courts of Porto Rico.—Garrozi v. Dastas, 27 S. Ct. 224, 204 U. S. 64, 51 L. Ed. 869.

12. Restrictions as to district in which suit might have been brought.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 32, 33.

A suit which, by reason of the nonresidence of both parties, could not have been brought in the federal Circuit Court in the first instance, cannot be removed to that court from a state court, under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552, and Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508], on the ground of diverse citizenship, at least, where the plaintiff resists such removal, even if the consent of both parties could confer jurisdiction.—Ex parte Wisner, 27 S. Ct. 150, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 264.

13. Conflicting jurisdiction of state and United States courts.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 34.

The effect upon the general proceedings for widening the streets of a city, in case the circuit court should decide that said city could not widen streets in the grounds of a railroad corporation, or that the valuation of property of the corporation was too small, or assessments for benefits against it too large, furnishes no good reason to deny the corporation its right to remove such causes.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 115 U. S. 1, 5 S. Ct. 1113, 29 L. Ed. 319, reversing judgment (C. C.) Myers v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 16 F. 292, 3 McCrary, 578.

14. Court to which cause may be removed.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 35.

Under the removal act, which provides that suits shall be removed into the circuit court of the district where such suits are pending, the district meant is that in which the suit is pending at the time of the removal, without regard to the place where it originated.—Hess

v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 5 S. Ct. 377, 28 L. Ed. 927.

—15. Condition of cause.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 25.

Where, in an action by a state in its own courts to recover certain penalties imposed on foreign insurance companies for doing business without complying with the state laws, the right of recovery depends on the question of mixed law and fact, whether service of summons has been made on a person who was at the time an agent of the company within the state on whom process might legally be served, so as to bind the company and bring it within the jurisdiction of the court, there is no question dependent on a construction of the constitution or any law of the United States, and therefore no cause for removal, since until the question of jurisdiction is decided there is no "suit brought," within the terms of the act of congress authorizing such removals.—Germania Ins. Co. v. State of Wisconsin, 119 U. S. 473, 7 S. Ct. 260, 30 L. Ed. 461; People's Ins. Co. v. Same, 119 U. S. 477, 7 S. Ct. 262, 30 L. Ed. 462.

A petition for the removal of a cause from a state court to a federal circuit court is not too late, although defendant may be in default in the state court for failure to answer in time, if such petition is filed as soon as the cause becomes a removable one.—Remington v. Central Pac. R. Co., 25 S. Ct. 577, 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. Ed. 959.

—17. Waiver of right.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 10; 13 Cent. Dig. Courts, § 150.

If a party has good ground to remove a suit from a state to a federal court, he must not experiment on his case in the state court, and, upon an adverse decision, then transfer to the federal court.—Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 142, 13 S. Ct. 576, 37 L. Ed. 399.

Defendant is not estopped to insist upon its right to remove a cause from a state court to a federal circuit court because, on the day after the right of removal was made to appear, its motion to stay proceedings pending an appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside the service of summons was successfully argued in the state court.—Remington v. Central Pac. R. Co., 25 S. Ct. 577, 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. Ed. 959.

The right of a federal corporation when sued in a state court, to remove the cause to a federal Circuit Court, as being one arising under the federal laws, is lost by bringing into the suit a cause of action against another corporation, with which plaintiff has no concern, and recovering judgment therein. Judgment (1907) 102 S. W. 105, 100 Tex. 556, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Eastin & Knox, 29 S. Ct. 564, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. Ed. 946.

II. ORIGIN, NATURE, AND SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSY.

—18. Cases arising under Constitution of United States.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 24.

In a suit in a Missouri court against an Illinois corporation, defendant urged that the contract sued on was ultra vires under its charter. To this plaintiff pleaded as an estoppel a former judgment of the Missouri court in another case between the same parties involving the same issue. Held, that no case was made for removal on the ground that "full faith and credit" were not given to the public acts of Illinois by the Missouri court, and that, if the judgment of that court was erroneous, it could be reviewed on writ of error, but could not be collaterally attacked in the federal courts.—Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 108 U. S. 18, 1 S. Ct. 614, 617, 27 L. Ed. 636.

Where, in an action of trespass against a tax gatherer in Virginia for levying upon the plaintiff's property after a tender by him of coupons issued under Act Va. March 28, 1879, which made them receivable in payment of taxes, the defendant in his rejoinder justifies under Act Va. Jan. 20, 1882, forbidding collectors to receive such coupons, a demurrer to this rejoinder raises an issue necessarily involving the constitutionality of the statute of 1882, and the federal court has jurisdiction of the case.—Smith v. Greenhow, 109 U. S. 669, 3 S. Ct. 421, 27 L. Ed. 1080.

In an action by stockholders of a corporation to set aside a lease executed by it as inconsistent with its charter, illegal and void, no federal question is involved, within the meaning of the removal act.—Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. Mills, 113 U. S. 249, 5 S. Ct. 456, 28 L. Ed. 949, affirming judgment (C. C.) Mills v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey, 20 F. 449.

A proceeding under Act Va. Jan. 14, 1882, as amended by Act March 12, 1884, for the "identification and verification" of coupons tendered in payment of taxes, debts, and demands due the state, is not a suit of civil nature arising under the constitution or laws of the United States, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1875.—Stewart v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 117 U. S. 612, 6 S. Ct. 922, 29 L. Ed. 1006.

Where a state begins a suit in its own courts to recover taxes levied under its laws on the property of a railroad corporation created by its power, and the corporation sets up the defense that the state had no power to tax the franchises of the corporation derived from the acts of congress, and that the statute under which the taxes were levied violated article 14 of the amendments of the constitution of the United States, in that it does not allow the deduction of mortgage indebtedness from the valuation of railroad property while such deduction is allowed in the case of other property, such suit is removable to the federal courts, and the right to remove does not depend on the validity of the claim set up.—Southern Pac. R. Co. v. State of California, 118 U. S. 109, 6 S. Ct. 993, 30 L. Ed. 103.

The question whether a party to proceedings in a state court continued such after a certain judgment in his favor, so that the estate represented by him as administrator became bound by proceedings subsequent to the judgment, is not dependent for solution on any construction of the constitution or laws of the United States, so as to give the right of removal to the federal court.—Gibbs v. Crandall, 120 U. S. 105, 7 S. Ct. 497, 30 L. Ed. 590.

Code Iowa 1873, § 1543, provides that any building, etc., where intoxicating liquors are manufactured, sold, or given away, contrary to law, shall be a nuisance, and may, along with the vessels and contents, fixtures, etc., be abated by "an action in equity." The person proceeded against is also made liable to fine and imprisonment. Defendant, in a proceeding under this statute, removed the case to the federal court on the grounds that, inasmuch as the supreme court of the state had declared the law to be valid, he was virtually deprived of his right to a trial by jury, and that he had at a large expense established the place sought to be declared a nuisance prior to the passage of the act, and that it was only fit for a saloon and brewery. Held, that no federal question was involved, and the case should be remanded to the state court. (Divided court.)—Schmidt v. Cobb, 119 U. S. 286, 7 S. Ct. 1373, 30 L. Ed. 321.

A suit brought in the state court to enjoin the threatened importation of armed men into a county where a strike existed, on the ground that this would amount to a public nuisance and would endanger the health, morals, peace, and good order of the community, is not removable to a United States circuit court, under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552, as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508], as one arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, since, even assuming that the bill shows upon its face that the relief sought would be inconsistent with the power to regulate commerce, or with regulations established by congress, or with the fourteenth amendment, it only demonstrates that the bill cannot be maintained, and not that the cause of action arose under the constitution or laws of the United States.—State of Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 22 S. Ct. 47, 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. Ed. 144.

Allegations, in the petition for the removal to a federal Circuit Court of a suit against an interstate express company, that the defendant was subject to the federal laws to regulate commerce, and, under those laws, had a defense to the cause of action, will not justify removal on the ground that the cause is one arising under the federal Constitution and laws, where the cause of action itself is not based upon the interstate commerce act or any other federal law.—In re Winn, 29 S. Ct. 515, 213 U. S. 458, 53 L. Ed. 873.

§19. Cases arising under laws of United States.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 37-46, 48, 53, 53.

In a suit between citizens of the same state, the bill alleged that defendants fraudulently excluded complainant from an inspection of their books of account, and refused to pay him royalties due under his contract with them, but made no issue as to construction of the claims of his patents, or of their infringement. Held not a case arising under the patent laws of the United States, and not removable.—Albright v. Teas, 106 U. S. 613, 1 S. Ct. 550, 27 L. Ed. 295.

A suit brought by the attorney general of a state to test the validity of an alleged wrongful and unlawful consolidation of railroad companies, which rests only on authority conferred for the purpose by acts of congress, presents a case arising under the laws of the United States, within the statutes for the removal of causes to the United States courts.—Ames v. State of Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 4 S. Ct. 437, 28 L. Ed. 482.

In an action against a corporation in a court of the state of New York, in which state the defendant was incorporated, brought on a judgment recovered against it in a United States circuit court for a district in Ohio, a petition by it for removal of the cause into the United States circuit court, alleged that it was not an inhabitant of Ohio, and that process in the suit in Ohio was not personally served on defendant or any of its officers, but did not allege that there was no service of process on its agent in the district in which the judgment was recovered, and that there was no appearance of defendant in that suit. Held, that this did not raise a defense of want of jurisdiction, under Rev. St. § 739, forbidding suit in a United States court "against an inhabitant of the United States in any other district than that of which he is an inhabitant, or in which he shall be found at the time of serving the writ."—Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 5 S. Ct. 1104, 29 L. Ed. 261.

An action on a judgment recovered in a United States court is not necessarily a suit arising under the laws of the United States, removable on that ground to a United States court, under Act March 3, 1875.—Id.

Corporations of the United States, organized under acts of congress, can remove into the circuit courts of the United States suits brought against them in the state courts, on the ground that such suits are suits "arising under the laws of the United States."—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 115 U. S. 1, 5 S. Ct. 1113, 29 L. Ed. 319, reversing judgment (C. C.) Myers v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 16 F. 292, 3 McCrary, 578.

Inasmuch as the power of a state to grant exclusive ferry franchises across public waters between places in its own jurisdiction has never been impaired by the United States, an action in the state court in which the issue is whether the city of New York has, under its charter, the exclusive right to establish ferries between Manhattan Island and the shore of Staten Island on the Kill von Kull, and, if so, whether defendants have interfered therewith by operating such a ferry, involves no federal question, notwithstanding the vessels used by defendants in their business are licensed and enrolled, and the officers navigating them are licensed, under the laws of the United States.—Starin v. City of New York, 115 U. S. 248, 6 S. Ct. 28, 29 L. Ed. 388, affirming order (C. C.) City of New York v. Independent Steamboat Co., 21 F. 593, and (O. C.) 22 F. 801.

Where, after the suit had been removed to the federal court, the party opposing the removal files a supplemental bill alleging that a certain judgment rendered by that court after removal in a suit to which she was not a party had been obtained by collusion, and did not conclude her, such bill has no effect to raise a federal question.—Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 840, 6 S. Ct. 769, 29 L. Ed. 907.

A case does not arise under the laws of the United States simply because the supreme court, or any other federal court, has decided, in another suit, the questions of law which are involved in it.—Leather Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778, 7 S. Ct. 777, 30 L. Ed. 816, affirming order (C. C.) Cooper v. Leather Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 29 F. 161, 2 Browne, Nat. Bank Cas. 208.

The defendant in foreclosure set up in defense, and as a ground for removal—First, title in herself to the mortgaged property by purchase at a judicial sale under a decree of the circuit court of the United States; and, second, a decree of the same court dismissing plaintiff's bill in a previous suit involving the same property. Held, that this claim on defendant's behalf is a right derived from an authority exercised under the United States, but does not present any question distinctly involving the constitution or laws of the United States, within the meaning of the removal act of 1875 (18 Stat. 470).—Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 7 S. Ct. 1030, 30 L. Ed. 992.

The fact that the mortgage held by plaintiff was made by a citizen of South Carolina, at a time when that state was in rebellion against the United States, to a loyal citizen of the United States, in the absence of circumstances establishing that the transaction involved unlawful intercourse between the parties, does not make a suit arising under the constitution or laws of the United States.—Id.

A petition for removal of a suit in ejectment from a state to a federal court, which shows that defendants claim title to the land under a patent from the United States, and that plaintiff claims under a prior patent, and relies on want of authority in the land department to issue the patent to defendants, presents a case arising under the laws of the United States, and shows ground for removal, under Act March 3, 1875.—Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 11 S. Ct. 819, 840, 35 L. Ed. 442.

In an action for land against the lessor thereof and the lessee, a corporation created by the laws of the United States, the complaint alleged that such corporation was in actual possession, and the return of the summons alleged service upon both defendants. The petition for a removal of the case was joined in by such corporation, and it did not object to the summons or to the jurisdiction of the court. Held, that such corporation was a party, so that a federal question was involved, and it was immaterial that the court, in rendering judgment, spoke of such party as not having been served and as not appearing.—Washington & I. R. Co. v. Coeur D'Alene R. & Nav. Co., 160 U. S. 77, 16 S. Ct. 231, 40 L. Ed. 355, affirming decree 60 F. 981, 9 C. C. A. 303, 15 U. S. App. 359.

The acts of congress of June 20, 1878 (Laws 1878, c. 362; 20 Stat. 241), and August 2, 1882 (Laws 1882, c. 372; 22 Stat. 185), in so far as they conferred rights and privileges upon the territorial and state corporations afterwards consolidated as the Oregon Short Line & Utah Northern Railroad Company, gave no powers or rights to be exercised outside of the territory named therein, and therefore did not give such corporations a federal character, such as will justify them in removing, on that ground, suits brought against them in the state courts.—Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 16 S. Ct. 869, 40 L. Ed. 1048, affirming judgment Skottowe v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. Ry. Co., 22 Or. 430, 30 P. 222, 16 L. R. A. 593.

The bare fact that the appointment of a receiver was by a federal court does not make all actions against him cases arising under the constitution or laws of the United States which he can remove on that ground into a federal court, where his appointment was made under the general equity powers of courts of chancery, and not under any provision of the federal constitution or laws, and his liability depends on general law, and his defense does not rest on any act of congress.—Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. Ry. Co., 21 S. Ct. 171, 179 U. S. 335, 45 L. Ed. 220.

A question depending for solution upon the laws of the United States, and therefore justifying removal from a state to a federal Circuit Court, is involved in a suit by the daughter of a deceased homestead settler to establish her title under the operation of the state laws, as against his widow, to whom, in accordance with Rev. St. U. S. § 2291 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1390, 1394], the patent has issued.—McCune v. Essig, 26 S. Ct. 78, 199 U. S. 382, 50 L. Ed. 237, affirming decree 122 F. 588, 59 C. C. A. 429, which affirmed (C. C.) 118 F. 273.

An action brought against a corporation created by an act of Congress and against two of its employees to establish a joint liability for negligence is, as to the individual defendants, as well as to the corporation, a suit arising under the federal Constitution or laws, within the meaning of the removal provisions of Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), and is therefore removable to a federal Circuit Court on petition of all the defendants.—In re Dunn, 29 S. Ct. 299, 212 U. S. 374, 53 L. Ed. 558.

An action brought against a corporation chartered under an act of Congress and a local defendant, upon a joint liability, is a suit arising under the laws of the United States, and, as such, is removable from a state court to a federal Circuit Court on petition of both defendants. Judgment (1907) 102 S. W. 105, 100 Tex. 546, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Eastin & Knox, 29 S. Ct. 564, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. Ed. 946.

An action on a promissory note by one claiming as a bona fide holder for value before maturity does not arise under the Constitution or laws of the United States, so as to be removable to a federal Circuit Court under the Oklahoma enabling act (Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 16, 34 Stat. 276), as amended by Act March 4, 1907, c. 2911, § 1, 34 Stat. 1286, because the makers of the note relied for their defense upon provisions of certain federal statutes as establishing that the transaction upon which the right to recover was based was prohibited by law, which would only demonstrate that the suit could not be maintained at all, and not that the cause of action arose under the federal Constitution or laws. Judgment (1908) 95 P. 457, 20 Okl. 274, affirmed.—Williams v. First Nat. Bank of Pauls Valley, 30 S. Ct. 441, 216 U. S. 582, 54 L. Ed. 625.

20. Actions against national banks or receivers thereof.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 47.

Under Act July 12, 1882, c. 290, 22 Stat. 162 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3457], repealing all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith, and providing that the jurisdiction of federal courts of all suits in which a national bank is a party shall be the same as if it were a state bank, a national bank had no right to remove a cause from a state to a federal court on the ground alone that it is a federal corporation.—Leather Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778, 7 S. Ct. 777, 30 L. Ed. 816, affirming order (C. C.) Cooper v. Leather Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 29 F. 161, 2 Browne, Nat. Bank Cas. 208.

21. Actions against or for acts of United States officers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 49, 51.

An action on the bond of a United States marshal (Rev. St. §§ 783-786 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 606]) for an illegal seizure of goods under a writ issued from a district court in bankruptcy is an action arising under a law of the United States, within Act March 3, 1875, and is removable.—Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 3 S. Ct. 289, 27 L. Ed. 984.

Although Act June 10, 1880, c. 190, § 10, 21 Stat. 175 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 1963], requiring a collector of customs, when notified of a carrier's lien, to give the carrier reasonable notice of delivery to the consignee, does not authorize the collector to receive payment of the carrier's lien for freight, yet, in a suit by a carrier against a collector to recover the amount so paid, the act of receiving payment is one done "under color of office," and, as such, removable to the federal courts, under Rev. St. § 643 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 521], authorizing the removal of civil suit against United States official for act done under color of office.—Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. McClung, 119 U. S. 454, 7 S. Ct. 262, 30 L. Ed. 465, affirming judgment (C. C.) 15 F. 905.

A suit against a United States marshal for the seizure of goods alleged to be plaintiff's under attachment sued out of the circuit court, where the marshal's defense is that the goods were the property of defendant in attachment, is a suit arising under the laws of the United States, and is removable from the state court.—Bock v. Perkins, 139 U. S. 628, 11 S. Ct. 677, 35 L. Ed. 314, affirming judgment (C. C.) 28 F. 123.

22. Criminal prosecutions against United States officers or persons acting under or by authority of such officers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 50; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

The provision of Rev. St. § 643 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 521], for the removal of criminal prosecutions against "any officer appointed under or acting by authority of any revenue law, or any person acting under or by authority of such officer," is properly extended to an indictment for murder committed by a noncommissioned officer in the United States army while detailed as a guard in aid of the marshal, and acting as one of his posse comitatus in arresting an illicit distiller; and the forfeiture of his recognizance by the state court after removal is void and of no effect.—Davis v. State of South Carolina, 107 U. S. 597, 2 S. Ct. 636, 27 L. Ed. 574.

Under Rev. St. § 643 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 521], relating to the removal of prosecutions commenced in the state courts against federal revenue officers, a prosecution is not "commenced," so as to be removable, when the officer is merely held under a warrant of arrest for preliminary examination before a magistrate.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 13 S. Ct. 536, 37 L. Ed. 888, overruling (C. C.) Georgia v. Fort, 3 F. 117, 4 Woods, 513.

§23. Nature of controversy.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 54-56.

A suit which cannot be prosecuted, defended, or determined without resort to the articles of the Revised Statutes of the United States and a construction of them, is a suit arising under the laws of the United States, so as to authorize a removal to the United States courts.—Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 3 S. Ct. 289, 27 L. Ed. 984.

§25. Allegations in pleadings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 58, 59.

Under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 2 (24 Stat. 552), as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], which provides for removal from state courts of suits arising under the constitution or laws of the United States of which the circuit courts "are given original jurisdiction" by section 1, a case cannot be so removed unless the facts making it removable appear by plaintiff's pleading or statement of his claim. The want of such facts cannot be supplied by allegations in subsequent pleadings or in the petition for removal.—State of Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 14 S. Ct. 654, 38 L. Ed. 511; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102, 15 S. Ct. 34, 39 L. Ed. 85; Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. State of Alabama, 155 U. S. 482, 15 S. Ct. 192, 39 L. Ed. 231; East Lake Land Co. v. Brown, 155 U. S. 488, 15 S. Ct. 357, 39 L. Ed. 233; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 16 S. Ct. 869, 40 L. Ed. 1048.

A bill or declaration which alleges that defendant is an incorporated company does not thereby tender, or impliedly allege, the charter or articles of incorporation, including all statutes by virtue of which it acquired the right to become a corporation and exercise corporate powers, so as thereby to require the court to take notice of the federal character of the corporation (when such is its character) for the purposes of removal.—Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 16 S. Ct. 869, 40 L. Ed. 1048, affirming judgment Skottowe v. Oregon Short Line & U. N. Ry. Co., 22 Or. 430, 30 P. 222, 16 L. R. A. 593.

That a complaint in a state court against a federal corporation avers that defendant was created under state laws does not deprive it of the right to remove.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cody, 17 S. Ct. 703, 166 U. S. 606, 41 L. Ed. 1132, affirming judgment 67 F. 71, 14 C. O. A. 310.

A federal corporation may remove a cause on the ground that it was created by act of Congress, though that fact does not appear from the complaint.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Barrett, 17 S. Ct. 707, 166 U. S. 617, 41 L. Ed. 1136, affirming judgment 67 F. 214, 14 C. O. A. 373.

Though a complaint by a settler claiming title under the pre-emption laws of the United States against a railroad company states that defendant claims under the laws of the territory of Washington authorizing railroad companies to appropriate land for right of way, it discloses a cause of action arising under the laws of the United States, so as to authorize a removal from a state court to the federal court, the court having judicial knowledge that the authority of the territory to legislate as to the matter in question is derived from the act of Congress of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 482), granting to railroad companies the right of way through the public lands of the United States.—Spokane Falls & N. Ry. Co. v. Ziegler, 17 S. Ct. 728, 167 U. S. 65, 42 L. Ed. 79, affirming judgment 61 F. 392, 9 C. O. A. 548.

A case not depending on the citizenship of the parties, nor otherwise specially provided for, cannot be removed from a state court to the federal court, as one arising under the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, unless the jurisdictional fact appears by the plaintiff's statement of his own claim.—Walker v. Collins, 17 S. Ct. 738, 167 U. S. 57, 42 L. Ed. 76, reversing judgment 59 F. 70, 8 C. O. A. 1.

Where the plaintiff's pleading shows that certain acts were done in violation of the constitution and laws of Texas, but does not show that the suit was one arising under the constitution or laws of the United States, a petition for removal is properly denied, since no federal question appears on the face of plaintiff's statement of his case.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State of Texas, 18 S. Ct. 603, 170 U. S. 226, 42 L. Ed. 1017.

A case is not removable to a federal court on the ground that matters of a federal nature are involved, when no such matter appears in plaintiff's original cause of action, but is first set up by his reply to a defense. Judgment, 41 S. W. 157, reversed.—Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. State of Texas, 20 S. Ct. 545, 177 U. S. 66, 44 L. Ed. 673.

A case cannot be removed from the state court to a federal Circuit Court, as one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, unless plaintiff's statement of his own claim shows it to be a case of that character. Decree (C. C.) 123 F. 692, reversed.—State of Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co., 24 S. Ct. 598, 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. Ed. 870.

III. CITIZENSHIP OR ALIENAGE OF PARTIES.

(A) DIVERSE CITIZENSHIP OR ALIENAGE IN GENERAL.

§26. Citizenship of parties in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 60-63; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

Where a citizen of Iowa gives up his citizenship there and goes to Chicago, with the intent in good faith of acquiring a citizenship in Illinois, he thereby becomes a citizen of that state, notwithstanding he shortly afterwards leaves Chicago to go to school in Janesville, Wis., and remains there until his education is completed, and then returns again to Chicago.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Ohle, 117 U. S. 123, 6 S. Ct. 632, 29 L. Ed. 837.

§27. Citizenship or residence of corporations.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 64-68.

The Memphis & Charleston Railroad Company, although previously incorporated by the legislature of Tennessee, is, by Act Ala. Jan. 7, 1850 (St. Ala. 1849-50, c. 128), made a corporation of Alabama, and consequently has no legal entity within that state, except as such. In a suit, therefore, brought against it in Alabama by a citizen of Alabama, it cannot have a removal to the circuit court of the United States.—Memphis & C. R. Co. v. State of Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 2 S. Ct. 432, 27 L. Ed. 518.

A corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of several states, including the one in which suit against it is brought, must be regarded as a citizen of the latter state for the purpose of determining its right to remove the cause to a federal Circuit Court, especially where the Constitution and laws of that state require that a majority of the directors shall be residents, and that the corporation shall keep a general office in the state.—Patch v. Wabash R. Co., 28 S. Ct. 80, 207 U. S. 277, 52 L. Ed. 204, 12 Ann. Cas. 518.

—28. Diversity of citizenship of plaintiffs and codefendants.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 69-74.

—29. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 69, 73, 74.

Where, in proceedings for the settlement of a partnership on an issue as to the existence of the partnership relation, one of the plaintiffs and one of the defendants are citizens of the same state, the cause is not a controversy between citizens of different states within Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, cl. 1 (18 Stat. 470), and is not removable.—Shainwald v. Lewis, 108 U. S. 158, 2 S. Ct. 385, 27 L. Ed. 691.

Plaintiff sued defendant and B. in a state court of which B. and plaintiff were both citizens. Service was made on B., and judgment was taken against him by default. Afterwards defendant acknowledged service in the same suit, and set up a defense. He procured an order removing the cause to a United States circuit court on the ground that he and plaintiff were citizens of different states. On motion the circuit court remanded the cause. Held that, defendant having voluntarily appeared in the action in which B., who was a citizen of the same state as plaintiff, was a party defendant, and the cause of action as to defendant being neither separated nor separable, the cause was not removable.—Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 502, 7 S. Ct. 301, 30 L. Ed. 482.

A bill by many taxpayers of Muhlenburgh county, Ky., in behalf of all taxpayers, attacked the validity of certain county bonds issued to aid in constructing a railway, and prayed an injunction restraining the sheriff from collecting a tax levied for the payment of interest and the county judge from making any further levies, and also a decree that the bonds were invalid, and that all the holders be brought in by publication and perpetually enjoined from collecting principal or interest. Held, that the cause was not removable from the state court to the United States circuit court, under Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 470), on the petition of two bondholders, residing in Tennessee, although the Kentucky bondholders who had actually become parties to the suit filed affidavits declining to defend, where it appeared that many bondholders not yet brought in were residents of Kentucky.—Brown v. Trousdale, 138 U. S. 389, 11 S. Ct. 308, 34 L. Ed. 987.

The voluntary joinder of a number of complainants in enforcing a common liability of the defendants has the same effect on the right of removal because of citizenship as if they had been compelled to unite.—Merchants' Cotton-Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 151 U. S. 368, 14 S. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195, affirming judgment Insurance Co. of North America v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 537, 19 S. W. 755.

A controversy is not "between citizens of different states," so as to make the cause removable to a United States court, unless all the parties on one side are citizens of different states from all the parties on the other side, or unless there is a separable controversy wholly between some of the parties who are citizens of different states, and which can be fully determined between them.—Gage v. Carraher, 154 U. S. 656, 14 S. Ct. 1190, 25 L. Ed. 980; Shainwald v. Lewis, 108 U. S. 158, 2 S. Ct. 385, 27 L. Ed. 691.

—30. — Nominal or formal parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 70.

Where the essential parties on the adverse sides of a controversy are citizens of different states, the fact that the executors of the deceased father of the principal defendant, who have been made formally defendants in order to reach his interest in his father's estate, are citizens of the same state as plaintiffs, will not affect the right of removal.—Bacon v. Rives, 106 U. S. 99, 1 S. Ct. 3, 27 L. Ed. 69.

A ruling on the merits instructing the jury to return a verdict in favor of one defendant, which is adverse to plaintiff and without his assent, when made on the trial after the right to a removal of the cause to a federal court, on the ground that such defendant had been fraudulently made a party in order to prevent removal, had been denied, cannot operate to make the cause then removable, and thereby enable the other defendants to prevent plaintiff from taking a verdict against them. Judgment, Smithson v. Chicago G. W. Ry. Co., 73 N. W. 853, 71 Minn. 216, affirmed.—Whitcomb v. Smithson, 20 S. Ct. 248, 175 U. S. 635, 44 L. Ed. 303.

—31. — Necessary and unnecessary parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 71.

Two citizens of West Virginia conveyed to a trustee certain real property in that state, to secure the payment of notes executed by them to a Missouri corporation, which was subsequently dissolved, and its assets placed in the hands of a citizen of the latter state. Upon default in the payment of the notes, the trustee, under authority given by the deed, advertised the property for sale. The grantors thereupon instituted a suit in equity in one of the courts of West Virginia to enjoin the sale, making the trustee, the Missouri corporation, and the persons who held its assets, defendants. Upon the joint petition of that corporation and the defendant holding its assets, the cause was removed to the circuit court of the United States, and was there finally determined. Held that, since the trustee was an indispensable party, his citizenship was material in determining the jurisdiction of the circuit court; and as that was not averred, and did not otherwise affirmatively appear to be such as gave the right of removal, the decree must be reversed, and the cause remanded to the state court.—Thayer v. Life Association of America, 112 U. S. 717, 5 S. Ct. 355, 28 L. Ed. 864.

Citizens of New Jersey stockholders in a New Jersey railroad corporation, brought suit in that state against such corporation, a Pennsylvania railroad corporation, and several individuals, citizens, respectively, of the two states, and directors in one or both of the corporations, to set aside a lease executed by the New Jersey to the Pennsylvania corporation. Held, that the New Jersey corporation was necessarily made a party defendant, and that the cause was not removable into the federal courts on the ground of diverse citizenship of the parties.—Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. Mills, 113 U. S. 249, 5 S. Ct. 456, 28 L. Ed. 949, affirming judgment (C. C.) Mills v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey, 20 F. 449.

A suit in equity brought by C., a citizen of one state, against a corporation of the same state, and T., a citizen of another state, and W., to obtain a decree that C. owns shares of the stock of the corporation standing in the name of W., but sold by him to T., and that the corporation cancel on its books the shares standing in the name of W., and issue to C. certificates therefor, cannot be removed by T. into the circuit court of the United States, under Act March 3, 1875, § 2, because the corporation is an indispensable party to the suit, and is a citizen of the same state with C.—Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 56, 5 S. Ct. 1154, 29 L. Ed. 328.

Under Act Conn. 1878, providing that the foreclosure of a mortgage shall be a bar to any further suit on the debt unless the persons liable therefor are made parties, where the mortgagor and mortgagee are citizens of that state, and the mortgagor has conveyed the premises to a citizen of New York, the mortgagor is a necessary party to foreclosure proceedings against the latter, if it sought to charge him with any deficiency of the appraised value of the land to pay the mortgage debt, and the case is not a controversy wholly between citizens of different states, within Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 470, c. 137), and is not removable.—Coney v. Winchell, 116 U. S. 227, 6 S. Ct. 366, 29 L. Ed. 610, affirming order (C. C.) Winchell v. Carll, 24 F. 865.

In an action for the assignment of dower, brought in a state court by a citizen of Illinois, it appeared that of two defendants, who were in possession of the property, one, who was a citizen of New York, held the legal title as trustee for his co-defendant, a citizen of Illinois, though it did not appear that he was authorized to represent his interests in the property for the purposes of the suit. Held, that the beneficiary was a necessary party, and, being a citizen of the same state as plaintiff, was not entitled to a removal; and that, the controversy not being separable, the trustee, though the citizen of another state, could not sustain a petition for removal.—Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 340, 6 S. Ct. 769, 29 L. Ed. 907.

In a suit by an Alabama stockholder of an Alabama railroad company in behalf of himself and any other stockholders who will contribute to the expenses, for the cancellation of a lease made by his company to a Tennessee railroad corporation, and for an injunction restraining the latter corporation from operating the Alabama company's road, and to restrain that company from issuing stock to raise funds for the purpose of buying up the lease, and to bring the lessee to an account, both companies are necessarily parties defendant in the suit, and the same will not be transferred to the United States court, at the instance of the lessee corporation, on the ground that the Alabama company is merely a formal party, and that the controversy is wholly between citizens of different states.—East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Grayson, 119 U. S. 240, 7 S. Ct. 190, 30 L. Ed. 382.

In an action against the trustee of a deed of trust and his cestui que trust, brought by the grantor in the deed, and his assignee in insolvency, to permit a sale of the property under the deed, and for an accounting between the grantor and cestui que trust, the trustee is an indispensable party adverse in interest to the plaintiffs; and, being a resident of the same state as the plaintiffs, the United States circuit court has no jurisdiction of the action as being a controversy between citizens of different states, although the cestui que trust is a citizen of a different state, as there is no separable controversy between the plaintiffs and the cestui que trust. The jurisdiction must appear on the face of the record.—Peper v. Fordyce, 119 U. S. 469, 7 S. Ct. 287, 30 L. Ed. 435, reversing decree (C. C.) Fordyce v. Peper, 16 F. 516, 5 McCrary, 221.

V. L., a citizen of West Virginia, sued H. and wife, citizens of New York, and a land company, a West Virginia corporation, in the circuit court of Cabell county, W. Va., for an assignment of dower in certain lands in that county conveyed by her husband during his life to H., and by him, during the husband's life, conveyed to the land company, in whose possession it was at the time of the suit. Held, that there was no separable controversy in the suit; that H. and wife were not necessary parties; and that V. L. and the real defendant, the land company, being citizens of the same state, the case was not removable to the United States district court.—Laidly v. Huntington, 121 U. S. 179, 7 S. Ct. 855, 30 L. Ed. 883.

The assignee of a contractor for work on a railroad, alleging that by arrangement between the contractor, the railroad company, and a trustee, certain township bonds issued to the company had been placed in possession of a bank, to be delivered to the contractor or his assigns when he should complete his contract, and that it had been completed, brought suit against the bank for possession of the bonds, making the company and the trustees parties. The township intervened, asking for cancellation of the bonds. Held, that the bank, being bailee or trustee of the bonds, and the railroad company, having an interest in the question whether the contract had been performed, could not be regarded as purely formal and unnecessary parties, so as to sustain a removal of the cause by the township and the trustee, only, on the ground that they and plaintiff were citizens of different states. Act March 3, 1875 § 2, cl. 1.—Wilson v. Oswego Tp., 151 U. S. 56, 14 S. Ct. 259, 38 L. Ed. 70.

33. Assignees.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 76-78; 13 Cent. Dig. Costs, § 408.

34. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 76.

The provision of Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 1 (18 Stat. 470), excepting from the original jurisdiction of the federal courts suits by assignees which could not have been brought there by the assignors, does not apply to suits brought in the state courts and removed thence to the circuit courts of the United States.—Claffin v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 110 U. S. 81, 3 S. Ct. 507, 28 L. Ed. 76; Delaware County Com'rs v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co., 133 U. S. 473, 10 S. Ct. 399, 33 L. Ed. 674.

Claims assigned to plaintiff by those whose citizenship and residence do not appear either in the complaint or in the petition for removal cannot be added to his own cause of action in order to give jurisdiction to a federal court on removal from a state court on the ground of diverse citizenship. Judgment (C. C.) Morrison v. North American Transportation & Trading Co., 85 F. 802, reversed.—North American Transportation & Trading Co. v. Morrison, 20 S. Ct. 869, 178 U. S. 262, 44 L. Ed. 1061.

35. — Transfers for purpose of or to prevent removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 77, 78.

A colorable assignment of a cause, made to prevent its removal from the state to the federal courts, will prevent the latter courts from assuming jurisdiction. Resort can only be had to the state courts for protection against the consequences of such an encroachment upon the rights of a defendant.—Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 835, 5 S. Ct. 1104, 29 L. Ed. 261; Oakley v. Goodnow, 118 U. S. 43, 6 S. Ct. 944, 30 L. Ed. 61; Leather Man- ufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778, 7 S. Ct. 777, 30 L. Ed. 816.

Where a firm of attorneys, who had received a deed to certain valuable property from parties desiring to contest the title of other claimants thereto, in turn conveyed the same to the father-in-law of one of the members of the firm, a poor farmer living in another state, who knew nothing about the property, and who afterwards, as defendant in a suit to quiet title to it, had the cause removed to the United States court on the ground of his citizenship in such other state, and it appeared, upon all the evidence, that the conveyance was made to him collusively, for the mere purpose of giving the United States circuit court jurisdiction, that court should refuse to entertain jurisdiction under the removal act of 1875, § 5, authorizing the dismissal or remanding of cases not really and substantially involving a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said court.—Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 7 S. Ct. 32, 30 L. Ed. 269, reversing decree (C. C.) Giles v. Little, 13 F. 100, 2 McCrary, 370.

Condemnation proceedings cannot be deemed commenced before conveyance of land so as to preclude vendee from removing suit to federal court for divorce citizenship, where petition for commissioners was not filed until the conveyance had been made.—City of New York v. Sage, 36 S. Ct. 25, 239 U. S. 57, 60 L. Ed. 143, reversing decree In re Bensel, 206 F. 369, 124 C. C. A. 251.

← 36. Improper or collusive joinder of parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 79.

A federal Circuit Court to which a case has been removed as presenting a separable controversy properly refuses to remand the cause to the state court, where the testimony shows that the real purpose of the plaintiff in suing jointly in tort a resident employé and his nonresident employer was to prevent the exercise of the right of removal by the nonresident defendant.—Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co., 27 S. Ct. 184, 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. Ed. 430, 9 Ann. Cas. 757.

Fraudulent joinder of a resident with a nonresident defendant, for the purpose of defeating the removal of the cause to a federal court, cannot be established, where, by the settled law of the state in which the action was brought, and in which the cause of action arose, both defendants were jointly liable to suit.—(1911) Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Willard, 31 S. Ct. 460, 220 U. S. 413, 55 L. Ed. 521, affirming judgment (1908) Willard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 165 F. 181, 91 C. A. 215.

Motive of plaintiff in joining impecunious resident railway employé as codefendants with nonresident railroad in a negligence suit is not material on the question of right of removal.—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Schwyhart, 33 S. Ct. 250, 227 U. S. 184, 57 L. Ed. 473, affirming judgment Schwyhart v. Barrett, 130 S. W. 388, 145 Mo. App. 332.

Motive of plaintiff in joining an impecunious resident employé as codefendant with a nonresident railroad in a negligence suit is not material on question of the right of removal to a federal court where defendants are jointly liable.—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Whiteaker, 36 S. Ct. 152, 239 U. S. 421, 60 L. Ed. 360, affirming judgment Whiteaker v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 160 S. W. 1009, 252 Mo. 438.

← 37. Rearrangement of parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 80.

Under the removal act of March 3, 1875, providing that any suit involving $500, brought in a state court, in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of one state and those of other states, may be removed by either party into the circuit court, and when in any such suit there shall be a controversy wholly between citizens of different states, which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove the suit into the circuit court, the fact that one of the defendants in the suit as brought in the state court is a citizen of the same state as plaintiff is not conclusive against the right of removal, as his interests may be identical with those of plaintiff, and adverse only to his alien codefendants, in which case the parties could be rearranged according to their actual interests, and the removal be thus sustained; or there might be a separable controversy between citizens of different states.—Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 15 S. Ct. 430, 39 L. Ed. 520.

← 38. Interveners and substituted parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 7, 81.

After a cause had long been pending in a state court, and some of the questions involved had been decided by the supreme court of the state, one C. acquired an interest in the property in litigation by grant from one of the parties to the suit, and intervened therein. The right of removal to the federal court had then expired, as to all the original parties. Held, that C.'s right of removal was barred.—Cable v. Ellis, 110 U. S. 389, 4 S. Ct. 85, 28 L. Ed. 186.

A party substituted for another in a suit is subject to all the disabilities of him whose place he takes, in respect of the right of removal of the suit to a United States court.—Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Shirley, 111 U. S. 353, 4 S. Ct. 472, 28 L. Ed. 455.

A purchaser of real estate pendente lite connects himself with the suit, subject to all the disabilities of the other parties in respect to a removal at the time he came in.—Jefferson v. Driver, 117 U. S. 272, 6 S. Ct. 729, 29 L. Ed. 897.

The character of a suit brought in a state court of Minnesota, by a citizen of that state against a sheriff, for trespass in taking possession of the plaintiffs' stock of goods, and ruining his business, is not changed, for the purpose of removal to the federal courts, by the justification of the sheriff under an execution in favor of an Illinois corporation, and by the intervention of that corporation, and the sureties on the indemnifying bond, admitting the facts pleaded by the sheriff in justification, and that all that was done by him was done as their agent.—Thorn Wire-Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535, 7 S. Ct. 1265, 30 L. Ed. 1235.

The sheriff is still a necessary party, and the judgment, if in favor of the plaintiff, must be a joint judgment against all the defendants.—Id.

The fact that the intervention was had under Gen. St. Minn. 1878, §§ 154, 155, which provides that in such a suit, where the judgment goes for the plaintiff, the property of the interveners must first be exhausted on execution before that of the sheriff is sold, does not alter the case. The liability of all the defendants is still joint, so far as the plaintiff is concerned.—Id.

← 39. Dismissal as to one or more co-parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 73.

A recovery against one only of several defendants charged with joint and concurring negligence does not deprive such defendant of any federal right, because, if it had begun sued alone, the diversity of citizenship existing between it and the plaintiff would have authorized the removal of the cause from the state court to a federal circuit court. Judgment, Carson v. Southern Ry. Co., 46 S. E. 525, 68 S. C. 55, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Carson, 24 S. Ct. 609, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. Ed. 907.

The dismissal against the contention of plaintiff after the expiration of the time prescribed by statute for the removal of causes from the state to the federal court of an action which was brought against a resident and a nonresident, so far as it affects the former, does not deprive the state court of jurisdiction to proceed with the cause against the latter, or entitle him to remove the cause to the federal court. Order (C. C. 1907) 150 F. 666, reversed.—Lathrop, Shea & Henwood Co. v. Interior Construction & Improvement Co., 30 S. Ct. 76, 215 U. S. 246, 54 L. Ed. 177.

41. Controversies between a state or citizens thereof and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 82½-84.

There is no statute which authorizes the removal of a suit between a state and citizens on account of citizenship, for a state cannot, in the nature of things, be a citizen of any state.—Stone v. State of South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 6 S. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 962.

A removal on the ground of citizenship cannot be had, when, upon arranging the parties according to their real relation to the primary controversy, it appears that there are one or more alien corporations on each side.—Merchants' Cotton-Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 151 U. S. 368, 14 S. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195, affirming judgment Insurance Co. of North America v. Delaware Safety Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 537, 19 S. W. 755.

An action by a state against a citizen of another state is not an action between citizens of different states, within Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, as amended by Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, and Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], stating the cases of which the circuit court has jurisdiction, and which may be removed to it from a state court.—Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. State of Alabama, 155 U. S. 482, 15 S. Ct. 192, 39 L. Ed. 231.

The state is not the real party plaintiff, so as to preclude a removal of the cause to a federal court for diverse citizenship, in a suit instituted by railroad commissioners under Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 1150, to restrain a railroad company from violating the law and the order of the commissioners with respect to rates, although the state is contingently liable for the costs of the litigation, and might have some indirect and remote pecuniary interest by reason of the fact that forfeitures and penalties for disobedience of the orders of the court would go to a county school fund. Judgment, Hickman v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Kansas, 52 S. W. 351, 151 Mo. 644, reversed.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Hickman, 22 S. Ct. 18, 183 U. S. 53, 46 L. Ed. 78.

A suit in a state court between a state and foreign corporation is not removable to the United States circuit court as a controversy between citizens of different states, as a state is not a citizen.—State of Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co., 22 S. Ct. 47, 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. Ed. 144.

The mere presence on the record of the state as a party plaintiff will not defeat the jurisdiction of a federal Circuit Court to which the cause has been removed from a state court, if it appears that the state has no real interest in the controversy.—Ex parte State of Nebraska, 28 S. Ct. 581, 209 U. S. 436, 52 L. Ed. 876.

42. Nature of controversy.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 85.

A proceeding for the taking of land by eminent domain, authorized by Ky. St. §§ 835-839, to be begun in the courts of that state, is, where the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, a suit involving a controversy between citizens of different states, of which a federal Circuit Court has original jurisdiction, and is therefore removable to that court when commenced in the state court. Decree (O. O.) St. Bernard Min. Co. v. Madisonville Traction Co., 130 F. 794, affirmed.—Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co., 25 S. Ct. 251, 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. Ed. 462.

43. Time of existence of ground of removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 87.

A suit cannot be removed from a state court under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, on the ground that the parties are citizens of different states, unless the requisite citizenship exists when the petition for removal is filed. It is not sufficient that the diversity in citizenship existed when the suit was begun.—Gibson v. Bruce, 108 U. S. 561, 2 S. Ct. 873, 27 L. Ed. 825.

A suit cannot be removed from a state court to a United States circuit court, under Act March 3, 1875, on the ground that the parties are citizens of different states, unless the requisite citizenship existed when the suit was begun, as well as at the time of removal.—Houston, & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Shirley, 111 U. S. 358, 4 S. Ct. 472, 28 L. Ed. 455; Manafield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 4 S. Ct. 510, 28 L. Ed. 462; Smith v. Akers, 117 U. S. 197, 6 S. Ct. 669, 29 L. Ed. 888; Stevens v. Nichols, 130 U. S. 230, 9 S. Ct. 518, 32 L. Ed. 914; Jackson v. Allen, 132 U. S. 27, 10 S. Ct. 9, 33 L. Ed. 249; Kellam v. Keith, 144 U. S. 568, 12 S. Ct. 922, 36 L. Ed. 544.

44. Parties entitled to remove in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 88.

The express declaration in Code Iowa 1897, § 2009, that, on the appeal to a district court, which either party may take from the commissioners' award in proceedings to condemn land for railway purposes, the "landowner shall be plaintiff and the corporation defendant," does not fix the status of the parties under the removal act, but the landowner must be deemed the defendant so far as the right of removal to a federal circuit court on the ground of diverse citizenship is concerned, because, under the state statutes, the institution and continuance of the proceedings depend upon the will of the railroad company.—Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. v. Boynton, 27 S. Ct. 321, 204 U. S. 570, 51 L. Ed. 629.

45. Residence of party removing cause.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 89.

Under Act 1887-88 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], only defendants who are nonresidents of the state where the action is pending can remove a cause to a federal court. Defendants sued in a court of their own state by citizens of another state have no such right of removal.—Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 13 S. Ct. 706, 37 L. Ed. 602.

An alien nonresident can no longer claim the privilege under Rev. St. U. S. § 639, subsec. 1 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520], of removing to a federal circuit court an action commenced against him in a state court, since the enactment of Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, 18 Stat. 470 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508]. Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552, and Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508]. Judgment, State v. O'Connor, 73 S. W. 1041, 96 Tex. 484, affirmed.

—O'Connor v. State of Texas, 28 S. Ct. 726, 202 U. S. 501, 50 L. Ed. 1120.

47. Allegations in pleadings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 32.

Defendant was a surety of the assignee in insolvency of his son, and was described in the bond as "of Reading, in the county of Middlesex," Mass. Afterwards defendant attached the goods of his insolvent son in New Orleans, and was described in the petition as "residing in the state of Massachusetts." The petition was not signed by him but by his attorney in New Orleans. Held, that these words were merely descriptive, and did not estop defendant, on a motion to remove the cause to the federal court, to deny that he was a citizen of Massachusetts, where it does not appear that the party seeking the removal acted on such statements to his prejudice.—Reynolds v. Adden, 136 U. S. 348, 10 S. Ct. 843, 34 L. Ed. 360.

(B) SEPARABLE CONTROVERSIES.

48. Single or separable nature of controversy.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 23, 24.

To entitle a party to remove a cause from a state court under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, cl. 2, there must exist in the suit a separate and distinct cause of action, on which a separate and distinct suit might properly have been brought, and complete relief afforded as to such cause of action, with all the parties on one side of that controversy citizens of different states from those on the other. To say the least, the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that in one of the parts a controversy will be presented with citizens of one or more states on one side, and citizens of other states on the other, which can be fully determined without the presence of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun.—Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U. S. 191, 1 S. Ct. 171, 27 L. Ed. 131.

In a will contest in the probate court all the proponents and all the contestants except two were citizens of Michigan. From a decree sustaining the will separate appeals were taken,—one by the contestants, who were citizens of Michigan, and the other by the other two. Held, upon the application of the latter, that the proceeding was a single controversy between all the contestants and all the proponents, and not removable.—Id.

In an action for the assignment of dower brought by a citizen of Illinois, it appeared that one defendant, a resident of New York, held the legal title as trustee for a citizen of Illinois, but as he did not possess authority to represent his interests in this suit, the cestui que trust was a necessary party. Held, that as the controversy is not severable, the trustee cannot sustain a petition for removal from the state court to the federal court.—Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 340, 6 S. Ct. 769, 29 L. Ed. 907.

A separable controversy which justifies a removal to a federal court, where there is diverse citizenship, exists between plaintiffs and two corporations named as defendants in a complaint which seeks to set aside for fraud a conveyance between such corporations, and to prevent the directors of the grantor from making any further disposition of its property, and prays for a reconveyance of such property and an accounting by the grantee for the damages sustained by the transfer, and also asks that such directors, who are joined as defendants and are not all residents of different states from plaintiffs, be compelled to account as agents and trustees for their actions in the premises, and be required to make good all loss and damage caused by their wrongful conduct.—Geer v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 23 S. Ct. 807, 190 U. S. 428, 47 L. Ed. 1122.

Action against nonresident corporation in which two individual citizens of the same state as plaintiff have been joined as defendants held not converted into a separable controversy for purposes of removal, because after demurrer to the evidence plaintiff takes involuntary nonsuit as to such defendants.—American Car & Foundry Co. v. Kettelhake, 35 S. Ct. 355, 236 U. S. 311, 59 L. Ed. 594, affirming judgment Kettelhake v. American Car & Foundry Co., 153 S. W. 552, 171 Mo. App. 528.

An order of nonsuit as to a resident corporation, joined as a codefendant with a nonresident corporation, did not convert the action into a separable controversy, where plaintiff excepted to the order.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Lloyd, 38 S. Ct. 210, 239 U. S. 496, 60 L. Ed. 402, affirming judgment Lloyd v. Southern Ry. Co., 81 S. E. 1003, 166 N. C. 24.

49. Joint or joint and several causes of action.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 95-99.

The fact that one of several defendants, jointly liable on the same cause of action, is in default, does not make the controversy separable, as between the other parties, for the purpose of removal.—Putnam v. Ingraham, 114 U. S. 57, 5 S. Ct. 746, 29 L. Ed. 65.

An action against defendants jointly for a tort is not severable for the purpose of removal, although judgment may be rendered against part of them only. Plaintiff having elected to proceed against all jointly, defendants are not permitted to object.—Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41, 5 S. Ct. 1034, 1161, 29 L. Ed. 331; Core v. Vinal, 117 U. S. 347, 6 S. Ct. 767, 29 L. Ed. 912; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275, 6 S. Ct. 730, 29 L. Ed. 899.

In an action against a firm in Louisiana, service was had on one member, which in that state was sufficient to make a judgment rendered in the action binding on him personally, and on all the assets of the firm and of the individual partners in the jurisdiction. Subsequently, but after the right of removal, under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 5 (18 Stat. 470), was lost by delay, another member of the firm was served. Held, on a petition for removal that the cause of action was joint, and there was no separable controversy, and that the petitioner partook of the disability incurred by his partner.—Fletcher v. Hamlet, 116 U. S. 408, 6 S. Ct. 426, 29 L. Ed. 679, affirming order (C. C.) Hamlet v. Fletcher, 24 F. 305.

Where the money sued for was received by the defendants as partners, and they are liable jointly for its payment, if they are liable at all, such a case is not removable unless all the parties on one side of the controversy unite in the petition for removal.—Stone v. State of South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 6 S. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 962.

An action against a railroad company and two of its employes, charging them with concurrent negligence in killing a person at a railroad crossing, is joint, and not several, and therefore cannot be removed into a federal court by the railroad company on the ground of diverse citizenship, when the employes are citizens of the same state as the plaintiff. Judgment, Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon's Adm'x, 47 S. W. 615, 104 Ky. 608, 20 Ky. Law Rep. 792, affirmed.—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Dixon, 21 S. Ct. 67, 179 U. S. 131, 45 L. Ed. 121.

A case in which plaintiff, in good faith, has elected to sue jointly in tort a foreign corporation and its servants whose misconduct caused the injury complained of, does not, even though such joinder may be improper, present a separable controversy between plaintiff and the corporation which, under Act March 3, 1875, c.

187, 18 Stat. 470, as amended by Acts March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 553, and Aug. 13, 1888 (1 Rev. St. Supp. 611 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509]), can be removed from a state to a federal Circuit Court without regard to the citizenship of the individual defendants.—Alabama Great Southern Ry. Co. v. Thompson, 26 S. Ct. 161, 200 U. S. 206, 50 L. Ed. 441, 4 Ann. Cas. 1147.

An action to recover damages for a death from negligence, in which plaintiff has, in good faith, exercised his right under the state laws to proceed jointly against a railway company and its employé whose negligence caused the accident, cannot be converted into a separable controversy for the purpose of removal to a federal Circuit Court because of diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff and the railway company. Judgment, Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Cook's Adm'r. 83 S. W. 580, affirmed.—Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Bohon, 26 S. Ct. 166, 200 U. S. 221, 50 L. Ed. 448, 4 Ann. Cas. 1152.

A suit in which plaintiff, in good faith, has joined as for a joint liability in tort a foreign railway corporation and certain of its resident employes whose negligence caused the injury complained of, is not removable to a federal Circuit Court as presenting a separable controversy between the plaintiff and the corporate defendant. Judgment (1908) 59 S. E. 1115, 3 Ga. App. 410, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Miller, 30 S. Ct. 450, 217 U. S. 209, 54 L. Ed. 732.

A case in which plaintiff has elected, in conformity with the settled law of the state, to sue jointly in tort a nonresident lessee railway company, exclusively operating, controlling, and managing the road, and its resident corporate lessor, upon a cause of action arising in the state, out of the negligent operation of the road, cannot be removed to a federal Circuit Court as presenting a separable controversy between the plaintiff and the lessee, although the lessor may have been joined for the purpose of excluding the federal jurisdiction.—(1911) Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Willard, 31 S. Ct. 460, 220 U. S. 413, 55 L. Ed. 521, affirming judgment (1908) Willard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 165 F. 181, 91 C. C. A. 215.

An action in tort, brought in a state court against a nonresident railway company, and a resident employé whose concurrent negligence is alleged to have caused the injury complained of, does not present a separable controversy for the purpose of removal to a federal court, because plaintiff might have sued defendants separately.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Dowell, 33 S. Ct. 684, 229 U. S. 102, 57 L. Ed. 1090, affirming judgment Dowell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 112 P. 136, 83 Kan. 562.

51. Principal and subordinate or incidental controversies or issues.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 101.

In proceedings for the settlement of a partnership, where the principal issue is as to the existence of the relation, the other issues necessarily depend upon that, and it cannot be regarded as a separable controversy, within Act March 3, 1875, c. 137 (18 Stat. 470).—Shainwald v. Lewis, 108 U. S. 158, 2 S. Ct. 385, 27 L. Ed. 691.

In a bill for the partition of lands, having for its main object the assignment of several shares to tenants in common, and in which the determination of conflicting or controverted title is merely incidental, a dispute as to the title claimed in an undivided share is not such a separable controversy as would justify removal, under Act March 3, 1875, § 2.—Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 12 S. Ct. 726, 36 L. Ed. 523.

52. Separate interests or claims in subject-matter or part thereof.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 102, 103, 106.

A bill by a creditor of an alleged insolvent partnership to have set aside certain alleged fraudulent confessions of judgment and transfers of assets, and to have the assets distributed among all creditors of the partnership ratably, which makes parties defendant all persons claiming an interest in the partnership property adversely to plaintiff under the alleged fraudulent judgments and transfers, presents but a single controversy between plaintiff and all the defendants, as they are all necessary parties; and, where part of the latter are citizens of the same state with plaintiff, the cause is not removable to the federal court by a defendant who is a citizen of another state, under Removal Act 1875, c. 137, § 2 (18 Stat. 470), which provides for removals when "there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states."—Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 10 S. Ct. 196, 33 L. Ed. 402, reversing decree (C. C.) Corbin v. Boies, 34 F. 692.

In a suit by a city to condemn land occupied by a railroad corporation of another state as lessee of a railroad corporation of the same state, when the main issue is as to the right to condemn, the controversy as to the foreign corporation is not separate, so as to give it a right to remove the cause to federal court, although the interests of the two defendants and their separate awards of damages must be determined incidentally.—City of Bellaire v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 146 U. S. 117, 13 S. Ct. 16, 36 L. Ed. 910.

An assignee brought suit in the state court to disincumber a fund in his possession of alleged liens, and each defendant set up a separate defense, and asked payment out of the fund. The trial court decided against the assignee, who appealed; but, pending the appeal, paid all the defendants but one, but did not dismiss them from his suit. The appellate court reversed the judgment of the lower court, and remanded the case for further proceedings. Held, there was no separable controversy between the assignee and the defendant not paid, within the meaning of the removal of causes acts.—Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 142, 13 S. Ct. 576, 37 L. Ed. 399.

53. Priorities of liens or rights in subject-matter.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 104.

On a creditors' bill to subject incumbered property to the payment of the creditors' judgment by a sale and distribution of the proceeds among lienholders according to their respective priorities, the cause of action is not divisible, and the suit is not removable by a mortgage creditor claiming a first lien.—Fidelity Ins. Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 280, 6 S. Ct. 733, 29 L. Ed. 898.

A separable controversy exists, removable to a federal court by a foreign corporation, joined as a party defendant to a suit to foreclose a mortgage, where both mortgagor and mortgagee, who are citizens of the state, unite in attacking the validity of a prior mortgage in favor of such corporation on the ground that it was doing business without complying with state laws, and that the secured note embraced charges exacted because of an illegal combination in restraint of trade. Decree (1907) Boatmen's Bank of St. Louis v. Fritzlen, 89 P. 915, 75 Kan. 479, affirmed.—Fritzlen v. Boatmen's Bank, 29 S. Ct. 366, 212 U. S. 304, 53 L. Ed. 551.

55. Separate defenses.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 107.

Where defendants are sued jointly on a joint cause of action, the filing of a separate answer by one of the defendants, tendering separate defenses for trial, does not introduce a separate controversy, within the meaning of Removal Act 1875, c. 137, § 2, providing that when in any suit there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different states, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove, etc.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52, 5 S. Ct. 735, 29 L. Ed. 63; Putnam v. Ingraham, 114 U. S. 57, 5 S. Ct. 746, 29 L. Ed. 65; Pirie v. Tredt, 115 U. S. 41, 5 S. Ct. 1034, 1161, 29 L. Ed. 331; Core v. Vinal, 117 U. S. 347, 6 S. Ct. 767, 29 L. Ed. 912.

A suit against a corporation, resident in the state of complainant, and an individual non-resident, to compel the corporation to transfer to plaintiff stock standing in the name of the nonresident, is one in truth and in form against both defendants upon a single cause of action, and cannot be removed from a state to a federal court at the instance of the nonresident, although the latter has filed a separate answer.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilson, 114 U. S. 60, 5 S. Ct. 738, 29 L. Ed. 66, affirming order (C. C.) Wilson v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 22 F. 3.

A separate defense by one defendant in a joint suit against him and others upon a joint, or a joint and several, cause of action does not create a separate controversy, so as to entitle that defendant, if the necessary citizenship exists as to him, to a removal of the cause under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, cl. 2.—Starin v. City of New York, 115 U. S. 248, 6 S. Ct. 28, 29 L. Ed. 388, affirming order (C. C.) City of New York v. Independent Steamboat Co., 21 F. 593, and (C. C.) 22 F. 801.

Where a complaint alleges the wrongful seizure of plaintiff's property as the joint act of several defendants, some of whom are citizens of the same state as plaintiff and some of other states, the filing of separate answers by each defendant, alleging that he acted separately, and not jointly, will not render the controversy separable and removable under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2 (18 Stat. 470).—Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275, 6 S. Ct. 730, 29 L. Ed. 899.

A creditors' bill to subject incumbered property to the payment of his judgment by sale and distribution of the proceeds among the lienholders according to their priorities contains but a single cause of action,—the equitable execution of his judgment; and, though each defendant may set up a separate defense, the controversy is not separable and removable under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 5 (18 Stat. 470).—Fidelity Ins., Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 280, 6 S. Ct. 733, 29 L. Ed. 898.

Where, on the face of the complaint in an action against a foreign corporation and its resident officers and superintendent, there is but a single cause of action shown—that is, the wrongful pollution of the water of plaintiff's canal by the united action of all the defendants working together—the controversy is not separable for the purposes of a removal, even though the defendants answered separately, setting up separate defenses.—Plymouth Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co., 118 U. S. 264, 6 S. Ct. 1034, 30 L. Ed. 232.

In a suit to quiet title against several defendants, some of whom are citizens of the same state with complainants, charging defendants to be co-conspirators in a scheme to raise a cloud on complainants' title and to defraud them out of their property, one of the defendants cannot segregate himself from the others, and thus entitle himself to a removal of the case to the United States court, by denying any joint interest or liability, and setting up in his petition for removal a case inconsistent with the allegations of the bill.—Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 7 S. Ct. 32, 30 L. Ed. 269, reversing decree (C. C.) Giles v. Little, 13 F. 100, 2 McCrary, 370.

An action for trespass against two corporations jointly, brought in a state court, cannot be removed to a federal court by one of the defendants, under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, upon the ground of a separable controversy between itself and plaintiff, though defendants plead severally, on the mere allegation that the other defendant was not in existence at the time of the alleged trespass, as this affects the merits, and not the jurisdiction.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wangelin, 132 U. S. 599, 10 S. Ct. 203, 33 L. Ed. 473.

656. Set-offs, counterclaims, and cross-actions.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 108.

The assignee of a contractor for work on a railroad, alleging that by arrangement between the contractor and a trustee, certain township bonds issued to the company had been placed in possession of a bank to be delivered to the contractor or his assigns when he should complete his contract, and that it had been completed, brought suit against the bank for possession of the bonds, making the company and the trustee parties. The township intervened, asking for cancellation of the bonds, and with the trustee moved for removal to a federal court. Held that, as plaintiff's petition embraced only a single cause of action, a removal could not be sustained on the ground of a separable controversy between plaintiff and the removing parties, under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2, cl. 2. The fact that the railroad company failed to answer did not affect the rights of the parties in this respect.—Wilson v. Oswego Tp., 151 U. S. 56, 14 S. Ct. 259, 38 L. Ed. 70.

657. Determination of controversy without all parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 109.

Complainant's bill, alleging that three of the five defendants hold property in trust to secure a debt due from himself and one of the two remaining defendants to the other one, and asking for an accounting, the removal of two trustees, and the appointment of others, and that, after paying the debt, the trust property be conveyed in accordance with the terms of the trust, presents but a single controversy; and, though the beneficiary defendant, who is resident of another state, may be the principal defendant in interest, full and complete relief cannot be afforded without all the parties, and the cause is not removable.—Winchester v. Loud, 108 U. S. 130, 2 S. Ct. 311, 27 L. Ed. 677.

After the execution of a mortgage to secure a joint debt of the mortgagors, W., one of the mortgagors, sold his interest in the mortgaged property, and the purchaser assumed the mortgage debt. In an action to foreclose the mortgage and for a personal decree for any deficiency that might result, some of the defendants denied that the amount due was as great as alleged. W. admitted the execution of the mortgage and the debt which it was given to secure, and prayed that his grantee might be decreed to be first personally liable. Held, that the only controversy was as to the amount due, to which W. was a necessary party, and, where W. was a citizen of the same state as plaintiffs, the cause is not removable from the state to the federal court under Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 470), providing for such removal when the suit is against a citizen of the same state as plaintiff and a citizen of another state, if it "is a suit in which there can be a final determination of the controversy, so far as concerns him, without the presence of the other defendants."—Ayres v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187, 5 S. Ct. 90, 28 L. Ed. 693.

Several marine insurance companies, which had paid insurance money to the owners of cotton destroyed while in the possession of a carrier for transportation, filed a bill against the carrier to enforce, by way of subrogation, the owners' rights against it; and, as insurance had been obtained from a number of fire insurance companies, expressly for the benefit of the carrier, by a compress company acting under contract with it, the compress company and fire companies were made defendants, in order to reach the insurance money due the carrier. Held, that the primary controversy was between the complainants and the carrier, but the compress company was an indispensable party, and therefore no right of removal could exist on the ground of a separable controversy between the fire insurance companies and the compress company.—Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 151 U. S. 368, 14 S. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195, affirming judgment Insurance Co. of North America v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 537, 19 S. W. 755.

58. Removal of whole suit.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 110.

In order to justify a removal under Act March 3, 1875, § 2, of the whole case, because of a separable controversy between citizens of different states, "which can be fully determined as between them," it is necessary that the whole subject-matter of the suit should be capable of being finally determined as between them, and complete relief afforded as to the separable cause of action, without the presence of others originally made parties to the suit.—Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 12 S. Ct. 726, 36 L. Ed. 528.

59. Parties entitled to remove.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 112, 113.

The right to remove a suit on the ground of a separable controversy is, by Act March 3, 1875, confined to the parties "actually interested in the controversy."—Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 340, 6 S. Ct. 769, 29 L. Ed. 907.

61. Allegations in pleadings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 115.

Allegations in petition by which nonresident railway company joined as defendant in a negligence suit with a resident employé seek to remove the case for fraudulent joinder held insufficient.—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Whiteaker, 36 S. Ct. 152, 239 U. S. 421, 60 L. Ed. 360, affirming judgment Whiteaker v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 160 S. W. 1009, 252 Mo. 438.

IV. PREJUDICE, LOCAL INFLUENCE, OR DENIAL OF CIVIL RIGHTS.

63. Existence and evidence of prejudice or local influence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 117.

Under Judiciary Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 2, 24 Stat. 553 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], where prejudice and local influence such as would prevent a party from obtaining justice in a state court are relied on as ground for removal to a federal circuit court, they must be proved to the satisfaction of the circuit court.—City of Bellaire v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 146 U. S. 117, 13 S. Ct. 16, 36 L. Ed. 910.

65. Parties affected by prejudice or local influence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 119.

A defendant in a suit for partition, to which all the plaintiffs and all the defendants are indispensable parties, is not authorized (Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552, as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507]), where each and all of the defendants contested the rights which the plaintiffs asserted, and the defendant was a citizen of the same state as some of the plaintiffs, to remove the suit into a circuit court of the United States, from a state court, on the ground of prejudice or local influence between himself and other defendants.—Hanrick v. Hanrick, 153 U. S. 192, 14 S. Ct. 835, 38 L. Ed. 685.

66. Citizenship of parties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 120-124.

68. — Diversity of citizenship.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 122, 123.

In an action brought in North Carolina by a citizen of that state against a citizen of New York to recover possession of a lot in Wilmington, certain other citizens of North Carolina, in whom was the legal title, were made parties defendant. Held that, as all the necessary parties defendant were not citizens of different states from the plaintiff, there could be no removal, under Rev. St. § 639, cl. 3.—Myers v. Swann, 107 U. S. 546, 2 S. Ct. 685, 27 L. Ed. 583.

A removal for local prejudice, under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, could only be had where all the parties to the suit on one side were citizens of different states from those on the other.—Myers v. Swann, 107 U. S. 546, 2 S. Ct. 685, 27 L. Ed. 583; American Bible Soc. v. Price, 110 U. S. 61, 3 S. Ct. 440, 28 L. Ed. 70; Jefferson v. Driver, 117 U. S. 272, 6 S. Ct. 729, 29 L. Ed. 897; Cambria Iron Co. v. Ashburn, 118 U. S. 54, 6 S. Ct. 929, 30 L. Ed. 60; Hancock v. Holbrook, 119 U. S. 586, 7 S. Ct. 341, 30 L. Ed. 538, affirming order (C. C.) 27 F. 401; Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 42, 13 S. Ct. 576, 37 L. Ed. 399.

Testator bequeathed certain property to his executors in trust for his daughter for life, and after her death for her children. There were also bequests to two religious societies. All the parties were citizens of Illinois, except the societies. In a suit by the daughter to annul the will, the executors and the religious corporations were made parties defendant. Held, that the executors, representing the children, were necessary parties defendant, and that the religious societies could not, therefore, remove the suit into a federal court, under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, providing that a cause may be removed from a state to a federal court on account of "prejudice or local influence," when it is "between a citizen of the state in which it is brought, and a citizen of another state."—American Bible Soc. v. Price, 110 U. S. 61, 3 S. Ct. 440, 28 L. Ed. 70.

The provision for the removal of a separable controversy, under the second subdivision of Rev. St. § 639, has no application to removals under the third subdivision; and the similar provision in the act of 1875 applies only to removals under that act.—Jefferson v. Driver, 117 U. S. 272, 6 S. Ct. 729, 29 L. Ed. 897; Young v. Ewart, 132 U. S. 267, 10 S. Ct. 75, 33 L. Ed. 352.

Under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3 (Act March 2, 1867), relating to removal of causes to a federal court for local prejudice, all the necessary parties on one side must be citizens of the state where the suit is brought, and all on the other side must be citizens of other states, and such citizenship must exist when the action is commenced, as well as when the petition for removal is filed.—Young v. Ewart, 182 U. S. 267, 10 S. Ct. 75, 33 L. Ed. 352.

The right of a foreign railroad corporation under Act Cong. Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 2, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], to remove to a federal court, for prejudice or local influence, a suit brought in a court of North Carolina by a citizen of that state, is not defeated because such corporation has complied with the provisions of Pub. Acts N. C. 1899, c. 62, which declares that foreign railroad corporations shall become domestic by filing with the Secretary of State duly authenticated copies of their charters and by-laws. Judgment, Allison v. Southern Ry. Co., 40 S. E. 91, 129 N. C. 336, reversed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Allison, 23 S. Ct. 713, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. Ed. 1078.

A suit in which one of two defendants is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff cannot be removed by the other defendant for prejudice or local influence from a state to a federal Circuit Court, under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 553, as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508], providing for removals on those grounds of suits embracing a controversy between a citizen of the state in which the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, by "any defendant, being such citizen of another state," since to hold otherwise would bring this provision into conflict with the rule that suits, to be removable, must be within the original jurisdiction of the circuit court. Judgment 128 F. 1019, 62 C. C. A. 680, reversed.—Cochran v. Montgomery County, 26 S. Ct. 58, 199 U. S. 260, 60 L. Ed. 182, 4 Ann. Cas. 451.

670. Denial of civil rights.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 127; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

Where a state court of final resort had held that state laws excluding from grand and petit juries citizens of African descent were unconstitutional and void, it could not be presumed in advance of a trial that the officers summoning the juries would disregard the law so declared, and the case was not removable under Rev. St. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520], on the ground that defendant was denied the equal protection of the laws guaranteed him by the fourteenth amendment, because such statutes had not been formally repealed.—Bush v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110, 1 S. Ct. 625, 27 L. Ed. 354.

The fact that, in a county where there were 7,000 colored citizens qualified to serve as jurors, and but 1,500 whites similarly qualified, there had not been, for a number of years, any colored man summoned on the grand jury, and that colored citizens were purposely, on account of their color, excluded from jury service by the officers charged with the selection of jurors, constitutes no ground for the removal, by a colored man, of a criminal prosecution against him, from a state to a federal court, under Rev. St. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520] when the state laws do not provide for any such discrimination.—Smith v. State of Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 16 S. Ct. 900, 40 L. Ed. 1082; Gibson v. Same, 162 U. S. 565, 16 S. Ct. 904, 40 L. Ed. 1075, affirming 17 So. 892.

When the constitution and laws of a state, as interpreted by its highest court, contain no provisions preventing the enforcement of rights secured by any law of the United States for the protection and enforcement of the equal rights of all citizens thereof, the possibility that, during the trial of a particular case, a state court may not respect and enforce the right to the equal protection of the laws, constitutes no ground for removing the prosecution to a federal court, in advance of the trial, under Rev. St. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520].—Gibson v.

State of Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 16 S. Ct. 904, 40 L. Ed. 1075.

Whether a particular state statute, which does not discriminate against any class of citizens in respect to their civil rights, is applicable to the prosecution of a crime committed before its passage, is a question, in the first instance, for the determination of the state court; and its right and duty to determine the same cannot be interfered with by removing the prosecution to a federal court, except in those cases which have been made removable by express enactment of congress.—Id.

The denial of, or inability to enforce in a state tribunal, rights secured by a law providing for the equal civil rights of citizens, on account of which a criminal prosecution may, under Rev. St. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520], be removed from a state court, is primarily, if not exclusively, a denial of such rights or an inability to enforce them, resulting from the constitution or laws of the state, rather than a denial first made manifest at the trial of the case.—Murray v. State of Louisiana, 163 U. S. 101, 16 S. Ct. 990, 41 L. Ed. 87.

The nonrecognition by the state courts of the validity of a pardon pleaded in bar of a criminal prosecution, even if involving a denial of a right secured to the accused by the federal Constitution or laws, does not make a case for a removal of such cause from a state to a federal Circuit Court, under Rev. St. U. S. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 520, 521], authorizing such removals whenever the accused is denied or cannot enforce in the judicial tribunals of the state any right secured to him by any law providing for the equal civil rights of citizens of the United States, or of all persons within its jurisdiction. Order (C. C.) 139 F. 452, reversed.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. Powers, 26 S. Ct. 387, 201 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 633, 5 Ann. Cas. 692.

The denial in summoning or impaneling jurors, of any equal civil rights secured to an accused by the federal Constitution or laws, does not, unless authorized by the state Constitution or laws, as interpreted by its highest court, give the right to remove a criminal prosecution from a state to a federal Circuit Court, under Rev. St. U. S. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 520, 521], authorizing such removal whenever the accused is denied, or cannot enforce in the judicial tribunals of the state, any right secured to him by any law providing for the equal civil rights of citizens of the United States, or of all persons within its jurisdiction.—Id.

V. AMOUNT OR VALUE IN CONTROVERSY.

Mandamus to compel remand, see Mandamus,

64.

671. Cases subject to pecuniary limitation.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 128, 129.

A writ of habeas corpus, sued out in a state court by one arrested for crime, is a civil suit, but the matter in dispute is not capable of being estimated in money, and therefore it is not removable under Act Cong. March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 2.—Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 L. Ed. 458.

In order that defendant may remove a cause from a state to a federal court on account of prejudice or local influence, under Act 1887-88, c. 866, § 2, cl. 4, 25 Stat. 435 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 510], the matter in dispute must exceed the sum or value of $2,000, the jurisdictional amount required by the first clause of the act.—Ex parte Pennsylvania Co., 137 U. S. 451, 11 S. Ct. 141, 34 L. Ed. 738; Id., 137 U. S. 457, 11 S. Ct. 143, 34 L. Ed. 741.

672. Requisite amount or value.

A suit by a state, for the use of depositors in a state bank, citizens of such state, against a former bank commissioner, now a nonresident, and the nonresident surety on his bond, to recover the several losses of such depositors from the neglect of the commissioner, may not be removed to the federal court for diverse citizenship; none of the individual claims amounting to $3,000.—Title Guaranty & Surety Co. of Scranton, Pa., v. State of Idaho, 36 S. Ct. 345, 240 U. S. 136, 60 L. Ed. 566, dismissing appeal State v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co. of Scranton, Pa., 152 P. 189, 27 Idaho, 752.

674. Amount or value claimed or involved.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 130, 131.

Where a bill by many taxpayers of a county, in behalf of all taxpayers, attacks the validity of certain county bonds issued to aid in constructing a railway, and prays an injunction restraining the sheriff from collecting a tax levied for the payment of interest and the county judge from making any further levies, and also a decree that the bonds are invalid, and that all the holders be brought in by publication and perpetually enjoined from collecting principal or interest, the main controversy is as to the validity of the bonds, and therefore is not separable, as determining the jurisdictional amount, into controversies affecting the amount due from the separate taxpayers.—Brown v. Trousdale, 138 U. S. 389, 11 S. Ct. 308, 34 L. Ed. 987.

When several actions at law pending in a state court between the same parties, each for less than $500, but aggregating over $3,000, all depend upon the same state of facts, and by stipulation judgment is entered in all in accordance with the result of the trial of one, a single suit in equity may be maintained to restrain the enforcement of all the judgments on the ground of fraud in obtaining them; and hence such a suit involves the jurisdictional amount required by the act of 1875 ($500) to warrant a removal to the federal circuit court when the citizenship of the parties is diverse.—Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 12 S. Ct. 62, 35 L. Ed. 870, reversing judgment Calhoun v. McKnight, 39 La. Ann. 325, 1 So. 612.

675. Allegations and prayers in pleadings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 132.

Where a suit was brought in a state court for the possession of a tract of land, and for rents and profits alleged to be of the value of $2,500, and then removed to the federal circuit court, and there was nothing else to show jurisdiction of that court but a short stipulation by the parties that the amount in controversy exceeded $5,000, a judgment for defendants will be set aside.—Hegler v. Faulkner, 127 U. S. 482, 8 S. Ct. 1203, 32 L. Ed. 210.

676. Increase or reduction by amendment.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 133.

Where an action is brought in a state court which might have been removed to the circuit court of the United States had the amount of damages claimed been sufficient, the allowance of an amendment to make the complaint correspond with the evidence, which brings the damages claimed within the jurisdictional amount, cannot be objected to on proceedings in error, on the ground that it forced defendant to submit to a trial in the state court when he was entitled to a removal, where no application for removal was made when the amendment was allowed.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Austin, 135 U. S. 315, 10 S. Ct. 758, 34 L. Ed. 218.

VI. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE AND EFFECT OF REMOVAL.

Special appearance, see Appearance, 69.

678. Time of taking proceedings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 135-160; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

679. In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 135, 136, 139-160; 14 Cent. Dig. Crim. Law, § 198.

A suit begun in a state court before the passage of the act of March 3, 1875, cannot be removed under the separable controversy provision thereof, unless the application was made at or before the term at which the cause could be first tried after that act went into effect.—Myers v. Swann, 107 U. S. 546, 2 S. Ct. 685, 27 L. Ed. 583.

A petition for the removal of a case from a state to a federal court, under the act of 1875, must be filed at the term at which the case can be first tried and before the trial thereof.—Id.

Act March 3, 1875, relating to the removal of causes from a state to a federal court, provides that the party desiring such removal shall file a petition in the state court "before or at the term at which said cause could be first tried, and before the trial thereof." Held, that a cause could not be removed after a trial was had in the state court, the judgment rendered therein set aside, and a new trial ordered, and the term at which this was done had ended.—Holland v. Chambers, 110 U. S. 59, 3 S. Ct. 427, 28 L. Ed. 70.

Under Act Cong. March 3, 1875, which requires the petition for the removal of a cause to be filed in the state court, or at the time at which the cause could be first tried, and before the trial, a case cannot be removed where the controversy was simply a part of a suit which had been pending for years, and in which the merits of the controversy had been fully adjudicated.—Cable v. Ellis, 110 U. S. 389, 4 S. Ct. 85, 28 L. Ed. 186.

A demurrer to a complaint, under Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 488, on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, raises an issue which involves the merits, and the trial of such issue is a trial of the action, within the provision of Act March 3, 1875, § 3, for removal of causes to United States courts on application "before the trial."—Alley v. Nott, 111 U. S. 472, 4 S. Ct. 495, 28 L. Ed. 491; Scharff v. Levy, 112 U. S. 711, 5 S. Ct. 360, 28 L. Ed. 825.

Where the term of a state court at which a cause stood for trial on the merits, with pleadings completed, has passed so that the right of removal under the act of March 3, 1875, is gone, a new right of removal is not created by subsequent amendments, on leave granted, making new issues, and bringing in parties who were represented by an original party.—Eddington v. Jefferson, 111 U. S. 770, 4 S. Ct. 683, 28 L. Ed. 594.

The removal act of 1875 provides that the election to remove a cause from a state to a federal court must be made at the term at which the case could be first tried. In an equity case application for removal was not made until the sixth term after that to which the suit was brought, though, by reason of extensions of time obtained by order of court and agreement of the parties, the answers were not filed until the term preceding that in which the application was made. Held, that the application came too late.—Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Speck, 113 U. S. 84, 5 S. Ct. 374, 28 L. Ed. 925.

The report of commissioners to whom a claim has been referred by a probate court, under the statutes of Michigan, is not a final hearing, within the meaning of Rev. St. § 639, pro-voting for the removal of causes from state courts on the ground of local prejudice, if application is made before the trial or final hearing of the suit.—Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 5 S. Ct. 377, 23 L. Ed. 927.

Act 1875, c. 137 (18 Stat. 470), providing that the petition for removal must be filed at or before the term at which the cause could be first tried, and before the trial, means the first term at which the cause could have stood for trial had the parties taken the usual steps as to pleadings and other preparations.—Gregory v. Hartley, 113 U. S. 742, 5 S. Ct. 743, 28 L. Ed. 1150.

There cannot be a removal after a hearing on a demurrer to a complaint because it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.—Id.

Where a preliminary proceeding for widening a street is in the nature of an inquest to ascertain the value of the property to be condemned by right of eminent domain, until it is transferred to a state court by appeal from the award, it is not a "suit," within the meaning of the removal acts; and a trial therein before a mayor of a city and a jury, and an appeal from the award, before the filing of a petition for removal, are not ground for denying such petition, as not filed before the trial.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Myers, 115 U. S. 1, 5 S. Ct. 1113, 29 L. Ed. 319, reversing judgment (C. C.) Myers v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 16 F. 292, 3 McCrary, 578.

The right of removal under Act March 3 1875, if lost by failure to file a petition before or at the term at which said cause could be first tried, and before the trial thereof, is not restored by amendment of the pleadings presenting different issues.—Phoenix Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Walrath, 117 U. S. 365, 6 S. Ct. 768, 29 L. Ed. 924, affirming judgment (C. C.) Id., 16 F. 161, 11 Biss. 432.

Where the record does not disclose a state of facts by which it would have been possible to force defendant to trial at the term when his petition for removal was filed, he is not prevented from filing such petition by the provision of the removal act of 1875 that it must be filed before or at the term at which the case could be first tried.—Carson v. Hyatt, 118 U. S. 279, 6 S. Ct. 1050, 30 L. Ed. 167.

Under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, which was not repealed by the act of March 3, 1875, although the two preceding subsections were, a petition for the removal of a cause between citizens of different states from the state to the federal courts, on the ground of local prejudice, filed after a new trial has been actually granted, and while the cause is pending in the trial court for that purpose, is in time, and the security to be given, if the cause is not embraced within the act of 1875, is to be governed by that provided for in subsection 3 of section 639, which omits to require security for all costs in case the removal is decided to be unlawful.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Bates, 119 U. S. 464, 7 S. Ct. 285, 30 L. Ed. 436.

An application for a removal of a cause from a state to the United States court, on the ground of citizenship, under Act March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 470, c. 137), comes too late when made after trial and verdict, subject only to a demurrer to the evidence. The law requires the application to be made before the trial.—Bank of Mayville v. Claypool, 120 U. S. 268, 7 S. Ct. 545, 30 L. Ed. 632.

A petition for the removal of a case from a state to a federal court, filed after a demurrer to the bill has been sustained because it does not state facts sufficient to entitle complainant to the relief prayed for, is filed too late, and the case is not removable.—Laidly v. Huntington, 121 U. S. 179, 7 S. Ct. 855, 30 L. Ed. 883.

A suit was begun in the circuit court of C. county at the December term, 1884. During that term, on defendant's application, the suit was removed to the circuit court of D. county, and on April 22, 1885, defendant filed in the latter court a petition for removal to the federal court. Held that, since the cause could have been tried at the term in C. county, the application was not in time, under the act of March 3, 1875.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Burns, 124 U. S. 165, 8 S. Ct. 421, 31 L. Ed. 333.

Under Rev. St. Ind. §§ 5758-5761, 5777, requiring claims against a county to be filed with the county auditor, to be by him presented to the board of commissioners who are to pass upon them, and granting an appeal from their decision to the circuit court of the county, where it shall be tried "as an original cause," the latter trial is the one before which, if at all, the cause must be removed to the circuit court of the United States, under Rev. St. § 639, cl. 3.—Delaware County Com'rs v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co., 133 U. S. 473, 10 S. Ct. 399, 33 L. Ed. 674.

Under Act 1887-1888 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], requiring a petition for removal to be filed before or at the time defendant is required by the laws of the state or rule of the state court in which the suit is brought to plead, a petition for removal, filed after the lapse of four terms from the time defendant was required to plead, comes too late. Failure of plaintiff to take judgment by default does not extend the time for removal.—Kansas City Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 298, 11 S. Ct. 306, 34 L. Ed. 963, affirming judgment 88 Tenn. (4 Pickle) 721, 13 S. W. 698.

Where the cause was ready for trial, and defendant had demanded trial by jury, but the cause was continued, it is too late when it is called for trial to apply for removal to the federal court.—Manning v. Amy, 140 U. S. 137, 11 S. Ct. 707, 35 L. Ed. 386, affirming judgment Amy v. Manning, 144 Mass. 153, 10 N. E. 737.

Under the act of March 3, 1875, requiring a petition for the removal of a cause from a state court to be filed in the state court before or at the term at which said cause could be first tried, there cannot be a removal after a case has been once tried, and the judgment reversed on appeal by the supreme court of the state.—Rosenthal v. Coates, 148 U. S. 142, 13 S. Ct. 576, 37 L. Ed. 399.

A petition filed before the time at which defendant is required by the laws of the state to plead to the merits, but after the time at which he is required to plead to the jurisdiction or in abatement of the writ, is too late, under the requirement of Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], that it shall be filed at or before the time when defendant is so required "to answer or plead to the declaration or complaint."—Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 151 U. S. 673, 14 S. Ct. 533, 38 L. Ed. 311, dismissing writ of error (C. C.) Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 41 F. 125.

Under Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, providing that a party entitled to a removal may file his petition therefor at or before the time he is required to plead in the state court, a removal may be had on a petition alleging diverse citizenship, filed after such time, when the cause then for the first time became removable by dismissal of all defendants who were residents of the state.—Powers v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co., 18 S. Ct. 264, 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. Ed. 673.

The time for removing to a federal Circuit Court, for diversity of citizenship, a proceeding for the taking of land by eminent domain, begun in a Kentucky county court, under the authority of Ky. St. §§ 835-839, is not postponed until after the case has been taken by appeal to a state circuit court, where it can be tried de novo, inasmuch as under the state statute the condemning party is entitled, even after such appeal, to pay into court the damages assessed in the county court, and, before the case is concluded in the higher court, to take possession of the land and oust the owner. Decree (C. C.) St. Bernard Min. Co. v. Madisonville Traction Co., 130 F. 794, affirmed.—Madisonville Traction Co. v. St. Bernard Min. Co., 25 S. Ct. 251, 196 U. S. 239, 49 L. Ed. 462.

A petition to remove a cause to a federal court is in time when filed as soon as petitioner learns of the filing, without notice, of additional pleadings in the state court, which disclose a removable controversy. Decree (1907) Boatmen's Bank of St. Louis v. Fritzen, 89 P. 915, 75 Kan. 479, affirmed.—Fritzen v. Boatmen's Bank, 29 S. Ct. 366, 212 U. S. 364, 53 L. Ed. 551.

§80. — On ground of prejudice or local influence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 160.

A petition for the removal of a cause under Rev. St. U. S. § 639, cl. 3, on the ground of prejudice or local influence, may be filed at any time before the trial or final hearing in the state court.—Schraeder Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Pack-er, 129 U. S. 688, 9 S. Ct. 385, 32 L. Ed. 760.

Under Act 1887-88, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], a cause may be removed to a federal court on the ground of local prejudice at any time before the first trial thereof is actually held, although such trial might have been held before the date of the application for removal.—Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 207, 35 L. Ed. 1080, reversing judgment (C. C.) 32 F. 417, and (C. C.) 35 F. 230.

Under Act 1887-88, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], providing for the removal of causes upon the ground of local prejudice "at any time before the trial thereof," the right of removal is restricted to the term at which the cause might have been first tried in the ordinary courts of procedure; and, after one or more trials and reversals, the right is lost.—Id.

An application for the removal of a will contest to a circuit court of the United States for "prejudice or local influence," if authorized by the act of congress of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, providing for the removal of causes "at any time before the trial thereof," comes too late when first made after a mistrial of the cause in a state probate court.—McDonnell v. Jordan, 20 S. Ct. 886, 178 U. S. 229, 44 L. Ed. 1048.

§81. — Effect of delay, and waiver of objections.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 137, 138.

Objection to the jurisdiction of a United States circuit court over a case, otherwise removable, on the ground that the petition for removal was filed too late, is waived if not taken in the state court or the circuit court, and cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court on writ of error.—Gerling v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co., 151 U. S. 673, 14 S. Ct. 533, 38 L. Ed. 311, dismissing writ of error (C. C.) Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 41 F. 125.

§82. Parties to petition.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 163.

All the defendants must unite in a petition for the removal to a federal court, under the act of congress of March 3, 1887, as corrected by the act of August 13, 1888, of a cause arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, where a joint cause of action is alleged against all the defendants for causing the death of a person. Judgment, 53 P. 461, 59 Kan. 437, affirmed.—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Martin, 20 S. Ct. 854, 178 U. S. 245, 44 L. Ed. 1055.

§86. Petition in state court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 132, 166-179.

Where an averment in the original complaint that defendant company is a foreign corporation is supplemented by the statement in the petition for removal that it is a corporation under the laws of Great Britain, the fact that it was a foreign corporation at the commencement of the action is sufficiently alleged.—National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 1 S. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 87.

To sustain federal jurisdiction over a removed cause on the ground of diverse citizenship, it must appear affirmatively from the petition for removal, or elsewhere in the record, that such diversity existed at the commencement of the suit, and not merely at the time of removal or subsequently.—Gibson v. Bruce, 106 U. S. 561, 2 S. Ct. 873, 27 L. Ed. 825; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Shirley, 111 U. S. 358, 4 S. Ct. 472, 28 L. Ed. 455; Smith v. Akers, 117 U. S. 197, 6 S. Ct. 669, 29 L. Ed. 888; Stevens v. Nichols, 130 U. S. 230, 9 S. Ct. 518, 32 L. Ed. 914; Jackson v. Allen, 132 U. S. 27, 10 S. Ct. 9, 33 L. Ed. 249; La Confiance Compagnie D'Assurance Contre L'Incendie v. Hall, 137 U. S. 61, 11 S. Ct. 5, 34 L. Ed. 573; Kellam v. Keith, 144 U. S. 568, 12 S. Ct. 922, 36 L. Ed. 544; Mattingly v. Northwestern Virginia R. Co., 158 U. S. 53, 15 S. Ct. 725, 39 L. Ed. 894.

An averment of residence in a petition for removal is not equivalent to an averment of citizenship, and will not support the jurisdiction of the federal court.—Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 278, 3 S. Ct. 207, 27 L. Ed. 932; Pennsylvania Co. v. Bender, 148 U. S. 255, 13 S. Ct. 591, 37 L. Ed. 441; Neel v. Pennsylvania Co., 157 U. S. 153, 15 S. Ct. 589, 39 L. Ed. 654.

Where a petition asks for a removal of a cause under Rev. St. U. S. § 639, subd. 3, and also states facts showing a right to a removal under Act March 3, 1875, § 2, the reference to the prior statute does not impair its efficacy.—Canal & C. Sta. R. Co. v. Hart, 114 U. S. 654, 5 S. Ct. 1127, 29 L. Ed. 226.

A suit was commenced in a state court. November 4th, as No. 4,414. A petition by the plaintiff to remove it into the circuit court of the United States was filed the next day, entitled in the suit as No. 4,414, signed by his attorneys, referring to the suit as commenced, and asking for a removal under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, and stating facts showing a right to a removal, not only under that subdivision, but also under Act March 3, 1875, § 2 (18 Stat. 470), and accompanied by an affidavit, made by the plaintiff October 25th, stating that "he is the plaintiff" in the suit, as No. 4,414, and giving its title, and the name of the court, and alleging "that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that, from prejudice and local influence, he will not be able to obtain justice in said state court." Held, the affidavit sufficiently identified the suit, and was as effective as if made after suit brought.—Id.

In a petition for removal, an allegation that none of the complainants are citizens of the same state as defendant is not sufficient as to the complainants' citizenship to give the federal court jurisdiction.—Cameron v. Hodges, 127 U. S. 322, 8 S. Ct. 1154, 32 L. Ed. 132.

A petition is not insufficient to justify the removal of a cause from a state court to a federal circuit court because the allegation that the time had not arrived at which the defendant was required to answer or plead is an allegation of a conclusion of law.—Remington v.

Central Pac. R. Co., 25 S. Ct. 577, 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. Ed. 959.

Allegations in the removal petition that the lessor railway company and the conductor of the train were fraudulently joined as party defendants solely for the purpose of preventing a removal to a federal Circuit Court for diverse citizenship, of an action commenced in a Kentucky court, against the nonresident railway company exclusively operating the road, to recover for the death of an engineer, caused by the alleged negligent operation of the train and the defective condition of the road, are not sufficient to entitle the petitioner to the removal of the cause, where, in Kentucky, the facts alleged and proved against the lessee railway company in the state court made its lessor jointly liable as a matter of law. Judgment, Illinois Cent. R. Co. of State of Illinois v. Sheegog's Adm'r (1907) 103 S. W. 323, 126 Ky. 252, affirmed.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. of State of Illinois v. Sheegog, 30 S. Ct. 101, 215 U. S. 308, 54 L. Ed. 208.

Allegations in a removal petition that a resident employé was fraudulently joined with a nonresident railway company as defendant in a personal injury suit by another employé, to prevent a removal for diverse citizenship, held insufficient to entitle petitioner to a removal, where under the local law the facts alleged stated a case for which defendants might be jointly sued, notwithstanding the liability of the railway company was statutory in so far as the fellow servant rule had been abolished by statute, while the liability of the employé depended on the common law.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Dowell, 33 S. Ct. 684, 229 U. S. 102, 57 L. Ed. 1090, affirming judgment Dowell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 112 P. 136, 83 Kan. 562.

An averment that a resident railway employé, made a party defendant in a personal injury action brought against a nonresident railroad company by another employé, was a man of small means, and the responsibility of the railroad company was unquestioned, held not to show a fraudulent joinder to prevent removal.—Id.

Allegations in the removal petition, that the charges of negligence against resident railroad employes in charge of the train doing the injuries complained of, and joined as defendants with a nonresident railway company, were false and made to fraudulently prevent the railroad company from removing the cause for diverse citizenship, held insufficient to entitle the petitioner to remove the case.—Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Cockrell, 34 S. Ct. 278, 232 U. S. 146, 58 L. Ed. 544, affirming judgment Same v. Banks' Adm'r, 137 S. W. 1066, 144 Ky. 137.

Allegations in a petition for removal of a separable controversy, amounting simply to a traverse of the facts alleged in plaintiff's petition, are insufficient.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Lloyd, 36 S. Ct. 210, 239 U. S. 496, 60 L. Ed. 402, affirming judgment Lloyd v. Southern Ry. Co., 81 S. E. 1003, 166 N. C. 24.

The prohibition of Judicial Code, § 28, prevents the removal for diverse citizenship as a separable controversy of a suit brought under the federal Employers' Liability Act in which a resident and nonresident corporation were made defendants, upon a petition alleging fraudulent joinder and denying that the injury happened in interstate commerce.—Id.

◀87. Petition, affidavits, and other proof of prejudice or local influence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 180-183.

In Act 1887-88, § 2, subd. 4 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], providing for removal of causes from state courts on account of prejudice or local influence, the words, "when it shall be made to appear to said circuit court that from prejudice," etc., require legal proof of the fact of such prejudice; and an affidavit that such prejudice exists, without any statement of facts showing how or why it exists, is not sufficient.—Ex parte Pennsylvania Co., 137 U. S. 451, 11 S. Ct. 141, 34 L. Ed. 738; Id., 137 U. S. 457, 11 S. Ct. 143, 34 L. Ed. 741.

◀89. Filing petition and bond in state court, and proceedings thereon.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 162, 165, 189, 192-195, 197, 200, 201; 2 Cent. Dig. App. & E. § 724.

A state court is not bound to surrender its jurisdiction by removal under the act of 1875, until a case is made which, on the face of the record, shows that the petitioner is entitled to such a removal. The mere filing of a petition is not enough, unless, when taken in connection with the rest of the record, it shows on its face that the petitioner has, under the statute, the right to take the suit to another tribunal.—Gregory v. Hartley, 113 U. S. 742, 5 S. Ct. 743, 28 L. Ed. 1150; Stone v. State of South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 6 S. Ct. 790, 29 L. Ed. 962.

The denial by a state court of an application to remove a cause to the federal court raises a federal question giving jurisdiction to the federal court.—Oakley v. Goodnow, 118 U. S. 43, 6 S. Ct. 944, 30 L. Ed. 61.

Questions of fact arising on a petition for removal are for the federal court alone, and the state court has no jurisdiction to determine them.—Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Daughtry, 138 U. S. 298, 11 S. Ct. 306, 34 L. Ed. 963, affirming judgment 88 Tenn. (4 Pickle) 721, 13 S. W. 698.

The removal of a state prosecution against a federal revenue officer under Rev. St. § 643 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 521], is not accomplished until the state court receives notice from the clerk of the federal court of the petition filed in his office.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 13 S. Ct. 536, 37 L. Ed. 386.

The prosecution which was commenced in the state court, after the filing of the petition, by the finding of an indictment, was not removed by the order holding the petitioner to trial in the federal court; for, in cases of removal under this section, the jurisdiction of the federal court depends entirely on the statements made in the verified petition.—Id.

In the Western district of Virginia, where the federal judge is judge both of the district and circuit courts, and both courts are held at the same time and place, and have the same clerk, a deputy United States marshal arrested for murder on a warrant from a justice of the peace, before his preliminary examination before such justice, filed in the district court a petition addressed to the judge of the circuit court, alleging his arrest, that he was then confined in jail "awaiting trial before said justice upon the said charge of murder," and that the killing was done in self-defense while acting under the revenue laws. The petition prayed a removal into the circuit court, and for a writ of habeas corpus cum causa. The federal judge thereupon made an order entitled in the district court, awarding a writ of habeas corpus in common form. Pending an adjournment of the hearing thereon, the state grand jury for the proper county found an indictment against the petitioner for murder, which was exhibited to the federal court by an amendment to the jailer's return. After the hearing an order was entered in the district court, simply requiring the petitioner to be recognized for his appearance before the federal circuit court "to answer the indictment found against him by a grand jury of the county court of Smyth county, Virginia." Held, that these proceedings were not in compliance with Rev. St. § 643 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 521], which requires the petition in such a case to be filed with the clerk of the circuit court, and a writ of certiorari or habeas corpus cum causa issued by him to be served on the state court.—Id.

A second application for removal to a federal court raising the issue of fraudulent joinder of defendants, when made after a ruling sustaining, in favor of one of two defendants, a demurrer to the evidence, cannot be regarded as erroneously denied by a state court, where the evidence demurred to is not made part of the record, and this issue was first raised on the second application, without stating when the petitioner first learned of the fraud, and the averments of fraud were specifically denied, and, so far as the record discloses, the petitioner, who had the affirmative of the issue, failed to make out its case. Judgment, 68 P. 46, 64 Kan. 546, affirmed.—Kansas City Suburban Belt Ry. Co. v. Herman, 23 S. Ct. 24, 187 U. S. 63, 47 L. Ed. 76.

The presentation of the petition to a judge of the state court at chambers and the filing of the petition in the state court, satisfy the statutory requirements respecting the removal of a cause from the state to a federal circuit court.—Remington v. Central Pac. R. Co., 25 S. Ct. 577, 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. Ed. 959.

The state courts have no jurisdiction to pass finally upon facts stated in a petition for the removal of a cause from a state to a federal court, since that is the exclusive province of the federal court. Judgment (1907) 102 S. W. 106, 100 Tex. 556, affirmed.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Eastin & Knox, 29 S. Ct. 564, 214 U. S. 153, 53 L. Ed. 946.

The restoration of the jurisdiction of a state court after one of the original defendants had filed its petition and bond for the removal of a separable controversy to a federal Circuit Court was effected by action and conduct equivalent to a formal waiver of new process and new pleadings or any formal remainder by the federal court, where the plaintiff, before any order was made in the state court, or the record filed in the federal court, had an order entered in the state court, dismissing his action against the removing defendant and certain others having a like ground of removal, the order reciting that, in consideration of such dismissal, the petition for removal was withdrawn, and thereafter the case was proceeded with against the remaining defendants to verdict and judgment without any objection by either the plaintiff or the remaining defendants.—(1911) Anderson v. United Realty Co., 32 S. Ct. 50, 222 U. S. 164, 56 L. Ed. 144, affirming judgment (1908) 86 N. E. 644, 79 Ohio St. 23.

Issues of fact on petition for removal from a state to a federal court are to be determined in the federal court, and the state court in determining whether it will surrender jurisdiction must accept as true the allegations of fact in the petition.—Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Cockrell, 34 S. Ct. 278, 232 U. S. 146, 58 L. Ed. 544, affirming judgment 137 S. W. 1066, 144 Ky. 137.

§91. Determination by United States court as to removal on ground of prejudice or local influence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 202.

Under the act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. 552, c. 373, § 2 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 509], a removal is not effected by a mere entry in a federal court finding the petition, affidavit, and bond for removal sufficient. The proper procedure is to obtain an order of removal from the federal court, file that order in the state court, and take a transcript therefrom, and file it in the federal court.—Pennsylvania Co. v. Bender, 148 U. S. 255, 13 S. Ct. 591, 37 L. Ed. 441.

§92. Filing copy of record in United States court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 190.

When, upon proper application, the jurisdiction of the state court is divested, and that of the circuit court has attached, a failure to file the transcript within the time prescribed will not restore the jurisdiction of the state court, but the circuit court retains the case, to dismiss or remand, as it may determine.—National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 1 S. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 87.

§94. Defects in proceedings, objections, amendments, and waiver.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 178, 203.

An objection that a petition for removal is not verified under oath, or was filed too late, is waived by delay.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Myers, 115 U. S. 1, 5 S. Ct. 1113, 29 L. Ed. 319, reversing judgment (C. C.) Myers v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 16 F. 292, 3 McCrary, 578.

The absence of an oath to a petition by plaintiff for the removal of a cause was at most an informality, which defendant waived by not taking the objection on the motion to remand.—Canal & C. Sts. R. Co. v. Hart, 114 U. S. 654, 5 S. Ct. 1127, 29 L. Ed. 226.

Plaintiff must be deemed to have consented to accept the jurisdiction of a federal Circuit Court over a suit removed from a state court on defendant's petition, where, after the removal, plaintiff, instead of moving to remand, filed an amended petition in the federal court, signed a stipulation giving time to the defendant to answer, and entered with the defendant into successive stipulations for continuances.—In re Moore, 28 S. Ct. 585, 706, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. Ed. 904, 14 Ann. Cas. 1164.

Consent of both parties waives all objections to the jurisdiction of a federal Circuit Court to which has been removed from a state court, for diverse citizenship, a suit which, by reason of the nonresidence of both parties, could not, in view of Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 1, 25 Stat. 433 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), have been brought in that particular federal Circuit Court in the first instance.—Id.

Any irregularity in docketing a cause removed to a federal Circuit Court from a state court, in the order of the pleadings, may be waived, and neither it nor the method of securing the attendance of the parties deprives the federal court of jurisdiction where a controversy between the citizens of different states was presented.—Mackay v. Uinta Development Co., 33 S. Ct. 638, 229 U. S. 173, 57 L. Ed. 1138.

§95. Transfer of jurisdiction and effect of removal in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 204, 205.

Upon the filing in the state court, in due time, of a sufficient petition and bond, in a cause removable thereby, the jurisdiction of the state court absolutely ceases, and that of the circuit court of the United States immediately attaches, regardless of any action thereon by the state court; and any further proceeding in the state court is coram non iudice, unless its jurisdiction is actually restored.—National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 1 S. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 87.

Though defendant's petition and bond for removal to the federal court are filed in apt time, and based upon proper grounds, they do not effect such removal, when at the time he moves the state court for an order of removal he reserves his right to remove pending the determination of a motion to dismiss and a plea in abatement theretofore filed.—Manning v. Amy, 140 U. S. 137, 11 S. Ct. 707, 35 L. Ed. 386, affirming judgment Amy v. Manning, 144 Mass. 153, 10 N. E. 737.

A federal Circuit Court may determine the right to remove a case independently of the jurisdiction of the state courts in view of the provisions of Removal Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, §§ 3, 5, 7, 18 Stat. 471, 472 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 510, 512), that the Circuit Court may remand and dismiss the case if it does not substantially involve a controversy properly within its jurisdiction, or if there is collusive joinders of parties. Judgment (1907) Maysville & B. S. R. Co. v. McCabe's Adm'r, 100 S. W. 219, 30 Ky. Law Rep. 1009, reversed.—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. McCabe, 29 S. Ct. 430, 213 U. S. 207, 53 L. Ed. 765.

§96. Proceedings in state court after removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 206-211.

An inspection of the petition for removal is essential to determine whether it contained allegations sufficient to authorize a transfer of the cause, and in its absence from the record it must be presumed, in support of the judgment of the state court, that it was defective in the allegations of jurisdictional facts.—Bush v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110, 1 S. Ct. 625, 27 L. Ed. 354.

Where a state court has refused to allow the removal of a cause, on the ground that the defendant has failed to prove the diverse citizenship of the parties, and has proceeded with it to a final decision, on writ of error to the state court, the United States supreme court will, although the case is not within the letter of rule 32, which provides that, where a writ of error or an appeal is brought under the act of March 3, 1875, such case may be advanced on motion, and heard under the rules applicable to motions to dismiss, advance the case on motion made thereunder.—Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co. v. Dunn, 121 U. S. 182, 7 S. Ct. 1114, 30 L. Ed. 885.

Where, in an action brought against a railroad company in a state court of Minnesota, the company files a petition for removal under Rev. St. § 639, setting up its residence in Iowa, and that of the plaintiff in Minnesota, and the plaintiff files a counter affidavit that he is not a citizen of Minnesota, but of the territory of Montana, a case is presented where the record shows on its face that the state court ought to proceed no further; and it is not competent for that court to allow an issue of fact to be made upon the statements in the petition, and to retain the suit, because on that issue the company has not shown by testimony that the plaintiff was actually a citizen of Minnesota.—Burlington, C. R. & N. Ry. Co. v. Dunn, 122 U. S. 513, 7 S. Ct. 1262, 30 L. Ed. 1159.

A defendant who makes no application for a removal cannot assign for error the refusal of the state court to permit a removal on the application of other defendants.—Merchants' Cotton-Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 151 U. S. 368, 14 S. Ct. 367, 38 L. Ed. 195, affirming judgment Insurance Co. of North America v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 91 Tenn. 537, 19 S. W. 755.

An error of the state court in denying an application to remove to a federal court is not prejudicial if, notwithstanding such denial, the record is filed in the federal court, and the cause proceeds therein to final hearing, when it is remanded, and the state court in the meantime awaits the action of the federal court.—Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 16 S. Ct. 389, 40 L. Ed. 536.

§97. — Validity and effect in general.

By the filing of the requisite petition and bond the jurisdiction of the state court is divested, and that of the circuit court immediately attaches, and is not affected by the fact that upon a ruling by the state court that the cause was not removable the removing party subsequently consented to a trial before a referee.—National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 1 S. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 87.

The removal of a criminal prosecution, under Rev. St. § 641 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 520], on the ground that the defendant is denied the equal civil rights of citizens secured to him by the constitution and laws of the United States, does not operate to absolutely divest the state court of all jurisdiction of the offense, and after that indictment is quashed by the federal court it remains for the state court to determine whether the accused shall be again indicted or the prosecution abandoned.—Bush v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110, 1 S. Ct. 625, 27 L. Ed. 354.

If the state court proceeds after a petition for removal, it does so at the risk of having its final judgment reversed, if the record on its face shows that when the petition was filed that court ought to have given up its jurisdiction.—Stone v. State of South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 6 S. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 962.

§99. Unauthorized or improper removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 212.

A state court does not lose jurisdiction of an action for death because the federal Circuit Court made several orders continuing the case after filing of transcript in that court and dismissed it for want of prosecution, where on the face of the record the case was not a removable one.—Iowa Central Ry. Co. v. Bacon, 35 S. Ct. 357, 236 U. S. 305, 59 L. Ed. 591, affirming judgment Bacon v. Iowa Cent. Ry. Co., 137 N. W. 1011, 157 Iowa, 493.

VII. REMAND OR DISMISSAL OF CAUSE.

Mandamus to compel remand, see Mandamus,

§4, 26, 44.

Review of decisions, see Appeal and Error, §77, 189, 958.

§100. Power and duty to remand.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 213.

As a federal court cannot acquire jurisdiction by consent of parties, the Supreme Court, on appeal from a decision on the merits in the Circuit Court in a case removed from a state court, where it appears that the case was not a removable one, will, on its own motion, make such order as will prevent the Circuit Court from exercising jurisdiction.—State of Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co., 24 S. Ct. 598, 194 U. S. 48, 48 L. Ed. 870, reversing decree (C. C.) 123 F. 692.

§101. Grounds for remand.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 218-224.

§102. — Want of jurisdiction or of cause for removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 218-220, 223, 224.

Where, on the removal of a cause, the copy of the record is not filed within the time fixed by statute, it is within the discretion of the federal court to remand the cause.—St. Paul & C. R. Co. v. McLean, 108 U. S. 212, 2 S. Ct. 498, 27 L. Ed. 703.

After a removal of a cause to the United States court by reason of the citizenship of the parties, the admission of new parties, as complainants, who are residents of the same state as the defendants, does not oust the United States court of jurisdiction.—Stewart v. Dunham, 115 U. S. 61, 5 S. Ct. 1163, 29 L. Ed. 329.

Where an action is brought in a state court in Missouri by a citizen of Pennsylvania against a citizen of Missouri, who is in possession of real property, to recover such property, and the action is removed to the federal court by the defendant on the ground that the plaintiff is a citizen of another state, and after such removal the defendant sets up that he is only a tenant, and moves to bring in the real owners of the property, as he has a right to do under 1 Rev. St. Mo. 1879, § 2244, and, after such owners are made defendants, plaintiff moves to remand the case on the ground that they are the real defendants in the action, and are citizens of the state of Pennsylvania, the motion to remand should not be granted.—Phelps v. Oaks, 117 U. S. 236, 6 S. Ct. 714, 29 L. Ed. 888.

A suit removed from a state court by a defendant brought in by supplemental petition, on the sole ground of the existence of a separate controversy between himself and plaintiff, a citizen of a different state, is properly remanded, under Act 1875, § 5, when, on motion of plaintiff, the suit is discontinued as to such defendant.—Texas Transp. Co. v. Seeligson, 122 U. S. 519, 7 S. Ct. 1261, 30 L. Ed. 1150.

The jurisdiction of a federal circuit court, once acquired on removal from a state court, cannot be divested by the dismissal of the bill on complainant's own motion after a cross-bill has been filed, although the jurisdictional amount may no longer be in dispute.—Kirby v. American Soda Fountain Co., 24 S. Ct. 619, 194 U. S. 141, 48 L. Ed. 911.

106. Waiver of right to remand.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 216.

A general appearance by plaintiff in a federal Circuit Court after the cause has been removed from a state court does not waive an objection to jurisdiction founded on the total lack of any controversy of a federal nature, since in such cases consent of both parties cannot confer jurisdiction.—In re Winn, 29 S. Ct. 515, 213 U. S. 458, 53 L. Ed. 873.

Making up the issues on the merits without objection waives the right to object, because of the nonresidence of both parties within the district, to the jurisdiction of a federal Circuit Court to which the cause has been removed from the state court for diverse citizenship. Judgment (1907) 152 F. 120, 81 C. C. A. 338, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 684, reversed.—Kreigh v. Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co., 29 S. Ct. 619, 214 U. S. 249, 53 L. Ed. 984.

107. Proceedings for remand and review thereof.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 178, 225-232, 234; 2 Cent. Dig. App. & E. § 725.

In a suit for foreclosure, commenced in a state court, and removed to the circuit court of the United States, a motion to remand was overruled. Subsequently a final decree of sale was passed. Held, upon appeal merely from the order confirming the sale, the final decree not disclosing affirmatively a want of jurisdiction, that the supreme court will not examine the record, prior to such final decree, to see whether the petition for removal makes a case of federal jurisdiction, but will only examine the decree to ascertain whether the sale was had in conformity with its provisions.—Turner v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 106 U. S. 552, 1 S. Ct. 519, 27 L. Ed. 273.

An order remanding a cause, where the copy of the record was not filed within the time fixed by statute, should not be disturbed unless it clearly appears that the discretion with which the court is invested has been improperly exercised.—St. Paul & C. R. Co. v. McLean, 108 U. S. 212, 2 S. Ct. 498, 27 L. Ed. 703.

Where a case is improperly removed from a state court, and a motion to remand is refused, the party, having saved his point in the record, may have the error corrected on appeal to the United States supreme court after final decree below.—Edrington v. Jefferson, 111 U. S. 770, 4 S. Ct. 683, 28 L. Ed. 594.

When a suit which has been removed from a state to a federal court is brought to the supreme court of the United States by appeal, and it does not appear on the face of the record that the citizenship of the parties was such as to give the circuit court jurisdiction upon the removal, the judgment or decree of the circuit court will be reversed without inquiry into the merits, and the cause sent back with instructions to remand it to the state court, from which it was improperly removed.—Hancock v. Holbrook, 112 U. S. 229, 5 S. Ct. 115, 28 L. Ed. 714, reversing decree (C. C.) 9 F. 353, 4 Woods, 52.

In such case the supreme court will make such order as to the costs of the appeal as may be just.—Id.

In an action against a corporation on an issue as to citizenship of plaintiff, an affidavit of an officer of defendant that plaintiff is a nonresident, previously made in support of a motion for security for costs, is admissible in evidence.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Ohle, 117 U. S. 123, 6 S. Ct. 632, 29 L. Ed. 837.

The petition for removal, though defective in containing mere conclusions of law, may be considered sufficiently amended by a subsequent answer setting forth facts which go to show the jurisdiction of the United States court.—Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 421, 7 S. Ct. 1030, 30 L. Ed. 992.

A proceeding to remove an action from a South Carolina state court to the United States court on the ground, among others, that plaintiff was a citizen of South Carolina, while defendant was a citizen of Massachusetts, places the burden of proving plaintiff to be a citizen of South Carolina upon the petitioner for removal.—Id.

No appeal or writ of error will lie from an order of a United States circuit court remanding a suit which was begun and had been improperly removed from a state court after Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, 24 Stat. 552 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], went into effect, as section 6 of that act expressly repeals the last paragraph of section 5 of the act of 1875, by which such appeals or writs of error were allowed, and the last paragraph of section 2 declares that no appeal or writ of error from such an order shall be allowed.—Morey v. Lockhart, 123 U. S. 56, 8 S. Ct. 65, 31 L. Ed. 68.

Such an order cannot be reviewed by the supreme court on a certificate of division of opinion between the judges, under Rev. St. § 693, as it is not a final judgment or decree in the suit.—Id.

Act Cong. March 3, 1887, c. 373 (24 Stat. 552), prohibiting an appeal or writ of error where an order of a United States circuit court was made, remanding a suit which was begun and had been improperly removed from a state court, applies not only to removals on account of prejudice or local influence, but to cases removed on other grounds.—Id.

The circuit court of the United States, on motion of relator, remanded a suit that had been to it to the state court. The defendant brought error, and claimed that a writ of error lies to the supreme court of the United States by Act 1875, under this proviso of section 6 of Act March 3, 1887: "Provided, that this act shall not affect the jurisdiction over or disposition of any suit removed from the court of any state, or suit commenced in any court of the United States, before the passage hereof, except as otherwise expressly provided in this act,"—the case at bar having been begun, and the petition for its removal having been filed, before the passage of the act. Held, that under the acts of 1875 and 1887 no appeal or writ of error should be allowed from the decision of the United States circuit court deciding that a case had been improperly removed, and remanding it back to the state court.—Wilkinson v. State of Nebraska, 123 U. S. 286, 8 S. Ct. 120, 31 L. Ed. 152.

The repeal, by Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 6, 24 Stat. 555 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 512], of the provision in Act 1875, § 5, for review by the United States supreme court of an order of a circuit court remanding a cause to a state court, took away such review in a case where suit was begun, and a petition for removal was filed, before the passage of the act of 1887, notwithstanding the proviso in section 6 of that act that "this act shall not affect the jurisdiction over or disposition of any suit removed from the court of any state, or suit commenced in any court of the United States, before the passage hereof, except as otherwise expressly provided in this act," as that proviso relates only to the jurisdiction of the circuit court, and the disposition of the suit on its merits, and has no reference to the jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Wilkinson v. State of Nebraska, 123 U. S. 286, 8 S. Ct. 120, 31 L. Ed. 152; Sherman v. Grinnell, 123 U. S. 679, 8 S. Ct. 260, 31 L. Ed. 278.

Act Cong. March 3, 1887, § 6, providing that an order to remand to the state court a cause that has been removed to the circuit court of the United States cannot be reviewed on appeal or writ of error, applies, even though the order was made before the passage of the act, where the writ of error is sued out after its passage.—Sherman v. Grinnell, 123 U. S. 679, 8 S. Ct. 260, 31 L. Ed. 278; Chicago, B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Gray, 131 U. S. 396, 9 S. Ct. 793, 33 L. Ed. 212.

Where the judgment of the circuit court, in a cause removed from a state court on the ground of diverse citizenship of the parties, is reversed by the supreme court because the record does not show the citizenship of the parties at the commencement of the action as well as at the time of the application for removal, the judgment of reversal will direct the circuit court to remand the cause to the state court, without allowing the petition for removal and the record to be amended in the circuit court, as a cause is not removed unless, at the time of the application for removal, the record shows on its face that it is removable.—Cameron v. Hodges, 127 U. S. 322, 8 S. Ct. 1154, 32 L. Ed. 132; Crehore v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., 131 U. S. 240, 9 S. Ct. 692, 33 L. Ed. 144; Jackson v. Allen, 132 U. S. 27, 10 S. Ct. 9, 33 L. Ed. 249.

Where a case has been wrongfully removed to a federal court, and a decree there given, from which an appeal is taken, there should be a reversal, with costs against appellants, and the cause should be remanded to the trial court, with directions to render judgment against them for costs in that court, and remand the cause to the state court whence it was removed.—Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 10 S. Ct. 196, 33 L. Ed. 462, reversing decree (C. C.) Corbin v. Boies, 34 F. 692; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 12 S. Ct. 726, 36 L. Ed. 528; Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 13 S. Ct. 706, 37 L. Ed. 602.

Where a cause improperly removed to a federal court is remanded by the supreme court to be remanded to the state court, the costs are cast on the party applying for the removal of the cause to the circuit court.—Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 571, 10 S. Ct. 196, 33 L. Ed. 462, reversing decree (C. C.) Corbin v. Boies, 34 F. 692; Torrence v. Shedd, 144 U. S. 527, 12 S. Ct. 726, 36 L. Ed. 528; Martin v. Snyder, 148 U. S. 663, 13 S. Ct. 706, 37 L. Ed. 602; Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 13 S. Ct. 883, 977, 37 L. Ed. 804.

An order of the circuit court remanding a case to the state court on the ground of want of jurisdiction is not a "final judgment or decree," within the meaning of Act Cong. Feb. 25, 1889 (25 Stat. 693), which provides that, "in all cases where a final judgment or decree shall be rendered in a circuit court of the United States, in which there shall have been a question involving the jurisdiction of the court, the party against whom the judgment or decree is rendered shall be entitled to an appeal or writ of error to the supreme court of the United States."—Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Thouron, 134 U. S. 45, 10 S. Ct. 517, 33 L. Ed. 871; Texas Land & Cattle Co. v. Scott, 137 U. S. 436, 11 S. Ct. 140, 34 L. Ed. 730.

The demurrer to the complaint was sustained, and the cause thereon remanded, on the ground that the court, by law, had no jurisdiction of the case. Held, that the remanding order did not, by reason of the sustaining of the demurrer, become a final judgment.—Gurnee v. Patrick County, 137 U. S. 141, 11 S. Ct. 34, 34 L. Ed. 601; Birdseye v. Shaeffer, 140 U. S. 117, 11 S. Ct. 885, 35 L. Ed. 402.

A remanding order is not a final judgment or decree within Act Cong. Feb. 25, 1889, c. 236 (25 Stat. 693), providing that an appeal or writ of error will lie to the supreme court in all cases, without regard to the amount involved, where a final judgment or decree is rendered in a circuit court involving a question of the jurisdiction of the court.—Id.

Act Cong. March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 5, 18 Stat. 472, provided that the order of a circuit court dismissing or remanding a cause to a state court should be reviewable by the supreme court on writ of error or appeal, as the case might be. By Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 6, 24 Stat. 555, as corrected by Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 860, 25 Stat. 433 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], said provision was repealed, and it was provided that "no appeal or writ of error from the decision of the circuit court so remanding such cause shall be allowed," to which was added the proviso "that this act shall not affect the jurisdiction over or disposition of any suit removed from a court of any state, or suit commenced in any court of the United States, before the passage hereof, except as otherwise expressly provided in this act." Held, that the proviso related only to the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, and therefore the supreme court had no jurisdiction over a writ of error from an order remanding a cause to a state court, when the suit was begun and removed before the act of 1887, but not remanded until afterwards.—Id.

The provision of Acts 1887–88 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], that whenever any circuit court of the United States shall decide that a cause has been improperly removed from a state court, and shall order its remand, "such remand shall be immediately carried into execution, and no appeal or writ of error, from the decision of the circuit court, remanding such cause, shall be allowed," takes away also the remedy of mandamus to compel the circuit court to take jurisdiction of a cause.—Ex parte Pennsylvania Co., 137 U. S. 451, 11 S. Ct. 141, 34 L. Ed. 738; Id., 137 U. S. 457, 11 S. Ct. 143, 34 L. Ed. 741.

An order remanding a cause to the state court from which it has been removed is not a final decree, and no appeal will lie therefrom to the supreme court.—Joy v. Adelbert College of Western Reserve University, 146 U. S. 356, 18 S. Ct. 186, 36 L. Ed. 1003.

An order overruling a motion to remand a cause to a state court is not a final judgment, so as to entitle the defeated party to a writ of error.—Bender v. Pennsylvania Co., 148 U. S. 502, 13 S. Ct. 640, 37 L. Ed. 537.

Where the diverse citizenship of the parties and the amount involved entitle a cause to be removed from a state to a United States circuit court, but the subject-matter of the controversy is not properly cognizable by the circuit court, and jurisdiction of the cause is assumed by such court, the supreme court, on appeal, will remand the cause to the circuit court, with directions to remand it to the state court.—Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 13 S. Ct. 883, 37 L. Ed. 804.

An order remanding a cause to a state court, from which it was removed, is not a final judgment, from which an appeal will lie.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Brown, 156 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 656, 39 L. Ed. 461, following Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co. v. Roberts, 141 U. S. 690, 12 S. Ct. 123, 35 L. Ed. 902.

An order of the circuit court remanding a cause cannot be reviewed in the supreme court by a direct proceeding.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 16 S. Ct. 389, 40 L. Ed. 536.

When the circuit court remands a cause, and the state court thereupon proceeds to final judgment, the action of the circuit court is not reviewable on writ of error to such judgment.—Id.

An order remanding a cause on the ground that it is not removable because some of the defendants are citizens of the same state with plaintiff, and there is no separable controversy, is not reviewable. Judgment (C. C.) 65 F. 120, affirmed.—Powers v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co., 18 S. Ct. 264, 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. Ed. 673.

Leave to amend a petition for removal to a federal court for diverse citizenship so as to show the citizenship of the plaintiffs may, in the exercise of the general power of federal courts, under Rev. St. U. S. §§ 948, 954 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 695, 696], to allow amendments of process, be granted after the filing of the removal papers, but before any action taken in the federal court on the merits, where there was a general averment of diverse citizenship, and the citizenship of defendant had been clearly stated, and it appeared from the face of the trust deed, which was the subject-matter in controversy, that the plaintiffs were, at the time of its execution, residents of another state. Decree (C. C.) 113 F. 359, affirmed.—Kinney v. Columbia Savings & Loan Ass'n, 24 S. Ct. 30, 191 U. S. 78, 48 L. Ed. 103.

Mandamus, rather than prohibition, is the proper remedy where the Circuit Court of the United States refuses to remand to the state court from which it was removed a case over which the federal court has no jurisdiction.—Ex parte Wisner, 27 S. Ct. 150, 203 U. S. 449, 51 L. Ed. 204.

Uncontradicted testimony that a resident employé sued jointly in tort with his nonresident employer was merely a draftsman, whose work was confined to making the necessary drawings based on the plans and ideas of others, and that he had nothing to do with planning the apparatus which is alleged to have been so defectively constructed as to have caused the injury complained of, is sufficient to support a conclusion of law that such employé was made a defendant for the sole purpose of preventing the exercise of the right of removal by the nonresident defendant.—Wecker v. National Enameling & Stamping Co., 27 S. Ct. 184, 204 U. S. 176, 51 L. Ed. 430, 9 Ann. Cas. 757.

The remanding by a federal Circuit Court of a suit against a firm to a state court whence it had been removed for diversity of citizenship must be deemed to have been ordered on the ground that, as under the local practice the firm had been sued as an entity without joining individual partners, there was no diversity of citizenship.—McLaughlin Bros. v. Hallowell, 33 S. Ct. 465, 228 U. S. 278, 57 L. Ed. 835, dismissing writs of error 111 N. W. 428, 136 Iowa, 279, and 121 N. W. 1039.

An order of a federal District Court remanding a cause to a state court is not reviewable by the federal Supreme Court.—Pacific Live Stock Co. v. Lewis, 36 S. Ct. 637, 241 U. S. 440, 60 L. Ed. 1084, affirming decree (D. C.) 217 F. 95.

109. Jurisdiction of and proceedings in state court after remand, or dismissal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 235.

Permission to amend pleadings being, in general, a matter within the discretion of the court, the refusal of a state court to permit defendant to amend his petition for removal after the cause has been remanded by the federal court is not the denial of any right secured by the constitution of the United States.—Carr v. Nichols, 157 U. S. 370, 15 S. Ct. 640, 39 L. Ed. 736, affirming judgment Nichols v. Stevens, 123 Mo. 96, 25 S. W. 578, 27 S. W. 613, 45 Am. St. Rep. 514.

The voluntary dismissal of an action which has been removed from a state court to a federal Circuit Court does not preclude a subsequent suit on the same cause of action in the state court. Judgment (1908) 59 S. E. 1115, 3 Ga. App. 410, affirmed.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Miller, 30 S. Ct. 450, 217 U. S. 206, 54 L. Ed. 732.

110. Removal after remand.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 235.

Where, on the first removal, the federal court declines to proceed, and remands the cause because of the failure to file the copy of the record within due time, the same party is not entitled to file in the state court a second petition for removal upon the same ground.—St. Paul & C. R. Co. v. McLean, 108 U. S. 212, 2 S. Ct. 498, 27 L. Ed. 703.

An order remanding a cause to the state court whence it was removed does not prevent a second application for removal if the subsequent pleadings or conduct of the parties make the cause removable. Decree (1907) Boatmen's Bank of St. Louis v. Fritzen, 89 P. 915, 75 Kan. 479, affirmed.—Fritzen v. Boatmen's Bank, 29 S. Ct. 366, 212 U. S. 364, 53 L. Ed. 551.

Changes in the pleadings in an action to foreclose a mortgage after the cause has been remanded to the state court whence it had been removed, which show the untruth of the averment in the petition of the junior character of another mortgage held by a foreign corporation which was made a party defendant, and the existence of a separable controversy between it and the other parties, who are all citizens of the state, are sufficient to justify granting a second application for removal.—Id.

VIII. PROCEEDINGS IN CAUSE AFTER REMOVAL.

111. Jurisdiction acquired by United States court in general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 237, 239.

Upon the removal of a cause from a state to a federal court, objection to the jurisdiction of the latter court, on the ground that the cause was not removed in the time prescribed by the act of March 3, 1875, cannot be raised by the party at whose instance the removal was effected.—Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 594, 5 S. Ct. 641, 28 L. Ed. 1093.

The removal into a federal court, by a receiver appointed by it, of an action pending against him in a state court, constitutes a waiver of any right he may have had to have the matter decided by the state tribunal, but not an attempt to confer jurisdiction by consent, since the federal court has jurisdiction, either exclusive or concurrent, of an action against a receiver it has appointed; and therefore such removal estops him from thereafter contesting the right of the federal court to determine the case.—Baggs v. Martin, 21 S. Ct. 109, 179 U. S. 206, 45 L. Ed. 155, answering certified questions 106 F. 985, 45 C. C. A. 689.

Jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States on removal depends on plaintiff's statement of his own claim. Judgment, McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co., 97 F. 670, 38 C. C. A. 354, reversed.—Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. v. McFadden, 21 S. Ct. 488, 180 U. S. 533, 45 L. Ed. 656.

112. Removal as waiver of objections to jurisdiction or service of process of state court.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 233.

Under Act 1887-1888, c. 866, 25 Stat. 434 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 507], providing that petition for removal shall be filed in the state court on or before the time defendant is required to answer or plead to the complaint; that on the filing thereof with a bond the court shall proceed no further in the suit; and that, on entry of a copy of the record in the circuit court of the United States, the cause shall then proceed in the same manner as if it had been originally commenced in said circuit court.—the filing of petition for removal is not a waiver of defects in the service of summons, at least where it is stated that defendant appears specially for the sole purpose of presenting the petition.—Goldrey v. Morning News of New Haven, 156 U. S. 518, 15 S. Ct. 559, 39 L. Ed. 517, affirming judgment (C. C.) Golden v. Same, 42 F. 112.

The filing of a petition for the removal of a cause from a state to a federal court constitutes a special appearance, and the defendant does not thereby waive the right to object to the service of process. 13 C. C. A. 222, 65 F. 941, reversed.—Wabash Western Ry. v. Brow, 17 S. Ct. 126, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. Ed. 431.

The right of a defendant to contest the jurisdiction of a state court in which the action is brought, and the sufficiency of the facts set forth to constitute a cause of action, is not lost by the removal of the cause to a federal court upon defendant's own petition.—De Lima v. Bidwell, 21 S. Ct. 743, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. Ed. 1041.

The validity of the service of process upon a foreign corporate defendant is open in a federal Circuit Court after the cause has been removed to that court from a state court on the petition of such defendant.—Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, 30 S. Ct. 125, 215 U. S. 437, 54 L. Ed. 272.

The return of the sheriff of the state court is not conclusive upon the question of the validity of service of process, where the cause has been removed to a federal Circuit Court by a defendant who raises by plea to the jurisdiction the objection that it was a foreign corporation not doing business within the state, and that the person served with process was not its agent at that time.—Id.

The validity of the service of process on a foreign corporation may be raised in a federal District Court by a plea to the jurisdiction after removal from a state court on the petition of the defendant; Judicial Code, § 29 (Act March 3, 1911, c. 231, 36 Stat. 1095 [U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1911, p. 142]).—Cain v. Commercial Pub. Co., 34 S. Ct. 284, 232 U. S. 124, 58 L. Ed. 534.

The filing by defendant of a petition for removal from a Mississippi court to a federal District Court, and a special appearance by plea to the jurisdiction over defendant raising the question of validity of service do not because of the conformity act (Rev. St. § 914 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 684]), amount to a general appearance which shall be considered a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction, though by Code Miss. 1906, § 3946, all appearances are general, though process be invalidly served.—Id.

Pleas to jurisdiction of state court held waived by defendants applying to move case to a federal court and making general appearance in that court without reservation and pleading to the merits.—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hill, 35 S. Ct. 575, 237 U. S. 208, 59 L. Ed. 918.

Defendant in a suit removed from the state court may not raise question of state court's jurisdiction by an amended answer, where after the case reached the federal court there were pleadings to the merits and action submitting to the jurisdiction.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Rigger, 36 S. Ct. 127, 239 U. S. 330, 60 L. Ed. 310, affirming judgment 218 F. 990, 133 O. C. A. 673.

114. Effect of proceedings in state court before removal.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. §§ 241-244.

The denial by an inferior state court of a motion to vacate the service of summons is not res judicata on the question of the validity of such service, when raised in the federal circuit court to which the cause has been removed.—Remington v. Central Pac. R. Co., 25 S. Ct. 677, 198 U. S. 95, 49 L. Ed. 959.

The want of any jurisdiction over the person of defendant in a case removed to a federal circuit court from a state court before service of summons, on a special appearance by defendant for that sole purpose, does not, in view of the provision of Removal Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 4, 18 Stat. 471 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 511], preserving the lien of attachments in the state courts, prevent the federal court from entering a judgment enforceable against the real property of defendant which had been attached before the case was removed, where the state court might, but for such removal, have rendered such a judgment on giving notice to defendant. Judgment, Wells v. Clark (C. C. 1905) 136 F. 462, modified and affirmed.—Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43, 203 U. S. 164, 51 L. Ed. 138.

Service by publication in the manner prescribed by the state statutes for non-resident defendants cannot be had in the federal Circuit Court to which a suit in which an attachment has issued has been removed from a state court before service of summons.—Id.

116. Legal and equitable remedies and proceedings.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 246.

Where, in an action for conversion, an equitable as well as a legal defense has been set up in a state court, on removal of the cause to a United States circuit court the equitable defense is not available.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Paine, 119 U. S. 561, 7 S. Ct. 323, 30 L. Ed. 513.

119. Trial, judgment, and review.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 252; 3 Cent. Dig. App. & E. § 3401.

In a suit for foreclosure, commenced in a state court, and removed to the circuit court of the United States, a motion to remand the cause was made and overruled. Subsequently a final decree of sale was passed. Upon appeal merely from the order confirming the sale, the final decree not disclosing affirmatively, a want of jurisdiction, this court will not examine the record, prior to such final decree, to see whether the petition for removal was filed in proper time, or whether it makes a case of federal jurisdiction by reason of the presence in the suit of a controversy between citizens of different states, but, assuming that the final decree was within the power of the circuit court to render, will only examine the decree to ascertain whether the sale was had in conformity with its provisions.—Turner v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 106 U. S. 552, 1 S. Ct. 519, 27 L. Ed. 273.

Where, in a suit against C. to quiet title, T. and L. intervened, claiming to be nonresidents and owners of distinct portions of the tract, and removed the suit on the ground that the controversy as to each of them was separable, plaintiff will not be deprived of the decree in his favor on the merits on the ground that the cause was not rightfully removed, it not being disclosed by the record that there was not a separable controversy.—Connell v. Smiley, 15 S. Ct. 353, 156 U. S. 835, 39 L. Ed. 443.

120. Costs.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rem. of C. § 253; 13 Cent. Dig. Costs, § 255.

Where a case has been improperly removed from a state court by defendants, all costs from the time of removal must be paid by them.—Walker v. Collins, 17 S. Ct. 738, 167 U. S. 57, 42 L. Ed. 76, reversing judgment 59 F. 70, 8 C. C. A. 1.

Act Pa. May 15, 1871, No. 249, § 6, providing that "in all actions of replevin now pending, or hereafter brought, to recover timber, lumber, coal, or other property severed from realty, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover, notwithstanding the fact that the title to the land from which said property was severed may be in dispute: provided, said plaintiff shows title in himself at the time of the severance"—has no operation as between tenants in common.—*Bohlen v. 12. Defenses.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 98-110.

In Kansas unliquidated damages due for breach of warranties in the sale of a machine may be set off in favor of defendant in an action of replevin brought by the seller on the ground of alleged breach of conditions in the chattel mortgage given to secure the deferred payments, since the plaintiff's claim in such case is really founded on contract, though the action, in form, is for a tort.—Clement v. Field, 147 U. S. 467, 13 S. Ct. 358, 37 L. Ed. 244, following Gardner v. Risher, 35 Kan. 93, 10 P. 584.

123. Discharge of sureties.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 431-436.

A redelivery bond in replevin must be regarded as having been entered into subject to such changes in remedy or procedure as do not change the contractual rights of the parties, e. g., the statutory allowance of a writ of error from the federal Supreme Court, to review the final judgment in the replevin suit, where no such review had theretofore been permissible, or subsequent legislation authorizing the issuance of an execution during the pendency of a writ of error to review such judgment if the defendant should be ruled to give a new redelivery bond upon an affidavit of insufficiency.—William W. Bierce v. Waterhouse, 31 S. Ct. 241, 219 U. S. 320, 55 L. Ed. 237.

124. Extent of Liability.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 487-497.

A judgment for defendant, and an assessment of damages, for the wrongful taking, under the Maine statute providing that if it appears that defendant is entitled to a return of the goods, he shall have judgment for their return, with damages for the taking, does not prevent defendant from recovering for a depreciation between the taking and the judgment, in an action on the replevin bond, damages for such depreciation not having been assessed in the judgment in replevin.—Washington Ice Co. v. Webster, 125 U. S. 426, 8 S. Ct. 947, 31 L. Ed. 799.

In an action on a replevin bond for the value of ice taken, plaintiff can recover the value of the ice taken at the time it was taken, and where it was situated, for any lawful use to which it could be put.—Id.

127. Actions.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 502, 506-540.

129. — Conditions precedent.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 511-513.

An action upon the redelivery bond in replevin is not premature because started during the pendency of a writ of error in the Supreme Court of Hawaii, to review the judgment in the replevin suit, where, pursuant to Laws Hawaii 1903, c. 32, §§ 17-19, enacted after the making of the redelivery bond, an execution had been issued and returned unsatisfied, because of the failure to give a new redelivery bond upon an affidavit of insufficiency.—William W. Bierce v. Waterhouse, 31 S. Ct. 241, 219 U. S. 320, 55 L. Ed. 237.

134. — Evidence.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 527-531.

The finding of the jury in the original suit, in answer to a special interrogatory by the court, of the value of the property replevied at the time and place taken, is admissible, and conclusive against defendants of such value.—Washington Ice Co. v. Webster, 125 U. S. 426, 8 S. Ct. 947, 31 L. Ed. 799.

Where the value of the property replevied is recited in the bond and in the writ in the original suit, defendants are estopped to assert that the value of the property taken was less than recited, but plaintiff is not precluded from showing that the value was greater than such amount.—Id.

135. — Trial, judgment, and review.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Replev. §§ 532-540.

Whether the evidence in a suit on a redelivery bond in replevin shows a tender of redelivery of the property by the principal obligor after judgment requiring such return is for the jury to determine, upon proper instructions.—William W. Bierce v. Waterhouse, 31 S. Ct. 241, 219 U. S. 320, 55 L. Ed. 237.

¶11. — Public officers.

See 42 Cent. Dig. Rewards, §§ 14, 15.

The sundry civil appropriation act of March 3, 1891, appropriated $35,000 to be expended under the direction of the attorney general "for the detection and prosecution of crimes against the United States, preliminary to indictment." Under authority of this act, the attorney general authorized a United States marshal "to offer a reward of $500 for the arrest" of a person named, to be paid upon conviction. The arrest was made by deputy marshals, who claimed the reward. Held that, as they were embraced in the general terms of the appropriation act and of the offer of reward, they were thereby excepted from the operation of the statutes forbidding the payment of any extra compensation or allowance to any officers in any branch of the public service.—United States v. Matthews, 19 S. Ct. 413, 173 U. S. 381, 43 L. Ed. 738.

A contract was made by A., of Charleston, with D., of Baltimore, for the sale and delivery to A., at Charleston, of 2,500 tons of kainit, to be shipped from August to October, 1880, at a fixed price, cash on delivery of each cargo. The kainit was to come from R., at Hamburg. D. procured G., for a commission paid him by D., to send to R. a credit on London for the amount of 2,500 tons of kainit in five cargoes, under which R. obtained the money. G. paid drafts against the credit to the amount of the cargoes. The declarations and invoices by R., presented before the consul at Hamburg, named G. as the consignee at Charleston, and the bills of lading made the cargoes deliverable at Charleston to G. or his assigns. These papers were sent to A. before any of the cargoes arrived, with an invoice for each cargo in the shape of a bill made out thus: A. bought of G. a cargo of kainit shipped by such a vessel, such a quantity, such a price; and a power of attorney, under which A.'s agent, as attorney for G., entered the cargoes at the customhouse at Charleston in February and March, 1881, as imported by G., and made oath that G. was the owner. A. received and accepted the cargoes. Held, that G. was the owner of the cargoes, and sold and delivered them to A., to be paid for on delivery free from any claim growing out of the contract of A. with D. or R. for any breach of that contract as to the time of shipping the cargoes; and that A. was liable to G. for the price of the cargoes, with interest from their delivery.—Atlantic Phosphate Co. v. Grafflin, 114 U. S. 492, 5 S. Ct. 987, 29 L. Ed. 221.

An offer to sell 2,000 to 5,000 tons of rails at a certain rate and within a certain time, in reply to a request to quote prices for 2,000 to 5,000 tons, is not accepted by an order for 1,200 tons, and when such order is rejected, a subsequent order, within the contract time, for 2,000 tons, does not operate to revive the offer, and to make a sale.—*Minneapolis & St. L. Plaintiff wrote defendant, ordering certain railroad iron, in reply to which defendant wrote accepting the order, and promised to deliver the iron at the place and terms named in plaintiff's order. Held, there was a contract under which defendant was bound to deliver the iron.—*Wheeler v. See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 63, 64.

Defendants' general agent, after being instructed not to add to defendants' stock by purchasing more goods, agreed with plaintiffs, who had knowledge of such instructions, to purchase a quantity of goods from them for defendants, and surreptitiously put them among the stock and sell them, and procure payment from defendants, as he might be able to do, without their knowledge. The goods were so furnished and sold, the proceeds going to defendants. Held, that plaintiffs cannot sue for goods sold and delivered, as there was no valid sale.—Schutz v. Jordan, 141 U. §52. Evidence.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 118-144, 1045.

In an action for the price of rags sold as clean rags, but which defendant's evidence tended to show were infected with smallpox, and caused the smallpox to break out among his workmen, the plaintiff admitted that the rags were collected in a region where the smallpox was raging, and that he bought from all dealers indiscriminately. He testified that the rags had lain in his warehouse for a year, and that no disinfectants were used on them. A letter of plaintiff's sent with the first invoice stated that he did not then have all the rags on hand; and workmen in defendant's mill testified that the rags, when opened, smelt strongly of disinfectants. Held, that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury that plaintiff knew the rags to be infected.—Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 696, 30 L. Ed. 810.

An invoice is not a bill of sale, nor is it evidence of a sale. It is a mere detailed statement of the nature, quantity, or cost of the goods, or price of the things invoiced, and is as appropriate to a bailment as a sale; and hence, standing alone, it cannot be regarded as evidence of title.—Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 14 S. Ct. 99, 37 L. Ed. 1093, following Dow v. National Exch. Bank, 91 U. S. 618, 23 L. Ed. 214.

II. CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT.

§61. Executory or executed contracts.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 182-170.

When goods not yet in existence are sold to a distant buyer, the undertaking that they shall possess certain qualities is a condition precedent to any obligation of the vendee; and if, upon their arrival, they are found not to conform to the contract, he is not bound by their delivery to the carrier for their value, but may rescind the sale, and recover from the seller.—Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 363, 6 S. Ct. 69, 29 L. Ed. 393.

The two drafts of a contract, one of which was signed by one of the parties and delivered to the other respectively, provided for a sale by defendant to plaintiff of the plates of a book, including copyright and certain other incidents, for a certain price, and contained the particulars of such sale and various other provisions, and agreed with each other, except only as to the territory in which defendant should have an exclusive right to sell certain of plaintiff's publications. Correspondence ensued as to certain matters in relation to the contract, and as to a dispute about the territory to be allowed defendant for the sale of the book. This dispute was settled, and the plates were shipped, and a bill of sale made, and the price was paid according to the contract, and was stated by plaintiff to be in full settlement, and was so receipted by defendant. Defendant alleged that the drafts were merely preliminary statements, and were not intended as a definite contract. Held, that the sale of the book and plates was complete, and that plaintiff, having afterwards furnished defendant with the book and other publications, according to the contract, and defendant having prepared and published another book, there could be no revesting of title because of disputes as to other provisions of the contract in which the copyright and plates were not referred to, though, in relation to such provisions, plaintiff conceded there was no contract between them.—Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 9 S. Ct. 710, 33 L. Ed. 76.

§67. Subject-matter.

§71. — Quantity, and ascertainment thereof.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 189-196.

Where claimant's bid to furnish oats to a military station at a certain rate was accepted for less than half the amount for which bidders were invited, and the circular of information to bidders advised him that the bidder whose proposal was accepted would be required to enter into contract to perform it, he will be presumed to have known that he had a successful competitor in the bidding as to the rest of the oats needed, and the fact that his contract provided that he should supply the quantity stated in his bid, more or less, "or such other quantity, more or less, as may be required, from time to time, for the wants of such station," between certain dates, "in such quantities and at such times as the receiving officer may require," will not justify the contention that he was bound to deliver, and the United States to receive, in addition to his bid, all the oats needed at the station between the dates mentioned, and a refusal to receive oats in excess of the amount of his bid is not a breach of the contract.—Merriam v. United States, 107 U. S. 437, 2 S. Ct. 536, 27 L. Ed. 531.

Where, by the terms of a contract for the purchase of granite, the purchaser agrees to pay the full cost of the labor, tools, and materials used in cutting, dressing, and boxing the granite, and "insurance on the same," he is not liable for insurance, where none was ever taken out by the seller.—Tillson v. United States, 129 U. S. 101, 9 S. Ct. 255, 32 L. Ed. 636.

§77. — Ascertainment under provisions of contract.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 208-212.

Where the purchaser of granite is to "assume all risk of damage to cutting on said stone while being transported to the site" of the building in the construction of which it is to be used, and a cargo of granite is sunk at sea, but the cutting is uninjured, he is not liable for any part of the expense incurred in raising the cargo.—Tillson v. United States, 129 U. S. 101, 9 S. Ct. 255, 32 L. Ed. 636.

§81. Time of delivery.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 217-221.

The cause of the failure was that the furnace by which the pig iron was to be made was shut down for want of charcoal. The contract excepted delay by reason of "accidents and strikes." But the failure to have sufficient charcoal on hand was not shown to be due to these contingencies. Held, no excuse for non-performance.—Cleveland Rolling Mill Co. v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 255, 7 S. Ct. 882, 30 L. Ed. 920.

Plaintiffs sold defendant about 8,000 tons of pig-iron, to be shipped as rapidly as possible during the season of 1880, to defendant at Cleveland, the portion made after close of navigation of 1880 to be shipped on the opening of navigation of 1881, or as soon thereafter as possible. Three thousand four hundred tons were shipped in 1880, 3,500 were ready at the opening of navigation in 1881, but the balance was not manufactured until later. Defendant refused to receive that shipped in 1881. Held, that time was of the essence of the contract, and that defendant was not bound to accept any portion of that shipped in 1881.—Id.

A contract for the sale of hay to the United States, under an advertisement providing that awards made under accepted bids will provide that the quantities awarded may be increased or decreased at the option of the United States, not exceeding 20 per cent., and that, if the troops of the United States should be wholly or in part withdrawn, the award shall become inoperative to the extent of such reduction, and that deliveries shall begin in five days from the date of the award, and proceed at daily rates of at least one-sixtieth of amount, or in such quantities and at such times afterwards as may be designated by the chief quartermaster—is not broken by a suspension for some time of orders for hay after the withdrawal of troops, and a continuation of orders for a period of ten months after the award, although the market value of hay is much greater during the later than the earlier part of such period. Judgment (1902) 37 Ct. Cl. 281, affirmed.—St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. United States, 24 S. Ct. 47, 191 U. S. 159, 48 L. Ed. 130.

§87. Evidence to aid construction.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 239-247, 1046.

Plaintiff sold defendant company a number of matched barrel headings, to be piled and delivered on its premises, and there counted by its employé to determine the amount of advances for which plaintiff might draw. The final matching, counting, and inspection of the barrel headings was to be at Cleveland, where they were to be shipped. It was agreed that not less than one-half the whole number of headings should be full two-piece headings, and that when of more than two pieces they were to be counted as two. The court ruled, in an action for an alleged balance, that the inspector's final count, if made fairly, and in the exercise of his best judgment, was binding on the parties. Held, it was not error to admit evidence of the counts by both parties of the whole number of single pieces, and submit to the jury a comparison between them, as a means of establishing error in the count of matched headings.—Standard Oil Co. v. Van Etten, 107 U. S. 325, 1 S. Ct. 178, 27 L. Ed. 319.

III. MODIFICATION OR RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

(A) BY AGREEMENT OF PARTIES.

§94. Operation and effect.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, § 260.

Plaintiff had purchased coal of defendants, and had notified them of a shortage in the weight, whereupon they had allowed him credit for it. Several years after, plaintiff sued defendants for breach of a contract for the purchase of a cargo of iron. Held, that defendants could not reopen the allowance for shortage, and plead it as a counterclaim, where the evidence did not show that the claim for shortage was false.—Roberts v. Benjamin, 124 U. S. 64, 8 S. Ct. 303, 31 L. Ed. 334.

(B) RESCISSION BY SELLER.

§108. Acts constituting rescission.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 277-279.

Defendant accepted in writing an offer of the vice president of a railroad company to sell 1,000 tons of old rails. The vice president the same day accepted the order. Some days later the vice president forwarded to defendant a ratification of the sale, which stated the ton to be "of 2,000 pounds." Defendant answered that the sale needed no ratification, that "per ton" meant a ton of 2,240 pounds, and asked for a reply. None was received until the time for delivery of the rails, when a tender was made of 1,000 tons, at gross weight of "2,240 pounds per ton." Held, that the contract had not been repudiated, and defendant was bound to receive the rails.—Wheeler v. New Brunswick & C. R. Co., 115 U. S. 29, 5 S. Ct. 1061, 1160, 29 L. Ed. 341.

Shipments of iron ore, as required by a contract of sale, were made from the place of delivery, until, by reason of the apprehended insolvency of the vendee, the vendor suspended further shipments. At that time the vendor had at the place of delivery the balance of the ore, which by the contract was to be subject to its order until forwarded, but did not offer to make any further shipments, and did not give notice of its readiness to do so; nor did the vendee corporation, nor its receiver, who meanwhile had been appointed, call for the ore, or offer cash in payment. Held, that the vendee's insolvency did not release the vendor from offering to deliver the property, and that the evidence justified the conclusion that the contract had been rescinded.—Florence Min. Co. v. Brown, 124 U. S. 385, 8 S. Ct. 531, 31 L. Ed. 424.

(C) RESCISSION BY BUYER.

§112. Right to rescind.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 236-294.

§117. — Failure to deliver.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, § 291.

Under a contract made in Philadelphia for the sale of "5,000 tons iron rails, for shipment from a European port or ports, at the rate of about 1,000 tons per month, beginning February, 1880, but whole contract to be shipped before August 1, 1880, at $45 per ton of 2,240 lbs. custom house weight, ex ship Philadelphia; settlement, cash, on presentation of bills accompanied by custom-house certificate of weight; sellers not to be compelled to replace any parcel lost after shipment"—the sellers are bound to ship 1,000 tons in each month, from February to June, inclusive, except that slight and unimportant deficiencies may be made up in July; and if only 400 tons are shipped in February, and 885 tons in March, and the buyer accepts and pays for the February shipment on its arrival in March, at the stipulated price, and above its market value, and in ignorance that no more has been shipped in February, and is first informed of that fact after the arrival of the March shipments, and before accepting or paying for either of them, he may rescind the contract by reason of the failure to ship about 1,000 tons in each of the months of February and March.—Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 6 S. Ct. 12, 29 L. Ed. 366, affirming (C. C.) 5 F. 768.

§121. Estoppel or waiver.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 296-301.

Where the title to railway cars, built to order, passed at the time of shipment, the right of rescission, if any such thereafter existed on account of defects in the brakes, was lost by the purchaser's subsequent demand that the defects be remedied, and his expressed willingness to pay for the cars as soon as this was done, taken in connection with the seller's assurances that he would remedy the defects at his own cost, and his continued attempts to do so.—Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 157 U. S. 94, 15 S. Ct. 503, 39 L. Ed. 632.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 367-385.

161. — Delivery to or through carrier or other intermediary.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 377-380.

Delivery of paper purchased by the United States for the public printing office in the Philippine Islands to the carrier designated by the government, coupled with the acceptance by the government of the bills of lading made to the consignee or his order, constitute a delivery to the United States, relieving the seller of risk of injury during shipment, although the words "f. o. b. Manila" were used in the proposal by which the negotiation was commenced, where the context and subsequent correspondence showed that these words were used as implying that, inasmuch as the freight to Manila was to be included in the purchase price, it was to be primarily defrayed by the seller. Judgment, R. P. Andrews & Co. v. United States (1905) 41 Ct. Cl. 48, affirmed.—United States v. R. P. Andrews & Co., 28 S. Ct. 100, 207 U. S. 229, 52 L. Ed. 185.

164. Quantity delivered, and effect of excess or deficiency.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 386-390.

The delivery and receipt of 4,634 tons of coal, under a contract for the delivery and acceptance of "about 5,000 tons," does not so complete the contract as to entitle the vendee for that reason to refuse a tender of the remaining 366 tons. Judgment, J. J. Moore & Co. v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 590, reversed.—Moore v. United States, 25 S. Ct. 202, 196 U. S. 157, 49 L. Ed. 428.

165. Quality, fitness, and condition of goods.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 391-402.

166. — In general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 391-400, 402.

A contract called for machinery capable of applying a pressure of 1,500 tons to a bale of tan-bark. Held broken, unless the machinery furnished was such as would work efficiently, and be capable of continuous operation for the ordinary duration of such mechanism, constructed for similar uses, and be able to deliver a pressure of 1,500 tons to every bale for the length of time such a machine should work under prudent and reasonable management.—McGowan v. American Pressed Tan Bark Co., 121 U. S. 575, 7 S. Ct. 1315, 30 L. Ed. 1027.

170. Effect of default or delay in delivery.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, § 424.

Where a contract for the sale of milling machinery contains no stipulation for damages resulting to the purchasers from delay in furnishing it, and there is nothing in the special circumstances attending the transaction from which an understanding can be inferred that the purchasers are to be reimbursed for any loss of profits arising from such delay, they cannot, in an action for the price, set off the profits which they would have realized from the sale of flour had the machinery been furnished at the time specified in the contract.—Howard v. Stillwell & Bierce Mfg. Co., 139 U. S. 199, 11 S. Ct. 500, 35 L. Ed. 147.

171. Excuses for default or delay in delivery.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 425-435.

173. — Prevention by acts of buyer.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 431-433.

Where one who had contracted to purchase rails to be manufactured for him, neglected, upon request, to direct how they should be drilled, and finally repudiated the contract, held, that the manufacturer was not bound to make the rails, tender them to the purchaser, and, on refusal to accept, sell them for the purchaser's account; but that, by showing he was at all times ready to perform the contract upon receiving the necessary directions, he could recover the profit which he would have made upon the contract.—Hinckley v. Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Co., 121 U. S. 264, 7 S. Ct. 875, 30 L. Ed. 967, affirming judgment (C. C.) Pittsburgh Bessemer Steel Rail Co. v. Hinckley, 17 F. 584.

176. Estoppel or waiver in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 436-444.

When, under a contract to furnish patented articles, goods are furnished which are either defective or of a different kind, but not entirely worthless, the purchaser, if he does not tender them back or make any complaint for many months, cannot complain, in a subsequent suit, of an instruction that the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the actual value of the thing delivered.—Cincinnati Siemens-Lungren Gas Illuminating Co. v. Western Siemens-Lungren Co., 152 U. S. 200, 14 S. Ct. 523, 38 L. Ed. 411.

177. Obligation to accept in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 445-450.

Under a contract for the sale of "500 tons No. 1 Shotts (Scotch) pig iron, at $26 per ton cash, in bond at New Orleans; shipment from Glasgow as soon as possible; delivery and sale subject to ocean risks"—shipment from Glasgow is a material part of the contract, and the buyer may refuse to accept such iron shipped as soon as possible from Leith, and arriving at New Orleans earlier than it would have arrived by the first ship that could have been obtained from Glasgow.—Filley v. Pope, 115 U. S. 213, 6 S. Ct. 19, 29 L. Ed. 372, reversing (C. C.) Pope v. Filley, 9 F. 65.

A contract for the sale of sugar described it as "shipping or to be shipped * * * per steamer E.," the price to be so much per pound "ex ship." There were also clauses, "Sea damaged, if any, to be taken at a fair allowance," and "No arrival, no sale." Held that, the sugar having been put on board the E., the purchaser's duty to receive it was not affected by the fact that during the voyage, owing to an accident to the vessel, part of the sugar was transferred to another vessel for transportation.—Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 16 S. Ct. 488, 40 L. Ed. 616.

181. Evidence.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 473-491.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, on an issue as to the quality of the goods furnished at a particular time, it is competent for plaintiff to prove the quality of similar goods furnished to another person at the same time if he further shows that the goods furnished each were of the same kind and quality.—Ames v. Quimby, 106 U. S. 342, 1 S. Ct. 116, 27 L. Ed. 100.

In an action to recover a balance due upon a contract to supply an ore crusher, payments made after the crusher begins work, while not conclusive, indicate that for a while, at least, it satisfied the conditions of the contract, and are properly to be considered in determining the merits of the action.—Chateaugay Ore & Iron Co. v. Blake, 144 U. S. 476, 12 S. Ct. 731, 38 L. Ed. 510.

¶198. Specific articles or goods.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 516-560.

¶201. — Delivery and acceptance.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 529-541.

In Kentucky, where the common-law rule with respect to sales of personalty prevails, a sale of crops passes title as soon as the bargain is struck, without any delivery or payment.—Briggs v. United States, 143 U. S. 346, 12 S. Ct. 391, 36 L. Ed. 180, reversing judgment 25 Ct. Cl. 126.

Acceptance passing title with right to rescind if on inspection the quality does not correspond with the specifications held to result from receipt by carrier on its own line of hay delivered to it under a contract with the vendor.—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 65, 231 U. S. 363, 58 L. Ed. 269.

¶202. — Payment of price.

In Kentucky, where the common-law rule with respect to sales of personalty prevails, a sale of crops passes title as soon as the bargain is struck, without any delivery or payment.—Briggs v. United States, 143 U. S. 346, 12 S. Ct. 391, 36 L. Ed. 180, reversing judgment 25 Ct. Cl. 126.

¶214. Articles or goods to be produced or manufactured.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 571-573.

Where the government contracts with an individual for the construction of a steam battery for harbor defense, and agrees to make advances for the purchase of materials to aid in its construction, title to the property does not pass to the United States until the completion of the structure, and its acceptance by the authorities of the government duly appointed for that purpose, notwithstanding the materials purchased with such advances were stamped with the letters U. S. to prevent their diversion to other uses.—Clarkson v. Stevens, 105 U. S. 505, 1 S. Ct. 200, 27 L. Ed. 139.

The facts that advances were made out of the purchase money according to the contract, for the cost of the work as it progressed, and that the government was authorized to require the presence of an agent to join in certifying to the accounts, are not conclusive evidence of an intent that the property in the ship should vest in the United States prior to final delivery.—Id.

Crops to be grown constitute an exception to the general rule that the title to property cannot be affected by a sale before it has come into existence; and such a sale, though made before the seed is planted, will cause the title to vest as soon as the crop appears.—Briggs v. United States, 143 U. S. 346, 12 S. Ct. 391, 36 L. Ed. 180, reversing judgment 25 Ct. Cl. 126.

Cable railway cars were built on order, without specifications as to the brakes, and part of them were inspected at the builder's shops, as required by the contract. These were pronounced satisfactory, and directions were given to finish the remainder in the same manner, and forward them. Held, that the title to all passed at the time of shipment, notwithstanding the existence of latent defects in the brakes, which were only disclosed when put in operation on the purchaser's road.—Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 157 U. S. 94, 15 S. Ct. 503, 39 L. Ed. 632.

Under an agreement reciting that the seller had on the day of its execution "sold" the therein described cattle to the purchaser, guaranteeing the title, and providing the mode of payment, the title passes to the purchaser, notwithstanding the provision that the seller is to retain possession of a part of the herd until the last payment.—Arkansas Valley Land & Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 9 S. Ct. 458, 32 L. Ed. 854.

(B) RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF SELLER AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

¶219. Title and rights in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 588-603.

A chattel mortgage taken by an antecedent creditor who knows that the debtor has procured the goods fraudulently cannot be sustained against defrauded vendors of the property, whether they elect to rescind the sale and replevin the goods or to sue for the purchase price and attach the goods. Judgment, 60 P. 534, 8 Okl. 239, affirmed.—Browning v. De Ford, 20 S. Ct. 876, 178 U. S. 196, 44 L. Ed. 1033.

¶225. Actions between seller and third persons.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 615-625.

In detinue by a seller of machinery to recover the same from one in possession under chattel mortgages given by the purchaser, plaintiff cannot be permitted to testify that the written contract of sale was qualified by an oral guaranty, and that the machinery was not accepted as fulfilling the same; especially as such conditions were in favor of the purchaser, and his act in giving the mortgages constituted a waiver thereof.—Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 13 S. Ct. 18, 36 L. Ed. 880.

(C) RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF BUYER AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

¶226. Title and rights in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 626-644, 652.

The execution and delivery, by the president of a corporation, of a bill of sale of a stock of goods which were to be sold and the proceeds applied upon its indebtedness to the vendee, was not accompanied or followed by the open, visible, and notorious change of possession required by the law of Illinois to protect the goods from attachment by the creditors of the vendor where the only acts indicating a change of ownership consisted in insuring the goods in the name of the vendee, opening a new set of books, billing all the goods sold in the name of the vendee, and placing the proceeds of such sales to its credit, while the stock of goods remained in the custody of the same persons as theretofore, and was apparently in the possession of the vendor so far as appeared to the public, and was sold in the same way as theretofore down to the day of the attachment. Judgment, 88 F. 446, 31 C. C. A. 582, affirmed.—Dooley v. Pease, 21 S. Ct. 329, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. Ed. 457.

A written contract of sale of varnish, etc., provided: "These goods to be exactly the same quality as we make for [certain third persons], and as per sample bbls. delivered;" and continued: "Turpentine copal varnish at 65 cts. per gallon; turpentine japan dryer at 55 cts. per gallon." Held, that the latter terms were but stipulations as to price, and imported no warranty that the goods delivered should be articles known to the trade by those names, and of a certain standard of quality.—De Witt v. Berry, 134 U. S. 306, 10 S. Ct. 536, 33 L. Ed. 896.

A bridge company, having partially executed a contract for the construction of a bridge, entered into a written agreement with a person, whereby the latter undertook, for a named sum, and within a specified time, to complete its erection. The subcontractor agreed to assume and pay for all work done and material furnished up to that time by the company. Assuming this work to have been sufficient for the purposes for which it was designed, the subcontractor proceeded with his undertaking, but the insufficiency of the work previously done by the company was disclosed during the progress of the erection of the bridge. No statement or representation was made by the company as to the quality of the work it had done. Its insufficiency, however, was not apparent upon inspection, and could not have been discovered by the subcontractor until actually tested during the erection of the bridge. Held, that the law implied a warranty that the work sold or transferred to the subcontractor was reasonably sufficient for the purposes for which the company knew it was designed.—Kellogg Bridge Co. v. Hamilton, 110 U. S. 108, 3 S. Ct. 537, 28 L. Ed. 86.

←273. — Fitness for purpose intended.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 772-776.

Though there is evidence that the purchaser of a refrigerating machine had theretofore used ice to cool his brewery to a certain temperature, and that the seller knew this, no warranty can be implied, under a contract by which a party agrees to furnish another with a No. 2 size refrigerating machine, as constructed by the party of the first part, to be put up and put in operation in the brewery, that the machine would produce the same temperature without the use of ice.—Seitz v. Brewers' Refrigerating Mach. Co., 141 U. S. 510, 12 S. Ct. 46, 35 L. Ed. 837.

←276. Construction and operation.

Where iron is sold under an agreement that it shall "be in accordance with an analysis furnished in a letter," of a named date, this amounts to a warranty that the iron shall not contain a greater proportion of phosphorus than specified in that analysis.—Albany & Rensselaer Iron & Steel Co. v. Lundberg, 121 U. S. 451, 7 S. Ct. 958, 30 L. Ed. 982.

The sellers of personal property brought an action to enforce their lien, and thereafter began an action of detinue. Held, that the former action, asserting title in the defendants, although it was dismissed by the plaintiffs without trial, barred the action of detinue.—Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 13 S. Ct. 18, 36 L. Ed. 880.

(C) RECOVERY OF GOODS DELIVERED OR PROCEEDS THEREOF.

←316. Right to reclaim goods in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 890-895.

In an action by the vendee of certain cattle against the vendor and others for converting them, the defense being that the sale was conditional and that the vendor had the right to retake possession, the court charged that if the bill of sale in evidence was not given to pass the absolute title, but simply to enable plaintiff to get possession of the cattle, and if it was agreed that they were to remain the property of the vendor until certain notes given for the purchase were paid, the vendor still retained the title and had the right, on default, to retake the cattle and sell them, but that if there was no such agreement, and the notes were given and accepted as absolute payment, without reservation of lien, the vendor could have no right to retake the cattle; also, in substance, that an express or special agreement was necessary before the notes could be deemed to have been received in satisfaction of the original debt. Held no error of which defendants could complain.—Segrist v. Crabtree, 131 U. S. 287, 9 S. Ct. 687, 33 L. Ed. 125, affirming Crabtree v. Segrist, 3 N. M. (Johns.) 278, 6 P. 202.

That a contract for the sale of hay to the United States is invalid, under Rev. St. U. S. § 3744 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2510], because it had not been reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties, does not entitle the contractor, after furnishing the hay and receiving the contract price, to maintain a quantum valebat on the ground that the value of the hay had increased from the time of the contract to the time of delivery. Judgment, 37 Ct. CL 281, affirmed.—St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. United States, 24 S. Ct. 47, 191 U. S. 159, 48 L. Ed. 180.

In an action to recover damages for the sale of county bonds purporting to be genuine and valid, but which turned out to be worthless, where the plaintiff in his complaint makes out a case of tort for the breach of an express warranty in the sale of the bonds, he is entitled to recover if he establishes the breach of warranty, without proving a scienter, though the complaint contains every allegation essential to support an action for deceit.—Shippen v. Bowen, 122 U. S. 575, 7 S. Ct. 1283, 30 L. Ed. 1172.

In an action for the balance of purchase money it is not error to exclude evidence that by agreement with plaintiff defendant was to retain it as a deposit in fraud of the plaintiff's creditors, since such agreement, if proved, would not relieve defendant from responsibility to account for it.—Block v. Darling, 140 U. S. 234, 11 S. Ct. 832, 35 L. Ed. 476.

Recovery on a contract for the purchase of cattle cannot be defeated because liens existed on those not stated to be subject to liens, where the possibility of such liens was contemplated by the contract, and they were satisfied out of the purchase money. Judgment, Snyder v. Stribling (1907) 89 P. 222, 18 Okl. 163, affirmed.—Snyder v. Rosenbaum, 30 S. Ct. 73, 215 U. S. 261, 54 L. Ed. 186.

A purchaser of cattle and feed cannot defeat a recovery of all of the purchase money because of a deficiency in the stated amount of feed, where all the cattle are delivered, and the recited amount of feed is not guaranteed, and he acts on his own inspection.—Id.

Failure to deliver cattle within the time specified by the contract will not defeat a recovery of the purchase money, where, by statute, time is not of the essence of the contract unless by its terms expressly so provided, and the cattle were accepted without objection on that ground.—Id.

Where the plaintiff contracted to erect a telescopic gas holder for the defendant, in an action brought to enforce payment of the price, the court will not allow the defendant to set off damages for delay in completion, when the defendant's evidence fails to prove that any date for the completion of the gas holder was fixed by the contract.—Minneapolis Gaslight

Co. v. Kerr-Murray Mfg. Co., 122 U. S. 300, 7 S. Ct. 1187, 30 L. Ed. 1190.

Where a purchaser has lost the right to rescind a purchase of railway cars on account of defect in the brakes, and refused to use the cars, the purchaser's only remedy, when sued for the price, was to reduce the recovery by an amount sufficient to procure the substitution of new brakes for the defective ones.—Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 157 U. S. 94, 15 S. Ct. 503, 39 L. Ed. 632.

Ⓔ353. — Declaration, complaint, or petition.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 995-1004.

Machinery was sold under a contract which, after guarantying operativeness, economy, durability, and horse power, further provided that the purchasers should use fair and honorable means to satisfy themselves, before the deferred payments fell due, that the machinery was working to "their satisfaction," and, if it was not, should notify the seller to comply with the contract in 60 days, in default whereof they might either declare the contract "full paid," or have a return of money already paid, and damages, after which the seller could remove the machinery. Held that, in suing upon the contract, it was only necessary for the seller to allege delivery of the articles and the expiration of the time for the deferred payments, and any matters arising under the above provisions were matters of defense to be brought forward by the purchasers.—Buckstaff v. Russell & Co., 151 U. S. 626, 14 S. Ct. 448, 38 L. Ed. 292.

Ⓔ356. Evidence.

Ⓔ357. — Presumptions and burden of proof.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 511, 1044-1048.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, where the defense is that the sale was made to defendants' agent, who had no authority to purchase, by collusion between him and plaintiffs, the burden is on plaintiffs to show both the sale and the authority of the agent, and not on defendants to establish their defense.—Schutz v. Jordan, 141 U. S. 213, 11 S. Ct. 908, 35 L. Ed. 705, affirming judgment (C. C.) 32 F. 55.

Ⓔ360. Amount of recovery.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1060-1062.

United States*, 36 S. Ct. 245, 240 U. S. 74, 60 L. Ed. 533, affirming judgment 49 Ct. CL 85.

On breach of a contract to purchase a right to buy public lands, it is the vendor's duty to resell his right, or, failing to do this, he must show its market value as a foundation for the recovery of damages.—Telfener v. Russ, 145 U. S. 522, 12 S. Ct. 930, 36 L. Ed. 800.

Ⓔ372. Defenses.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, § 1089.

An action at law was pending to recover damages caused by refusal to accept delivery of coke according to contract. Defendants filed a bill in equity to recover damages owing to the coke not being equal to sample, nor fit for the purposes intended, and praying that the assets of the plaintiffs at law who had become insolvent, might be subjected to the payment of damages, and that the action at law might be stayed. Plaintiffs in the action at law then set up their claim to damages by cross-bill. From the evidence it appeared that the sale was not by sample, nor was there any warranty that the coke should be fit for the purposes alleged by defendants, that large quantities had been delivered from time to time, and that defendants had used it, and paid for it without any notice that they intended to refuse performance of the contract. Held, that the bill and cross-bill were properly dismissed for want of equity, with costs to plaintiffs.—Dewey v. West Fairmont Gas Coal Co., 123 U. S. 329, 8 S. Ct. 148, 31 L. Ed. 179.

VIII. REMEDIES OF BUYER.

(A) RECOVERY OF PRICE.

391. Right of action.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1110-1127.

Plaintiff contracted to buy certain cattle, and paid $175,500, leaving a balance of $27,000 due. He then discovered that certain yearlings and other property covered by the contract, of the value of $14,110, had been delivered to other parties. Plaintiff could not get possession without completing the stipulated payment, and unless he took possession the property would be at great risk of loss for want of care during the winter just then beginning. Held, that his payment of the balance under protest was extorted by duress, and that he could maintain a suit to recover the value of the property wrongfully delivered to others.—Loneragan v. Buford, 148 U. S. 581, 13 S. Ct. 684, 37 L. Ed. 569, affirming judgment Buford v. Loneragan, 6 Utah, 301, 22 P. 164.

(B) RECOVERY OF GOODS.

[No paragraphs or references in this Digest. But see 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1140-1145.]

(C) ACTIONS FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT.

405. Right of action.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1147-1155; 1 Cent. Dig. Action, § 282.

In a suit on a written contract to sell all defendant's cattle on certain ranches, except 2,000 head of steers already sold to another purchaser, where the evidence showed that the contract with such other purchaser called for steers two years old and upward, the purchaser under the disputed contract could recover for all steers under two years old delivered by the seller to the other purchaser to complete the number of 2,000 sold under the prior contract of sale.—Loneragan v. Buford, 148 U. S. 581, 13 S. Ct. 684, 37 L. Ed. 569, affirming judgment Buford v. Loneragan, 6 Utah, 301, 22 P. 164.

406. Conditions precedent.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1156-1158.

Where one contracts to furnish machinery of a certain description and quality and to set the same up and put it in complete operation in another's mill, the price to be paid partly on the delivery of the machinery, the millowner is not compelled, in order to entitle him to avoid paying the whole contract price, or to recover damages for breach of the contract, to take out the machinery set up, on discovering that it is unsatisfactory.—Stillwell & Bierce Mfg. Co. v. Phelps, 130 U. S. 520, 9 S. Ct. 601, 32 L. Ed. 1035.

418. Damages.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1174-1201.

The measure of damages for breach of a contract to deliver goods is the difference between the price agreed on and the market value of the goods at the time of the breach.—Roberts v. Benjamin, 124 U. S. 64, 8 S. Ct. 393, 31 L. Ed. 334.

Where one contracts to furnish machinery of a certain description and quality, and to set the same up in another's mill, the measure of damages for breach of such contract is the reasonable cost of altering the construction and setting of the machinery so as to make it conform to the contract.—Stillwell & Bierce Mfg. Co. v. Phelps, 130 U. S. 520, 9 S. Ct. 601, 32 L. Ed. 1035.

The amount of the damages involved in an action for the breach of a written contract to deliver oil at a specified price f. o. b. buyer's tanks at seller's mill is not increased, for jurisdictional purposes, over and above the difference between the contract and market value, by allegations in the petition that the seller had notice that the buyer would be compelled to send its tanks from distant points to the seller's mill; that in so doing transportation charges were incurred, and the use of the tanks lost for 30 days; that seller was well aware that buyer had contracts over, and "had contracted to that end" with buyer; and that seller, contemplating the breach of its contract, maliciously caused the buyer to send the tanks a specified distance at a specified cost.—Globe Refining Co. v. Landa Cotton Oil Co., 23 S. Ct. 754, 190 U. S. 540, 47 L. Ed. 1171.

Mere notice to a seller of some interest or probable action of the buyer is not enough necessarily and as matter of law to charge the seller with special damage on that account, if he fails to deliver the goods.—Id.

(D) ACTIONS AND COUNTERCLAIMS FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY.

428. Right to defend, recoup, set-off, or counterclaim in action for price.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1214-1223.

Under the Pennsylvania practice, as under the practice in this country generally, a defendant in an action for the price of goods sold may show, by way of recoupment or equitable defense, not only the diminished value of the goods, but also positive damage suffered by him by reason of breach of warranty or fraudulent representations.—Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 696, 30 L. Ed. 810.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1253-1283.

439. — Presumptions and burden of proof.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1258-1280.

In an action on a written contract to recover deferred payments for boilers and engines sold, plaintiff need not specifically allege fulfillment of warranties as to operativeness, economy, durability, and horse power, but the burden is on defendant to allege and prove any breaches thereof.—Buckstaff v. Russell & Co., 151 U. S. 626, 14 S. Ct. 448, 38 L. Ed. 292.

441. — Weight and sufficiency.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1277-1283.

Evidence that a contract for the purchase of rags was for clean rags, and that the rags delivered were filthy, and infected with the smallpox, and that they caused the breaking out of disease in the purchaser's mill, is evidence of a warranty and breach thereof.—Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 7 S. Ct. 696, 30 L. Ed. 810.

⚡443. Trial.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1302-1312.

⚡445. — Questions for jury.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1303-1308.

Where, in an action for a breach of an express warranty in the sale of county bonds, as to their genuineness, the evidence tends to show that the defendant expressly affirmed the regularity and validity of the bonds, the question of warranty should go to the jury.—Shippen v. Bowen, 122 U. S. 575, 7 S. Ct. 1283, 30 L. Ed. 1172.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, § 1321.

A contract for the sale of certain rails, cars, engines, and goods, to remain the property of the seller until payment of the note given for the purchase price, is no less a conditional sale because possession was to be, and was, delivered, and it must have been contemplated that the rails would be put down upon a roadway assumed to belong to the purchaser, or because the contract required additional security in the form of first mortgage bonds of the purchaser.—William W. Bierce v. Hutchins, 27 S. Ct. 524, 206 U. S. 340, 51 L. Ed. 828.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1324, 1325, 1332, 1334.

A contract reading, "I hold of the stock of the * * * railway company $33,250 or 1,350 shares, which is sold to * * *, and which, though standing in my name, belongs to him subject to a payment of $8,000," is an executed contract, by which the ownership passes to the purchaser, with a reservation of title in the seller as security for the purchase money.—Beardsley v. Beardsley, 138 U. S. 262, 11 S. Ct. 318, 34 L. Ed. 928.

A contract which gives the purchaser the right to resell in the ordinary course of business, but provides that title shall remain in the seller until such resale, and that the proceeds derived therefrom, in whatever form existing, shall be the property of the seller, is, in Arkansas, a conditional sale, and valid without record. Judgment, In re E. M. Newton & Co., 153 F. 841, 83 C. C. A. 23; Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Bryant, Id. (1907) affirmed.—Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 29 S. Ct. 614, 214 U. Contract governed by Kansas laws providing for retention of title to the property sold until payment made held a contract of conditional and not one of absolute sale.—Bailey v. Baker Ice Mach. Co., 36 S. Ct. 50, 239 U. S. 268, 60 L. Ed. 275, affirming decree Baker Ice Mach. Co. v. Bailey, 200 F. 603, 126 C. C. A. 425.

⚡459. Contracts creating conditions on transfer of title in general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1337-1347.

A., who held about 800 shares of railway stock, agreed with B., who owned 1,200 shares, that the stock should be pooled, each party's interest to be joint and equal and A. to pay in money to equalize the interest. The right was reserved to each party on death of the other to buy in the interest of his estate on certain terms. A. paid no money, and about three years later B. reported that he then had 1,571 shares and A. had 812 shares. To make their interests equal, B. transferred to A. 379½ shares and took from him his note for the amount, giving a receipt, which set out that the note was given for the 379½ shares then held by B., "and to be delivered on payment of the note." Held, that the receipt revoked the original contract, and amounted to a sale on condition that if the note was not paid when due all interest of A. in the 379½ shares should come to an end.—Davison v. Davis, 125 U. S. 90, 8 S. Ct. 825, 31 L. Ed. 635, affirming decree Mundy v. Davis, 20 F. 353.

⚡472. — In general.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 1366-1376.

The vendee of personalty under a conditional sale, to whom possession has been delivered, cannot convey the title, or subject it to execution for his own debts, until the condition on which the agreement to sell was made has been performed.—Harkness v. Russell, 118 U. S. 663, 7 S. Ct. 51, 30 L. Ed. 285, affirming judgment Russell v. Harkness, 7 P. 865, 4 Utah, 197.

In the absence of fraud, an agreement for a conditional sale, accompanied by delivery to the vendee, is good and valid, as well against third persons as against the parties to the transaction.—Id.

The purchasers of certain machinery, after paying the first installment on delivery according to the contract, which was a mere order for goods, accepted without reservation of title, executed a mortgage thereon for an old debt, which mortgage was duly filed. Thereafter the purchaser gave the seller, as security for the rest of the price, three notes, each with an express condition that title should not pass until payment in full had been made. Held, that title passed on delivery, and the mortgagee's title was good as against the seller claiming under the notes, which could have no greater effect than a mortgage in revesting title.—Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 13 S. Ct. 18, 36 L. Ed. 880.

In the night, no watch having been set, a passenger on board of her was awakened by a smell of smoke arising from a fire which had broken out in part of the cargo, and which endangered the ship and cargo. He gave the alarm to the officers and crews of the ship and of the tug, and he and the officers, crew, and passengers of the tug, working together, and by means of a steam pump and hose upon the tug, and unaided by the officers and crew of the ship, put out the fire in 20 minutes. Held, that this was a salvage service.—The Connemara, 108 U. ⚡ 16. Services rendered under contract.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Salv. § 23.

The captain of a salvage company, in response to telegrams, went to a sunken steamer, removed her cargo, pumped her out, and towed her safely into port. Before going to work the captain of the sunken vessel asked what it would cost to get the vessel off, to which the captain of the salvors replied, "I do not know." The captain of the vessel then said, "This is not a salvage service;" to which the other replied, "Call it what you please, so I get my pay;" and the captain then said, "It is no salvage service." They finally agreed to submit the amount to be paid to arbitration, in case the salvage company and the owners of the vessel could not agree on a sum. Held, that the salvage company was entitled to salvage compensation for the services rendered, as the conversation between the captains did not amount to a contract for compensation that would bar a claim for salvage, and such claim was not affected by the agreement to arbitrate.—Potomac Steam-Boat Co. v. Baker Salvage Co., 123 U. S. 40, 8 S. Ct. 33, 31 L. Ed. 75.

He gave the alarm to the officers and crews of the ship and of the tug; and he and the officers, crew, and passengers of the tug, working together, and by means of a steam pump and hose upon the tug, and unaided by the officers and crew of the ship, put out the fire in 20 minutes. Held, that the passenger on board the ship, as well as the owner, officers, crew, and passengers of the tug, might share in the salvage.—The Connemara, 108 U. The liability of the federal government, as having a direct pecuniary interest in the property saved, for salvage upon the duties collected by it upon a cargo of sugar afterwards saved from loss by fire while on board a lighter, in the harbor of New York, and in the possession and control of the customs officers may be founded on the assumption that the Secretary of the Treasury, acting under the authority of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2984, 3689 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 1958, 2460] would have refunded the duties if the property had been destroyed by the fire. Decrees United States v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 137 F. 455, 69 C. C. A. 603, and (D. C.) Cornell Steamboat Co. v. 1883 Bags of Sugar, 108 F. 277, affirmed.—United States v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 26 S. Ct. 648, 202 U. S. 184, 50 L. Ed. 987.

II. AMOUNT AND APPORTIONMENT.

36. Contracts as to compensation.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Salv. §§ 85-91.

The owners of three steam tugs which had pumping machinery were employed by the master and agent of a ship sunk at a wharf in New Orleans, with a cargo on board, to pump out the ship for $50 per hour for each boat, "to be continued until the boats were discharged." When the boats were about to begin pumping, the United States marshal seized the ship and cargo on a libel for salvage. After the seizure the marshal took possession of the ship and displaced the authority of the master, but permitted the tugs to pump out the ship. After they had pumped for about 18 hours, the ship was raised and placed in a position of safety. The tugs remained by the ship, ready to assist her in case of need, for 12 days, but their attendance was not required by any peril of ship or cargo. In libels of intervention, in the suit for salvage, the owners of the tugs claimed each $50 per hour for the whole time, including the 12 days, as salvage. The claims were resisted by insurers of the cargo, to whom it was abandoned. The district court allowed $500 to each tug, and $500 to the crew of each tug. On appeal by the owners of the tugs, the circuit court decreed to each of them $1,000. Held that, as against the insurers of the cargo, the right of the tugs to compensation terminated when the ship and cargo were raised, and the tugs were then discharged.—Good Intent Towboat Co. v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 109 U. S. 110, 3 S. Ct. 78, 27 L. Ed. 874.

On October 5, 1894, the Elfrida, a steel steamship, in ballast, and worth about $90,000, grounded on a bar between the jetties at the mouth of the Brazos river, on the coast of Texas. Efforts of the crew to release her failed, and on the evening of the second day she was carried by a rising sea across the end of one of the jetties, and driven further in shore, where she settled in the sand, being about 1,000 feet from water of sufficient depth to float her. She remained in such position for 10 days, in no great peril except in case of storms, during which time the master communicated by cable with her owners. The libelants offered to attempt the release of the vessel for whatever compensation the courts should award, which offer the master declined, and under the advice of the agents of the owners at Galveston, and Lloyd's agent, who visited the vessel, and with the consent of the owners, invited bids, and on October 15th entered into a contract with libelants for her salvage for the sum of $22,000; the contract reserving the right to the owners to abandon the vessel to the salvors in lieu of payment, and providing that no compensation whatever should be paid unless she was placed safely in port within 21 days. The libelants employed in the service a large force of men, two tug-boats, two lighters, and two schooners, besides other equipment, of the total value of from $30,000 to $50,000. On October 17th the vessel was released without injury, by the use of her own engines and the anchors and cables placed by the salvors. Held that, under the circumstances, there was no ground for setting aside the contract, and that the libelants were entitled to recover the stipulated salvage.—Decree 77 F. 754, 23 C. C. A. 527, reversed.—The Elfrida, 19 S. Ct. 146, 172 U. S. 186, 43 L. Ed. 413.

It is not within the discretion of a court of admiralty to set aside salvage contracts in all cases where, after the service is performed, the stipulated compensation appears to be unreasonable. The validity of such a contract is not affected by the fact that more or less work was required than was anticipated when it was entered into.—Id.

Where the compensation for salvage fixed by a contract is made dependent on success, and particularly on success within a limited time, it may properly be very much larger than a mere quantum meruit, and such a contract will not be set aside, after the service has been performed, on the ground that the sum fixed is excessive, unless corruptly entered into, induced by fraud or clear mistake, or other circumstances amounting to compulsion, or when its enforcement would be contrary to equity and good conscience.—Id.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Salv. §§ 133, 134.

Under Act Cong. Feb. 16, 1875, c. 77, making a decree in admiralty of the circuit court equivalent to a special verdict, a salvage allowance will not be modified by the supreme court as excessive, unless so great that in view of the facts it cannot be justified by the rules of law applicable to the case.—The Connemara, 108 U. S. 352, 2 S. Ct. 754, 27 L. Ed. 751.

Since the act of congress of 1875, in a salvage case the United States supreme court may revise the decree of the circuit court for matter of law only, and will not alter such decree for the reason that the amount awarded appears to be too large, unless the excess is so great that, on any reasonable view of the facts found, the award cannot be justified by the rules of law applicable to the case. Hence a decree allowing $5,600 as compensation for safely and expeditiously removing a cargo worth $10,000 from a steamer sunk by a collision, worth $150,000, and pumping out, raising and towing such steamer several miles into port, at great risk and expense to the salvaging company, will not be reversed on the ground that the award is excessive.—Potomac Steamboat Co. v. Baker Salvage Co., 123 U. S. 40, 8 S. Ct. 33, 31 L. Ed. 75.

Laws Iowa, 1880, c. 132, provides that a school district may issue bonds to fund an indebtedness, but that such bonds shall be used for no other purpose. Const. Iowa, 1857, art. 11, § 3, provides that no municipality shall be allowed to become indebted for a greater amount than five per cent. of the value of the taxable property as shown by the last tax lists. A school district whose indebtedness was nearly $20,000 and whose taxable property as shown by the last tax lists was valued at about $130,000, for the purpose of funding its indebtedness, issued bonds for $25,000, which were sold; only a small portion of the proceeds being applied to said indebtedness, the remainder being used for current expenses, etc. The bonds recited that they were issued in pursuance of said statute and "in accordance with the laws and constitution of the state of Iowa, and in conformity with a resolution of said board of directors." Held, that the bonds were void, since they were not used for funding, and created an indebtedness in excess of that permitted by the constitution.—District Tp. of Doon v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 366, 12 S. Ct. 220, 35 L. Ed. 1044, reversing judgment Cummins v. District Tp. of Doon, 42 Fed. 644.

annual interest on the literary fund, the capitation tax provided for by this constitution for public free school purposes, and an annual tax upon the property of the state * * * for the equal benefit of all the people of the state." Held, that the legislature had no right, by the acts of 1871 and 1879, to contract that moneys due the literary fund might be paid in coupons; and Act Va. March 15, 1884, providing that all taxes dedicated to the maintenance of the public free schools should be paid in "lawful money of the United States," and should be kept distinct from other taxes, is constitutional.—*McGahey v. 4. Statutory provisions.

Congress was not without power to provide by Act Dec. 21, 1898, c. 28, § 24, 30 Stat. 755, 763 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3071, 3080], that the provisions of that section, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and declaring that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, should extend to seamen shipping in an American port on a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce.—Patterson v. The Eudora, 28 S. Ct. 821, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. Ed. 1002.

The restriction on contracts of seamen engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, which is made by the provisions of Act Dec. 21, 1898, c. 28, § 24, 30 Stat. 755, 763 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3071, 3080], making it a misdemeanor to pay any seamen wages in advance, and declaring that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, is a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate commerce.—Id.

11. Medical treatment and maintenance of disabled seamen.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 39-44, 187.

Though a vessel is not liable to a seaman for the negligence of the master or crew resulting in personal injury, the seaman is entitled to recover for his maintenance and cure.—The Osceola, 23 S. Ct. 483, 189 U. S. 158, 47 L. Ed. 760.

The master of a sailing vessel bound for San Francisco is not chargeable with fault in failing to put back 480 miles from the place of accident to Port Stanley, in the East Falkland Islands, to secure surgical attendance for a seaman who was disabled by the accident while the vessel was rounding Cape Horn, although, with the winds then prevailing, it would have been possible to reach that port in three or four days, where the return from the port to the place of the accident, in view of the head winds, might have taken as many weeks. Decree 118 F. 1008, 55 C. C. A. 497, affirmed.—The Iroquois, 24 S. Ct. 640, 194 U. S. 240, 48 L. Ed. 955.

The obligation of the master of a sailing vessel bound for San Francisco, toward a seaman disabled by an accident while the ship was rounding Cape Horn, does not require him to stop at the Evangelist Islands, at the western end of the Straits of Magellan, which could have been reached by sailing one or two days out of the vessel's course, where the only building there was a lighthouse from which a small steamer was accustomed to put out to passing vessels in case a signal for relief was hoisted, and nothing could be done there except, possibly, to place the injured man upon a steamer bound north to Valparaiso or east to Sandy Point, near the middle of the straits.—Id.

The failure of the master of a sailing vessel bound for San Francisco to put into San Carlos or Ancud to secure surgical attendance for a seaman who was disabled in an accident while the vessel was rounding Cape Horn is not negligence, since these are not harbors at which vessels from the Atlantic and Pacific ports are in the habit of stopping, and while the master was apprised by his charts of their existence, it might well be that he was ignorant of their population and surgical facilities.—Id.

The concurring decisions of the two lower courts, that the master of a sailing vessel bound for San Francisco was bound to put into an intermediate port for surgical attendance for a seaman who, while in the discharge of his duties, had fractured two ribs and his right leg in a fall from the main yard to the deck while the vessel was rounding Cape Horn, will not be disturbed by the federal Supreme Court, where the ship was about 1,500 miles from Valparaiso when the accident happened, and, with favorable winds, could have reached that port in 14 days, without causing a delay to the voyage of more than 5 or 6 days.—Id.

15. Wages.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 4, 54-169.

23. — Advances.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 118-122.

Seamen shipping in an American port on a foreign vessel engaged in foreign commerce are within the protection of Act Dec. 21, 1898, c. 28, 30 Stat. 755, 763 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 3071, 3080], § 24, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and providing that advance payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, which provisions are expressly declared applicable "as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States," although such act is entitled "an act to amend the laws relating to American seamen."—Patterson v. The Eudora, 23 S. Ct. 821, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. Ed. 1002.

29. Personal injuries.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 186, 188-194; 34 Cent. Dig. Mast. & S. §§ 211, 492, 592, 734.

Injuries sustained by a member of the crew on board a ship in attempting to hoist a gangway in a heavy wind are not done "by such ship," within the meaning of Rev. St. Wis. 1898, § 3348, imposing liability on every ship "for all damages arising from injuries done to persons or property by such ship," as such statute was intended to cover only cases of damage done by the ship herself, as the offending thing, to persons or property outside the ship.—The Osceola, 23 S. Ct. 483, 189 U. S. 158, 47 L. Ed. 760.

A vessel is not liable in rem to one of the crew, under the general principles of admiralty, for damages for personal injuries sustained by him through the improvident and negligent order of the master in directing a gangway for the discharge of cargo to be hoisted before the arrival of the vessel at her dock and during a heavy wind.—Id.

30. Discipline and punishment.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 195-211.

The imprisonment of an insubordinate seaman on a French vessel, pursuant to article 8 of the treaty with France of August 12, 1853, 10 Stat. 992, 996, providing that such persons may be arrested on the written requisition of the consul, supported by an official extract from the register of the ship or the list of the crew, and shall be held, during the whole time of their stay in the port, at the disposal of the consuls, need not end with the departure of the vessel from the port at which the seaman was taken from the vessel, but may last until the expiration of the two months, which is the limit prescribed by Act June 11, 1864, c. 116, 13 Stat. 121, carried forward in substance as Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4079-4081 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2766], enacted to provide for the execution of treaties respecting consular jurisdiction over the crews of foreign vessel in the waters and ports of the United States.—Dallemagne v. Moisan, 25 S. Ct. 422, 197 U. S. 169, 49 L. Ed. 709.

Only a federal marshal can make an arrest on the requisition of a French consul, charging a seaman on a French vessel with insubordination, conformably to article 8 of the treaty with France of August 12, 1853, 10 Stat. 992, 996, since this, being the mode of arrest specified by Act Cong. June 11, 1864, c. 116, 13 Stat. 121, enacted to provide for the execution of treaties respecting consular jurisdiction over the crews of foreign vessels in the waters and ports of the United States, and re-enacted in substance in Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4079-4081 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2766], must be regarded as the only means proper to be adopted for this purpose.—Id.

33. Penalties and forfeitures for violations of regulations.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Seamen, §§ 218, 219.

Penalty imposed by Rev. St. § 4529, as amended by Act Dec. 21, 1898, § 4, on shipowner for delay in paying seaman's wages without sufficient cause, is not incurred by delay because of an attempt to secure revision in federal Circuit Court of Appeals by an appeal from a decree for such wages and penalties for delay.—Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Schmidt, 38 S. Ct. 581, 241 U. S. 245, 60 L. Ed. 982, reversing decree 214 F. 518, 130 C. C. A. 657.

34. Offenses.

A citizen or subject of a foreign government who enlists as one of the crew of an American ship becomes a temporary subject of the United States, so as to give the consular tribunal of the United States in a foreign country jurisdiction to try offenses committed by him on board the ship.—*Ross v. Jan. 23, 1905 [Acts 1905, p. 1]) to produce as witnesses before a commission certain named officers, agents, directors, and employees, and to produce any books, papers, etc., in their possession or under their control relating to the merits of the cause or to any defense, does not amount to an unreasonable search and seizure. Judgment 100 S. W. 407, 81 Ark. 519, affirmed.—Hammond Packing Co. v. State of Arkansas, 29 S. Ct. 370, 212 U. S. 322, 53 L. Ed. 530, 15 Ann. Cas. 645.

Making the returns for the assessment of the exercise imposed by Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 38, 36 Stat. 112 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 844), on the doing or the carrying on of business in a corporate or quasi corporate capacity, public documents, and open to inspection as such, under certain restrictions, as is done by subsection 6 of that act, as amended by Act June 17, 1910, c. 297, 36 Stat. 494, does not do violence to the constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.—Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 31 S. Ct. 342, 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. Ed. 389, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312.

The enforced production before a grand jury engaged in investigating the alleged criminal conduct of corporate officers, directors, and stockholders of the letter-press copy books of the corporation for two specified months, in the possession of its president, under a subpoena duces tecum directed to the corporation, does not violate the provisions of Const. Amend. 4, forbidding unreasonable searches and seizures.—Wilson v. United States, 31 S. Ct. 538, 221 U. S. 361, 55 L. Ed. 771, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 558.

The constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures is not denied by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission requiring the secretary or other similar officer of the carriers subject to Act March 4, 1907, c. 2939, 34 Stat. 1415 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1909, p. 1170), regulating the hours of labor of employees, to make monthly reports under oath, showing the instances where employees subject to the act have rendered excess service, and giving the cause and explanatory facts, if any, or, where there has been no excess service, to make a separate oath to that effect, in lieu of the form to be used in detailing excess service.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 31 S. Ct. 621, 221 U. S. 612, 55 L. Ed. 878.

The protection against unreasonable searches and seizures afforded by Const. Amend. 4, cannot ordinarily be invoked to justify the refusal of an officer of a corporation to produce its books and papers in obedience to a subpoena duces tecum issued in an action against the corporation to recover a statutory penalty.—(1911) American Lithographic Co. v. Werckmeister, 31 S. Ct. 678, 221 U. S. 603, 55 L. Ed. 873, affirming judgment (1908) 165 F. 426, 91 C. C. A. 376.

Subpoena duces tecum calling for production before a grand jury investigating alleged criminal conduct of former officers of corporation of all books, letters, etc., covering a specified period in their possession, is not an unreasonable search or seizure.—Wheeler v.

United States, 33 S. Ct. 158, 226 U. S. 478, 57 L. Ed. 309.

Former officers of dissolved corporation are not subject to an unreasonable search and seizure by compulsory production before a grand jury investigating their alleged criminal conduct of books and papers of the corporation in their possession.—Id.

Enforced production before the grand jury of books and papers of a defunct corporation in possession of a former stockholder who claims title is not a violation of the constitutional protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.—Grant v. United States, 33 S. Ct. 180, 227 U. S. 74, 57 L. Ed. 423, affirming judgment (D. C.) In re Grant, 198 F. 708.

Const. U. S. Amend. 4, against unreasonable searches and seizures, does not apply to the states.—National Safe Deposit Co. v. Stead, 34 S. Ct. 209, 232 U. S. 58, 58 L. Ed. 504, affirming judgment 95 N. E. 973, 250 Ill. 584, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 430.

The immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures afforded by Const. U. S. Amend. 4, has been denied accused in a criminal prosecution, where the court has refused a reasonable application for return of letters and papers seized in his house in his absence by a United States marshal holding no warrant therefor, where their use in evidence at the trial has been permitted.—Weeks v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 341, 232 U. S. 383, 58 L. Ed. 652, L. R. A. 1915B, 834, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1177.

Protection against individual misconduct of municipal police officers not acting under federal authority is not afforded by guaranty of Const. U. S. Amend. 4, of immunity from unreasonable searches and seizures, but such amendment reaches only the federal government and its agents.—Id.

not make an improper use of it, and, in the case of real property, that he shall make restitution of the fruits he shall have received since the demand. Held, that these articles implied that movables could be used, if used properly and that no restitution for the use of such property was required.—*Baldwin v. Rev. St. Tex. art. 650, allows a defendant to set off any counterclaim founded on a cause of action arising out of, or connected with, plaintiff's cause of action. In an action for the value of property alleged to have been burned by defendant's negligence, defendant pleaded a counterclaim for damages alleged to have been caused by plaintiff's negligence, by which the fire was occasioned. Held, that the action of the court in sustaining an exception to the counterclaim was immaterial, where the jury found for plaintiff, for such a verdict determined defendant's negligence and plaintiff's want of it.—*Pacific Exp. A suit was brought in a state court of Minnesota by a citizen of that state against a sheriff for trespass in taking possession of the plaintiff's stock of goods, and a foreign corporation intervened and sought the removal of the cause to the federal court, alleging that the acts of the sheriff were all performed under the direction of the intervener. Held, that the fact that the intervention was had under Gen. St. 1878, §§ 154, 155, providing that in such suit, where the judgment goes for the plaintiff, the property of the intervener must first be exhausted on execution before that of the sheriff is sold, does not alter the nature of the action and render the sheriff an unnecessary party, but the liability of all the defendants is still joint, so far as the plaintiff is concerned.—Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535, 7 S. Ct. 1265, 30 L. Ed. 1235.

¶139. — Damages.

See 43 Cent. Dig. Sheriffs, §§ 297-307.

Plaintiffs alleged, in substance, that they, in exercise of their constitutional rights, imported certain liquors for their own use; that defendants, claiming to act as constables, forcibly, willfully, and maliciously, and with intent to oppress and intimidate plaintiffs, seized and carried away such liquors, knowing that the act was forbidden by the federal constitution and laws, and notwithstanding notice by plaintiffs that the act would be regarded as an invasion of their constitutional rights, for which defendants would be held responsible. Held, that these allegations, if true, would establish a case in which exemplary damages might be allowed.—Scott v. Donald, 17 S. Ct. 265, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. Ed. 632.

The six months' clause in Tariff Act, § 37, imposing an annual tax on the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht owned or chartered for more than six months by any citizen of the United States, applies only to charterers.—Id.
Actual use during the taxing year, as distinguished from potential use involved in ownership, is the test of liability for the excise tax based on gross tonnage which, under Tariff Act, § 37, is to be collected annually on the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht owned by any citizen of the United States.—Id.

The nonuse of a foreign-built pleasure yacht during the entire taxing year relieves the owner from liability for the annual excise tax imposed by Tariff Act, § 37, on the use of every such yacht.—Pierce v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 427 (1st case), 232 U. S. 290, 58 L. Ed. 609, reversing in part (C. C.) United States v. Billings, 190 F. 359; Pierce v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 427 (2d case), 232 U. An action in personam will lie against the owner to recover the excise tax imposed by Tariff Act, § 37, on the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts.—Rainey v. United States, 34 S. Ct. 429, 232 U. S. 310, 58 L. Ed. 617, affirming order (C. C.) United States v. Billings, 190 F. 359, and modifying judgment (C. C.) Same v. Blair, 190 F. 372.

The excise tax based on gross tonnage to be collected under Tariff Act, § 37, annually on the 1st day of September on the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht owned or chartered by any citizen of the United States, became due on the 1st day of September following the passage of the act.—Id.

The six months' clause in Tariff Act, § 37, imposing an annual tax on the use of foreign-built pleasure yachts, applies only to charterers, and not to owners.—Id.

A citizen of the United States having a permanent residence and domicile abroad is not liable for the excise tax based on gross tonnage which, under Tariff Act, § 37, is to be collected annually by the collector of the district nearest the residence of the managing owner on the use of every foreign-built pleasure yacht owned or chartered by any citizen.—United States v. Golet, 34 S. Ct. 431, 232 U. S. 293, 58 L. Ed. 610; Same v. Bennett, 34 S. Ct. 437, 232 U. S. 308, 58 L. Ed. 616.

8. Inspection.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 21-25.

10. — Steam vessels.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 23-25.

The hull and boilers of a craft 37 feet long, of 8 feet beam, and 3 feet 9 inches depth of hold, used to transport the owner and his superintendent across the Delaware, and occasionally his workmen, to the number of nine or ten, and having a small engine and boiler, must be inspected under Rev. St. tit. 52, § 4426 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3029], such vessel differing but slightly from a ferryboat or a yacht, and falling under "other small craft of like character"; and the owner is liable in the penalty imposed by section 4499 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3060] if he fail to comply with the provisions of the former section.—Hartman v. Du Pont, 118 U. S. 223, 6 S. Ct. 1188, 30 L. Ed. 205.

The appointment of a local inspector of the hulls of steam vessels by the secretary of the treasury as a special inspector of foreign vessels, under Act Cong. Aug. 7, 1882, c. 433, 22 Stat. 302 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2427], which fixes the compensation of such special inspectors at $2,000 per year, entitles the appointee to such compensation for his services, though the appointment is made with the distinct condition that he is not to receive any additional compensation. Judgment 35 Ct. Cl. 242, reversed.—Glavey v. United States, 21 S. Ct. 891, 182 U. S. 595, 45 L. Ed. 1247.

The failure of a special inspector of steam vessels to give a bond will not preclude him from recovering compensation for his services as such officer, when he has been duly appointed and taken the oath of office under the act of congress of August 7, 1882.—Id.

The failure especially to enumerate Rev. St. U. S. § 4405 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3017], giving the force of law to regulations of the board of supervising inspectors, in Act Aug. 7, 1882, c. 441, 22 Stat. 346 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3015], making applicable to foreign vessels the provisions of certain enumerated sections relating to the inspection of steam vessels, does not render such section inapplicable to foreign vessels. Decree, La Bourgogne (1906) 144 F. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed.—Deslions v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 28 S. Ct. 664, 210 U. S. 95, 52 L. Ed. 973.

11. Protection of life and property.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 2.

The sufficiency of the equipment of a vessel with lifeboats, life rafts, and boat disengaging apparatus is to be measured by the regulations adopted pursuant to Rev. St. U. S. § 4488 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3055], by the board of supervising inspectors, which regulations, under section 4405 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3017], when approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, "have the force of law." Decree, La Bourgogne (1906) 144 F. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed.—Deslions v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 28 S. Ct. 664, 210 U. S. 95, 52 L. Ed. 973.

15. Port authorities and regulations.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 5.

The port authorities have no special authority or duty in regard to the preservation or destruction of any vessel and her cargo, as distinct from the general authority and the general duty appertaining to them as guardians of the port, and of all the property, on land or water, within their jurisdiction.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 657, 39 L. Ed. 742, reversing decree (D. C.) 37 Fed. 888.

The sole office and duty of the port authorities in destroying ship or cargo, in order to put out a fire, are not to save the rest of a single maritime adventure, or to benefit private individuals engaged in that adventure, but to protect and preserve all the shipping and property in the port, for the benefit of the public.—Id.

II. TITLE.§18. Title under contract for building vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 50, 51.

A dredge building for the federal government became, as fast as paid for, the property of the government, so as not to be subject to seizure or incumbrance under state lien laws, where the ownership clause of the building contract provided that parts paid for were to become the sole property of the United States, and required insurance to be effected by the contractor on behalf of the government to at least the amount of each partial payment, notwithstanding other provisions in the contract, which gave the government the right to reject defective work or material, or even the entire dredge, if, upon trial and before final acceptance, it proved defective, and to complete the vessel in the event of the annulment of the contract, and required a bond in the sum of $60,000 for the faithful performance of the contract, and made the contractor responsible for the payment of all liabilities for labor and material incurred in the prosecution of the work.—(1910) United States v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co., 31 S. Ct. 49, 218 U. S. 452, 54 L. Ed. 1107, modifying judgment S. H. Hawes & Co. v. Wm. R. Trigg Co. (1909) 65 S. E. 538, 110 Va. 165.

A contract for the construction of a vessel for the federal government which contains no provision for the passing of title to the vessel on partial payments, but, on the contrary, stipulates that, on certain conditions, the title shall vest in the government as collateral security, and provides for the release of liens before partial payments shall be required, must be deemed to have been made in recognition of the rights of those furnishing work or material for the vessel to secure their claims by liens, which it is made the duty of the contractor to provide for in order to protect the title of the government.—Id.

§21. Rights, powers, and liabilities of part owners.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 61-80.

Four steamboats, owned by four separate transportation companies, were placed before the public as being engaged in the same trade, and as constituting together the "Kountz Line," with a common agent called the "Kountz Line" corporation, which was invested with unlimited authority in their general management, and in respect to rates of transportation. No contracts were made for transportation in the respective, corporate names of the transportation companies, but the Kountz Line corporation, as their common agent, was empowered or permitted to do business for them, using, in the agent's discretion, when making contracts, either the name of the Kountz Line or the names of the respective boats of the line. Held, that the several transportation companies, having held themselves out as united in a joint enterprise, were jointly liable for the default or negligence of those placed in charge of any of the boats; and that the fact that the transportation companies owned no property in common, and that each was entitled to receive the net earnings of its own boat, was immaterial.—Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kountz Line, 122 U. S. 583, 7 S. Ct. 1278, 30 L. Ed. 1137, rehearing denied 123 U. S. 85, 8 S. Ct. 67, 31 L. Ed. 79, reversing decree Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Kountz Line (D. C.) 10 F. 768.

III. CHARTERS.

Liquidated damages for breach of charter party, see Damages, §78.

§37. Requisites and validity of charter party.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 127-135.

A charter party of a Spanish ship, containing a clause that the ship should be fitted up, at the owner's expense, with oil tanks, was signed on behalf of the owner by a broker in New York, who stated that he had no authority to agree to this clause, and proposed that, if the owner would not agree thereto, the matter should be compromised by cable. The London brokers of the owner informed the New York broker on December 31st that the owner would not agree to this clause. On January 4th the owner wrote the London broker to the same effect, and a copy of the letter was forwarded to the New York broker of the charterer. Without any further or direct communication, the owner sent the ship to Philadelphia, and delivered her to the charterer on February 18th, nothing further being said as to the disputed clause. Held, that the owner waived his objections to the charter party, whether he intended to do so or not, for to escape liability thereunder he should have made known distinctly that he did not deliver the ship under the charter party as signed.—La Compania Bilbaina de Navegacion de Bilbao v. Spanish-American Light & Power Co., 146 U. S. 483, 13 S. Ct. 142, 36 L. Ed. 1054, affirming decree (D. C.) 31 F. 492.

A charter party, containing a clause that the ship should be fitted up at the owner's expense with oil tanks, signed on behalf of the owner by a broker without authority, but subsequently ratified by the owner, by delivery of the ship, could not be binding upon the charterer in respect to hire, and not binding on the owner as to fitting up the tanks, for, if the minds of the parties failed to meet as to any part of it, it was a nullity as to all parts.—Id.

§39. Construction and operation in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 141-148.

In a charter party which describes the ship by name, and as "of the burden of 1,100 tons, or thereabouts, registered measurement," and by which the owner agrees to receive on board, and the charterer engages to provide, "a full and complete cargo, say about 11,500 quarters of wheat in bulk," the statement of her registered tonnage is not a warranty or condition precedent; and if her actual carrying capacity is about 11,500 quarters of wheat the charterer is bound to accept her, although her registered measurement (unknown to both parties at the time of entering into the contract) is 1,203 tons.—Watts v. Camora, 115 U. S. 353, 6 S. Ct. 91, 29 L. Ed. 406, affirming (C. C.) 10 F. 145.

A clause in a charter party for cessor of the liability of the charterers, coupled with a clause creating a lien in favor of the shipowner, is to be construed, if possible, as inapplicable to a liability with which the lien is not commensurate. Decree, Burrill v. Crossman, 91 F. 543, 33 C. C. A. 663, reversed.—Crossman v. Burrill, 21 S. Ct. 38, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 108.

§42. Seaworthiness and fitness of vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 156-164.

A clause in a charter party, that the charterers might cancel it if the vessel should not be ready to load by a day specified, was waived, and no such day was specified; but it was provided that the 16 running lay days were to commence after written notice given by the master of readiness to receive cargo. It was guaranteed that the vessel would carry 10,000 quarters of corn. No written notice was given, but loading commenced June 28th, with consent of parties, and continued until the afternoon of June 30th, when the inspectors declared the vessel full all over, and stopped further loading, only 9,635 quarters having been loaded. After negotiation on both sides, and attempts by the charterers to dispose of the incomplete cargo, the latter, July 5th, notified the shippers that they would sell the cargo at the shippers' risk. The next day the shippers notified the charterers that they could make room for the balance, and that the vessel would be ready on the 7th. The charterers refused this proposal, and sold the cargo on the 7th. On the 13th, room having been made, the vessel was again tendered to the charterers, and the balance of cargo demanded. This was furnished by third parties, and the vessel sailed on the 18th. No notice was given by the charterers that they considered the charter party at an end because of the breach of the guaranty, prior to the sale of July 7th. Held, that the shippers had complied with their guaranty within a reasonable time, and were not liable for damages.—Culliford v. Vinet, 123 U. S. 135, 9 S. Ct. 50, 32 L. Ed. 381, reversing decree Gomila v. Culliford (D. C.) 20 F. 734.

43. Readiness and dispatch of vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 165-168.

At the time of the execution, on August 1st, of a charter party of a steamer, then lying at Benizof, in Morocco, it was understood by all parties that vessel was wanted that could be loaded at Philadelphia in August, and that no other would answer the purpose. The owners refused to insert a guaranty that the steamer would reach Philadelphia in time to load in August, but, at the request of the charterers, struck out the words describing the steamer as "sailed from or loading at Benizof," and substituted the words, "now sailed, or about to sail, from Benizof with cargo, for Philadelphia." Held, that the stipulation meant that the steamer had her cargo on board and was ready to sail; that the stipulation was a warranty or condition precedent; and that the facts that on the 1st of August the steamer was only three-elevenths loaded, and did not sail until August 7th, entitled the charterers to at once repudiate the contract and employ another vessel.—The Whickham, 113 U. S. 40, 5 S. Ct. 346, 28 L. Ed. 885, affirming Von Längen v. Davidson (C. C.) 4 F. 346.

46. Voyage.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 171-176.

A bark was chartered to carry a cargo of oranges from Palermo, Sicily, to Boston, Massachusetts, the charter party containing the words, "Captain engages himself to take the northern passage," which was inserted at the instance of the owner of the cargo, for the benefit of the cargo, and written into the printed blank. The cargo was badly damaged by heat on the voyage, and suit was brought to recover the loss. The controversy was as to whether the vessel, in going from Gibraltar to Boston, took "the northern passage." Libellant's witnesses testified that it meant a passage from Gibraltar to the Great Banks, and thence direct to Boston, keeping as much to the north as possible during the entire passage; while libellee's witnesses testified that it meant north of latitudes 30 to 35 or 36 deg., or of the southern passage, which was in the trade winds. Held that, if the testimony failed to show that any particular passage had acquired in the trade the name of "the northern passage," it was error to rule that the vessel might take any other of the known or accustomed passages than one which would carry it in a northerly direction, through the coolest waters, and into the coolest temperature; and the court should have ascertained from the evidence what passages there were between Gibraltar and Boston which vessels were accustomed to take, and then determine which of them the vessel was allowed by the charter party to choose as "the northern passage."—The John H. Pearson, 121 U. S. 469, 7 S. Ct. 1008, 30 L. Ed. 979.

Under a charter party by which the vessel is to be delivered to the owner at New York at the expiration of the charter in as good condition as when chartered, ordinary wear and tear, damages by the elements, bursting of boilers, and breaking of machinery excepted, and providing that she was to be kept in condition by the owner, and time lost by reason of her being out of order was to be deducted, the charterer could, on neglect of the owner to keep her in good order, discharge her without delivering her at New York.—Strong v. United States, 154 U. S. 632, 14 S. Ct. 1182, 24 L. Ed. 664, affirming judgment 13 Ct. Cl. 544.

47. Discharge of cargo.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 182, 183.

The cost of lightering a vessel's cargo to the discharging berth designated by the assigns of the charterers under the charter party, which the vessel was prevented by an overhead bridge from reaching without cutting off or removing her steel masts, cannot be deducted from the freight, where the charter party required the vessel to discharge "always afloat" at a "safe port," or "so near the port of discharge as she may safely get," and provided that the anchorage directed must be the most convenient, and that if lighterage was necessary, either to reach the port or to deliver the cargo, the expense thereof was chargeable to the receivers of the goods, regardless of any local port custom. Decree 108 F. 89, 47 C. C. A. 222, reversed.—Mencke v. A Cargo of Java Sugar ex The Benlarig, 23 S. Ct. 86, 187 U. S. 248, 47 L. Ed. 163.

49. Charter money and other compensation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 187-200, 202.

A broker signed in behalf of a shipowner a charter party providing that the ship should be fitted up at the owner's expense with oil tanks, having no authority to agree to such provision. After one or two voyages, the tanks were required for use, and the charterer notified the owner that until this was done at the owner's expense the hire would cease. The owner finally fitted up the tanks, under the supervision of an engineer appointed by the charterer, first notifying the charterer that he would be held liable for the expense. Held, that this was the voluntary act of the owner, and the charterer was not liable for such expense, nor for the rent of the vessel during such fitting, since she was not then in service.—La Compania Bilbaina de Navegacion de Bilbao v. Spanish-American Light & Power Co., 146 U. S. 483, 13 S. Ct. 142, 36 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree (D. C.) 31 F. 492.

Under a charter party by which the vessel is to be delivered to the owner at New York at the expiration of the charter in as good condition as when chartered, ordinary wear and tear, damages by the elements, bursting of boilers, and breaking of machinery excepted, and providing that she was to be kept in condition by the owner, and time lost by reason of her being out of order was to be deducted, the charterer could, on neglect of the owner to keep her in good order, discharge her without delivering her at New York, or paying for her time while going there and being repaired.—Strong v. United States, 154 U. S. 632, 14 S. Ct. 1182, 24 L. Ed. 664, affirming judgment 13 Ct. Cl. 544.

50. Expenditures and liabilities incurred.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 150-155.

A broker signed in behalf of a shipowner a charter party providing that the ship should be fitted up at the owner's expense with oil tanks, having no authority to agree to such provision. After one or two voyages, the tanks were required for use, and the charterer notified the owner that until this was done at the owner's expense the hire would cease. The owner finally fitted up the tanks, under the supervision of an engineer appointed by the charterer, first notifying the charterer that he would be held liable for the expense. Held, that this was the voluntary act of the owner, and the charterer was not liable for such expense.—La Compania Bilbaina de Navegacion de Bilbao v. Spanish-American Light & Power Co., 146 U. S. 483, 13 S. Ct. 142, 36 L. Ed. 1064, affirming decree (D. C.) 31 F. 492.

Liability for damage caused by negligence of the officers and crew of a vessel, who are appointed and paid by charterers, is not, as between the charterers and the owners, imposed upon the owners by a clause of the charter party requiring the owners to "pay for the insurance on the vessel." Decree 94 F. 213, 36 C. C. A. 190, reversed.—The Barnstable, 21 S. Ct. 684, 181 U. S. 464, 45 L. Ed. 954.

◀ 51. Breach of charter by owner or master.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 203-210.

The clause in a charter party by which the parties mutually bind themselves, the ship and freight, and the merchandise to be laden on board, "in the penal sum of estimated amount of freight," to the performance of all and every of their agreements, is not a stipulation for liquidated damages, but a penalty to secure the payment of the amount of damage that either party may actually suffer from any breach of the contract, and is to be so treated in a court of admiralty of the United States, whatever may be the rule in the courts of the particular state in which the contract is made and the court of admiralty sits.—Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 6 S. Ct. 91, 29 L. Ed. 406, affirming (C. C.) 10 F. 145.

◀ 52. Breach of charter by charterer.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 211-213.

The clause in a charter party by which the parties mutually bind themselves, the ship and freight, and the merchandise to be laden on board, "in the penal sum of estimated amount of freight," to the performance of all and every of their agreements, is not a stipulation for liquidated damages, but a penalty to secure the payment of the amount of damage that either party may actually suffer from any breach of the contract, and is to be so treated in a court of admiralty of the United States, whatever may be the rule in the courts of the particular state in which the contract is made and the court of admiralty sits.—Watts v. Camors, 115 U. S. 353, 6 S. Ct. 91, 29 L. Ed. 406 affirming (C. C.) 10 F. 145.

Under a charter party which allowed 15 lay days for loading after the ship was ready to receive cargo the owner tendered her to the charterers. They immediately refused to accept her, and 36 days afterwards he obtained another cargo, but negotiations were pending between the parties for half of that time, and the owner sustained substantial damage in a certain amount by the failure of the charterers to comply with their contract. The circuit court found these facts, and entered a decree against the charterers for that amount. Held no error in law for which the charterers could have the decree reversed in the supreme court.—Id.

◀ 53. Loss of or injury to cargo.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 214-218, 225.

On libel for injuries to cargo, it was shown that the damage was done by water which found its way into the hold through the bilge pump hole, whose cap was knocked off. The hole was in the waterway, and was covered by a cap screwed into a brass plate, which was countersunk into the wood and fastened with screws. This plate was knocked off in a gale. The timber was not rotted, and, though the screws were torn from their holes, the holes were not black nor worn smooth. The plates had been put in when the ship was built, 11 years before, and there was no evidence that they had ever been inspected otherwise than by the eye. There were no marks of violence upon the bulwarks or deck in the neighborhood of the plate after it was torn off. Held, that the evidence did not sustain the defense that the plate was properly fastened, but was knocked off by some floating object, which constitutes a peril of the sea, as excepted in the charter party.—The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, 14 S. Ct. 823, 38 L. Ed. 688.

◀ 54. Loss of or injury to vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 219-221.

Striking trees and snags, and sinking, are maritime risks, assumed by the owner of a vessel in a charter party; and liability therefor is not affected by the fact that at the time of the accidents a pilot furnished by the charterer is in charge, he not having been objected to by the owner or shown to have been unskillful or negligent.—Strong v. United States, 154 U. S. 632, 14 S. Ct. 1182, 24 L. Ed. 664, affirming judgment 13 Ct. Cl. 544.

An absolute obligation to return a yacht at the expiration of the term of hiring is imposed upon the charterer, failure to comply with which is not excused because the vessel is lost without fault on his part, by a charter party which, after providing for the surrender of the vessel at the expiration of the term "in as good condition as at the start, fair wear and tear from reasonable and proper use only excepted," and requiring the hirer to make all repairs and to assume liability for all loss and damages, fixes in express terms the value of the vessel, and makes provision for security to protect against any loss or damage sustained by a failure of the hirer to fulfill any of the obligations which the contract imposes. Decree, Moore v. Sun Printing & Publishing Ass'n, 101 F. 591, 41 C. C. A. 506, affirmed.—Sun Printing & Publishing Ass'n v. Moore, 22 S. Ct. 240, 183 U. S. 642, 46 L. Ed. 366.

The obligation imposed upon a newspaper corporation by a charter party executed for it by its managing editor, of paying $75,000, the agreed value of the vessel, in the event of her nonreturn, is not so modified as to require a deduction of the hire paid from such agreed sum, due as a consequence of a default in the return of the vessel, by a stipulation in an agreement executed by such editor for the corporation, in compliance with the requirement of the charter party, that the charterer should give security in that sum for the performance of the contract, that the liability thereunder should in no case exceed the sum of $75,000, which stipulation followed the provisions that the corporation bound itself that the hirer would perform the obligations expressed in the charter party, and that the intention of the parties was to hold the corporation primarily liable for such obligations.—Id.

The United States is not liable under charter for not returning a vessel in the same order as received, where the damage was due to marine risks which the owner assumed.—New Orleans-Belize Royal Mail & Cent. American S. S. Co. v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 76, 239 U. S. 202, 60 L. Ed. 156.

55. Charter by government.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 222-224.

A contract stipulated that the contractor should "provide and furnish to" the government, whenever called upon during a specified year, "such vessels of the descriptions herein-after given as may be required to take the place of the vessels now performing service," and that, in case of his failure so to do, the government should have "the power to hire vessels elsewhere in open market" at his "sole expense and charge." Held, that this was a contract for hiring, and not for service, and that the government was therefore bound to pay rent for a vessel furnished and accepted thereunder until final return to the contractor, although such vessel had been injured and laid up for repairs during part of the time it was in the service of the government.—United States v. Shea, 152 U. S. 178, 14 S. Ct. 519, 38 L. Ed. 403.

Munitions of war are "stores," and soldiers "passengers," within the charter of a vessel by the government in time of war.—Strong v. United States, 154 U. S. 632, 14 S. Ct. 1182, 24 L. Ed. 604, affirming judgment 13 Ct. Cl. 544.

Where the use of a vessel chartered by the government in time of war for transportation of passengers and stores is not limited to any particular waters, she may be sent up a river in aid of military forces.—Id.

Where a vessel is chartered for war purposes, the government to be responsible for all loss occurring by war risks, the owner has no claim for damage caused by his master's disobedience of the orders of the military officer commanding.—White v. United States, 154 U. S. 861, 14 S. Ct. 1192, 26 L. Ed. 178.

United States held not the owner pro hac vice of a vessel chartered for military service so as to affect the extent of its liability for injuries to the vessel and for demurrage due to repairs.—New Orleans-Belize Royal Mail & Cent. American S. S. Co. v. United States, 36 S. Ct. 76, 239 U. S. 202, 60 L. Ed. 156.

58. Actions.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 233-244, 314, 327.

A positive finding, in an action for breach of a charter party, that the port to which a vessel was ordered was not a safe port is not controlled by recitals of evidence that large English steamers habitually, and several American vessels had in fact, discharged their cargoes at anchorage without disaster.—The Gazelle, 128 U. S. 474, 9 S. Ct. 139, 32 L. Ed. 496, affirming (D. C.) 11 F. 429.

Nor can it be assigned for error that the circuit court failed to make a distinct finding on the issue that, by the custom of trade between the Atlantic ports and Denmark, the port to which the vessel was ordered was recognized as being within the charter party; the record not showing any proof of such custom, and the custom of recognizing as safe a port which is not in fact reasonably safe being incompetent to directly contradict the charter party.—Id.

In an action for breach of the condition of a charter party that the charterer should order the vessel to a safe port, or one with a safe anchorage outside, a custom, found by the circuit court to exist in the Atlantic ports of the United States, of ordering vessels similarly chartered to any safe port within the range, where commerce is carried on, whether the vessel could get into it or not, provided there was an anchorage, customarily used and reasonably safe for discharge, has no bearing where the anchorage near the port was not found to be reasonably safe.—Id.

IV. MASTER.

60. Authority and duties.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 254-258.

61. — Scope and extent in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 254, 255.

Persons who, by a valid written contract, agree to purchase goods to be shipped by a certain vessel with a provision, "No arrival, no sale," have an insurable interest in the goods, which renders the master of the vessel, in case of necessity, their agent, as well as the agent of the seller and of the insurer.—Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 16 S. Ct. 488, 40 L. Ed. 616.

63. — Management and navigation of vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 270, 271.

While a licensed harbor or river pilot supercedes the master, for the time being, in the command and navigation of the ship, yet the master is not justified in leaving the pilot in sole charge of the vessel. He is still in command of her, except so far as her navigation is concerned, and is bound to see that there is a sufficient watch on deck, and that the men are attentive to their duties; and he may advise with the pilot, and even displace him in case of intoxication or manifest incompetence.—The Oregon, 158 U. S. 186, 15 S. Ct. 804, 39 L. Ed. 943, reversing decree (D. C.) 45 F. 62.

71. Liabilities for negligence or misconduct.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 309, 310, 312, 313, 316.

A jettison of cattle by the master, from mere unfounded apprehension, during rough weather, is not barratry, there being neither intentional fraud, breach of trust, nor willful violation of law.—Compania De Navegacion La Flecha v. Brauer, 18 S. Ct. 12, 168 U. S. 104, 42 L. Ed. 398, affirming decree Brauer v. Campania, De Navegacion La Flecha, 68 F. 776, 14 C. C. A. 88.

78. Torts.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 333-360.

81. — Negligent management or navigation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 341, 344, 345, 347; 37 Cent. Dig. Nav. Wat. § 93.

A shipowner is not liable for injuries inflicted on a pier exclusively by negligence of a pilot accepted by the vessel under Laws N. Y. 1882, c. 410, by which the acceptance of such pilot is made compulsory.—Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 21 S. Ct. 831, 182 U. S. 406, 45 L. Ed. 1155, answering certified questions 109 F. 1058, 47 C. C. A. 681.

A captain engaged in navigating the waters of Lake Superior cannot as a matter of law, be said to be free from negligence in colliding with an uncompleted extension of a government breakwater in an important harbor in that lake where he had the means of ascertaining the conditions, which, if known, would have prevented the collision. Judgment (1905) 142 F. 315, 73 C. C. A. 425, affirmed.—Davidson S. S. Co. v. United States, 27 S. Ct. 480, 205 U. S. 187, 51 L. Ed. 764.

Lack of sufficient federal authority for erection of boring plants in the Hudson river does not exempt a steamboat company from liability for damages by collisions of boats of the steamboat company with such structures by the negligence of the company.—Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phenix Const. Co., 34 S. Ct. 701, 233 U. S. 593, 58 L. Ed. 1107, affirming judgment Phenix Const. Co. v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 103 N. E. 891, 210 N. Y. 113.

—85. — Joint liability and contribution.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 339.

Four steamboats, owned by four separate transportation companies, were placed before the public as being engaged in the same trade, and as constituting together the "Kountz Line," with a common agent called the "Kountz Line" corporation, which was invested with unlimited authority in their general management, and in respect to rates of transportation. No contracts were made for transportation in the respective corporate names of the transportation companies, but the Kountz Line corporation, as their common agent, was empowered or permitted to do business for them, using, in the agent's discretion, when making contracts, either the name of the Kountz Line or the names of the respective boats of the line. Held, that the several transportation companies, having held themselves out as united in a joint enterprise, were jointly liable for the default or negligence of those placed in charge of any of the boats; and that the fact that the transportation companies owned no property in common, and that each was entitled to receive the net earnings of its own boat, was immaterial.—Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kountz Line, 122 U. S. 583, 7 S. Ct. 1278, 30 L. Ed. 1137, reversing Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Kountz Line (D. C.) 10 F. 768, and (C. C.) 48 F. 838.

—86. — Actions.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 342, 353-360.

A longshoreman who, while in the employ of a stevedore, and engaged in loading a vessel, is injured, partly through the vessel's negligence and partly through his own, by falling from the bridge, is not entirely prevented by his contributory negligence from a recovery upon libeling the vessel, but is entitled to a decree for divided damages.—The Max Morris v. Curry, 137 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 29, 34 L. Ed. 586, affirming (C. C.) 28 F. 881.

In an action against a steamboat company for running its boat violently against a wharf and injuring plaintiff, who was standing thereon, it is not error to instruct that if the jury find from the evidence that the wharf was an ordinarily strong one, and suitable for the purpose for which it was constructed, and that the boat was thrown against it with such force as to tear up the planks of the flooring, then this is prima facie evidence of negligence.—Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 11 S. Ct. 653, 35 L. Ed. 270, affirming judgment Tolson v. Inland & S. Coasting Co., 6 Mackey, 39.

—87. — Liens.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 340.

The rule by which state statutes authorizing suits in rem against vessels have been held void, because they gave to state courts admiralty jurisdiction, does not apply to a statute (Rev. St. Ill. 1881, c. 12, p. 137) giving a lien against vessels for damages done by them, in a case where the damage complained of, consisting of injury caused to a warehouse by a vessel running against it, was not completed wholly on water, and hence was not of cognizance in admiralty.—Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co., 119 U. S. 388, 7 S. Ct. 254, 30 L. Ed. 447.

The foundation of the rule that collision gives to the party injured a jus in re in the offending ship is the principle of maritime law that the ship, by whomsoever owned or navigated, is considered as herself the wrongdoer, and subject to a maritime lien for the damages.—The John G. Stevens, 18 S. Ct. 544, 170 U. S. 113, 42 L. Ed. 909.

VI. BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA.

—91. Necessity for hypothecation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 366-368.

A vessel "dismasted and leaky," put into a port of distress, where "a general equipment and refit" was found to be necessary. Though her cargo, consisting of logwood, was practically imperishable, and vessels were available by which it could have been forwarded at comparatively slight expense, her master chose instead to hypothecate vessel, freight, and cargo for $13,224, out of which repairs to the amount of $11,600 were made. Upon reaching her destination she was attached and sold for but $4,500, leaving, after paying wages and expenses of sale, but $3,500 to apply on the debt. Held, in an action to subject the cargo to the bottomry bond, that there existed no necessity which authorized the master to pledge the cargo; that the cargo was under no obligation to help the vessel to the end of its voyage, unless it was to its interest to do so; that the lender is chargeable with notice of the necessities which develop and limit the master's powers to act for the owner of the cargo, and must judge for himself whether, if the owner were present, he would do what the master is undertaking to do for him; that in this case, having made no inquiries of the shipper through a period of two months, pending the repairs, during which time the shipper was in reach by mail and telegraph, the lender is not entitled to recover.—Bank of St. Thomas v. The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 418, 2 S. Ct. 692, 27 L. Ed. 595.

—92. Requisites and validity.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 373-380.

Where it is shown that the hypothecation of the ship and cargo was necessary, and that the course pursued was for the best interests of the cargo owners, and the bottomry bond itself does not import that the master had not communicated with the owners, it will be presumed that he lawfully executed the bond, and, if a party seeks to avoid it on the ground that he did not communicate with the owners when he might have done so, the burden is on such party to show that fact by way of defense. Decree 67 F. 605, 14 C. C. A. 566, reversed.—O'Brien v. Miller, 18 S. Ct. 140, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469.

—93. Construction and operation in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 381-390.

In determining whether there is such an ambiguity in a contract as leaves any room for a construction thereof by the court, no particular words can be segregated from the context, and affirmed to be without ambiguity, but the whole contract must be brought into view, and interpreted with reference to the nature of the obligation between the parties, and the intention which they manifested in forming it. This rule is especially applicable in construing a bottomry bond, as admiralty courts act upon enlarged equitable principles.—O'Brien v. Miller, 18 S. Ct. 140, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469, reversing decree 67 F. 605, 14 C. C. A. 566.

Contracts of bottomry and respondentia are so different in different countries, though resembling each other in some prominent features, that, when disputes arise, they are to be decided by the words of the particular contract in question, rather than by any principles of general commercial law.—Id.

98. Loss of vessel or cargo.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 371.

In a port of refuge, a portion of the cargo was forwarded by another vessel, and the master gave a bottomry bond, which expressly covered this, as well as the ship herself, and the balance of her cargo. In the defeasance clause it was declared that the bond should be void if the "said vessel" should be utterly lost by perils of the sea. The vessel herself and her part of the cargo were entirely lost on the voyage as the result of a collision, but the transhipped portion of the cargo reached its destination in safety. Held, that the words "said vessel" were not to be interpreted as rendering the bond void, on the loss of the vessel, as to that part of the cargo which arrived. Decree 14 C. C. A. 566, 67 F. 605, reversed.—O'Brien v. Miller, 18 S. Ct. 140, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469.

A bottomry bond covered the ship, that part of her cargo on board, and that part which had been forwarded on another vessel. The vessel herself and her part of the cargo were lost in a collision, but that on the other ship arrived safely. In order to obtain possession of this portion, the consignees paid the full amount of the bond. Thereafter the shipowner recovered damages for the loss of his vessel. Held, that these damages represented the ship itself, and that consequently the owner was liable to the consignees in a suit in personam for a due proportion of the sum which they had paid on the bond.—Id.

VII. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

See Carriers, 97.

Joint liability for injury to cargo, see Torts, 22.

102. What law governs.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 400.

A stipulation that the law of the ship's flag shall govern, in a bill of lading for goods in a foreign vessel on a voyage from a foreign port to the United States, is nullified and overridden by Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, § 1, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946], which prohibits contracts against liability for negligence in loading and stowing the cargo. Decree, Botany Worsted Mills v. Knott, 82 F. 471, 27 C. C. A. 326, affirmed.—Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 21 S. Ct. 30, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. Ed. 90.

104. Contracts of affreightment in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 225, 404-410.

Where a vessel, before she breaks ground for a voyage, is so injured by fire that the cost of her repairs would exceed her value when repaired, and she is rendered unseaworthy and incapable of earning freight, a contract of affreightment for carrying cotton to a foreign port, and providing for the payment of the freight money on the delivery of the cotton at that port, is dissolved.—The Tornado, 108 U. S. 342, 2 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 747.

113. Delivery by vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 424-439½.

Where a cargo owner finds a vessel, with his cargo on board, at a port of refuge, needing repairs which cannot be effected without a cost to him of more than he would lose by taking his property at that place and paying the vessel all her lawful charges against him, he may pay the charges and reclaim the property.—Bank of St. Thomas v. The Julia Blake, 107 U. S. 418, 2 S. Ct. 692, 27 L. Ed. 595.

Under a bill of lading requiring "the goods to be taken from alongside by the consignee immediately the vessel is ready to discharge," otherwise they will be deposited, at the risk of the consignee, in the warehouse provided for that purpose, personal notice to the consignee of the time and place of discharge is not necessary.—Constable v. National S. S. Co., 154 U. S. 51, 14 S. Ct. 1062, 38 L. Ed. 903, affirming decree Arnold v. Same (D. C.) 29 F. 184.

Where the selection for discharge of cargo of a wharf other than the vessel's usual wharf is allowable and proper under the usages of trade or the necessities of the case, the obligation of the carrier to give notice to the consignees of the time and place of discharge is not increased or modified thereby if the consignees are not prejudiced by the change.—Id.

Notice to consignees of the time and place of discharge of cargo, when required, may be given by posting on a bulletin board at the customhouse at a port where it is usual so to post such notices, and not to publish them in the newspapers.—Id.

118. Delay in transportation or delivery.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 225, 436.

In the usual course of the business of shipping cattle abroad, they are sold immediately on arrival, which fact was known to the ship agent when a contract for transportation was signed. Owing to the unseaworthiness of a ship, the voyage was prolonged 20 days, during which the market price of the cattle fell. Held, that the ship was liable for the shipper's loss caused by the fall in the market price.—The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 15 S. Ct. 537, 39 L. Ed. 644, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 681, and (D. C.) 50 Fed. 567.

119. Loss or injury.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 225, 226, 440-488.

121. — Unseaworthiness or unfitness of vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 226, 449-451, 466.

The owners of a barge are liable for damages to the cargo caused by the barge striking a sand bar and leaking, where her inability to withstand the ordinary pressure of such accidents is due to their negligent failure to properly repair the barge.—The Northern Belle v. Robson, 154 U. S. 571, 14 S. Ct. 1166, 19 L. Ed. 748.

The implied warranty of seaworthiness which exists in all contracts for carriage at sea, unless otherwise expressly stipulated, is an absolute undertaking, not dependent on the owner's knowledge or ignorance, his care or negligence, that the ship is in fact fit to undergo the perils of the sea and other incidental risks; and it covers latent defects, not ordinarily susceptible of detection, as well as those which are known or discoverable by inspection. Held, therefore, that this warranty extended to the case of a propeller shaft, which broke, in ordinary weather, from weakness existing at the commencement of the voyage; not by reason of any flaw or other defect discoverable by any usual or reasonable means, even if the shaft were taken out, but rather from a weakening due to encountering extraordinary storms on previous voyages.—The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 15 S. Ct. 537, 39 L. Ed. 644, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 681, and (D. C.) 50 F. 567.

A carrier is liable for losses incurred on a shipment of cattle through shrinkage in weight and fall in market value, where the delay is occasioned by breach of the warranty of seaworthiness, although such breach was due to a hidden defect in the propeller shaft, not attributable to the carrier's negligence.—Id.

A vessel was not unseaworthy at the beginning of her voyage because ports between decks, eight inches in diameter, and a few feet above the water line, were closed only with the glass covers, and the hatches were battened down, where the hatches could be taken off in two minutes, the cargo was so stowed as to afford free access to the ports, and they were provided with additional covers of iron, which could be closed if deemed necessary.—The Silvia, 19 S. Ct. 7, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, affirming judgment 68 F. 230, 15 C. C. A. 362, which affirms decree (D. C.) 64 F. 607.

—125. — Deviation or delay.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 459, 460, 466.

A carrier is liable for losses incurred on a shipment of cattle through shrinkage in weight, where the delay is occasioned by breach of the warranty of seaworthiness, although such breach was due to a hidden defect in the propeller shaft, not attributable to the carrier's negligence.—The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 15 S. Ct. 537, 39 L. Ed. 644, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 681, and (D. C.) 50 F. 567.

—126. — Negligence in discharging or caring for goods after discharge.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 461-464.

Failure to give actual notice to consignees of the time and place of discharge of cargo unloaded at a wharf, other than the vessel's usual wharf, at which the goods, before delivery to the consignees, are destroyed by fire, does not render the carrier liable for the loss, where the consignees, had they received notice, could not have removed their goods before the fire, and where they took no steps on the faith of the cargo's being discharged at the usual place.—Constable v. National S. S. Co., 154 U. S. 51, 14 S. Ct. 1062, 38 L. Ed. 903, affirming decree (D. C.) Arnold v. Same, 29 F. 184.

An agreement of the carrier with the collector of customs to pay the consignee the value of goods which may be burned, made as a condition to the collector's permit for the goods to remain on the wharf 48 hours, is not one of which the owners can avail themselves as adding to the obligations of their contract with the carrier where it is stipulated in the bill of lading that the goods shall be at the consignee's risk of fire after discharge.—Id.

Where the wharf of a steamship company, at which its vessels usually discharge, is so blocked that one of them cannot obtain access to it, the discharge of her cargo, for the mutual advantage of ship and consignees, at a neighboring wharf, which is a fit and proper place therefor, is not a deviation such as to render the company an insurer of cargo there discharged without notice to the consignee, until its actual delivery to him and liable for its loss by fire.—Id.

—130. — Duties after disaster or loss.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 469, 470.

The duty of the master of a negligently stranded vessel, whether the negligence falls within the exemption of the Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, § 3, or not, does not call for sacrifice of part of the owner's property necessary to save the cargo.—The Jason, 32 S. Ct. 560, 225 U. S. 32, 56 L. Ed. 969.

—132. — Actions for damages.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 471-487.

Cargo shipped under bills of lading containing exceptions of damage by collision was damaged as the result of a collision, wherein the other vessel was clearly shown to be guilty of inexcusable fault. In the collision suit the underwriters of the cargo sought to hold both vessels liable. Held that, in order to hold the vessel which carried the cargo, the burden was on them to defeat the operation of the exception in the bills of lading by proof of such negligence on her part as would justify a decree against her if sued alone.—The Victory, 18 S. Ct. 149, 168 U. S. 410, 42 L. Ed. 519.

The burden of proof which rests upon the shipowner to show the discharge of his initial duty under the Harter act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946]) to use due diligence to provide a refrigerating apparatus in good order and repair, competent for the safe transportation of a cargo of dressed beef which he has undertaken to carry, is not sustained by evidence of a superficial inspection shortly before sailing, which disclosed no defect, where the testimony also shows that the machinery broke down very shortly after leaving port, and after being repaired broke down again, and during the voyage did not reduce the temperature sufficiently to preserve the meat, and tends to show that the proper temperature had not been produced when the cargo was received, and that the breakdown occurred in an attempt to reduce it to the proper degree. Decree The Southwark, 108 F. 880, 48 C. C. A. 123, reversed.—Martin v. The Southwark, 24 S. Ct. 1, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65.

The burden of proving that a vessel was seaworthy at the time of beginning the voyage, or that due diligence had been used to make her so, rests upon the shipowner claiming the benefit of the exemption provided in Harter Act, Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, § 3, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946], against errors of management or navigation, whether or not there is any evidence to the contrary. Decree, The Wildcroft, 130 F. 521, 65 C. C. A. 145, affirmed.—W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining Co. v. The Wildcroft, 26 S. Ct. 467, 201 U. S. 378, 50 L. Ed. 794.

A carrier must prove that damage to a cargo from water was occasioned by the perils of the sea within an exception in the bill of lading against dangers and accidents of the seas.—(1909) Jahn v. The Folmina, 29 S. Ct. 363, 212 U. S. 354, 53 L. Ed. 548, 15 Ann. Cas. 748, answering certified questions (1907) The Folmina, 153 F. 364, 82 C. C. A. 440.

Presumption that a rope used in transferring a boxed automobile from the ship's hold to a pier was strong and efficient held to be ground for the inference that it was the cutting of the rope by a swinging motion of box after lifted above the hatch on the unprotected edges of the box which led to the breaking of the rope and the falling of the car in the water.—Reid v. Fargo, 36 S. Ct. 712, 241 U. S. 544, 60 L. Ed. 1156, reversing decree 213 F. 771, 130 C. C. A. 285.

—134. Statutory exemptions from liability in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 490, 491.

In determining the effect of the Harter act in restricting the operation of general and well-settled principles, the court will treat those principles as still existing, and limit the relief from their operation afforded by the statute to that called for by the language itself of the statute.—Flint v. Christall, 18 S. Ct. 831, 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. Ed. 130, reversing decree Chrystal v. Flint (D. C.) 82 F. 472.

Damage to cargo from the sinking of a ship after arriving in port, due to hurried and imprudent unloading, which brought the center of gravity of the ship too high for safety, does not result from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel within the meaning of Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, § 3, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946], exempting the owner of the vessel from liability, but arises from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, storage, custody, care, or proper delivery of merchandise, under section 1 of that act, so as to preclude any stipulation of exemption. Decree, The Germanic (1903) 124 F. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521, affirmed.—Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Aitken, 25 S. Ct. 317, 196 U. S. 589, 49 L. Ed. 610.

135. Statutory exemption from liability by diligence of owner as to vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 492.

136. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 492.

The provisions of section 3 of the Harter Act (27 Stat. 445, c. 105), which relieves vessels and their owners from liability for loss or damages to the cargo resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of the vessel, where the owners have exercised due diligence to make her seaworthy, and have her properly equipped, manned, and supplied, applies to foreign vessels carrying goods to or from ports of the United States.—The Silvia, 19 S. Ct. 7, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, affirming judgment 68 F. 230, 15 C. C. A. 362, which affirms decree (D. C.) 64 F. 607.

The third section of the Harter Act (27 Stat. 445), exempting the owner of a seaworthy vessel from responsibility to the cargo for loss or damage occurring through faults or errors of navigation, which is expressly applicable to "any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port of the United States," includes a foreign vessel carrying cargo from a foreign to an American port. Decree 74 F. 890, 21 C. C. A. 162, affirmed.—The Chattahoochee, 19 S. Ct. 491, 173 U. S. 540, 43 L. Ed. 801.

137. — Seaworthiness, manning, equipment, and supplies.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 492.

The provisions of the Harter act making it unlawful to insert in the contract a provision exempting from liability for damage from unseaworthiness where due diligence has not been used (section 2), and also exempting from loss from faults or errors in the navigation or management of the vessel, if due diligence has been used to furnish a seaworthy ship properly manned, equipped, and supplied (section 3), do not so change the general maritime law as to relieve the owner from his obligation to provide a seaworthy ship, and substitute therefor an obligation merely to use due diligence to see that she is seaworthy.—The Carib Prince, 18 S. Ct. 753, 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. Ed. 1181, reversing decree 68 F. 254, 15 C. C. A. 385.

Negligence in failing to have the portholes in a compartment of a vessel closed when the voyage begins, whereby the vessel is rendered unseaworthy, and in consequence injury is sustained to cargo by water coming through such portholes during the voyage, renders the shipowner liable under Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, § 3, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946] since the negligence is not a mere fault or error in navigation or in the management of the vessel, but amounts to a failure to exercise due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy. Decree Farr & Bailey Mfg. Co. v. International Nav. Co., 98 F. 636, 39 C. C. A. 197, affirmed.—International Nav. Co. v. Farr & Bailey Mfg. Co., 21 S. Ct. 591, 181 U. S. 218, 45 L. Ed. 830.

The furnishing of a refrigerating apparatus in good order and repair, competent for the safe transportation of a cargo of dressed beef which a vessel has undertaken to carry, is within the obligation to use due diligence to provide a seaworthy vessel, imposed upon the owner by the Harter act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27

Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946]), as a condition precedent to the enjoyment of the benefits of that act in limiting the owner's liability as provided therein. Decree The Southwark, 108 F. 880, 48 C. C. A. 123, reversed.—Martin v. The Southwark, 24 S. Ct. 1, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65.

138. — Causes of loss or injury.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 492.

The injury of a cargo by water by reason of the failure to close a port for which an iron shutter was provided, after the glass cover had been broken out by the seas, where the cargo was so placed that the port was readily accessible, was due to a fault or error in navigation or in the management of the vessel, within the Harter act (27 Stat. 445, c. 105, § 3); and neither the vessel nor her owners are liable therefor.—The Silvia, 19 S. Ct. 7, 171 U. S. 462, 43 L. Ed. 241, affirming judgment, 68 F. 230, 15 C. C. A. 362, which affirms decree (D. C.) 64 F. 607.

139. Limitation of liability by contract or bill of lading.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 493-499.

140. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 493-495.

Exceptions in a bill of lading or charter party, inserted by the shipowner for his own benefit, are to be construed most strongly against him.—Compania De Navigacion La Flecha v. Brauer, 18 S. Ct. 12, 168 U. S. 104, 42 L. Ed. 398, affirming decree Brauer v. Compania Navigacion La Flecha, 66 F. 776, 14 C. C. A. 88.

A stipulation in a bill of lading that, if any goods cannot be found during the steamer's stay at the port of delivery, they shall be forwarded at the earliest opportunity, without liability of the ship for delay or otherwise, is invalid, under the Harter act, as applied to a case where goods were negligently stowed and no effort was made to find them, and they were subsequently lost at sea. Decree 69 F. 574, 16 C. C. A. 332, reversed.—Calderon v. Atlas S. S. Co., 18 S. Ct. 588, 170 U. S. 272, 42 L. Ed. 1033.

A stipulation exempting the carrier from liability for loss of goods "which are above the value of $100 per package," unless their value is expressed in the bill of lading, is intended to release the carrier from any liability for packages worth more than $100, and not merely for the excess over $100, and is therefore void under the Harter act as well as the general maritime law.—Id.

Clauses in a bill of lading exempting the owner from the general obligation of furnishing a seaworthy vessel must be confined within strict limits, and are not to be extended by latitudinarian construction or forced implication, so as to comprehend a state of unseaworthiness, whether patent or latent, existing at the commencement of the voyage.—The Carib Prince, 18 S. Ct. 753, 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. Ed. 1181, reversing decree 68 F. 254, 15 C. C. A. 385.

A steamship company may, by a stipulation in its bill of lading, limit its liability to $100 unless a greater value is declared, and such extra freight as may be agreed upon is paid.—Reid v. Fargo, 36 S. Ct. 712, 241 U. S. 544, 60 L. Ed. 1156.

141. — Exemption from particular risks or causes of loss.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 493, 497-499.

The exception in a bill of lading of "the dangers of navigation" covers a loss caused, without negligence on the part of the carrier's agents or servants, by striking, under water, a tree which had, unknown to them, shortly before fallen into the river.—Hibernia Ins. Co. v. St. Louis & N. O. Transp. Co., 120 U. S. 166, 7 S. Ct. 550, 30 L. Ed. 621, affirming decree (C. C.) 17 F. 478.

Loss of cargo by reason of a sand reef which had recently formed in the channel of a river, and which the pilot of a towboat had no reason to suppose was there, was a loss by danger of the river, within the meaning of the bill of lading.—Id.

A clause in a bill of lading exempting the carrier from liability for loss caused by perils of the sea did not exempt it from the liability for a loss caused by one of such perils, to which the negligence of its servants contributed.—Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397, 9 S. Ct. 469, 32 L. Ed. 788; Same v. Insurance Co. of North America, 129 U. S. 464, 9 S. Ct. 480, 32 L. Ed. 800, affirming decree (C. C.) The Montana, 22 F. 715.

Libelants shipped goods by barge at Pittsburgh, the bill of lading stating that the articles were in good order and condition, and were to be delivered in like good order, the dangers of navigation and unavoidable accidents excepted. It is an established custom in the barge trade between said places, where cargo is to be taken on en route to the port of destination at several points in the same neighborhood, to tie up the fleet of barges at the safer landing, and from there to send a barge to obtain cargo and tow the same to the several points, whether up or down stream. In accordance with this custom the barge containing libellant's goods was sent back a few miles after cargo, and while so engaged was sunk by an unavoidable accident. Held that, though libelants did not know the custom, this departure from the course was not a deviation, and therefore the loss was within the exception in the bill of lading.—Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 11 S. Ct. 1, 34 L. Ed. 568, affirming decree Same v. Gray (D. C.) 11 F. 179.

Where a steamship company provides a wharf with a covered warehouse into which cargo is discharged, and the time and place of discharge are easily ascertainable by consignees, an exemption in its bills of lading from liability for fire happening after unloading is reasonable and valid.—Constable v. National S. S. Co., 154 U. S. 51, 14 S. Ct. 1062, 38 L. Ed. 903, affirming decree Arnold v. Same (D. C.) 29 F. 184.

A stipulation in a memorandum of agreement for the shipment of cattle, specifying the terms of the contract, and signed by the shipper and the ship's agent, that the shipper assumed all risk "of mortality or accident, however caused, throughout the voyage," is not to be construed as affecting the implied warranty of seaworthiness, but rather as applying only to matters arising after commencement of the voyage.—The Caledonia, 157 U. S. 124, 15 S. Ct. 537, 39 L. Ed. 644, affirming decree (C. C.) 43 F. 681, and (C. C.) 50 F. 567.

Exceptions in a bill of lading of loss or damage "from delays, * * * steam boilers and machinery or defects therein," are not to be construed as affecting the implied warranty of seaworthiness, especially when they form part of a long list of excepted causes, all the rest of which relate to matters arising after the commencement of the voyage.—Id.

A wrongful jettison of sound cattle by order of the master, from unfounded apprehensions, during rough weather, is not a "loss or damage occasioned by causes beyond his [the carrier's] control, by the perils of the sea, or other waters," or "by collisions, stranding, or other accidents of navigation," in the meaning of the bill of lading.—Compania de Navegacion la Flecha v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104, 18 S. Ct. 12, 42 L. Ed. 398, affirming decree Brauer v. Cam- pania Navegacion la Flecha, 66 F. 776, 14 C. C. A. 88.

An exception, in a bill of lading of cattle, as follows: "On deck, at owner's risk; steamer not to be held accountable for accident to or mortality of the animals, from whatever cause arising"—does not cover a jettison of uninjured cattle, in rough weather, by order of the master from unfounded apprehension, in the absence of any pressing perils of the ship, and without any attempt to separate them from cattle previously injured.—Id.

By the law of both England and America the ordinary contract of a common carrier by sea involves an obligation to use due care and skill in navigating the vessel and carrying the goods; and an exception, in the bill of lading, of perils of the sea, or other specified peril, does not excuse him from that obligation, nor exempt him from liability for loss or damage from one of those perils to which the negligence of himself or his servants has contributed.—Id.

Exceptions in a bill of lading of damage from "latent defects in hull," etc., do not include unseaworthiness existing at the inception of the voyage, and at the time the bill of lading was signed, and resulting from a latent defect in a rivet in a water tank. The Caledonia, 15 S. Ct. 537, 157 U. S. 124, 39 L. Ed. 644, applied.—The Carib Prince, 18 S. Ct. 753, 170 U. S. 655, 42 L. Ed. 1181, reversing decree 68 F. 254, 15 C. C. A. 385.

The first of two causes which contributed to produce an injury to the cargo of a vessel was the proximate cause, where it was the efficient cause which set the other in operation, and that following was but its incident or necessary consequence. It is only where the causes are independent of each other that the nearest is, of course, to be charged with the disaster.—Case (D. C.) 64 F. 878, certified.—The G. R. Booth, 19 S. Ct. 9, 171 U. S. 450, 43 L. Ed. 234.

Generally speaking, the words "perils of the sea" have the same meaning in a bill of lading as in a policy of insurance, although the effect of negligence of the master or crew contributing to the loss by a peril of the sea may be different on the two contracts.—Id.

A box of detonators stowed in the hold of a vessel, as a part of the cargo, exploded, tearing a hole in the side of the vessel, through which the sea water immediately entered, and, penetrating into the next compartment, damaged a consignment of sugar. Held, that the explosion, and not the inflow of water, was the proximate and responsible cause of the damage, which was not, therefore, occasioned by a peril of the sea, within the exception from liability contained in the bill of lading.—Id.

The vessel having reached her port of destination, and being engaged in unloading, at the time of the explosion, the damage would not come within a provision of the bill of lading exempting the carrier from liability for loss or damage occasioned by an "accident of navigation."—Id.

Damage to wool stowed on the forward side of a temporary wooden bulkhead, by drainage from sugar stowed aft of the bulkhead, when it results from the fact that for a short time the vessel was trimmed by the head after discharging a part of the cargo, until she was again trimmed by the stern at another port, arises from negligence in loading or stowage of the cargo, which makes the vessel liable under Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, § 1, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946], notwithstanding any stipulations to the contrary in the bills of lading; and it is not a damage from fault or error in the navigation or management of the ship. Decree, Botany Worsted Mills v. Knott, 82 F. 471, 27 C. C. A. 326, affirmed.—Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, 21 S. Ct. 30, 179 U. S. 69, 45 L. Ed. 90.

Stipulations in a bill of lading cannot relieve a carrier from the discharge of his initial duty under the Harter act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, c. 105, 27 Stat. 445 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2946]) to use due diligence to furnish a seaworthy vessel. Decree The Southwark, 108 F. 880, 48 C. C. A. 123, reversed.—Martin v. The Southwark, 24 S. Ct. 1, 191 U. S. 1, 48 L. Ed. 65.

The mistaken refusal of the deputy collector of a port to grant a clearance while certain freight was on board because it was contraband of war does not constitute a "restraint of princes, rulers, or people," within the meaning of a clause in the bill of lading, so as to excuse nonperformance of the agreement to forward the shipment by that vessel. Decree Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 120 F. 878, 57 C. O. A. 533, affirmed.—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. American Trading Co., 25 S. Ct. 84, 195 U. S. 439, 49 L. Ed. 269.

142. — Requirements as to notice and time to sue vessel.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 496.

A stipulation, in a bill of lading for goods carried by ship, that all claims for damages against the steamship company or its stockholders must be presented within 30 days, applies to a libel against the ship itself, as well as to claims in personam against the owners.—The Queen of the Pacific, 21 S. Ct. 278, 180 U. S. 49, 45 L. Ed. 419, reversing Pacific Coast S. S. Co. v. Bancroft-Whitney Co., 94 F. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135, which affirms The Queen (D. C.) 78 F. 155.

A stipulation for notice of any claim of loss within 30 days from date of shipment, in a bill of lading for goods, carried by ship from San Francisco to San Pedro, is not unreasonable as applied to a loss which was known to the consignors more than 3 weeks before the expiration of the stipulated time, since the enforcement of the stipulation in such a case would not work a manifest injustice.—Id.

144. Freight.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 225, 226, 500-520.

145. — When earned in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 226, 502-505.

Where a vessel, before she breaks ground for a voyage, is so injured by fire that the cost of her repairs would exceed her value when repaired, and is thus rendered unseaworthy and incapable of earning freight, the shipper is not liable for any part of the freight money.—The Tornado, 106 U. S. 342, 2 S. Ct. 746, 27 L. Ed. 747.

VIII. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

157. What law governs.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 523.

Valid claims may be asserted under a limited liability act for damages on account of the loss of life of passengers in a collision, although there may be no lien or privilege upon the vessel given therefor by local law. Decree, Jakobsen v. Springer, 87 F. 948, 31 C. C. A. 315, affirmed.—The Albert Dumois, 20 S. Ct. 595, 177 U. S. 240, 44 L. Ed. 751.

Restrictions of the liability of a steamship company for its own negligence or failure of duty toward a passenger, being against the public policy enforced by the courts of the United States, will not be upheld, though the ticket was issued and accepted in a foreign country and contained a condition making it subject to the law thereof, which sustains such stipulations. Decree 94 F. 885, 36 C. C. A. 533, reversed.—The Kensington, 22 S. Ct. 102, 183 U. S. 263, 46 L. Ed. 190.

161. Regulations as to immigrants and others not cabin passengers.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 527, 528.

Act Aug. 2, 1882, § 1, 22 Stat. 186 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2932], providing that, in calculating the number of cubic feet of space to be allowed for each passenger, children under one year of age are not included, does not affect Act Aug. 3, 1882, imposing upon the owners of vessels bringing passengers from foreign ports a duty of 50 cents for every such passenger, not a citizen of this country, and each child under one year of age is to be counted as a passenger in fixing the amount of such duty.—Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580, 5 S. Ct. 247, 28 L. Ed. 798, affirming (C. C.) 18 F. 135.

166. Personal injuries.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 533-553; 9 Cent. Dig. Carr. §§ 1186, 1187, 1198, 1225.

Where a deck passenger has notice of, and has contracted to observe, a regulation restricting deck passengers to a particular part of the boat, and the steamboat hands, in removing him from a place in which he had no right to be, used unnecessary and excessive force, the company is liable for the injuries caused to the passenger thereby.—New Jersey Steamboat Co. v. Brockett, 121 U. S. 637, 7 S. Ct. 1039, 30 L. Ed. 1049.

A lien or privilege upon a vessel for the loss of life of a passenger is not created by La. Civ. Code, art. 3237, subd. 12, providing a privilege for loss or damage caused to person or property by negligent management of the vessel, as this was not intended to apply to actions for damages resulting in death. Decree, Jakobsen v. Springer, 87 F. 948, 31 C. C. A. 315, affirmed.—The Albert Dumois, 20 S. Ct. 595, 177 U. S. 240, 44 L. Ed. 751.

167. Passengers' effects.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 553-555.

The defense that damage to baggage by water entering through a broken port was the result of an inevitable accident is not sustained by evidence that, a short time before the injury was discovered, the ship, during a rough sea, passed through some floating wreckage, there being no evidence directly tending to prove that the port was broken by the wreckage, nor any attempt to show why the ship did not steer away from it or reduce its speed while passing through, nor any satisfactory proof that the ports were properly closed when the vessel sailed or were properly inspected afterwards.—The Majestic, 17 S. Ct. 597, 166 U. S. 375, 41 L. Ed. 1039, reversing order 60 F. 624, 9 C. C. A. 161.

A stipulation in a steamship passenger's ticket, which compels him to value his baggage at a certain sum, far less than it is worth, or, in order to have a higher value put upon it, to subject it to the provisions of the Harter act, by which the carrier would be exempted from all liability therefor from errors in navigation or management of the vessel or other negligence, is unreasonable and in conflict with public policy. Decree 94 F. 885, 36 C. C. A. 533, reversed.—The Kensington, 22 S. Ct. 102, 183 U. S. 263, 46 L. Ed. 190.

An arbitrary limitation of 250 francs for the baggage of any steamship passenger, unaccompanied by any right to increase the amount by adequate and reasonable proportional payment, is void as against public policy.—Id.

168. Penalties and forfeitures for violations of regulations.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 556-562.

The practice of granting remissions of pecuniary penalties and forfeitures by the secretary of the treasury, for offenses incident to carriage of passengers, sanctioned by statute, and acquiesced in, for nearly a century, as a valid exercise of authority, and no invasion of the power of pardon granted by the constitution to the president, is too firmly established to be questioned.—The Laura, 114 U. S. 411, 5 S. Ct. 881, 29 L. Ed. 147, affirming decree (C. C.) 8 F. 612.

A remission by the secretary of the treasury, under Rev. St. § 5294 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3607], of penalties incurred by a steam vessel for taking on board an unlawful number of passengers, granted before trial of a suit in rem, brought for the penalties against the vessel, by an informer, discharges all liability in the suit.—Id.

Rev. St. U. S. § 4270, which provides that the penalties imposed by the foregoing provisions, regulating the carriage of passengers in merchant vessels, shall be liens on such vessels, applies to those sections which declare a "fine" for the violation of its provisions, as well as those which declare a penalty eo nomine; and a fine incurred by a violation of Rev. St. U. S. § 4253, which prohibits carrying any greater number of passengers than is allowed by Rev. St. U. S. § 4252, is therefore a lien on the vessel.—The Strathairn, 124 U. S. 558, 8 S. Ct. 609, 31 L. Ed. 580.

The lien for carrying passengers in excess of the limit prescribed by Rev. St. § 4252, cannot exceed the fine imposed on the master in a criminal prosecution for the offense.—Id.

Under Act Feb. 27, 1877, c. 69, 19 Stat. 250 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2848], extending the provisions relating to the space in vessels appropriated to passengers to all spaces appropriated to steerage passengers, in vessels propelled by steam, the United States has a lien on a steam vessel for violation, as to steerage passengers, of Rev. St. § 4255, regulating the size, position, and arrangement of berths, but not for violation of Rev. St. § 4266, providing that the master of any vessel arriving from abroad shall give the district collector a list of the passengers taken on board at any foreign port; the latter provision not being within the purview of the extending statute.—Id.

IX. DEMURRAGE.

◀170. Nature of liability.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 565-567.

It is not the mere fact that a vessel is detained that entitles the owner to demurrage. There must be a pecuniary loss, or at least a reasonable certainty of pecuniary loss, and not a mere inconvenience arising from an inability to use the vessel for the purpose of pleasure.—The Conqueror, 17 S. Ct. 510, 166 U. S. 110, 41 L. Ed. 937, reversing decree (D. C.) 49 F. 99.

◀172. Effect of customs and usages.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 569.

A custom existing in San Francisco between shippers and shipowners, requiring a consignee to designate a berth for the discharge of cargo, cannot prevail over the terms of contracts requiring the delivery of certain quantities of coal respectively "at the wharf" and "on wharf as customary," to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army at Honolulu, at which place the custom is to discharge freight upon the wharves, so as to render the government liable for the delay in reaching a berth, which was caused by the conditions existing in Honolulu Harbor to the ships chartered by the vendor to carry out his contract. Judgment, J. J. Moore & Co. v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 590, reversed.—Moore v. United States, 25 S. Ct. 202, 196 U. S. 157, 49 L. Ed. 428.

◀173. Liability of charterer or shipper in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 570.

The United States is not liable under charter for demurrage due to repairs, where the damage was due to marine risks which the owner assumed.—New Orleans-Belize Royal Mail & Cent. American S. S. Co. v. United States, 38 S. Ct. 76, 239 U. S. 202, 60 L. Ed. 227.

◀177. Delay in unloading.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 576-582, 584.

The cesser clause of a charter party, saying, "Charterers' responsibility to cease when vessel is loaded and bills of lading are signed," does not relieve the charterers from liability for demurrage under provisions of the charter requiring them to pay demurrage for any delay in delivery by their fault or that of their agent, and declaring that the vessel is to have an absolute lien upon the cargo for all freight, dead freight, and demurrage, where the bills of lading, which do not mention demurrage or refer to any other provisions of the charter than those concerning freight and average, have been assigned, and the delay in unloading is made by the assignees of the bills of lading, who thereby became consignees of the cargo, since the rights of the shipowners against those consignees depend altogether upon the contract created by the bills of lading, except so far as that contract refers to the charter party. Decree, Burrill v. Crossman, 91 F. 543, 33 C. C. A. 663, reversed.—Crossman v. Burrill, 21 S. Ct. 38, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 106.

◀179. Act of God or vis major.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 586.

A detention of a vessel for unloading, which is caused, not by any act of the shipowners or of the charterers, but wholly by the actual firing of guns from an enemy's ships of war upon the forts in the harbor, directly affecting the vessel and making the discharge of the cargo dangerous and impossible, cannot be considered as caused by "default" of the charterers, within the meaning of a charter party stipulating for demurrage in case of their default. Decree, Burrill v. Crossman, 91 F. 543, 33 C. C. A. 663, reversed.—Crossman v. Burrill, 21 S. Ct. 38, 179 U. S. 100, 45 L. Ed. 106.

◀183. Rate and amount.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 593.

On the charterer's refusal to order the vessel to a safe port, as required by the charter party, the master filed successive libels for demurrage, until a cross libel was filed for breach of the charter party, when the master proceeded to unload. The circuit court found that the time required to make the voyage was about the same as elapsed before another charter was obtained, which was done as soon as possible, and that the expenses of the vessel in port were not less than on the voyage. Held, that the measure of damages was the freight that the vessel would have earned, less the cost of earning it.—The Gazelle, 128 U. S. 474, 9 S. Ct. 139, 32 L. Ed. 496, affirming decree (D. C.) 11 F. 429.

◀184. Actions.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 596.

The libels for a charterer's breach of charter party claimed demurrage and expenses amounting to $2,470.20, but set forth all the facts ultimately found by the court, and each contained a prayer for general relief. Held not error to award as damages the whole freight, amounting to $3,285.60, as in admiralty under such pleadings the court may award any relief which the law applicable to the case warrants.—The Gazelle, 128 U. S. 474, 9 S. Ct. 139, 32 L. Ed. 496.

X. GENERAL AVERAGE.

186. Nature of right to contribution.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 598, 599.

To constitute a general average loss, there must be a voluntary sacrifice of part of a maritime adventure, for the purpose, and with the effect, of saving the other parts of the adventure from an imminent peril impending over the whole.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 657, 39 L. Ed. 742, reversing decree (D. C.) 37 F. 888.

The law of general average is part of the maritime law, and not of the municipal law, and applies to maritime adventures only.—Id.

A tug towing barges from one port to another is not bound up with them into a single maritime adventure, so as to be subject to the law of general average, even though her compensation for the towage is measured by the freight earned by the barges. Therefore the act of the tug in cutting loose from them, and allowing them to go ashore in order to save herself from a like fate, will not subject her to a general average contribution.—The J. P. Donaldson, 167 U. S. 599, 17 S. Ct. 951, 42 L. Ed. 292, reversing Id. (C. C.) 21 F. 671.

188. Perils and acts grounds of contribution.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 601-603.

189. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 601, 603.

A sacrifice of vessel or cargo by the act of a stranger to the adventure, though authorized by the municipal law to make the sacrifice for the protection of his own interests or of those of the public, gives no right of contribution, either for or against those outside interests, or even as between the parties to the common adventure.—Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 657, 39 L. Ed. 742, reversing decree (D. C.) 37 F. 888.

The sacrifice of ship or cargo, to constitute a general average loss, must be by the will and act of its owner, or of the master of the ship, or other person charged with the control and protection of the common adventure, and those interests only.—Id.

As the sacrifice must be for the benefit of the common adventure, and of that adventure only, so it must be made by some one specially charged with the control and safety of that adventure, and not by the compulsory act of others, whether private persons or public authorities.—Id.

Where the mate of a vessel preparing to sail from harbor summoned the crews of neighboring vessels to assist in putting out a fire which had broken out in the cargo, and with their aid poured water into the hold for a time, after which the harbor authorities took charge of the vessel, continued to pour water into her, and caused her to be run aground, and finally scuttled, whereby the vessel became a wreck, the cargo saved was not bound to contribute in general average.—Id.

Voluntary expenditures in a successful effort to save a negligently stranded vessel and her cargo and freight present a case of general average within the clause in bill of lading that, if damage results from negligent navigation, the cargo owners are not exempt from contribution in general average, but contribute with the shipowner.—The Jason, 32 S. Ct. 560, 225 U. S. 32, 56 L. Ed. 969.

190. — Particular acts and liabilities.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 602.

A tug towing barges from one port to another is not bound up with them into a single maritime adventure, so as to be subject to the law of general average, even though her com-penation for the towage is measured by the freight earned by the barges. Therefore the act of the tug in cutting loose from them, and allowing them to go ashore, in order to save herself from a like fate, will not subject her to a general average contribution.—The J. P. Donaldson, 17 S. Ct. 951, 167 U. S. 599, 42 L. Ed. 292.

Section 3 of the Harter act, which provides that if the shipowner exercised due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy, etc., neither the vessel nor her owner shall be responsible for faults or errors in her navigation or management, does not give an owner who has exercised such diligence a right to contribution in general average for sacrifices made to save vessel and cargo, when stranded through negligence of the ship's officers. Flint v. Christall, 18 S. Ct. 831, 171 U. S. 187, 43 L. Ed. 130, reversing decree (D. C.) Chrystal v. Flint, 82 F. 472.

191. Losses and expenses subjects of compensation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 604-617.

193. — Loss of or damage to cargo.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 608-612.

Cargo owners are entitled to contribution from the ship for sacrifices of cargo after negligent stranding of the vessel, in a successful effort to save the vessel, freight, and cargo, where under the general average clause of the bill of lading, the owners of the cargo are not exempted from liability for contribution in general average.—The Jason, 32 S. Ct. 560, 225 U. S. 32, 56 L. Ed. 969.

195. Liability to contribute.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 618-621.

The exemption of a shipowner who has made a vessel seaworthy and properly manned, from liability for negligence of master and crew, declared in Harter Act Feb. 13, 1893, § 3, leaves such owner free to contract with cargo owners for contribution in general average for sacrifices made on negligent stranding of the vessel.—The Jason, 32 S. Ct. 560, 225 U. S. 32, 56 L. Ed. 969.

Cargo owners cannot enforce contribution from the ship, under general average clause in bill of lading, for sacrifices of cargo after negligent stranding of the vessel, in a successful effort to save vessel, freight, and cargo, without contributing to the general expenditures of the shipowner.—Id.

XI. LIMITATION OF OWNER'S LIABILITY.

203. Statutory provisions.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 637.

Since navigable rivers, though tideless, are subject to the maritime law and the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States, Act June 19, 1886, c. 421, § 4, 24 Stat. 80 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2945], which extends the benefit of the limited liability act to the owners of steamboats used on a river in inland navigation, is a valid and constitutional law, being an amendment of the maritime law, to which they were already subject.—Ex parte Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 840, 35 L. Ed. 631.

204. Vessels and interests to which limitation applies.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 639, 640.

The restriction of the statute limiting the liability to vessels not "used in rivers or inland navigation" does not apply to a vessel used on the Great Lakes. Craig v. Continental Ins. Co., 141 U. S. 638, 12 S. Ct. 97, 35 L. Ed. 886, affirming judgment (C. C.) 26 F. 798.

A steam propeller was wrecked and abandoned to the underwriter as a total loss. The propeller was subsequently taken in tow by a wrecking master, together with her cargo and crew, but sank in about 22 hours, and one of the crew was drowned. Held, that the propeller was still a "vessel" at the time of sinking, within the meaning of the statute limiting the liability of the owner of the vessel.—Id.

The word "freight," as used in Rev. St. § 4283 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943], which limits the liability of shipowners to the value of the ship and her "freight then pending," includes fare for passengers.—The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 L. Ed. 381.

The words "freight then pending" include freight prepaid at the port of departure, as well as freight yet due.—Id.

—205. Persons entitled to benefit of limitation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 641, 642.

An underwriter, to whom a stranded vessel has been abandoned as a total loss, is an "owner," within the meaning of the limited liability statute.—Craig v. Continental Ins. Co., 141 U. S. 638, 12 S. Ct. 97, 35 L. Ed. 886, affirming judgment (C. C.) 26 F. 798.

The owner of a foreign vessel, sunk in collision with an iceberg on high seas, when sued in the United States, may maintain in the federal courts a proceeding for limitation of liability authorized by Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4283-4285 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), and Admiralty Rules 54 and 56, though there may be nothing to show the law of the foreign country to which the vessel belongs touching such liability, or it may appear that such law provides for limitation on different conditions from those prescribed by the federal laws.—Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Mellor, 34 S. Ct. 754, 233 U. S. 718, 58 L. Ed. 1171, L. R. A. 1916B, 637.

—206. Losses and injuries subjects of limitation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 643-645.

—207. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 555, 643, 644.

The limited liability act of 1851 (Rev. St. §§ 4283-4285 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944]), which provides that the liability of the shipowner "for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act, matter, or thing [loss], damage, or forfeiture, done, occasioned, or incurred, without the privity or knowledge" of the owner, shall in no case exceed the value of the interest of the owner, applies to damages for loss of life; and, where the owner has taken appropriate proceedings to obtain the benefit of that act, the person injured is barred of the right to maintain a separate action for such injuries.—Butler v. Boston & S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 L. Ed. 1017.

The limited liability statute applies to cases of personal injury and death as well as to cases of loss of or injury to property.—Craig v. Continental Ins. Co., 141 U. S. 638, 12 S. Ct. 97, 35 L. Ed. 886, affirming judgment (C. C.) 26 F. 798.

Personal representatives of a passenger and of members of a crew who were drowned as the result of the collision of their vessel with another vessel on the high seas may recover in full in proceedings for the limitation of liability of such other vessel the liability created by Act Del. Jan. 28, 1886, as amended by Act March 9, 1901, in favor of the personal representatives of a person whose death is caused by violence or negligence. Decree, The Hamilton (1906) 146 F. 724, 77 C. C. A. 150; The Saginaw, Id., affirmed.—Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Gilmore, 28 S. Ct. 133, 207 U. S. 398, 52 L. Ed. 264.

The limitation of a shipowner's liability for maritime torts not the result of his own fault, provided by Rev. St. §§ 4283-4285 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), was extended to non-maritime torts by the provisions of Act June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 18, 23 Stat. 57 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2945), limiting the individual liability of a shipowner for "any or all debts and liabilities," except wages and liabilities incurred prior to such enactment, to his share in the vessel, and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same to the value of the vessel and freight pending.—Richardson v. Harmon, 32 S. Ct. 27, 222 U. S. 96, 56 L. Ed. 110.

—208. — Privity or knowledge of owner.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. § 645.

An allegation that the vessel was, at the time of the accident, in charge of the second mate, who was not a licensed pilot, is not sufficient to show that the loss was occasioned with the fault, privity, or knowledge of the owners, as by the maritime rules the captain had charge of the vessel, and it was his duty, and not that of the owners, to see that a qualified officer was in charge.—Butler v. Boston & S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 L. Ed. 1017.

The "privity or knowledge" of a wrecking master employed by the agent of the underwriter is not the "privity or knowledge" of the owner, within the meaning of the statute limiting the liability, so as to charge the owner with responsibility for the negligence of the wrecking master beyond the value of the vessel.—Craig v. Continental Ins. Co., 141 U. S. 638, 12 S. Ct. 97, 35 L. Ed. 886, affirming judgment (C. C.) 26 F. 798.

Mere negligence of itself does not necessarily establish the existence on the part of the owner of a vessel of "privity or knowledge," within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. § 4283 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), according to shipowners a limited exemption from liability. Decree La Bourgogne (1906) 144 F. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed.—Deslions v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 28 S. Ct. 664, 210 U. S. 95, 52 L. Ed. 973.

The duty on the part of a steamship company seeking limitation of liability for claims arising out of a collision in a fog, to have made regulations directing that its steamers be not run at an immoderate speed in a fog, in order to negative privity or knowledge of fault, was sufficiently discharged by promulgating regulations which, in terms, reiterated the international rule, and called for compliance with its provisions.—Id.

Privity and knowledge of the habit of running its vessels at an immoderate speed in a fog cannot be imputed to a steamship company so as to defeat its right to limit its liability for claims arising out of a collision in a fog, from the provisions of the contract for subsidy with the French government, which requires vessels, which are only obliged to develop, under forced draft, on their trial, a maximum speed of 17½ knots, to maintain a mean average annual speed of 15 knots, with a premium for exceeding that speed, and a penalty for a failure to maintain it.—Id.

—209. Proceedings.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 646-655, 659, 661, 662.

The statute of limited liability is not to be applied to a case of collision where both vessels are in fault, until the balance of damage has been struck; and then the party against whom the decree passes may have the benefit of the statute (if he is otherwise entitled to it) in respect of the balance which he is decreed to pay.—The North Star and The Ella Warley, 106 U. S. 17, 1 S. Ct. 41, 27 L. Ed. 91.

Goods transported by steamer from Providence to New York were injured by fire on board the vessel at her dock in the latter place, and suits for damage were commenced against the owners of the steamer in New York and Boston. Thereupon proceedings were instituted by such owners in the district court of the United States for New York, under Act Cong. March 3, 1851 (9 Stat. 635), to limit their liability. Held, that said proceedings, properly pleaded and verified, superseded the actions in other courts, and that it was error to proceed further therein.—Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 L. Ed. 1038.

A steamer that had been sunk in collision with a schooner was raised and repaired; and on a libel in rem against her by the owners of her cargo, the claimants, her owners filed a stipulation for her then value. On appeal from a decree against them on a libel in personam in another district by the owners of the schooner, the supreme court held that claimants' liability was measured by the value of the steamer before she was raised. Held that, though in the proceedings in rem there had been a decree for libelants' entire damages, the district court still had jurisdiction, after the decision on appeal, to entertain a petition for limitation of liability, and to order a new appraisal of the steamer to ascertain her value when lying sunk.—Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co., 118 U. S. 468, 6 S. Ct. 1150, 30 L. Ed. 134.

The district court of the United States cannot take jurisdiction in admiralty of a petition for limitation of liability under the Revised Statutes of the United States, where it would not have had cognizance in admiralty, originally, of the cause of action involved.—Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co., 118 U. S. 610, 7 S. Ct. 25, 30 L. Ed. 274.

To limit their liability to the value of the vessel, the owners had her appraised under the provisions of Rev. St. §§ 4283-4289 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943-2945]. They then filed a stipulation to perform the final decree in the case. Held, that the costs of the circuit and district courts rested in the discretion of the court below.—The Maggie J. Smith, 123 U. S. 349, 8 S. Ct. 159, 31 L. Ed. 175.

The limited liability act being a part of the maritime code, it is coextensive with the territorial operation of the general admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and applies, notwithstanding the facts that the injury sued for happened within the technical limits of a county of a state, and that the liability sought to be enforced arose from a state law.—Butler v. Boston & S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 L. Ed. 1017.

In order to sustain the proceeding for limiting liability, it is not necessary that the owner and captain of the steam yacht, who were damaged by the collision, should be personally served with notice within the district, or that the steamship should be taken and held by the court until the owner or captain of the steam yacht appears in the cause.—Morrison v. District Court of United States for Southern District of New York, 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 L. Ed. 60.

A district court has jurisdiction, under admiralty rule 57, of proceedings by libel and petition for limitation of liability by the owner of a steamship which has collided with and sunk a steam yacht, where such proceedings are instituted while the steamship is in the district, and subject to control of the court for the purposes of the case, as provided in admiralty rules 54 (11 S. Ct. iv., 137 U. S. 711) and 55 and 56 (13 Wall. xiii.), and before the steamship is libeled for damages by the collision or suit is commenced against the owner.—Id.

The district court does not lose jurisdiction by allowing the steamship after giving a stipulation for her value under admiralty rule 54, to go into another district in the ordinary course of her business, since the proceeding to limit liability is an equitable action, and not one against the vessel and her freight.—Id.

The filing of the libel and petition by the owner of the steamship, with the offer to give a stipulation, confers jurisdiction on the court, which no subsequent irregularity of procedure can take away.—Id.

Damages recovered by the owner for the loss of his vessel by collision stand in the place of the vessel herself, and he is not entitled to the benefit of the statutes for limitation of liability, unless he surrenders the sum recovered for the benefit of the ship's creditors.—O'Brien v. Miller, 18 S. Ct. 140, 168 U. S. 287, 42 L. Ed. 469, reversing decree 67 F. 605, 14 C. C. A. 566.

The liability created by Act Del. Jan. 26, 1886, as amended by Act March 9, 1901, in favor of personal representatives of a person whose death is caused by violence or negligence, will be enforced in a proceeding in admiralty for the limitation of liability arising out of a tortious collision on the high seas of vessels belonging to Delaware corporations. Decree, The Hamilton (1906) 146 F. 724, 77 C. C. A. 150, and The Saginaw, Id., affirmed.—Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Gilmore, 28 S. Ct. 133, 207 U. S. 398, 52 L. Ed. 264.

The international rule as to speed permissible in a fog, as interpreted by the courts of the United States, and not by the practice under that rule prevailing in the French courts, must be applied in a proceeding by the owner of a French vessel lost in a collision with a British ship on the high seas, to obtain, in the courts of the United States, the benefit of the law of the United States for the limitation of liability of shipowners. Decree, La Bourgogne (1906) 144 F. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed.—Deslions v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 28 S. Ct. 664, 210 U. S. 95, 52 L. Ed. 973.

Privity or knowledge by a steamship company of the fault of its servants in maintaining an excessive rate of speed in a fog is not to be presumed from a failure to comply, in proceedings to limit liability, with an order for the production of certain log books, where the claimant made no attempt to introduce secondary evidence, and did not ask a dismissal of the proceedings or such other action for the alleged contumacy as the case required.—Id.

The claimants in proceedings by a steamship company to limit its liability for claims arising out of a collision are charged with the burden of proving that the regulations promulgated by the steamship company for the conduct of its business, which exacted compliance by the captains of its vessels with the international rules, were not promulgated in good faith, or that a willful departure from their requirements was indulged in, and was brought home to, or was countenanced by, the company.—Id.

Passenger and freight receipts earned by a vessel on her sailing from Havre to New York need not be surrendered as freight then pending for the voyage, within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4283, 4284 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), in proceedings for the limitation of liability for claims arising out of a collision occurring on the vessel's return trip from New York to Havre.—Id.

Sums prepaid for freight and passage on the voyage, under an absolute agreement that such sums are, in any event, to belong to the owner of the vessel, must be surrendered as freight then pending on the voyage, within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4283, 4284 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), in proceedings for the limitation of liability for claims arising out of the sinking of the vessels as a result of a collision at sea.—Id.

No part of the annual subsidy paid to a steamship company by the French government in consideration of the operation of a weekly steamship service between Havre and New York need be surrendered as freight pending for the voyage, within the meaning of Rev. St. U. S. §§ 4283, 4284 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), in proceedings for the limitation of liability for claims arising out of the loss of one of the vessels of such steamship company in a collision on a voyage from New York to Havre.—Id.

Failure to surrender pending freight to the trustee does not necessitate a refusal to allow the limitation of liability for claims arising out of a collision at sea, where there is an honest controversy as to whether there was any pending freight to be surrendered, and there is no question as to the solvency of the owner.—Id.

Proceedings on a libel by salvage claimants who towed a disabled vessel in a collision to port must stop on pleading pendency in the court of separate proceedings by the owner of the vessel, claiming the benefits of the limited liability provisions of Rev. St. §§ 4283-4285 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), as amended by Act June 26, 1884, c. 121, § 18, 23 Stat. 57 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2945), where there has been an appraisal in the stipulation for payment of appraised value into court.—Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co. v. Doe, 32 S. Ct. 275, 223 U. S. 365, 56 L. Ed. 473, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1221.

A federal District Court has jurisdiction of proceedings to limit shipowner's liability for a personal injury to a passenger, instituted by a petition alleging that the injury was occasioned without the owner's privity, thus bringing the case within Rev. St. § 4283 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), though the passenger affirms in her answer that such injury was caused by the owner's negligence, where she expressly waived proof of the allegations of the petition, thereby consenting that they be taken as true.—White v. Island Transp. Co., 34 S. Ct. 589, 233 U. S. 346, 58 L. Ed. 993.

A single claim against a shipowner founded on a personal injury to a passenger makes applicable the provision of Rev. St. § 4283 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943), that the liability of a shipowner for any damage occasioned without his consent shall not exceed the value of the vessel, notwithstanding the plurality of claims apparently contemplated by the terms of sections 4284, 4285 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), requiring pro rata distribution of the value of the vessel and freight, and making the surrender of the vessel and freight a sufficient compliance with the statute, and declaring that on such surrender all proceedings against the owner shall cease.—Id.

The law of the United States, and not that of a foreign country, to which a ship belongs, will be enforced by the federal courts in a proceeding by the owner of a foreign vessel, sunk in collision with an iceberg, for the limitation of liability authorized by the federal laws and admiralty rules.—Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Mellor, 34 S. Ct. 754, 233 U. S. 718, 58 L. Ed. 1171, L. R. A. 1916B, 637.

☞211. Liabilities on bonds.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Ship. §§ 656-658.

The owner is not liable under these sections for the amount of freight pending where his ship is lost before completing her voyage, and no freight is earned.—Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co., 118 U. S. 468, 6 S. Ct. 1150, 30 L. Ed. 134.

Rev. St. § 4283 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943], limits a shipowner's liability for loss or damage occurring without his knowledge or privity to the "amount or value of his interest in such vessel." Section 4284 [page 2943] provides for the transfer of "his interest in such vessel and freight" to a trustee for the benefit of claimants for damages. Held, that insurance is no part of the owner's interest, and does not enter into the amount for which he is held liable.—Id.

Where a steamer collides with and damages a schooner, and then takes fire and sinks herself, her cargo becoming a total loss, the voyage is terminated by her sinking, and the owner's liability for the damages occasioned by her is measured by her value as she lies on the bottom, and such liability is not affected by the fact that she is afterwards raised and repaired, before the libels against her are filed.—Id.

Rev. St. § 4283 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943], provides that "the liability of the owner of any vessel for any embezzlement, loss, or destruction * * * of any property * * * shipped or put on board of such vessel, or for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act * * * done * * * without the privity or knowledge of such owner, shall in no case exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel and her freight then pending." Held, that the point of time for taking the value of the owner's interest in the vessel as the measure of his liability is at the termination of the voyage, whether by the arrival of the ship in port or by her loss at sea.—Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co., 118 U. S. 468, 6 S. Ct. 1150, 30 L. Ed. 134; Dyer v. National Steam Nav. Co., 118 U. S. 507, 6 S. Ct. 1174, 30 L. Ed. 153; Thommessen v. Whitwill, 118 U. S. 520, 6 S. Ct. 1172, 30 L. Ed. 156, affirming Thommessen v. Same (C. C.) 12 F. 891.

Where a steamer collides with and sinks a ship, and, being badly injured herself, puts back to port, but by reason of her injuries sinks, and becomes a total loss, except that some strippings are saved, her sinking is the termination of the voyage; and the measure of her owner's liability, under section 4283, Rev. St. [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2943] is the value of the strippings saved.—Dyer v. National Steam Nav. Co., 118 U. S. 507, 6 S. Ct. 1174, 30 L. Ed. 153.

Where a steamer collides with and injures a bark, but proceeds on her voyage, and is stranded and wrecked by the negligence of her master and crew, but from no cause connected with the collision, the wrecking is the termination of the voyage; and the measure of the owner's liability for the damages to the bark is the value of the wreckage and materials.—Thommessen v. Whitwill, 118 U. S. 520, 6 S. Ct. 1172, 30 L. Ed. 156, affirming decree Thommessen v. Same (C. C.) 12 F. 891.

The giving by the owner of a stipulation for the value of his interest in a vessel and her freight under admiralty rule 54, without a judicial determination of such value after a hearing of the persons interested, is equivalent to a "transfer" of his interest in the vessel and her freight to a trustee for the benefit of claimants, under Rev. St. § 4285 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2944].—Morrison v. District Court of United States for Southern District of New York, 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 L. Ed. 60.

The making of an ex parte appraisal and the taking of a stipulation thereon under admiralty rule 54 are at most irregularities which the district court can correct, since the stipulation stands in place of the vessel and her freight, and the court can stay further proceedings, deny all relief, and dismiss the libel and petition on failure of the owner to comply with an order to give a new stipulation on a further appraisal.—Id.

In proceedings for the limitation of liability under admiralty rule 54, prior notice to damage creditors of an appraisal is not necessary, and an ex parte appraisalment is not void.—Id.

L., who owned a part interest in a tract of land, placed the tract in the hands of a real-estate agent for sale as a whole. The agent made a contract of sale, which was approved by some of the part owners, including L., but was disapproved by others, and L. thereupon refused to convey his interest. Held that, in order to entitle the purchaser to specific performance as against L. alone, he must show that, at the time the land was placed in the agent's hands, L. either held himself out as owner of the whole, or as having authority from his co-owners to sell the whole.—Cochran v. Blout, 161 U. S. 350, 16 S. Ct. 454, 40 L. Ed. 729.

⌚ 4. Existence of other remedy.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 4.

The vendor may elect either to insist upon the forfeiture or enforce specific performance after default in payment of the balance of the purchase price, under a contract which provides that, if such balance be not paid on a specified date, the amount paid "is to be forfeited, and the contract of sale and conveyance to be null and void, and of no effect in law," where the sum paid is stated to be "part purchase price of the total sum to be paid," the land is described as "being sold," and the purchase price "is to be" divided, and the notes secured by mortgage "to be given," and, in the case of a lot reserved, the vendor "shall have paid to him a specified sum if he elects to abandon it." Decree, Griffith v. Stewart (1908) 31 App. D. C. 29, affirmed.—Stewart v. Griffith, 30 S. Ct. 528, 217 U. S. 323, 54 L. Ed. 782, 19 Ann. Cas. 639.

—5. Inadequacy of remedy at law.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 5-8.

Where a telegraph company by a written contract authorizes complainants to put up a wire between New York and Philadelphia on the company's poles, on condition that at the end of a certain time the wire should belong to the company, who would lease it to complainants at a yearly rental of $600, repeated actions at law for damages would not be an adequate remedy for the refusal of the company to carry out the contract, and the only effective relief is a decree in equity defining the rights and liabilities of the parties, and compelling their observance.—Franklin Tel. Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 900, 36 L. Ed. 776.

Specific performance of an oral contract for the sale of real property, partly performed, is properly refused to the vendee, where the contract is unreasonable, if not unconscionable, and the petition discloses on its face that the vendee has in his possession money belonging to the vendor which is more than adequate to cover any possible damages resulting from the vendor's refusal to convey. Judgment (Okla. 1907) 88 P. 1042, 17 Okl. 438, affirmed.—Haffner v. Dobrinski, 30 S. Ct. 172, 215 U. S. 446, 54 L. Ed. 277.

—6. Mutuality of remedy.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 9-11.

Where, by the partnership agreement, defendant was to supply all or most of the capital, and plaintiff was to furnish his personal services, the agreement cannot be specifically enforced against plaintiff, and will not be enforced against defendant.—Karrick v. Hannaman, 18 S. Ct. 135, 168 U. S. 328, 42 L. Ed. 484.

—10. Enforcing partial performance.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 20-25, 50.

A contract for the exchange of lands originally provided that defendant should convey two tracts, one to be selected by complainant; but this tract was omitted from the contract as ratified, and no appeal was taken from the order dismissing the bill as to such tract. Held that, the remaining tracts being sufficiently identified, the contract was enforceable.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 306, 9 S. Ct. 286, 32 L. Ed. 673, affirming decree McAlpine v. Union Pac. R. Co. (C. C.) 23 F. 168.

—11. Defenses or objections to relief.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 26-37, 41.

—12. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 26-28, 37.

Specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property will not be refused, in the absence of fraud, because the vendor was not informed as to the identity of the person for whom the purchase was made, where she knew that the person named in the contract as the vendee was not the real purchaser, and suffered no loss thereby.—(1911) Lenman v. Jones, 32 S. Ct. 18, 222 U. S. 51, 56 L. Ed. 89, affirming decree (1909) 33 App. D. C. 7.

—13. — Performance impossible.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 30-32.

A bill for specific performance of a contract to assign to plaintiff any patent that defendant might obtain for certain inventions alleged that defendant, to evade his contract, had obtained the issue of a patent to a third person, defendant being the real inventor. Held that, as by plaintiff's own showing the patent conferred no title on defendant, equity would not order him to assign it to plaintiff.—Kennedy v. Hazelton, 128 U. S. 667, 9 S. Ct. 202, 32 L. Ed. 576, affirming decree (C. C.) 33 F. 293.

—16. — Enforcement inequitable or involving hardship.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 29, 35, 38.

A contract by a railroad company with a city to locate its terminus, principal offices, and machine shops therein, and to continue them there, notwithstanding its own interests and those of the public should subsequently demand their removal, is not enforceable in equity, and the city's only remedy for its breach is in damages.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. City of Marshall, 136 U. S. 393, 10 S. Ct. 846, 34 L. Ed. 385.

Where a telegraph company, by written contract, authorizes complainants to put up a wire between New York and Philadelphia on the company's poles, on condition that at the end of a certain time the wire should belong to the company, who would lease it to complainants at a yearly rental of $600, the fact that, owing to the increase of population in the two cities, and the absence of competing telegraph lines, the value of the use of the wire had increased greatly beyond the agreed rental, does not render applicable the rule that, in cases of great hardship, equity will not decree specific performance.—Franklin Tel. Co. v. Harrison, 145 U. S. 459, 12 S. Ct. 900, 36 L. Ed. 776.

—18. Persons as against whom performance may be enforced.

Complainant covenanted with the C. & O. Railroad Co., and conveyed to the company some land for $1,000, on condition that, in the event that the property so conveyed should cease to be used for railroad purposes by the company, the estate should revert to the grantor. There was also a covenant that the complainant was to have leave to connect a branch with the track at a point near his hotel, and that the company would erect fences and protect said track. The C. & O. Railroad Co. was sold out under foreclosure of mortgage, and the purchasers became the C. & O. Railway Co., entitled to all the rights, property, etc., of the C. & O. Railroad Co., subject to all the restrictions imposed by law upon last-named company. Held, that there was nothing to justify the interposition of a court of equity to make the second company run its road through the lots sold by complainant.—Hoard v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co., 123 U. S. 222, 8 S. Ct. 74, 31 L. Ed. 130.

Defendant conveyed to M., with covenant of warranty, etc., a one-sixth interest in certain mineral land. At that time defendant had no title, but the owners of the legal title had orally agreed to convey to him a one-third interest; and in pursuance of this agreement they executed a deed for such interest, and delivered it in escrow, but the delivery was never completed. Subsequently defendant, for the avowed purpose of defeating his deed to M., induced the owners of the legal title to convey the one-third interest to defendant's wife, who knew of the deed to M., and who gave no consideration for the conveyance to her. Held, that the heirs of M. could compel a conveyance of the interest acquired by defendant's wife.—Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122, 9 S. Ct. 447, 32 L. Ed. 878, affirming decree Crawford v. Moore (C. C.) 28 F. 824.

—23. — Bona fide purchasers.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 52.

Specific performance of an agreement to convey land cannot be decreed where the vendor has sold the property to one who is free from all equities. Judgment 78 P. 118, 14 Okl. 674, affirmed.—Halsell v. Renfrow, 26 S. Ct. 610, 202 U. S. 287, 50 L. Ed. 1032, 6 Ann. Cas. 189.

§29. — Description of subject-matter.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 69-82.

An agreement by a railroad company, on receiving a grant of a right of way, to permit other roads to use the right of way on such terms as might "be agreed upon by such companies," is not too indefinite to be incapable of enforcement in equity.—Joy v. City of St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 29 F. 546.

Where a railroad company, on receiving its right of way, agreed to permit other roads to use the same, the fact that the railway companies which are to be allowed such use are not named is of no importance in respect to the specific enforcement of the agreement.—Id.

§32. Mutuality of obligation.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 89-99.

Where a grantor made a deed when he had no title, but it appeared that he could have obtained the title in the grantee's lifetime notwithstanding the agreement to convey to said grantor was oral, as the grantee could have been compelled to perform on his part, the contract was binding at the time of the latter's death, and his heirs could compel specific performance.—Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122, 9 S. Ct. 447, 32 L. Ed. 878, affirming decree Crawford v. Moore (C. C.) 28 F. 824.

Certain park commissioners having, in accordance with their covenants in an agreement to grant a right of way, expended $40,000 in aid of the construction of the railroad through the park, the railroad company deriving title from that agreement cannot resist, on the ground of want of mutuality, the enforcement of a covenant therein to permit other companies to use the right of way; since, having received payment for the privilege reserved to the park commissioners, it cannot resist its enforcement on the ground that the railway companies seeking to use the right of way cannot be compelled to continue to do so.—Joy v. City of St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash & St. L. & P. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 29 F. 546.

§38. Oral contracts in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 112.

An oral agreement for the sale and assignment of the right to obtain a patent for an invention is not within the statute of frauds, nor within Rev. St. § 4898 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3387], requiring assignments of patents to be in writing; and such agreement may be specifically enforced in equity upon sufficient proof thereof.—Dalzell v. Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co., 149 U. S. 315, 13 S. Ct. 886, 37 L. Ed. 749, reversing decree (C. C.) Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. Dalzell, 38 F. 597.

§40. Part performance of oral contracts.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 120-139.

§41. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 120-122.

Where a contract for the exchange of real estate has been fully performed by one party and partly performed by the other, the court will decree a specific performance, without reference to the sufficiency of the memorandum under the statute of frauds.—Bigelow v. Armes, 108 U. S. 10, 1 S. Ct. 83, 27 L. Ed. 631.

§43. — Acts constituting performance in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 125, 130, 131, 134-139.

A contract for exchange of land was made between complainant and officers of a railroad company, who were not authorized by the directors, but the board ratified the contract, and directed a deed on performance of conditions, which were complied with. Both parties had already taken possession of the respective tracts, and complainant had sent her deed. Held, that the contract would be specifically enforced.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 305, 9 S. Ct. 286, 32 L. Ed. 673, affirming decree McAlpine v. Union Pac. Ry. Co. (C. C.) 23 F. 168.

Testator died seised of two parcels of land; one of them, on which was the homestead, he devised for the occupancy and support of his second wife and her children, with the direction that, under certain contingencies, it should be sold, and the proceeds divided among her children, or the survivors of them. The other tract he charged with the maintenance of his second wife during her lifetime, and her children during their minority, and then directed that it be sold, and the proceeds divided among the children of the first wife. At a meeting of the widow and her children, including defendant herein, and the children of the first wife, including plaintiff, it was verbally agreed that the second tract should be sold at once, and the proceeds divided among the widow and all the children, and that, when the homestead became subject to sale under the will, its proceeds should be likewise divided among all. Accordingly all the parties in interest joined in a conveyance of the second tract to plaintiff as trustee, and he sold the same, and divided the proceeds as agreed. Held, that this was a sufficient part performance to take the agreement out of the statute of frauds, and to warrant a decree for specific performance against defendant, who had become solely entitled to the homestead under the will.—Riggles v. Erney, 154 U. S. 244, 14 S. Ct. 1083, 38 L. Ed. 976.

§46. — Possession.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 122.

The continued possession of land by a lessee, after the expiration of a five years' lease which contained a covenant to renew for a like period, and the payment and acceptance of rent therefor during the period covered by the renewal clause, are not such part performance as calls for the specific performance of a covenant to renew contained in a lease which purports to have been executed in compliance with the renewal covenant in the prior lease, but which is invalid under the statute of frauds because signed by only one of the trustees in whom the title to the property was vested. Decree, Baltimore & O. Ry. Co. v. Winslow, 18 App. D. C. 438, reversed.—Winslow v. Baltimore & O. Ry. Co., 23 S. Ct. 443, 188 U. S. 646, 47 L. Ed. 635.

There has been no such part performance as justifies specific performance of an oral agreement to convey land where all the steps looking toward performance were disputed by a lessee in possession. Judgment 78 P. 118, 14 Okl. 674, affirmed.—Halsell v. Renfrow, 26 S. Ct. 610, 202 U. S. 287, 50 L. Ed. 1032, 6 Ann. Cas. 189.

§48. Consideration.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 140-152.

§49. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 140-151.

Where, in order to compose a bitter family quarrel over their father's estate and "get the property out of the hands of the lawyers," the sons and daughters of a testator sign an agreement to dismiss the litigation, disregard the will, and divide equally among them all that is left of their father's property, such agreement will be specifically enforced, unless there is very clear evidence of fraud or imposition in procuring it.—Chandler v. Pomeroy, 143 U. S. 318, 12 S. Ct. 410, 36 L. Ed. 166, reversing decree (C. C.) 46 F. 533.

50. — Insufficiency in connection with other objections.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 152.

Where a contract to allow a railroad company to jointly use its road was fairly entered into, and provides for a rental which is nine-tenths of that which the lessor company had previously determined to ask, and the lessee, in reliance on the contract, has abandoned its plans for the construction of an independent line, and has spent more than $1,000,000 in building a road to connect with the leased line, a decree for specific performance should not be refused on the ground that the rental is inadequate, and that the effect of the contract may be to permit disastrous competition between the two roads.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 S. Ct. 1207, 163 U. S. 611, 41 L. Ed. 282.

52. Mistake.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 155-159.

The belief of the vendor when signing a contract for the sale of real property that it merely gave an option is no defense to a suit for specific performance.—(1911) Lenman v. Jones, 32 S. Ct. 18, 222 U. S. 51, 56 L. Ed. 89, affirming decree (1909) 33 App. D. C. 7.

58. Effect of stipulations for liquidated damages or penalty.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 179, 180.

Under a contract by which a gas company agreed to sell to complainant all tar made by it for five years, with the privilege of renewal, the company, in case of refusal to renew, to refund the amount which it had received in payment for the previous year, there could, on refusal to renew, be no specific performance, but merely an action at law to recover the amount paid the fifth year of the contract.—Smith v. Washington Gaslight Co., 154 U. S. 559, 14 S. Ct. 1164, 19 L. Ed. 187.

62. Subject-matter of contracts in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 188.

A contract by which the U. P. Co. granted to other companies the use of its bridge was executed on the solicitation of the former company, and the terms thereof were substantially as proposed by itself. It was approved promptly and with unanimity by the stockholders of the U. P. Co., and the other companies abandoned their scheme of building another bridge in reliance on the contract, entered upon the performance thereof, and expended large sums in carrying it out, and the consideration for the contract was apparently fair and reasonable. Held, that it was proper to compel the grantor company to specifically perform its contract.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 16 S. Ct. 1173, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree, 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

Where a city council, with full knowledge that two applicants for a street-railway franchise have contracted to unite their interests, nevertheless grants the franchise to one of the parties exclusively, who thereupon forms a corporation, a court of equity will not specifically enforce the contract by requiring a transfer of an interest in the franchise or the stock of the corporation, but will remit the other party to his action at law for damages for breach of the contract. 80 F. 839, 26 C. C. A. 175, modified.—Hyer v. Richmond Traction Co., 18 S. Ct. 114, 168 U. S. 471, 42 L. Ed. 547.

75. Contracts for continuous acts during long period.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 210.

The fact that the duty of a railroad company to permit other railway companies to use the right of way is a continuous one is no reason why the contract to do so should not be enforced in equity.—Joy v. City of St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 243, 34 L. Ed. 843, affirming decree Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. (C. C.) 29 F. 546.

Specific performance of a contract whereby one railroad company lets another into the joint use of its bridge and terminals will not be refused on the ground that it involves continuous acts requiring skill, judgment, and technical knowledge.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 S. Ct. 1173, 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

Specific performance of a contract by a railroad company to let another company into joint possession of part of its line for 999 years, at an agreed rental, may be enforced by a court of equity.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 16 S. Ct. 1207, 163 U. S. 611, 41 L. Ed. 282.

76. Contracts for loans, advances, or payments of money.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 211.

A waterworks company, to which a town has issued its warrants in due form, and signed by its proper officers, in payment of water rentals accruing under a contract between the town and company, on the refusal of the town to pay the warrants at maturity on the ground of their illegality cannot maintain a suit in equity to enforce a specific performance of the rental contract, its remedy being upon the warrants, which are legal demands, and, if valid, enforceable in a court of law. Decree 49 F. 898, 9 N. M. 70, reversed.—Raton Waterworks Co. v. Town of Raton, 19 S. Ct. 719, 174 U. S. 360, 43 L. Ed. 1006.

80. Contracts for submission to arbitration.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 214.

A provision in the contract for referees in certain contingencies, which is not of the essence of the contract, is not ground for refusal of specific performance.—Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 163 U. S. 564, 16 S. Ct. 1173, 41 L. Ed. 265, affirming decree 51 F. 309, 2 C. C. A. 174.

82. Marriage settlements.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. § 190.

Evidence establishing, at most, only an honest belief and expectation on the part of complainant and her mother, before and at the time of the former's marriage to defendant, derived from the general conduct or loose expressions of defendant, that he intended, at some time after marriage, to provide his wife with a home out of the proceeds of the sale of certain property, will not justify the court, in a suit for specific performance, in finding that there was an agreement on his part, in consideration of marriage, to settle on complainant either such property or the property purchased with its proceeds.—Nickerson v. Nickerson, 127 U. S. 668, 8 S. Ct. 1355, 32 L. Ed. 314.

III. GOOD FAITH AND DILIGENCE.

87. Nature and grounds of duty of plaintiff.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 225, 238-241.

The owner of an equitable interest in land executed a deed thereof in consideration of an agreement that the grantee would sell the interest so conveyed, buy up outstanding judgments against the grantor, and pay half of the net proceeds of the sale of such equitable interest to the grantor's wife. Held, that a court of equity would not perfect the title of the grantee, where it appeared that he had not performed his agreement.—Potter v. Couch, 141 U. S. 296, 11 S. Ct. 1005, 35 L. Ed. 721.

In an action for the specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of land by the alleged successor in title of the vendee, a corporation, complainant alleged that defendant agreed to sell to such corporation a certain house for $12,000, and to receive payment by a certificate for 150 shares of stock of the company, and that such certificate was received and accepted by defendant. The answer denied such allegations, and alleged that defendant was to take 300 shares, not at par, but at an agreed value per share; that the corporation agreed to establish a bank in such house, with $100,000 capital, of which defendant should be permanent cashier, at a salary of $2,000; that, in part payment of the 300 shares, defendant was to fit up the house for a bank, and convey it to the company for such purpose, at an estimate to be ascertained by the parties; and that the balance for the stock should be paid by defendant in money. The corporation failed, and never started the bank, and defendant offered to return the stock received. The evidence failed to sustain complainant's theory, and tended to support defendant's. Held, that the bill was properly dismissed.—Rogers Locomotive & Mach. Works v. Helm, 154 U. S. 610, 14 S. Ct. 1177, 22 L. Ed. 562.

§92. Time for performance by plaintiff in general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 233-244.

A written contract by the owner of lands, stipulating that plaintiff, upon the payment of a certain price per acre within two years, should be entitled to a half interest therein, does not vest the plaintiff with any estate or interest in the lands, and upon his failure to make the payments within the time limited he cannot maintain a bill for specific performance.—Richardson v. Hardwick, 106 U. S. 252, 1 S. Ct. 213, 27 L. Ed. 145.

§95. Sufficiency of title of vendor.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 257-277.

A contract to purchase land will not be specifically enforced against the vendee, when the title is not marketable and cannot be made so except by successful litigation to remove a mortgage from record, especially when no affirmative action therefor can be taken because the mortgage is held by a state official on behalf of the state. Decree (C. C.) 90 F. 151, affirmed.—Wesley v. Eells, 20 S. Ct. 661, 177 U. S. 370, 44 L. Ed. 810.

§97. Payment of consideration or tender thereof.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 286-298.

The contract between defendant and plaintiff stipulated that the latter should, on certain dates, pay in "dollars" notes for the purchase money—time and punctuality being essential—and that when he had paid a certain amount he should be entitled to a deed. Plaintiff took possession, made improvements, and performed all the conditions, except that he paid the notes, with defendant's knowledge, in bank drafts instead of legal tender. Just before maturity of the note, payment of which would have entitled plaintiff to a deed, he offered to pay all the notes outstanding, but the offer was not accepted. Before the note matured plaintiff deposited with the bank at which it was payable a draft to meet it when presented, which the bank accepted; but on the day of its maturity defendant appeared at the bank, secured all the legal tender it had, and then presented the note, demanding payment in legal tender. A few minutes afterwards the bank obtained legal tender, and sought to pay defendant, but he could not be found. Plaintiff afterwards made frequent offers to pay the note in legal tender, but defendant refused to receive it. Held, that plaintiff's failure to pay in legal tender, on the day the note matured, worked no forfeiture, and he was entitled to a decree for specific performance.—Cheney v. Libby, 134 U. S. 68, 10 S. Ct. 498, 33 L. Ed. 818.

By a contract of sale of real estate the purchasers were to have 30 days from the date of the contract to examine the title, and were to complete the purchase if the title was approved by their attorneys, and to have a return of their part payment if it was disapproved. The vendor agreed to at once furnish an abstract of title to the premises. Held that, in order to enforce specific performance, the purchasers were bound to tender the remainder of the purchase money within the 30 days, and the failure of the vendor to furnish the abstract of title did not excuse them from making the tender, so far as their right to specific performance was concerned.—Kelsey v. Crowther, 162 U. S. 404, 16 S. Ct. 808, 40 L. Ed. 1017.

§98. Effect of delay or default of plaintiff.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 299-310.

§99. — In general.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 299-304.

Where plaintiff, for a small consideration, received a contract for a half interest with defendant in certain lands, he cannot, nine years after the contract was made, and after he had reason to believe defendant had repudiated the same, and two years after he had actual notice that defendant had entered into possession of the land under a deed, without any tender of money, enforce specific performance of the contract.—McCabe v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 550, 15 S. Ct. 190, 39 L. Ed. 253.

Equity will not enforce specific performance of a contract to sell lands, executed by an agent without authority, where the testimony as to a ratification by the principal is conflicting, especially where it appears that the property was rising rapidly in value.—De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 216, 15 S. Ct. 816, 39 L. Ed. 956.

§100. — Change in value of property or other circumstances.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 305-310.

A husband, in whom was the legal title of real estate in trust for his wife, executed a conveyance to one who had notice of the wife's equity, receiving a portion of the purchase money, and undertook to secure the execution of a deed by his wife conveying her equity, when the balance of the purchase money was to be paid. The wife refused to join in the conveyance, though repeatedly urged thereto. After the lapse of two years, when the property had seriously depreciated in value, she tendered a deed, and demanded the balance of the purchase money. Held, that her bill for specific performance should be dismissed.—Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 6 S. Ct. 224, 29 L. Ed. 538.

§101. Waiver and estoppel to urge objections to delay or of default.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 290, 295, 311-317.

Delay in the payment of purchase money is no defense to a bill for specific performance where it does not appear from the stipulation between the parties or from the nature of the property that time was to be of the essence of the contract, especially where it also appears that the vendor, by accepting partial payments and demanding performance, had waived her right to object to the delay.—Brown v. Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Co., 128 U. S. 403, 9 S. Ct. 127, 32 L. Ed. 468.

A. and B., holding each large amounts of stock, agreed November 10, 1873, to pool their holdings and to buy in enough stock in addition to control the road. It appeared that, to equalize their holdings, some 379½ shares of A.'s stock must be transferred to B., the agreed value of which was $6,521.36. B. then gave A. his note for that amount, payable one year from January 29, 1877, and A. still retaining the stock, B. took a receipt to the effect that the note was given for the purchase of the 379½ shares "to be delivered upon payment of the note." The receipt was assigned September 16, 1882, to M., who, in January, 1883, offered to pay B.'s note, and demanded the stock, and, being refused, filed a bill for specific performance. Meantime A., who was president of the road, became indebted to it, and parted with his stock in the spring of 1878. Held, that whether the agreement be regarded as a sale on condition, or an agreement for a sale, the bill was barred by laches.—Davison v. Davis, 125 U. S. 90, 8 S. Ct. 325, 31 L. Ed. 635, affirming decree (C. C.) Mundy v. Same, 20 F. 353.

A delay of two or three years before claiming title to land orally promised to complainant and bringing suit is explicable on the supposition that complainant thought her rights unenforceable for want of a written promise.—Brown v. Sutton, 129 U. S. 238, 9 S. Ct. 273, 32 L. Ed. 664.

112. Pleading.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 354-381.

117. — Issues, proof, and variance.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 377-381.

An allegation in a suit for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property that the vendee sold all her rights under the contract to complainant is supported by a contract by which the vendee agreed to sell the land to complainant, and by a deed to him, purporting to be from both vendor and vendee, but signed only by the latter, reciting the transactions on which it is founded.—(1911) Lenman v. Jones, 32 S. Ct. 18, 222 U. S. 51, 56 L. Ed. 89, affirming decree (1909) 33 App. D. C. 7.

118. Evidence.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 382-395.

121. — Weight and sufficiency.

See 44 Cent. Dig. Spec. Perf. §§ 387-395.

Deceased lived with complainant and her husband for the last years of his life, and regarded them as his children. Complainant had nursed his wife in her last sickness, and ministered assiduously to his many senile wants. At the time of his death she and her husband were in possession of a house and lot, whose title was in deceased, but which complainant alleged he had orally promised to convey to her.

Deceased had evidently bought the property with that intention, and several witnesses testified to his declarations that he had bought the place for complainant, and had promised to build a house thereon such as she wanted, in consideration of her past and future services to him. He disclaimed all interest in the plans of the house, saying that it was to be as complainant wished, and that her husband was superintending the work. Held, that though the most direct testimony came from complainant's sister and brother-in-law, yet, they not being impeached, the oral promise was sufficiently proven.—Brown v. Sutton, 129 U. S. 238, 9 S. Ct. 273, 32 L. Ed. 664.

Specific performance of an alleged contract by an employé to procure and assign to his employer patents for any inventions he might make during his employment will not be enforced when practically the only evidence of the existence of such contract consists of the testimony of the employer, which is directly contradicted by the employé, and when there is much to impeach the credibility of both witnesses.—Dalzell v. Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co., 149 U. S. 315, 13 S. Ct. 886, 37 L. Ed. 749, reversing decree (C. C.) Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. Dalzell, 38 F. 597.

To entitle a vendee to the specific performance of a parol contract for the sale of land, all the material points of the alleged contract and the substantial performance of the conditions undertaken by the vendee must be clearly proven.—Rogers Locomotive & Machine Works v. Helm, 154 U. S. 610, 14 S. Ct. 1177, 22 L. Ed. 562.

4. Status under Constitution of United States, and relations to United States.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, § 2.

A railway corporation created by act of congress is subject to the control of a state, as to reasonable rates for transportation wholly within the state, where nothing in the act creating it indicates an intent to remove it from such control, and the enforcement of such rates will not disable it from discharging all the duties and exercising all powers conferred by congress.—Reagan v. Mercantile Trust Co., 154 U. S. 413, 14 S. Ct. 1060, 38 L. Ed. 1028.

The state of Wisconsin, at least after it had given its consent to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to enter its territory and construct its road (Act April 10, 1865), could not, by the decisions of its courts, transform that corporation, which was formed by national legislation for national purposes and interstate commerce, into one of a local character, with rights and powers restricted by views of policy applicable to state corporations.—Roberts v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 158 U. S. 1, 15 S. Ct. 756, 39 L. Ed. 873, affirming judgment (C. C.) Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Roberts, 42 F. 734.

Cr. Code, § 82, providing for punishment of one falsely assuming, with intent to defraud, to be a United States officer, does not encroach on functions of the state to protect its own citizens.—United States v. Barnow, 36 S. Ct. 19, 239 U. S. 74, 60 L. Ed. 155, reversing judgment (D. C.) 221 F. 140.

Ⓔ6. Compacts between states.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, § 3.

A railroad corporation organized under the laws of one state when authorized so to do by the consent of the state which created it, may accept authority from another state to extend its railroad into such state, and receive a grant of powers to own and control, by lease or purchase, railroads therein, and may subject itself to such regulations as may be prescribed by the second state, such legislation on the part of two or more states not being, in the absence of inhibitory legislation by congress, within the constitutional prohibition of agreements or contracts between states.—St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 16 S. Ct. 621, 40 L. Ed. 802.

Requiring upon notice and hearing the listing of land titles for taxation for certain specified years, or, in default thereof, forfeiting such title to the state, as is done by Act Ky. March 15, 1906, c. 22, art. 3, does not, as to titles under grants from the state of Virginia, violate the provisions of the compact of 1789, between the states of Virginia and Kentucky (Ky. St. p. 43), for the security of private rights existing at the time of the separation of the states, to be determined by the then existing laws of Virginia.—(1911) Kentucky Union Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 31 S. Ct. 171, 219 U. S. 140, 55 L. Ed. 137, affirming judgments (1907) 106 S. W. 260, 127 Ky. 687, and (1908) 108 S. W. 931, 128 Ky. 610, 111 S. W. 362, 33 Ky. Law Rep. 857.

A contract between the states of Virginia and West Virginia, under which the latter assumed the payment of her just and equitable share of the debt of the original state of Virginia at the time of the creation of West Virginia as a state, whoever might be the persons to whom ultimately the payment was to be made, was established by the provisions of Const. W. Va. 1861, art. 8, § 8, for the assumption of an equitable proportion of the Virginia public debt existing prior to January 1, 1861, and of Act Va. May 13, 1862 (Acts 1862-63, c. 1), consenting to the formation of the new state on those terms, and of the sanctioning act of Congress of December 31, 1862 (chapter 6, 12 Stat. 633), and the contract so established was not modified or affected in any practical way by the preliminary suggestions as to the special mode of ascertaining a just proportion of the debt, contained in the Wheeling ordinance of August 20, 1861, for the formation of the new state, which is not mentioned in any of the other enactments.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. State of West Virginia, 31 S. Ct. 330, 220 U. S. 1, 55 L. Ed. 353.

The public debt of the original state of Virginia, an equitable proportion of which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state, need not, because incurred for local improvements, be divided according to the territory in which the money was expended, since in form the debt was an investment which generally took the shape of a subscription for stock in a corporation, making it an adventure on behalf of the whole state; all the expenditures having the ultimate good of the whole state in view.—Id.

The liability of the state of West Virginia, assumed at the time of its creation as a state, for an equitable proportion of the public debt of the original state of Virginia, was not discharged by changes in the form of the debt, nor split up by the unilateral attempts of Virginia to apportion specific parts to the two states.—Id.

The valuation of the real and personal property of the two states of Virginia and West Virginia on the date of their separation, excluding slaves, is the proper basis for determining the equitable proportion of the public debt of the original state of Virginia which was assumed by the state of West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state, subject to the qualification that the difference between Virginia's share on this ratio and the amount which her creditors were content to accept from her should be deducted from the sum to be apportioned.—Id.

Ⓔ7. Relations of states to foreign nations.

The right of a state, in the absence of a treaty, to declare an alien capable of inheriting or taking property and holding the same within its borders, as is declared by Civ. Code Cal. § 671, is not precluded by Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10, declaring that "no state shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation."—Blythe v. Hinckley, 21 S. Ct. 390, 180 U. S. 333, 45 L. Ed. 557.

Ⓔ8. New states.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, §§ 4, 5.

Ⓔ9. — Admission of territory.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, § 4.

On the admission of a territory as a state into the Union, corporations created by the legislature of the territory become corporations of the state.—Kansas Pac. Ry. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414, 5 S. Ct. 208, 28 L. Ed. 794.

Upon the admission of Oklahoma into the Union under Enabling Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 4, 34 Stat. 271, § 4, "on an equal footing with the original states," the congressional requirement that the Kansas rates should be the test of the rates which the Southern Kansas Railway Company might charge the inhabitants of the Indian Territory, made by Act Cong. July 4, 1884, c. 179, 23 Stat. 73, reserving to Congress the right to regulate rates until a state government should exist, when that government should possess the right of regulation, ceased to be of any force, and the whole subject of domestic rates passed under the control of the state.—State of Oklahoma v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 31 S. Ct. 434, 220 U. S. 277, 55 L. Ed. 465.

Upon the admission of Oklahoma into the Union under Enabling Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, § 4, 34 Stat. 271, the congressional requirement that the Kansas rates should be the test of the rates which the Chicago, Kansas, & Nebraska Railway Company might charge the inhabitants of the Indian Territory for domestic shipments, made by Act March 2, 1887, c. 319, 24 Stat. 446, reserving to Congress the right to regulate such rates until a state government should exist, when that government should possess the right of regulation, ceased to be of any force in the state, and the whole subject of domestic rates passed under the control of the state.—State of Oklahoma v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 31 S. Ct. 442, 220 U. S. 302, 55 L. Ed. 474, affirming judgment (1908) Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Territory, 97 P. 267, 21 Okl. 334.

The power of Congress under Const. art. 4, § 3, to admit new states into the Union, extends only to their admission on an equal footing with their sister states.—Coyle v. Smith, 31 S. Ct. 688, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. Ed. 853, affirming judgment (Okl.) 113 P. 944.

The constitutional duty of guaranteeing each state in the Union a republican form of government gives Congress no power to impose restrictions in admitting a new state into the Union which deprive it of equality with the other states.—Id.

A condition in the enabling act (Act June 16, 1906, c. 3335, 34 Stat. p. 267), for the admission of Oklahoma into the Union on an equal footing with the original states, that the capital of the state shall temporarily be at the city of Guthrie, and shall not be changed therefrom previous to 1913, although accepted by an irrevocable ordinance, ceased to be a valid limitation upon the power of the state after its admission, and cannot override any subsequent repugnant state legislation.—Id.

Congressional regulations in an enabling act to which a state assents as a condition to admission to the Union remain in force after such admission if the subject is within the regulating power of Congress.—United States v. Sandoval, 34 S. Ct. 1, 231 U. S. 28, 58 L. Ed. 107, reversing judgment (D. C.) 198 F. 539.

The regulations governing appeals from the federal courts in the Indian Territory, prescribed by Act March 3, 1905, § 12, held not to govern an attempt to review in the Oklahoma Supreme Court a judgment of the district court of that state in a case transferred from a federal court in the Indian Territory.—John v. Paulin, 34 S. Ct. 178, 231 U. S. 583, 58 L. Ed. 381, dismissing writ of error 104 P. 366, 24 Okl. 630, and 106 P. 838, 24 Okl. 642.

Admission of Oklahoma on an equal footing with the original states gives it authority to enact such separate coach laws not in conflict with the federal Constitution as other states may enact.—McCabe v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., 35 S. Ct. 69, 235 U. S. 151, 59 L. Ed. 169, affirming decree 186 F. 966, 109 C. C. A. 110.

11. Territorial extent and boundaries.

See 42 Cent. Dig. States, §§ 6-12.

12. — In general.

See 42 Cent. Dig. States, §§ 6-11.

Under Act Va. Dec. 20, 1783, authorizing her delegates in congress to convey to the United States all her right, title, and claim, as well of soil as of jurisdiction, "to the territory or tract of country within the limits of the Virginia charter, situate, lying, and being to the north-west of the River Ohio," and under the deed made in pursuance thereof, the boundary of the ceded tract was fixed at low-water mark, as it then existed, on the north side of the Ohio, and that line now remains the boundary between Indiana and Kentucky.—State of Indiana v. State of Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479, 10 S. Ct. 1051, 34 L. Ed. 329.

Where the middle of a stream is the boundary between states, that boundary follows any changes in the stream which are due to gradual accretion or degradation of its banks.—State of Nebraska v. State of Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 12 S. Ct. 396, 36 L. Ed. 186.

But where the change is of a sudden and rapid character, such as occurs when a river forms a new course by going through a bend, the boundary does not follow the change, but remains in the middle of the old channel.—Id.

The law of accretion applies to the Missouri river, notwithstanding that, owing to the swiftness of its current and the softness of its banks, the changes are more rapid and extensive than in most other rivers.—Id.

The expressions, "middle of the Mississippi river" and "the center of the main channel of that river," as used respectively in the enabling acts under which the states of Illinois and Wisconsin were admitted into the Union, and "middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river," as used in the enabling acts of Missouri and Iowa, all being descriptive of the boundaries of those states, are synonymous terms, and mean the middle of the main navigable channel, or channel most used, and not the middle of the great bed of the stream, as defined by the banks of the river.—State of Iowa v. State of Illinois, 147 U. S. 1, 13 S. Ct. 239, 37 L. Ed. 55.

The mere selection of parties to settle a boundary line between two states, and a legislative adoption of their report by one of the states, does not amount to a "compact" or "agreement" between states, which they are forbidden by the constitution to make without the consent of congress, until the one state has adopted the report in consequence of its adoption by the other, nor even then unless the boundary established leads to the increase or decrease of the political power or influence of the states affected.—State of Virginia v. State of Tennessee, 148 U. S. 508, 13 S. Ct. 728, 37 L. Ed. 537.

The consent of congress to an agreement or compact between two states settling the boundary line between them may be implied from circumstances, and the fact that congress observed the boundary as thus settled in the assignment of districts for judicial, revenue, election, and federal appointment purposes, for a long succession of years, sufficiently establishes such consent.—Id.

In the treaty ratified February 19, 1821, settling the boundaries between the possessions of the United States and Spain west of the Mississippi, the description, after fixing a line running north from the Sabine river to a point on the Rio Roxo, or Red river, continues as follows: "Then following the course of the Rio Roxo westward, to the degree of longitude 100° west from London and 23° from Washington"; then running due north, etc. At the end of the description are the words, "The whole being as laid down in Melish's map of the United States, published at Philadelphia, improved to the 1st of January, 1818." A subsequent article provides for the appointment of commissioners and surveyors to run and mark the boundary, whose proceedings are to be considered a part of the treaty itself. The 100th meridian as laid down on Melish's map, was in fact more than 100 miles east of the true astronomical meridian, but this fact was unknown when the treaty was made. Held, that the negotiators assumed, for the purposes of settling the controversy, that Melish's map was in the main correct, but that the provision for a more accurate delimitation by a commission indicated an intention to adopt the true meridian; further, that in any event, as between the United States and Texas, each claiming under the treaty, the matter was settled in favor of the true 100th meridian by the act of congress of September 9, 1850, c. 49 (constituting part of the compromises of 1850), which was accepted by Texas, and constituted a convention between the state and the United States, wherein it was declared that the boundary of Texas "on the north" was to commence at the point where the 100th meridian intersects the parallel of 36° 30' north latitude, and run due west therefrom.—United States v. State of Texas, 162 U. S. 1, 16 S. Ct. 725, 40 L. Ed. 867.

On Melish's map of 1818 the course of the Red river from about the 97th meridian, as there laid down, going westward, is northwestwardly nearly to the 100th meridian, as there laid down, then southwestwardly to the 101st meridian, and then northwestwardly to its source, which is placed a little to the northeast of Santa Fé. Neither by that map nor by any other maps made prior to that time does there appear any large confluent coming into the river on the north side. And from all the maps it appears that in 1818 it was believed that there was a Red river having its source near Santa Fé, and continuing in an approximately eastward direction until it was joined by other waters near the Mississippi. But in fact the Red river has two branches, which join a little to the west of the 99th meridian. The South Fork, commonly known as "Prairie Dog Town Fork of Red River," has its source in the western part of Texas; and from its point of junction with the North Fork, going westward, its course is a little north of west to the 100th meridian. The North Fork, tracing up stream, has a course approximately north for a considerable distance, and then northwestward to the 100th meridian. Held, that the call in the treaty for a line running "westward" on the Red river to the 100th meridian makes the South Fork the true boundary; further, that on the weight of the evidence the South Fork is in fact wider and longer, and drains a much greater extent of territory, than the North Fork, and for this reason, also, is to be considered as the Red river of the treaty; and that this view is strongly fortified by the fact that all maps made between the date of the treaty and the year 1860 (when the Texas legislature passed an act erecting the territory between the two forks into the county of Greer) show that the line going from east to west followed the course of Red river westward until it crossed the true 100th meridian at or near the southwest corner of the present territory of Oklahoma.—Id.

Acquiescence of the United States in the claim of Texas to territory constituting a part of the Indian Territory, and erected by Texas into the county of Greer, is not to be inferred from the fact that by a negotiation between the republic of Texas and the United States, and an act of congress appropriating money in accordance with the settlement reached, the United States made compensation in money for arms and property taken in 1843, when a detachment of Texas troops were arrested and disarmed in the disputed territory by an officer commanding United States troops; it appearing from the course of negotiations that the determination of the question of the territorial boundary was waived by both parties.—Id.

Nor is acquiescence on the part of the United States to be inferred from the fact that congress, by the act of February 24, 1879, creating the Northern judicial district of the state of Texas, named among the counties to be included in such district the county of Greer; for it was competent for congress, for judicial purposes, to include any part of the Indian Territory within a judicial district established in an adjoining state, and there were no circumstances connected with the passage of the act showing any intention to settle thereby a long-pending controversy in respect to an important part of the territory of the United States, and it appears that since that time the United States had continuously asserted its right to the disputed territory.—Id.

Nor is acquiescence to be inferred from the fact that in 1886 the postal authorities of the United States, acting upon the petitions of persons describing themselves as "residents of Greer county, Texas," established post offices at Mangum and Frazier, in the disputed territory, and designated them as in Greer county, Tex.; for it appears that during the same year it was discovered by the authorities of the post-office department that these post offices were in the disputed territory, and that thereupon their designation was changed so as to locate them within the Indian Territory, since which time they have been officially known and recognized as so located.—Id.

The location of the line established by the treaty is to be determined by the courses of rivers, and by degrees of latitude and longitude, uncontrolled by the alleged facts that the Spaniards, on first taking possession of the country on the Red river, established a road or trail between Natchitoches and Santa Fé, which followed the North Fork, instead of the South Fork; that the South Fork may have been untraveled and little known at the date of the treaty, because it passed through a difficult country, and its waters were bad for drinking purposes; that there may be settlers in the disputed territory who claim title under the state of Texas; or by the fact that the state has expended large amounts of money in providing a public-school system for the inhabitants.—Id.

The boundary line between the states of Kentucky and Indiana is established and declared to be as delineated and set forth in the report of commissioners appointed to ascertain and run it, and in the map accompanying the same.—State of Indiana v. State of Kentucky, 103 U. S. 520, 16 S. Ct. 1162, 41 L. Ed. 250.

The boundary of Kentucky extends to low-water mark on the western and northwestern banks of the Ohio river; and the jurisdiction of that commonwealth, for all the purposes for which any state possesses jurisdiction within its territorial limits, is co-extensive with its established boundaries.—Henderson Bridge Co. v. City of Henderson, 19 S. Ct. 553, 173 U. S. 592, 43 L. Ed. 823.

The boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia is established as described and delineated in the report of commissioners appointed to retrace and remark such line, with the modification necessitated by the compact with reference thereto expressed in Act Tenn. Jan. 28, 1901, and Act Va. Feb. 9, 1901, and assented to by Congress by joint resolution of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1465).—State of Tennessee v. State of Virginia, 23 S. Ct. 827, 190 U. S. 64, 47 L. Ed. 956.

Jurisdiction is acquired by an Indiana court by service of process on the Ohio river on the Kentucky side of the low-water mark on the Indiana shore, in view of the condition contained in Virginia Compact 1789, § 11, that the jurisdiction of the proposed state of Kentucky on the Ohio river should be "concurrent only with the states which may possess the opposite shores of the said river," which condition Congress necessarily assented to and adopted when it consented to the Virginia compact by Act Cong. Feb. 4, 1791, c. 4 (1 Stat. 189) admitting Kentucky to the Union. Judgment, Meyler v. Wedding (1899) 53 S. W. 809, 107 Ky. 310, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 1006, 92 Am. St. Rep. 347, reversed.—Wedding v. Meyler, 24 S. Ct. 322, 192 U. S. 573, 48 L. Ed. 570, 66 L. R. A. 833.

Avulsion by the Missouri river, the middle of whose channel forms the boundary line between the states of Missouri and Nebraska, works no change in such boundary, but leaves it in the center of the old channel.—(1904) State of Missouri v. State of Nebraska, 25 S. Ct. 155, 196 U. S. 23, 49 L. Ed. 372; (1905) State of Missouri v. State of Nebraska, 25 S. Ct. 580, 197 U. S. 577, 49 L. Ed. 881.

The middle of the channel of the Missouri river, according to its course as it was prior to the avulsion of July 5, 1867, decreed to be the true boundary line between Missouri and Nebraska.—Id.

As between the states of the Union, long acquiescence in the assertion of a particular boundary, and the exercise of dominion and sovereignty over the territory within it, should be accepted as conclusive, whatever the international rule may be in respect to the acquisition by prescription of large tracts of country claimed by both states.—State of Louisiana v. State of Mississippi, 26 S. Ct. 408, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 913.

The chain of sea sand islands running from the west shore of Mobile Bay, in the state of Alabama, westward to, and inclusive of, Cat Island, in the state of Mississippi, and not the sea marsh islands previously granted to the state of Louisiana, was meant by the provision in the Mississippi enabling act of March 1, 1817 (3 Stat. 348, c. 23, § 2), establishing the southern boundary of the proposed state as extending westwardly from the intersection of the eastern boundary with the Gulf of Mexico, "including all the islands within 6 leagues of the shore," to the most eastern junction of Pearl river with Lake Borgne.—Id.

All islands within 9 miles of the coast line of the Louisiana marshes at the eastern extremity of St. Bernard peninsula, except as restricted by the deep-water sailing channel, regarded as the boundary between the states of Mississippi and Louisiana, were granted to the latter state by Act April 8, 1812, c. 50, 2 Stat. 701, admitting Louisiana into the Union, with a boundary described as extending along the middle of the Iberville river and Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to the Gulf of Mexico and thence bounded by said Gulf to the mouth of the Sabine river, "including all islands within 3 leagues of the coast."—Id.

The doctrine in pari materia cannot be invoked to establish a preconceived design by Congress, in the several enactments providing for the admission, respectively, to the Union, of the states of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, to equalize the water frontage of those states on the Gulf of Mexico—especially in view of the fact that, when Louisiana was admitted into the Union, the territory now composing the coast counties of Mississippi was not actually a part of the Mississippi territory, but was in dispute between the United States and Spain.—Id.

The deep water channel sailing line emerging from the most eastern mouth of Pearl river into Lake Borgne, and extending through the northeast corner of Lake Borgne, north of Half Moon or Grand Island, thence east and south through Mississippi Sound, through South Pass, between Cat Island and Isle au Pitre to the Gulf of Mexico, decreed to be the true boundary line separating the states of Mississippi and Louisiana in the waters of Lake Borgne and Mississippi Sound.—State of Louisiana v. State of Mississippi, 26 S. Ct. 408, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 913; Id., 26 S. Ct. 571, 202 U. S. 58, 50 L. Ed. 934.

The boundary line between the state of Iowa and the state of Illinois decreed to be the middle of the main navigable channel of the Mississippi river.—State of Iowa v. State of Illinois, 26 S. Ct. 571, 202 U. S. 59, 50 L. Ed. 934.

The middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, described as the boundary between Oregon and Washington in Act Feb. 14, 1859, c. 33, 11 Stat. 383, admitting Oregon into the Union, remains the boundary, subject to the changes in it which come by accretion, and is not moved to the other channel because the latter, in the course of years, becomes the more important and is properly called the main channel of the river.—State of Washington v. State of Oregon, 29 S. Ct. 47, 211 U. S. 127, 53 L. Ed. 118.

Oregon cannot, under its concurrent jurisdiction, under Act Cong. Feb. 14, 1859, c. 33, 11

Stat. 383, over the Columbia river, make criminal the operation of a purse net in that river within the territorial limits of the state of Washington, under authority and license from that state. Judgment (Or. 1908) State v. Nielsen, 95 P. 720, reversed.—Nielsen v. State of Oregon, 29 S. Ct. 383, 212 U. S. 815, 53 L. Ed. 528.

The western boundary line of Missouri, extended by Act Cong. June 7, 1836, c. 86, 5 Stat. 34, to the Missouri river, remains the center of that stream, even if, by erosion, the result may be to take from Missouri territory which lies east of the original boundary, defined as a meridian line running due north from the mouth of the Kansas river.—State of Missouri v. State of Kansas, 29 S. Ct. 417, 213 U. S. 78, 53 L. Ed. 706.

The middle of the main channel of the river is what is meant by the words "the middle channel of said river," in Act Feb. 14, 1859, 11 Stat. 383, c. 33, admitting Oregon into the Union, with the Columbia river as its northern boundary.—State of Washington v. State of Oregon, 29 S. Ct. 631, 214 U. S. 205, 53 L. Ed. 969.

The middle of the north ship channel remains the boundary, subject to changes by accretion, and is not moved to the other channel because the latter, in the course of years, becomes the more important, and is properly called the main channel.—Id.

The widest expanse of water which can reasonably be called a channel is what is meant by the words "widest channel" in Act Feb. 14, 1859, 11 Stat. 383, c. 33.—Id.

Desdemona Sands and Snag Island are within the territorial limits of the state of Oregon; its northern boundary being described as a point due west and opposite the middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, thence easterly to and up the middle channel of said river, and, where it is divided by islands, up the middle of the widest channel.—Id.

The boundary line between the states of Maryland and West Virginia from the head waters of the Potomac to the Pennsylvania line is adjudged to be the "Deakins" or "old state" line, run in or about the year 1788, which ever since has been recognized as the boundary, and has served as such, although steps have been taken from time to time, looking towards a more effectual legal settlement and delimitation of the boundary, none of which have been effectual or such as to disturb the continuous possession of the people claiming rights up to the boundary line.—State of Maryland v. State of West Virginia, 30 S. Ct. 268, 217 U. S. 1, 54 L. Ed. 645.

The state of West Virginia is not, as against the state of Maryland, entitled to the Potomac river to the north bank thereof. Her title runs only to high-water mark on the West Virginia shore.—Id.

The south bank of the Potomac river at low-water mark on the West Virginia shore is the true southern boundary line of the state of Maryland.—State of Maryland v. State of West Virginia, 30 S. Ct. 630, 217 U. S. 577, 54 L. Ed. 888.

The true boundary between Maryland and West Virginia is as delineated in a report and accompanying map made by commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court to mark with suitable monuments the old state line as the boundary between the states from low-water mark on the southern bank of the north branch of the Potomac river to the Pennsylvania line.—State of Maryland v. State of West Virginia, 32 S. Ct. 672, 225 U. S. 1, 56 L. Ed. 955.

True boundary line between North Carolina and Tennessee through Slick Rock and Tellico basins decreed to be as delineated in the report of the commissioners appointed for that purpose.—State of North Carolina v. State of Tennessee, 36 S. Ct. 604, 240 U. S. 652, 60 L. Ed. 847.

§13. — Establishment of boundaries.
See 44 Cent. Dig. States, § 12.

In a suit by Indiana against Kentucky to determine the right of jurisdiction over a tract of land known as "Green River Island," now, by the gradual filling of an old channel, connected with the Indiana shore, the evidence of witnesses and of ancient maps being indefinite and conflicting as to the line of low-water mark, at the time of such cession, it is decisive in favor of Kentucky's claim that, from her formation as a state, she continuously claimed and exercised jurisdiction thereof; that Indiana never exercised such jurisdiction, and for 70 years from her formation as a state never, by legal proceedings, questioned Kentucky's right; that in 1834 the United States circuit court for the district of Kentucky, in an action at law, determined the title to lands thereon, and issued process thereto; that under 2 Stat. c. 35, p. 277, authorizing a survey of the public lands north of the Ohio river, the United States surveyors, in December, 1805, treated the stream north of the island as the true boundary; and that Indiana, by act of February 27, 1875, authorizing the appointment of a commissioner to act with one from Kentucky in running a line to settle the disputes as to the land in question, directed that the line of the government survey should be followed.—State of Indiana v. State of Kentucky, 138 U. S. 479, 10 S. Ct. 1051, 34 L. Ed. 329.

Within what are recognized as the territorial limits of a state it can define its boundaries on the sea and the boundaries of its counties, and the state of Massachusetts can include Buzzard's bay in one of its counties.—Manchester v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 11 S. Ct. 559, 35 L. Ed. 159, affirming judgment Commonwealth v. Manchester, 152 Mass. 230, 25 N. E. 113, 23 Am. St. Rep. 820, 9 L. R. A. 236.

On an original suit in the supreme court between two states, to settle a boundary dispute arising from changes in the course of a river, costs will be divided between the parties, since the question is of a governmental nature in which each has a vital, though not litigious, interest.—State of Nebraska v. State of Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 12 S. Ct. 396, 36 L. Ed. 186; Id., 145 U. S. 519, 12 S. Ct. 976, 36 L. Ed. 798.

A suit by the United States against a state to determine a controversy as to the boundaries between the state and a territory of the United States is properly brought in equity, and not at law.—United States v. State of Texas, 143 U. S. 621, 12 S. Ct. 488, 36 L. Ed. 285.

A controversy between the United States and a state concerning the boundary between the state and a territory of the United States does not fall within the principle of the cases which hold that the courts have no jurisdiction to determine "political questions." That principle only applies to controversies with independent nations, the determination of which is committed to the executive department of the government.—Id.

Const. art. 3, § 2, extending the judicial power of the United States "to all cases" in law and equity arising under the constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, and providing that the supreme court shall have original jurisdiction of all cases "in which a state shall be a party," authorizes the supreme court to entertain an original suit brought by the United States against a state to determine a controversy as to the boundary between the state and a territory of the United States.—Id.

The charter from the British crown to the original proprietors of the Carolinas provided for the beginning of their northern boundary at a point "within or about 36 deg. 30 min. northern latitude, and so west in a direct line." Several efforts were made to establish this line after the colonies became states, but it remained in dispute until the state of Tennessee was formed from the western part of the state of North Carolina, after which the states of Virginia and Tennessee appointed a joint commission to settle the boundary, and in the year 1803 the two states adopted a report of the commission by which the boundary was settled, but not upon the exact parallel of latitude mentioned in the British charter, the effect of which was to include within the state of Tennessee a strip of land several miles wide, which, if the parallel in question had been followed, would have lain within the state of Virginia. Held, that the state of Virginia, having acquiesced in such boundary for more than 85 years, could not require a new boundary to be run upon the parallel described.—State of Virginia v. State of Tennessee, 148 U. S. 503, 13 S. Ct. 728, 37 L. Ed. 537.

Under such circumstances, the boundary should not be disturbed because of errors in the demarcation of the line adopted, nor because of misapprehension of facts in respect of such demarcation.—Id.

The call "within or about the 36 deg. 30 min. northern latitude, and so west in a direct line," did not require that the parallel of latitude mentioned should be strictly followed.—Id.

Monuments marking the line between the states of Missouri and Iowa run and located under the previous decrees of the court having been destroyed, commissioners are appointed to find and re-mark portions of said line.—State of Missouri v. State of Iowa, 160 U. S. 688, 16 S. Ct. 433, 40 L. Ed. 583.

The report of commissioners appointed to find and re-mark, with proper and durable monuments, portions of the boundary lines between Missouri and Iowa which had become obliterated, is confirmed, and the line in controversy established and declared to be as delineated and set forth in the report.—State of Missouri v. State of Iowa, 17 S. Ct. 290, 165 U. S. 118, 41 L. Ed. 655.

The cost of the surveys made by the surveyors of the respective states in a boundary dispute, pursuant to an order entered by the consent of both parties, should be equally divided between those states.—State of Maryland v. State of West Virginia, 30 S. Ct. 630, 217 U. S. 577, 54 L. Ed. 883.

The disputed part of the boundary line between North Carolina and Tennessee, as located by commissions appointed in 1821 and established by each state, follows the Slick Rock Creek and the Fodderstack ridge, rather than the Hangover ridge, and then follows the main ridge of the Unaka Mountains southwesterly crossing the Tellico river.—State of North Carolina v. State of Tennessee, 35 S. Ct. 8, 235 U. S. 1, 59 L. Ed. 97.

§14. Cession of territory.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, §§ 12, 14.

At the time of the cession by the state of Kansas to the United States of exclusive jurisdiction over the Ft. Leavenworth military reservation, then owned by the United States, there was a railroad, running through the territory included in the cession. Held, that a law of the state, making a railroad company whose road was not included by a lawful fence liable to the owner of cattle killed or wounded by its engines or cars for the full value of the animals killed and the full damage to those wounded, whether the killing or wounding was caused by negligence or not, continued in force in the reservation after the cession.—Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 5 S. Ct. 1005, 29 L. Ed. 270.

The legislature of a state may cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over places needed by the general government in the execution of its powers, and such cession may be accompanied with any conditions not inconsistent with the effective use of the property for the public purposes intended.—Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 5 S. Ct. 995, 29 L. Ed. 284; Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 5 S. Ct. 1005, 29 L. Ed. 270.

Laws Kan. 1875, p. 95, ceding to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the Ft. Leavenworth military reservation, with certain exceptions as to service of process and taxation by state authorities, constituted a valid cession of jurisdiction, and, though made without any request by the general government, yet, as it conferred a benefit, its acceptance is to be presumed.—Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 325, 13 S. Ct. 60, 36 L. Ed. 991.

15. Division of state.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, § 15.

Congress, after the admission of Louisiana into the Union, could not take away any portion of that state in admitting Mississippi to the Union, and give it to the latter state.—State of Louisiana v. State of Mississippi, 26 S. Ct. 408, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. Ed. 913.

Moneys and securities dedicated to payment of the debt of Virginia must be considered in determining the amount due that state by West Virginia as the proportion of the debt of the original state of Virginia assumed by West Virginia.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. State of West Virginia, 35 S. Ct. 795, 238 U. S. 202, 59 L. Ed. 1272.

Value of assets dedicated to payment of Virginia debt to be considered in determining debt assumed by West Virginia should be ascertained as of January 1, 1861, rather than of June 20, 1863, in view of Const. W. Va. 1861-63, art. 8, § 8, fixing January 1, 1861, as such date.—Id.

The ultimate realization by Virginia of securities dedicated to its debt is not the measure of their value when determining the amount due that state by West Virginia as a proportion of the debt assumed by West Virginia.—Id.

A loan by Virginia to a railroad was not an asset in determining the amount due that state by West Virginia, to be valued at a greater sum than the gold equivalent, computed as of January 1, 1861, of payments subsequently made in Confederate moneys.—Id.

The master could not value a loan by Virginia to a railroad at more than the moneys realized therefrom in determining the amount due that state by the state of West Virginia.—Id.

West Virginia should be credited with its proportion of the face value of Virginia bonds forming part of the debt to be divided, which, being held by United States, was set off against a claim of Virginia for interest on advances to the United States.—Id.

A railway bond owned by Virginia should be credited at its face value when determining amount due that state by the state of West Virginia, where it was a good asset at its face value, January 1, 1861.—Id.

A deduction for expenses of realization from book value of bank shares owned by Virginia may be made in determining the value of its assets.—Id.

Ultimate realization, discounted as of January 1, 1861, is all that can be allowed, in the absence of evidence of actual worth, when valuing securities sold by Virginia to a railroad company.—Id.

Average net earnings of a canal company for 25 years may be capitalized at 6 per cent. to arrive at the value as an asset of the stock held by Virginia in determining the amount due that state by West Virginia, where there is no other satisfactory basis for a valuation.—Id.

Taxes and fines paid Virginia by certain counties in West Virginia after its organization cannot be credited to West Virginia in determining the amount due, the former state by West Virginia.—Id.

Crediting West Virginia with her share of assets dedicated by Virginia to the public debt, in determining the amount due Virginia by West Virginia, requires that West Virginia should be charged with moneys and securities received from Virginia.—Id.

Assumption by West Virginia of its proportion of the public debt of Virginia embraces interest as well as principal, in view of Const. W. Va. 1861-63, art. 8, § 8.—Id.

West Virginia is not liable for the interest rate reserved in the Virginia bonded debt in determining the amount due the latter state by West Virginia.—Id.

Interest at 4 per cent. from January 1, 1861, to July 1, 1891, and at 3 per cent. from the latter date, should be allowed therefor in determining the amount due that state by West Virginia.—Id.

17. Secession from Union, and status of seceded states.

See 44 Cent. Dig. States, §§ 17-21.

A sale of a railroad under the provisions of the general improvement law of Florida (Act Jan. 6, 1855), made during the War of the Rebellion by the persons acting as governor and officers of the state, in their capacity as ex officio trustees of the general improvement fund, must be recognized as valid, under the settled doctrine that the acts of the rebellious states in their individual capacities, executive, legislative, and judicial, so far as they did not tend to impair the supremacy of the national authority or the constitutional rights of citizens, are to be treated as valid and binding.—Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co., 156 U. S. 618, 15 S. Ct. 520, 39 L. Ed. 556.
